The contest was held in connection with the picture temporarily titled, "On the Stroke of Three," which during its serialization in the Saturday Evening Post was called "The Man From Ashuluna." The winning title of the 189,654 submitted from the United States and Canada was, "On the Fatal Stroke." The second prize of $250 will be awarded to Rev. N. L. G. Anderson, a preacher of Tryadelphia, W. Va. The prizes aggregated $3,000 and there were 150 of them ranging from $1,000 down to $5.

The contest was open to every person in the United States and Canada with the exception of employees of F. B. O. and of the motion picture trade journals. The judges were the editors of the trade journals, Messers Goebel and Erb and the executives of F. B. O.

Goldwyn Sues First National

Wants Accounting and Injunction on Three Pictures; "Charges are Unfounded" Says Spring

A SUIT has been filed in the New York County Supreme Court against First National Pictures, Inc., by the Osida Productions and George Fitzmaurice Productions, Inc., for an injunction and an accounting of the three latest Samuel Goldwyn releases through First National —"The Dark Angel," "His Supreme Moment" and "A Thief in Paradise."

The complaint is filed on behalf of the plaintiff by Nathan Burkan and it sets forth at length the details of the Fitzmaurice contract with First National. The contract, it is stated, called for an advance of $300,000 on each picture. Continuing, the complaint says that "The Eternal City" cost $355,531; "Cytherea," $293,183, and "Tarnish," $247,520.

Later, it is set forth, the contract was renewed for three more pictures, the costs being as follows: "Thief in Paradise," $293,075; "His Supreme Moment," $300,873, and "Dark Angel," $300,475.

It is stated in the complaint that when the contract was renewed First National arranged that any losses from two of the pictures could be recouped from the third and it is charged that a "conspiracy" was entered into so that the books of the corporation would show a loss on the first two pictures of the second group, and that such losses were to be recouped from the earnings of "The Dark Angel."

The complaint alleges that the exhibition value on "Thief in Paradise" was reduced from $1,200,000 to $900,000, and that of "His Supreme Moment," from $900,000 to $800,000. Threats were made, so it is alleged, to lower the exhibition value of "The Dark Angel." The complaint continues that the Fitzmaurice pictures were sold with "inferior product" released by First National and the rentals were allocated so that the true values of the Fitzmaurice productions were not obtained.

On Wednesday, November 18, Samuel Spring, secretary-treasurer of First National, made this statement: "Mr. Goldwyn's charges are utterly unfounded. First National acted within its rights and in a spirit of perfect fairness and is perfectly willing to meet Mr. Goldwyn in court, where it has no question of the outcome."

Laugh Month Drive Plans Set

National Campaign Launched by Short Features Advertising Association

THE National Laugh Month drive to the exhibitor and to the public is under way. The committee from the newly formed Short Features Advertising Association has okeh'd a budget to take care of the necessary material to be sent to exhibitors.

The committee consists of Gordon White of Educational as Chairman; P. A. Parsons of Pathe; Nat Rothstein of F.B.O.; Fred McConnell of Universal; Julian M. Solomon of Davis Distributing Division; Hill of Fox and Dr. W. E. Shallenberger of Arrow.

The services of Julian M. Solomon have been loaned through the courtesy of Davis Distributing Division and he will concentrate on the getting up of the sketches, lithographs, banners, slides, cuts, press material and such other details as are required to equip the exchanges of the companies interested with National Laugh Month material.

National newspaper syndicates handling cartoon strips have promised to co-operate. National magazines both serious and otherwise will be informed of the plans and undoubtedly will fall into line.

The film trade papers have agreed to cooperate.

The familiar advertising slogan will be paragraphed to meet the needs of the committee such as: "I'd walk a mile for a guffaw," "A Laugh a day will keep worries away," "What a whale of a difference a few laughs make," "Say it with Laughter," "99-44/100% pure laughs," "Have you had your laugh today?"

Non - Theatrical Showings Subject of Meeting

As the result of a conference held between the Industrial Board of the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and a number of persons interested in the motion picture industry, it is expected a number of important changes will be adopted by the Industrial Board effecting the use of non-theatrical films.

The hearing was held November 12th in the caucus room of the State Capitol at Harrisburg and was presided over by Cyril Ainsworth, secretary of the board. Among those in attendance were M. J. O'Toole, S. E. Wythe of the Neighborhood Motion Picture Service of New York; Rev. C. Waldo Cherry, Pine Street Presbyterian Church of Harrisburg and others.

In addition to the discussion at the preliminary hearing briefs will be submitted by others who could not be in attendance. These briefs must be submitted by November 20th and shortly after that the board will announce its conclusions.

The elimination of booths with approved types of machines, and a number of safety rules are up for consideration.

Warners Make Changes in Field Forces

Sam E. Morris, general manager in charge of distribution for Warner Brothers, announced several changes among the exchange forces this week. J. S. Hebrew, formerly manager at Philadelphia, becomes division manager with charge of the Philadelphia branch and, supervisor over Washington. Harry E. Weiner, member of the Philadelphia branch, has been made Washington branch manager. W. H. Rankin, taken from Seattle, has become branch manager of the Salt Lake City exchange and O. P. Hall, formerly with Fox, named branch manager at Atlanta.

Erie Sheriff Advocates Sunday Opening

The moving picture theatres of Erie, Pa., will be open on Sunday, according to a statement made by Major "Tom" Sterrett, a member of the Erie Daily Times staff, who has just been elected sheriff of Erie County. He will assume the duties of office January 4. In one of his articles relating to what he would do, he said: "If I am elected sheriff, I will not close the moving picture theatres on Sunday, or in any way attempt to enforce the blue laws. I am 108 per cent wet. I'll be the wettest sheriff in seven counties."

Thus he spoke, that lover bold,
"Never shall my love grow cold;
You're my girl and I'm your man,
Test my love, howe'er you can."

At the altar came his shame,
And the villain was to blame.
"Listen, buddie, this I beg,
Bridie's got a wooden leg!"

Is a wooden leg a valid excuse for a man to desert his bride at the altar?

What a question! What a situation! What a riot of a comedy!

Rayart Product Well Advanced

W. Ray Johnston Reports Productions Finished Well Ahead of Relase Dates

W. RAY JOHNSTON, President of Rayart Pictures Corporation is back from California and states that the Rayart production schedule is completed sixty days in advance of release. Johnston has been on the west coast for some time supervising production. The pictures already completed are six Whirlwind Westerns, four Reed Howes comedy dramas, seven Billy Sullivan fight dramas, two Superior melodramas and a series of Joybelle comedies starring Gloria Joy and Eddie Fetherston. The Robert Dillon serial, "The Flame Fighter" has also been completed, with Herbert Rawlinson as the star.

Stories have been selected and work will start immediately on the next Superior Melodrama, entitled "Somebody's Mother," which will be produced by Gerson Pictures Corporation, under the direction of Oscar Apfel.

Harry J. Brown, producer of the Reed Howes and Billy Sullivan series, will arrive in New York during the current week to consult with Mr. Johnston regarding stories and casts for the four Reed Howes of the second group and the five Sullivan Pictures yet to be produced.

Universal Stressing Serials

Will Expend More Money in Production, Story Material and Casts

UNIVERSAL is making elaborate plans for serial production, according to word received by Fred J. McConnell, short product sales manager, from William Lord Wright, head of the serial department at Universal City. More money is to be spent on serials than heretofore, not only as regards cost of production, but also as to price paid for stories and casts.

Among the latest of these productions is "Strings of Steel," which is now being finished. It is a thrilling and romantic story of the invention and development of the telephone. The picture was made with the cooperation of the Bell System.

Another of the new serials is "The Radio Detective." This is based on an Arthur B. Reeve story of the same name. It is said that everything touching on the radio in the picture was first passed upon by radio authorities. Boy scouts also play an important part in this production.

Discussing the serial, William Lord Wright says:

"While the serial has been described as a 'children's picture' it is a safe bet that father and mother, uncle and aunt, and elder brother and sister are glad to be able to see one, even though they do hide behind the excuse, 'the children like it.'"

Tom Mix Ready to Start "My Own Pal"

Tom Mix is ready to start work in "My Own Pal," his next starring vehicle for Fox. The original story, "The Gallant Guardsman," is by Gerald Beaumont and the scenario by Lillie Hayward. Olive Borden will have the feminine lead, while others so far selected for the cast include Tom Santschi, Paul Panzer, Virginia Marshall, William Calvin, Grace Goodall, Tom McGuire, Helen Lynch, Ben Bard, Jacques Rollens and Tony the wonder horse. J. G. Blystone will direct.

Talmadge Sisters' Father Passes Away

Fred Talmadge, father of the famous trio of screen stars, Norma, Constance and Natalie, and husband of Margaret L. Talmadge, died suddenly at Hollywood last Saturday from a third stroke of paralysis. Constance Talmadge and her mother, who had been spending a few weeks in New York to secure costumes for Constance's next picture, left immediately for the coast when the news reached them Sunday, and arrived in time for the funeral, which was set for Friday morning.

Mr. Talmadge was only fifty-four years old. He was a graduate of Wesleyan University and spent his early married life in Brooklyn, where he was in the advertising business. Later he became affiliated with the Loew theatres and of recent years has been with the Joseph M. Schenck Productions. About two years ago he went to the coast to become associated with the United Studios, where his daughter's pictures are produced.

Colorado Petition Urges Sunday Pictures

Whether or not the city of Golden, Colorado, will continue to be governed by the old "blue law" ordinance is the question which will be presented to the city council at its meeting which will be held on November 20th. M. W. McFarland, the local theatre owner and manager, has presented the council with a petition bearing the signature of hundreds of citizens asking for the repeal of the old ordinance. Local ministers, on the other hand, are opposed to Sunday movies and wish to make them a thing of the past.

Gillingwater Ill, Leaves "Men of Steel" Cast

Claude Gillingwater has been compelled to withdraw from First National's "Men of Steel" cast because of illness. He came from Hollywood to go to Birmingham with the company, but contracted a slight cold which has steadily grown worse. He was advised by his physician to return to Hollywood. His place in the cast has not yet been filled.

Benge Added to "Ancient Mariner" Cast

Wilson Benge has been added to the cast of "The Ancient Mariner," which Fox will release for the coming Christmas holidays. He will have a part in the modern version of the Samuel Taylor Coleridge classic. The story as originally written will be presented as a fantasy in conjunction with the present day conception.

Fox Starts Eight Productions

"A Trip to Chinatown" Included; Modern Sequences of "Ancient Mariner" Being Shot

AMONG the eight new productions put in work at the Fox West Coast studios, according to the latest telegraphic bulletin received from Winfield R. Sheehan, vice president and general manager of Fox Film Corporation, is "A Trip to Chinatown," one of the ten plays by Charles Hoyt which had a long run on Broadway some years ago. Other productions just started are "The Palace of Pleasure," "Daybreak," Tom Mix in "My Own Pal," "The Johnstown Flood," "The Gilded Butterfly," Buck Jones in "The Gentle Cyclone," and the modern sequences of "The Ancient Mariner."

Robert Kerr will direct "A Trip to Chinatown," under the personal supervision of George E. Marshall. The role of the comedy widow will be played by Margaret Livingston and Earle Foxe will enact the leading male part. J. Farrell MacDonald and Harry Woods have important character parts. It will be released February 7.

"The Palace of Pleasure" is being directed by Emmett Flynn from the Adolph Paul play, "Lola Montez." Betty Compson plays Lola, Edmund Lowe has the leading male role and Henry Kolker, Harvey Clark, Jacques Rollens and Nina Romano make up the supporting cast. This production will be released January 10.

"Daybreak" is being directed by Rowland V. Lee. This is based on a play of Hungarian life by Dorothy Brandon. Lou Tellegen, Jacqueline Logan, Walter Pidgeon (loaned by Joseph M. Schenck), Charles Lane, Gustave von Seyferi'z and Roy Atwill are included in the cast. January 17 has been set as the release date.

In "My Own Pal," Tom Mix appears as the protector of an orphan girl. The story is based on Gerald Beaumont's "The Gallant Guardsman," and filming has been started under the direction of J. G. Blystone. Olive Borden plays the leading feminine role and the supporting cast includes Tom Santschi, Paul Panzer, Jacques Rollens, Grace Goodall and Virginia Marshall. It will be released February 28.

Irving Cummings has started filming "The Johnstown Flood" with George O'Brien and Florence Gilbert in the leading roles. Anders Randolph, Paul Nicholson, Paul Panzer and Georgie Harris are also in the cast. Released January 31.

Buck Jones has started work on "The Gentle Cyclone" under the direction of W. S. Van Dyke. This production, which will be released May 9, is the sixth Jones has made this season, and the cast includes Rose Blossom, Marion Harlan, Kathleen Myers, Jay Hunt, Will Walling, Reed House, Stanton Heck, Grant Withers and Oliver Hardy.

Chester Bennett has started filming the modern sequences of "The Ancient Mariner," the Fox special Christmas production.

"The Gilded Butterfly," with Alma Rubens and Bert Lytell in the leading roles, is being directed by John Griffith with a supporting cast including Frank Keenan, Herbert Rawlinson and Vera Lewis. January 3 is the date scheduled for release of this feature.

Production is now well along on "The First Year," the Frank Craven stage play which Frank Borzage is directing with a cast comprising Matt Moore and Kathryn Perry as the newlyweds, and Virginia Madison, Frank Currier, Margaret Livingston, John Patrick, Frank Cooley and Carolynne Snowden in support. It will be released January 24.

Eleven F. B. O. Units at Work

Busy Winter is Launched with Well Known Stars Starting New Productions

ELEVEN F. B. O. companies are at work or preparing to start production, and as a consequence an exceptionally busy Winter is being looked forward to. One of the first to get under way in the early winter is James Hogan, who has started "King of the Turf," a racing melodrama by Louis Joseph Vance and John C. Brownell. Kenneth Harlan, Dolores Costello and Henry B. Walthall have the leading roles.

"Flaming Waters," the Associated Arts production, is being cut and edited by Harmon Weight. Mary Carr, Pauline Garon and Malcolm McGregor are the featured players. "The Midnight Flyer," a railroad melodrama, is also in the hands of the editors. It was directed by Tom Forman, with Dorothy Devore and Cullen Landis in the featured roles.

Emory Johnson is preparing to start production on "The Non-Stop Flight," a dramatization of the recent air flight to Hawaii. Evelyn Brent has finished "A Broadway Lady" and will start this week on "Bright Lights." Both are Fred Kennedy Myton stories.

Fred Thomson is preparing for his next picture and Dick Talmadge is at work on "So This is Mexico." Lefty Flynn is another star who is preparing to get under way shortly in a football drama, while Tom Tyler is shooting exteriors for "The Cowboy Musketeer."

YOUR IDEA

GOOD-WILL

THE good will which exhibitors and producers may engender through cooperative tie-ups is amply illustrated in a telegram received by Claud Saunders, exploitation manager for Paramount, from George W. Saunders, president of the Old Trail Drivers Association. President Saunders' telegram reads:

"Your Mr. Curtis Dunham informs me that your department of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is entitled to all credit for splendid cooperation in promoting the greatest event in recent Texas history, namely, the Old Trail Drivers pony express revival which so crystallized public interest that our Old Trail Drivers $100,000 monument by Gutzon Borglum for San Antonio is now assured. Please accept my sincere appreciation of the invaluable aid rendered by your representative and believe that the Old Trail Drivers will continue solid for Paramount pictures."

One of a series of teasers for "The Merry Widow" (M-G-M)

TEASER ADS

THE accompanying illustration shows an economical means of conducting a newspaper teaser campaign by using in a series of small displays the same title slug. In the case of the "Merry Widow" the teaser lines almost suggest themselves, those used in the illustration here being typical of the idea carried out in this campaign for the showing of the picture in Madison, Wis.

Of course it is not merely the economical phases of the idea which recommend the employment of the same title plate in all of the teaser ads. The association is carried throughout the campaign and the newspaper readers are familiarized with the title of the picture through this association. It would be a good plan to carry the stunt even further and incorporate the peculiar features of the type or layout in all other displays used after the announcement is made. Heralds, window cards, poster snipes, etc., all could be "rubber stamped" as it were with a design similar to that which is used in the teaser campaign.

The ad reproduced here was the third in a series run in the Daily Cardinal in Madison. The line carried on the opening ad was "Kings Craved Her Carresses—The Merry Widow. She will take Madison by Storm." Next in the series was the line "She craved affection. Her Hypnotic Smile is Irresistible! The Merry Widow. And Oh Boy What a Widow!"

Owing to the fact that the title the Merry Widow is so universally known, there may not be the mystery element about this teaser drive which is sometimes sought by showmen.

GUARANTEES THE SHOW

GEORGE T. CRUZEN, manager of the Palace theatre in Lockport is at it again. He put over a double page truck on "The Pony Express," in the form of a cooperative ad and then in his own space announced that he would give back to anyone his money if he or she "thought their time and the price of the ticket wasted." And that went to one or a thousand and every man, woman or child of any age, said George. The Palace did S. R. O. business on this one. The ushers at the Palace are appearing in new winter uniforms. Says George in the last issue of the Palace Close-Up, the house organ:

"The thing about these uniforms that I am particularly proud of, are the fellows that wear them. It is that fine spirit of service that our boys are manifesting towards our patrons in which I am interested. I have never had occasion to think that any of our theatre attendants were other than perfect gentlemen in their attitude toward our people. However, if any of our boys should ever get 'out of step' in their demeanor in the matter of service to you, reporting the incident directly to myself, will be a service for which they themselves would be grateful."

Pretty good heart to heart talk, eh, what?

AND OURS

TELEGRAM ANNOUNCEMENTS

THE management of the Strand theatre in Seattle introduced a novel means of advance announcement of a picture. The stunt, used for the engagement of "Lightnin'," attracted considerable notice.

A young lady dressed in the uniform of a Postal Telegraph messenger was stationed in the lobby of the Strand at a telegrapher's table. She passed out envelopes containing telegrams printed on the regulation Postal blanks, in imitation typewriting. The copy used in these "wires" read as follows:

"Albert Finkelstein, Strand Theatre, Seattle, Wash. It Delights Me Very Much To Learn That You Are To Play The William Fox Screen Version Of Lightnin' In Your Theatre Stop IT Is Said That In The Life Of Each Actor Comes One Great Role And To Me The Privilege Of Creating On The Screen A Character Immortalized By The Late Frank Bacon Was An Honor Indeed Stop I Have Tried To Give To The Picture The Sympathetic And Whimsical Old Bill So Wonderfully Portrayed By Mr. Bacon. Stop It Has Been The Greatest Effort Of My Career And If I Have Achieved Only A Small Portion Of The Success That Came To Mr. Bacon I Am Satisfied Stop I Trust Your Patrons Will Enjoy Lightnin' With The Same Pleasure Given Myself And Others To Make It Using Postal Telegraph For Lightnin' Service. Jay Hunt."

"NOCTURNE OF COLOR"

H. M. S. KENDRICK, Managaing Director and Colby Harriman, Technical Director of the Fabian Mosque theatre, Newark, N. J., have, for the first time in motion picture history, presented three films on the one motion picture screen simultaneously.

The title of this novelty was called "The Nocturne of Color," and two of the Mosque vocalists rendered a duet entitled "Waters of the Minnatonka" while this unusual novelty was being screened. Mr. Kendrick used three of the five Mosque Projectors to procure this effect and used three different subjects which were supplied through J. Seplowin of the Service Film Corp., New York, of the waterfalls and lakes throughout the world. All titles were eliminated; two subjects presented up-side down and the other subject in the usual manner.

JAMES POWERS' FOOTBALL HERALD

JAMES F. POWERS, manager of the Bijou in New Haven, sends in a speciment of a mighty ingenious herald for the theatre gotten up in the form of an official program for the Yale-Army game, played several weeks ago. While interest in the game was at fever height, Powers distributed his heralds, which were equipped with a cover of the usual design used at Yale. Under the scene were the Names Yale Army in large type. The letters were spaced to permit the addition of small type which made the message read, on close inspection, as follows:

"You Are Losing Enjoyment if you fail to join the Army of fans who go to the Bijou every week."

It was a four-page affair and on the inside spread was a flash advertisement for the showing of "The Merry Widow"

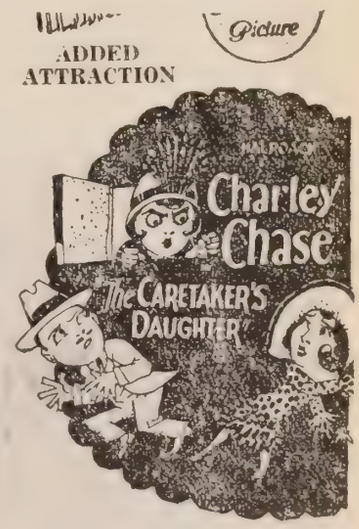
THE BIGGER PROGRAMS

THE tendency toward more elaborate programs in which big time professional acts are used to supplement features at the first run houses in large cities becomes more and more noticeable as reports comes in announcing bigger program policies being instituted at this theatre and that.

The Howard theatre in Atlanta has inaugurated a new policy in which the regular picture and musical program are supplemented with elaborate acts.

The acts which Manager Charles Branham is bringing to the Howard have been in many cases big hits of the Balaban & Katz houses in Chicago, and are, without exception, established successes. The new policy was initiated with Melton Monroe, Chicago baritone; and Dorothy South, prima donna of Greenwich Village Follies.

HARTMAN'S 7 KEYS



INCIDENT to the showing the film, "Seven Keys to Baldpate," at the Balboa theatre, San Diego, Cal., Manager H. L. Hartman put over a good piece of publicity by advertising for keys large, keys small and keys of odd shapes. He asked that they be submitted in bunches of seven, and for the seven largest keys he paid $7.77, with a similar payment for the seven smallest. For each of the 77 oddest keys he issued a complimentary ticket to the show. All of the display advertising, as well as the lobby, featured the number 7. During the week of the show the winning keys were shown in a glass case in the lobby. Many keys with great historic interest were included in the lots submitted.

For the charity ball held under the auspices of the Catholic Charities, Manager H. L. Hartman contributed as a feature of the entertainment program the Fanchon & Marco revue from the Balboa theatre.

WHAT CORNERBLOCK ADS

WHAT seems to be one of the most intelligent moves on the part of short subject distributors to increase the space devoted to the shorts in the newspaper ads of theatres, is the so-called "Cornerblock copy" which is issued by Pathe in conjunction with several of the company's pictures.

This Cornerblock copy is illustrated in the accompanying cut, the illustration having been clipped from a quarter-page ad of a large theatre. The copy is furnished in mat or cut form and may be had by the exhibitor through application to the Pathe exchange which supplies him.

A sample of Pathe's Cornerblock copy.

This copy has had the effect of giving definite place to the short subjects in a theatre's display ads. The prepared copy issued with features undoubtedly influences the newspaper ads of all theatres—few, indeed, deviate entirely from the layouts suggested in the press books. These prepared displays, naturally, are very striking and very effective in shouting the merits of the feature. Before the Cornerblock copy made its appearance, most theatres gave the short subjects a few lines of type in some part of the display. But a few lines of type could not hope to compete with the feature illustrations and drawings for the attention of the reader.

Pathe's prepared cornerblock copy is cut down to the small sizes, and yet it offers drawings and complete miniature layouts. The copy illustrated here gives an idea of the display which is accomplished for the comedy on the program which the theatre advertises in a layout dominated by a feature. It requires only a small space, judiciously selected for it, to perform the work required of the advertisement. Moreover, the cut is certain to enliven a display ad far more than a box containing type only ever could.

Each pressbook of the two-reel Pathe comedies now carries a special insert of the cornerblock ads. This insert is gummed and perforated and all the exhibitor has to do is to rip off the ads and paste them in the dummy of his feature ad copy. This little time-saving idea has helped to increase the use of cornerblock copy.

MINIATURE pictures in color of Paramount stars and featured players have been prepared by the company as exploitation aids for exhibitors. These miniatures—28 of them—may be used by theatre men in tieups with merchants, in lucky number and other contests.

The back side of each picture is blank. In this space may be printed an advertisement for the theatre and for the merchant.

"Borrowed Plumes" To Be Arrow Release

Le Roy Scott's novelette, "Borrowed Plumes," which was published in Smart Set Magazine, will be picturized by Welcome Productions for release through Arrow Pictures Corporation, according to an agreement just entered into between the two organizations. The picture will be made in New York under the direction of Victor Hugo Halperin.

The cast is headed by Marjorie Daw, Arnold Daly, Niles Welch, Louise Carter and Dagmar Godowsky, and includes also Wheeler Oakman, Peggy Kelly, Marie Shaffer, Jack Thorne, Jack Burdette, Sebastian Droste, George Humbert and Jill Lynn. "Borrowed Plumes" will be released as one of the twenty-four Golden Arrow first run features for 1925-26.

Walsh Will Start Fourth For Chadwick

George Walsh will start work shortly on the fourth of his series of six features for Chadwick Pictures Corporation. The picture will be a screen version of the Robert E. Pinkerton novel. "The Test of Donald Norton." The cast is now being selected.

Schlesinger to London for "Sea Beast" Premier

ARRANGEMENTS for a London premiere of "The Sea Beast," the John Barrymore starring vehicle, will be made by Gus Schlesinger, in charge of Warner Bros. foreign department, who left New York last week bound for the English capital. Schlesinger expects to remain abroad until next spring, stopping in Paris and other capitals and key centers on the continent to acquaint exhibitors with the attractions included in the Warner Forty.

Kleeblatt Press Creates New Department

The Erwin S. Kleeblatt Press, printers of motion picture accessories, has created a new department to handle complete advertising, publicity and exploitation campaigns for motion picture producers and distributors. The department will be directed by Charles Reed Jones, formerly director of advertising and publicity for Chadwick Pictures Corporation. Jones and his staff have already taken over the advertising and publicity of the Chadwick concern.

Max Ree Joints M-G-M Staff of Designers

Among the latest arrivals in Hollywood is Max Ree, noted stage scenic and costume creator, who has joined the staff of costume creators at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio.

Ree came to America from Copenhagen in 1923. His first work was for the Greenwich Village Follies. A year later he designed important numbers for the Music Box Review and other reviews. Just before leaving for the coast he completed designs for costumes for Constance and Norma Talmadge.

"Non-Stop Flight" Next For Emory Johnson

Emory Johnson is preparing to film a dramatization of the recent non-stop flight from San Francisco to Hawaii. It will be his next big special for F. B. O. and will be an original story by his mother, Emilie Johnson. She is preparing the continuity at La Jolla, California. The melodrama will be called "The Non-Stop Flight." It is scheduled to go into production within the next few weeks.

Scenes from "The Ancient Mariner," the dramatic-fantasy of the screen produced by Fox Film and based on the poem by Samuel Taylor Coleridge. In the upper left hand corner is a reproduction of a Dore illustration for the famous poem.

'Grand Duchess and Waiter' F. P.-L. Comedy

PARAMOUNT will offer during the spring and summer season, according to executives of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, a number of unique comedies which are original in theme and fast in action.

The first of these will be "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter," a picturization of the play by Alfred Savoir which is now playing at the Lyceum theatre, New York, after its success at the Biltmore, Los Angeles. Elsie Ferguson and Basil Rathbone have the leading roles in the New York cast.

For the principal parts in its screen adaptation, Paramount chose Adolphe Menjou and Florence Vidor, the combination, along with Betty Bronson, which made a hit in "Are Parents People?"

Previewed on the West Coast, where it was produced, this highly entertaining society sketch scored heavily. An idea of its reception is contained in a paragraph written by Herbert Howe in Photoplay Magazine. To the public he said:

"Don't miss 'The Grand Duchess and the Waiter.' For three reasons: Florence Vidor, Adolphe Menjou and Mal St. Clair. It is particularly interesting in the promise which young St. Clair makes. With two pictures he has scaled from the depths of comedy pools to the heights of highbrow. Because he is only 28 he offers a brilliant surmise."

Howe says that in this picture there is presented an entirely new Florence Vidor, "as enchanting as the former."

Lawrence Gray, Andre de Beranger, Dot Farley, Barbara Pierce, Brandon Hurst and William Courtright support the featured players. It was de Beranger who put so much comedy into his portrayal of the nut actor in "Are Parents People?"

The theme of the story gives some conception of its comedy possibilities. A beau-ideal of Paris, baffled in his efforts to meet a grand duchess, becomes a floor waiter in her hotel. Inexperienced, one accident follows another, climaxing when he spills a pitcher of cream down the duchess' neck. To punish him she makes him a member of her cortege and proceeds to make life miserable for him. When he finally proclaims his love, the duchess swoons and is found in the waiter's arms by others in the royal party. Mortified, although in love with him, the duchess is forced to repulse him, and the royal party departs. The psuedo waiter makes a persistent search and finally finds her running an humble inn near Paris and they are re-united.

Many subtle gags liven the action and help to make what Paramount officials consider one of the company's trump cards in the new season's schedule. This attraction has been completed and will be released in February, a month which also brings to the screen such notable productions as "The Wanderer," "The Vanishing American," "The Song and Dance Man," "Behind the Front," and "The Lucky Lady."

Exploitation possibilities on this picture are legion. Each town undoubtedly has its prominent and wealthy men who some time in their lives were waiters, either through sheer necessity or to work their way through school. These men could be induced to write on the subject under the caption "That Reminds Me."

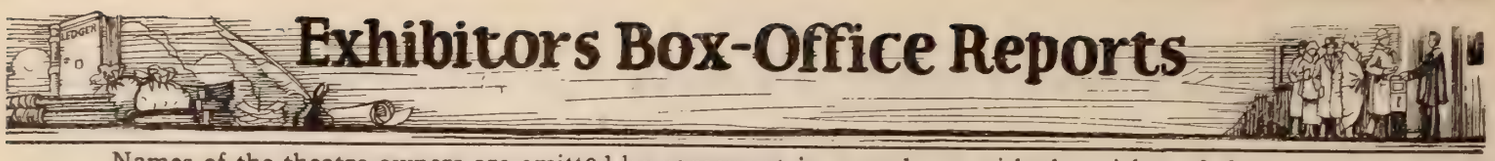
Here is advertising copy which will create interest in the opus:

YOUNG MAN: If you were wealthy and could make no impression on the girl you love, would you become a waiter in order to be near her? That is what Albert Durant does in "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter."

GIRLS: What would be your reaction if the man who loved you and whom you couldn't "see" became a waiter in order to be near you, disguising himself so you wouldn't know? See what happens in this situation in "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter."

The title of the picture suggests effective tieups with restaurants. Hold a special performance for waiters. Dress the lobby with a magnificently set dining table with a dignified waiter standing by. A placard on the table could read: "Reserved for the Grand Duchess."

A woman beautifully gowned and a man dressed as a waiter would make a good street ballyhoo.



"The Grand Duchess and the Waiter" will be released as one of Paramount's big specials for the spring and summer.

Frank Tuttle Completes "The American Venus"

"The American Venus," filming of which was started in Atlantic City during the Beauty contest in September, has been finished by director Frank Tuttle. The final scenes were shot last week at a swimming hole near Ocala, Florida. Many scenes were photographed by the Technicolor process among them an elaborate fashion show and a series of artistic tableaux presented by twenty girls. Russell Matthews assisted Tuttle.

Highlights from "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter," a Paramount production.

Exhibitors Box-Office Reports

Names of the theatre owners are omitted by agreement in accordance with the wishes of the average exhibitor and in the belief that reports published over the signature of the exhibitor reporting, is a dangerous practice.

Only reports received on specially prepared blanks furnished by us will be accepted for use in this department. Exhibitors who value this reporting service are urged to ask for these blanks.

"The Range Law"
(Universal-Mustang—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS western which features Edmund Cobb is slightly better than the usual run of these two-reelers, though there is much of a sameness about them all. The story has been told many times but there is a bit more impressive suspense than is usual and the story plot is better maintained throughout the action. True, much of the action is not very plausible, but that is excusable in stories of this type. It fairly abounds in intrigue and some of the situations are highly exciting.

The Story—Tom Ricks, owner of a ranch, murdered a man named Bradford twenty years ago and the murder was witnessed by the man's young son, whom Ricks loses track of. Ricks also has secured guardianship over a girl named Jane who is forced to serve as ranch slavey without pay. Jed Harrison, ranch employee is familiar with the details of the killing and threatens Ricks that unless he can have the girl Jane for his wife he will expose him. Jane is accidentally caught in her lariat and dragged by her horse. She is rescued by young Jack Bradford, who falls in love with her. Jed overhears Bradford introduce himself and rushes to warn his boss. They waylay Bradford, rope him and he falls over a cliff, suspended, but they think him dead and return to complete the marriage ceremony between Jane and Jed, whom she despises. Jack returns in time to interrupt the ceremony and there recognizes the slayer of his father. There is the usual happy ending when he weds the girl.

Summary—This is a fairly interesting western with a good story and a well sustained plot. There is an abundance of action and the picture is well acted and well directed.

"The Soapsuds Lady"
(Fox—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

Mack Sennett and Director Arthur Rosson have produced splendid entertainment in this two-reel subject. Alice Day, the star is very charming and her efforts all the way through are worthy of a lot of praise. Miss Day is seen as the village laundress, whose mother is portrayed by Sunshine Hart. William McCall is the husband and Billy Gilbert, the old Grandpa. Barney Hellum is the lad who girls forget, Danny O'Shea, the young man of wealth and Eugenia Gilbert, his fiancee. All in all, it is a fine cast.

The Cast

The Daughter.....Alice Day
Her Mother.....Sunshine Hart
The Husband.....William McCall
Grandpa.....Billy Gilbert
The Youth.....Barney Hellum
The Wealthy Young Man.....Danny O'Shea
His Fiancee.....Eugenia Gilbert

The Story—Presents a series of gags and fast-action incidents based on a plot which is concerned with the romance of a girl who works in a laundry and a wealthy chap. The girl's parents believe her the prize which will win affluence for them and deceived by the villain, who hires expensive clothes and poses as a rich man they try to marry her off to him. But Betty loves the other boy—the one who saved her life and who is engaged to a society girl he doesn't love. With the help of circumstance and a lot of determination on the part of the two lovers, Betty and Jack realize their ambition to become husband and wife.

Summary—A first rate two-reel comedy with Alice Day at her best. Has excellent supporting cast.

"A Good Program Must Have Novelties"

"Framed"
(Educational—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THESE Lloyd Hamilton comedies are indulging more and more in the slapstick and knockabout stuff to the exclusion of a story and all else. There is little to recommend in this latest one. Hamilton works hard enough, but the material is not of a quality to get the laughs the picture cries for. It is unfortunate for this rather able comedian to be burdened with such crude comedy, as he is undoubtedly capable of much better things. "Framed" is just a series of rough and tumble, knock down and drag out stuff that looks as though it had been shot without any preparation and without the thread of a story.

The Cast

A Young Lover.....Lloyd Hamilton
The Girl.....Virginia Vance

Directed by Stephen Roberts; photographed by Dwight Warren.

The Story—Hamilton is the lover who goes to the photograph gallery to get his picture taken and succeeds only in wrecking the gallery. He then goes to the home of the girl, where her rich father is entertaining his guests with the aid of a magician. Lloyd becomes the butt of all of the magician's tricks and before the thing is concluded the house is also a wreck.

Summary—There is nothing about this two-reeler to warrant much enthusiasm. The comedy is crude and the situations and gags of an order that will not be good for many laughs except perhaps, on the part of the younger children.

"Control Yourself"
(Fox—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

Sid Smith and Katherine Bennett are the leads in this latest two-reel comedy from Fox and we believe that it will prove first rate entertainment. Director Robert Kerr has provided an unusually lavish set in the latter part of the second reel—that of a big dam that crumbles at the proper time. Larry Stear and Frank Weed make up the balance of the cast.

Another interesting feature of this comedy is the use of a mechanical horse that achieved considerable publicity a short time ago when brought out that it was being used by one of our high officials.

The Cast

Simon Legree.....Sid Smith
The Girl.....Katherine Bennett
Mr. Barton.....Larry Stears
Father.....Frank Weed

The Story—This is the story of a gilded son by name of Simon Legree who has inherited the violent temper of his ancestor of Uncle Tom's Cabin fame. His main interest in life has to do with winning a beautiful girl and providing plenty of slumber for himself. Each morning, he is awakened by a harp solo—and all is well except for the fact that his prospective father-in-law does not rate him very high. However, his opportunity comes at last to prove his worth when he frustrates the plans of a crooked contractor who is constructing an unsound dam for father-in-law.

Summary—This one should register in good fashion as it appears to be above the average. There are plenty of amusing situations.

"Slow Down"
(Educational-Cameo—One Reel)

THIS is one of the best short comedies in which Cliff Bowes has been seen. Its action is fast and snappy, it is without the usual amount of hokum and it has a story that is maintained throughout. Cliff's girl, Helen Marlowe, daughter of a family of wealth receives a warning not to be home that night if she values her life. Cliff goes to the house to protect her in her father's absence. They hear weird noises and finally the father, whom Cliff does not know, returns. He is captured and locked in the bathroom as the police are called. Father makes his escape and is told by daughter of the threat made against her. He rushes up stairs, catches Cliff and locks him in the bedroom, also calling the police. The latter arrive and are completely disgusted when on further perusal of the threat it is revealed that the girl has been warned by the local picture house not to remain home, but to come and see the show. It is a very pleasing vehicle.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Faint Heart"
(Universal-Bulls Eye—One Reel)

CHARLES PUFFY is the featured player in this one-reeler which offers some fair comedy. Puffy is the extremely bashful lover who in five years has not been able to screw up his courage to the point of proposing. Eventually the girl hands him a book on cave man love. He becomes engrossed in it, decides upon the proper action to take, hangs his rival on a pair of moose horns, disposes of the father and rushes her off to the office of the justice of the peace, where the ceremony is performed. It's a pretty lively little story that should be appreciated in the neighborhood houses.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Hodge Podge"
(Educational—One Reel)

OF this well arranged and cleverly executed Hodge Podge series, none has surpassed this one which bears the number 39. Cartoons, scenics and humor are well shaken up into a most pleasing concoction. Views of scenic splendors reveal some exceptional shots from different parts of the world and trick photography adds much to the humor. Althogether this one should be welcomed in almost any house.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"The River Nile"
(Fox—One Reel)

HERE is a fine single reel picture of life along the river Nile that will stir a sympathetic response from most audiences when they look upon the ancient and crude efforts that these river people employ in order to eke out a living. The methods that their ancestors used over five thousand years ago are still in vogue.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

Another Imperial Comedy Started for Fox

"Officer of the Day," another Imperial comedy has just been placed in production on the Fox lot. It is being made under the joint direction of Max Gold and Andrew Bennison, who were also responsible for the scenario. Harold Goodwin has the male lead, while others in the cast are Eugenia Gilbert, Brooke Benedict, Harry Woods, Jack Ackroyd, Larry Stears, Broderick O'Farrell and Edna Tichner.

Short Subjects and Serials

New Short Subject Comedy Distributors

Highlights from "The Fighting Dude," an Education release.

Two New Comedy Units for Fox

Lex Neill, Andrew Bennison and Max Gold Making Imperial Comedy Releases

ACCORDING to advices received from the Fox West Coast studios two new comedy units have been added to the staff presided over by George E. Marshall with the approval of Winfield R. Sheehan, vice-president and general manager of the Fox Film Corporation. Lex Neill, formerly on the Buster Keaton lot, has started directing "A Flaming Affair" for the Imperial Comedy series with Sid Smith and Consuela Down in the leading roles. Andrew Bennison and Max Gold, who head the other new unit, are now preparing the script for another Imperial.

It is due to the fact that Marshall's staff of directors have been working on some of the features that these new production units have been added. Robert Kerr, director of the Van Bibber series, has started filming a feature "A Trip to Chinatown," from the play by Charles Hoyt, the cast for which includes Margaret Livingston, Earle Foxe, J. Farrell MacDonald and Harry Woods.

Tom Buckingham is preparing to film "Tony Runs Wild," a Tom Mix starring production. He has just completed shooting on "His Own Lawyer" of the Helen and Warren series with Hallam Cooley and Kathryn Perry in the leading roles.

Miss Perry has taken the role of the bride in "The First Year," another of the features, which is based on the John Golden play and is being directed by Frank Borzage. Hallam Cooley is playing a role in the modern version of "The Ancient Mariner."

Benjamin Stoloff has started the second two-reeler of the Irish-Jewish series titled "The Fighting Tailor," in which George Harris is the tailor and Barbara Luddy is the Irish colleen.

"The Flying Fool," an Imperial comedy in which Sid Smith played the title role, has been taken to the cutting role by Lew Seiler who directed.

The fourth number of the O. Henry series "Cupid a la Carte" was finished last week under the direction of Robert Kerr, marking the first appearance of Carroll Nye under the Fox banner, with Florence Gilbert playing the leading feminine role. Maine Geary and William Colvin had the other principal parts.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

The Big Parade

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—12,550 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

CONSIDERED as anti-war propaganda "The Big Parade" strikes full on its target with deadly accuracy and convincing appeal. Seldom have the horrors of the Flanders battlefields been set forth so impressively, garnished by intimate touches of pathos and grisly detail. It is war at its worst, with a wealth of spectacular thrill, big guns sending over barrages, charges over the top, air attacks, all wonderfully realistic and thrilling. So much for the morbid side, which is fortunately balanced by a story rich in sentimental values comprising the elements of love, self-sacrifice, the unfailing devotion of the three buddies to each other and a happy climax which isn't forced and comes like sunshine after a storm. An exceptionally fine production, which, despite its stark tragedies and predominating grim atmosphere, registers as a great box office attraction. The work of John Gilbert in the hero role, Renee Adoree as his French sweetheart, Tom O'Brien and Karl Dane as his two pals, is excellent.

THEME. War melodrama, depicting adventures of three buddies at front, two of whom are slain. The third loses a leg, recovers and weds a French girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The terribly realistic battle stuff. Parting between hero and sweetheart. Deaths of Bull and Slim.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. It's safe to play this as one of the greatest of war pictures and tenderest of love stories, magnificently produced

DRAWING POWER. Should get the money in any house.

SUMMARY. Spectacular anti-war propaganda, with romance of absorbing interest.

THE CAST

Jim Apperson.....John Gilbert
Melisande.....Renee Adoree
Bull.....Tom O'Brien
Slim.....Karl Dane
Mr. Apperson.....Hobart Bosworth
Justyn Reed.....Claire Adams
Harry.....Robert Ober

Author, Lawrence Stallings. Director, King Vidor. Photographed by John Arnold.

SYNOPSIS. Jim Apperson, son of a Southern gentleman, enlists on outbreak of war and pals up with Bull and Slim of his company. All three are attracted by Melisande, a pretty French girl, but she favors Jim. Slim is killed while attacking a machine-gun nest. Following him, Bull dies and Jim is wounded, but finally rescued. His leg is amputated and he goes home. Later, he returns to France with a wooden leg and claims Melisande.

John Gilbert, star of "The Big Parade," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production.

The Big Parade (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

PRESS NOTICE

"THE BIG PARADE" one of the greatest war pictures ever filmed, offering a love story of infinite pathos and tender appeal, is scheduled to be shown at the ——— Theatre on ———. Thrilling and marvelously spectacular, it is direct anti-war propaganda in its trend. The story deals with the adventures of three buddies on the front, two of whom are killed, the third wounded, but recovers and returns to France to wed the girl he loves. John Gilbert gives a splendid performance in the leading role, with fascinating Renee Adoree as the little French heroine.

CATCH LINES

The battle lines in France, heavy guns thundering, infantry going over the top, airplanes hovering overhead—war in its most spectacular colors. And a touching love romance! A great picture that all should see.

When The Door Opened

(Fox—6515 Feet)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

THERE is good entertainment value in this Reginald Barker production of a James Oliver Curwood story. Right at the start, there is action—and the story flows along at a smooth pace until the last reel where the suspense is well carried out to an exciting finish. As far as the story is concerned, there is nothing particularly new about it. The theme is old but is one that generally holds the interest.

Jacqueline Logan, in her role as the daughter of an old French aristocrat plays her part in an attractive and convincing manner. Walter McGrail, as the dejected husband who seeks the solitude of the Canadian woods, also scores.

THEME. A husband returns to his Montreal home to find his wife in another man's arms. He shoots the intruder and thinking that he has killed him, takes to the woods, accompanied by his dog. In his wanderings he meets another girl and happiness is his final reward.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The swift action in the first reel. The well staged flood, the rescue with well sustained suspense. Good direction and capable acting.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The betrayal of a home generally finds interest—use this.

DRAWING POWER. Should please wherever Curwood stories are well received.

SUMMARY. A good, average melodrama of the Canadian woods, well directed and acted. Considerable action and well sustained suspense.

THE CAST

Teresa de Fontenac.....Jacqueline Logan
Clive Grenfal.....Walter McGrail
Mrs. Grenfal.....Margaret Livingston
Henry Fredericks.....Robert Cain
Grandfather de Fontenac.....Frank Keenan
O'Flaherty.....Roy Laidlaw

Author, James Oliver Curwood, Produced and Directed by Reginald Barker. Scenario by Bradley King.

SYNOPSIS. After a month's absence from his home, Clive Grenfal eagerly returns and as he enters is confronted with the sight of his wife in the arms of another man. Grenfal shoots the intruder as he is about to climb out of the window. Thinking that he is a murderer, Grenfal, accompanied by his dog, seeks the solitude of the Canadian woods where during his wanderings he rescues the daughter of an old French Aristocrat from a runaway. Grenfal is injured and is taken to the Chateau. A romance develops. Henry Fredericks who was not killed by Grenfal's shot appears and attempts to thwart their plans. Hero and heroine finally find peace and happiness.

Jacqueline Logan, who appears in the Fox production "When the Door Opened."

When the Door Opened (Fox)

PRESS NOTICE

THIS latest James Oliver Curwood story that comes to the screen of the ——— Theatre on ——— will unquestionably please the Curwood fans. It is a Reginald Barker production and the story deals with the betrayal of a good man's home and his subsequent wanderings in the Canadian woods in search of solitude and happiness. He is accompanied by a faithful dog that contributes not a little to the thrills of the story. In the latter part of the picture, sweeping away of the Chateau by the rising flood and the rescue will furnish a big thrill.

CATCH LINES

Betrayed by one woman, he plays the game of love again—and wins. A drama of the dangers of love. He hated all women—he fled from civilization to escape them—but Cupid captured him in the wilds of Canada.

The Wedding Song

(Producers Distributing Corp.)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

LOOKS like a winning box office attraction. They have blended melodrama, and heart interest, colorful tropical atmosphere and that of San Francisco's darkling underworld in generous quantities with alluring results, and backed up by a talented cast, it would be surprising if the picture failed to "click" in any house. The island views are exquisite specimens of expert photography and the big storm at the close, terminating with a landslide caused by an explosion that sinks the ship with the "bad uns" aboard, is a crashing spectacular effect. The love story isn't the real thing at the start, for the heroine simply vamps the hero at the behest of her crook pals who want his pearls. But she loses her heart during the vamping process, and of course lines up on his side. It's all very well done, with Leatrice Joy a magnetic delight as the lady who reforms, Robert Ames an agreeable hero and the support first-class in every particular.

THEME. Melodrama. Tropical island and 'Frisco underworld local. Crooks plot to rob pearl merchant, girl confederate falls in love with and saves him.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Attractive tropical scenery, good underworld atmosphere, romantic lure. Big storm and explosion scene. Capable work of cast.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as stirring melo with fascinating crook and love theme. Leatrice Joy and Robert Ames. Boost story to limit.

DRAWING POWER. Good for any house. Possesses undeniable pulling power.

SUMMARY. Well constructed, colorful melodrama. Love interest, crook atmosphere, tropical backgrounds combine to make this a likely box office investment. Offers fine cast, action fast, direction excellent.

THE CAST

Beatrice Glynn	Leatrice Joy
Hayes Hallan	Robert Ames
Paul Glynn	Charles Gerard
Ethea	Rosa Rudami
Captain Saltus	Jack Curtis
Grandma	Gertrude Claire
Jeffrey King	Gladden James

Adapted from Stage Play by Ethel Watts Mumford. Director, Alan Hale.

SYNOPSIS. Hayes Hallan, pearl merchant, leaves tropics for San Francisco. Crooks plan to rob him, enlisting aid of Beatrice Glynn. They wed and return to island. Beatrice gets combination of safe containing pearls, but hesitates, having fallen in love with husband. Ship with crooks arrives. Hayes learns the truth and disowns wife. She rushes to warn him that his cabin is mined. They escape explosion, which sinks crook ship. Husband and wife are reunited.

Leatrice Joy, star of "The Wedding Song," a Producers Dist. Corp. release.

The Wedding Song (Prod. Dis. Corp.)

PRESS NOTICE

THE beauty of the tropics, the grim atmosphere of 'Frisco's underworld, love, humor, thrills, tragedy, are all combined in "The Wedding Song," starring Leatrice Joy and listed as the big screen attraction at the ——— Theatre on ———. Miss Joy impersonates the girl confederate of a crook gang who vamps a pearl merchant with intent to rob him. They marry, go back to the island, and Beatrice realizes that she loves him. She saves his life at the risk of her own when his cabin is blown up, and husband and wife are reunited.

Miss Joy gives one of the best performances of her career, with Robert Ames as hero.

CATCH LINES

An associate of crooks, though morally staunch and true, of noble instincts, a habitue of the underworld, Beatrice Glynn obeys the leader's orders, until love asserts its sway and triumphs.

All Around Frying Pan

(F. B. O.—5519 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

FRED THOMSON and his far-famed steed, Silver King, are an unbeatable combination in the strenuous art of putting vitality and force into a Western and keeping its action humming along like a buzz-saw making a lumber-cutting record; and the active pair surely live up to their reputation in this instance. Admirers of horse and man will put the O. K. stamp on this production, and in fact wherever open-air romance and melodramatic thrills charm the fans, "All Around Frying Pan" should get the money. Genuine rodeo scenes, taken from the Alturas Round-up, are shown in the opening reel, and impart an air of realism to the proceedings that goes far toward boosting the story values, widely improbable as some of the lurid situations may be. Silver King excels all his previous performances in filmland and his devil-may-care master rides, fights and plays the gallant lover with reckless vigor. Summed up—it's all extremely good entertainment of its type and a bully program attraction.

THEME. Western melodrama. Young ranch-owner, disguised as vagrant cowboy, wins rodeo honors, outwits cattle-rustlers and gains affections of pretty girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Rodeo scenes, episode where hero saves sheriff's life. Silver King's intelligent work, romantic development, crashing climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Fred Thomson and Silver King. Bill as whirlwind action melodrama of the West. Play up the realistic rodeo stuff.

DRAWING POWER. Good card for any house where smoothly running, exciting Westerns with fast and furious action are in favor with patrons.

SUMMARY. Fred Thomson and his notable horse, Silver King, blaze through this film with a dash of a fire company answering a general alarm. Never a dull moment, romance, thrills, all the way. Tip-top Western melo.

THE CAST

Bart Andrews	Fred Thomson
Sheriff	Jim Marcus
All Around Austin	William Courtwright
Jim Dawson	John Lince
Jean Dawson	Clara Horton
Mike Selby	Monte Collins
Foreman Slade	Elmo Lincoln

Author, Frank R. Pierce. Director, David Kirkland. Photographed by Ross Fisher.

SYNOPSIS. Tramp cowboy Andrews, arrested by sheriff on suspicion, later saves that official's life and wins first honors in a rodeo, is freed and works on Lawrence ranch. There he falls in love with Jean Dawson, manager's daughter and foils plan of rascally foreman to steal cattle. The foreman and pal shoot express agent in attempted robbery. Andrews, coming to aid agent, is accused of murder, nearly lynched, but his innocence is proved. He wins Jean and turns out to be owner of the ranch.

Fred Thomson, Western star, whose latest is "All Around Frying Pan," F. B. O.

All Around Frying Pan (F. B. O.)

PRESS NOTICE

FRED THOMSON and his renowned horse Silver King are the central figures in a whirlwind action Western melodrama entitled, "All Around Frying Pan," which comes to the screen of the ——— Theatre on ———. Thomson is seen as a wandering cowboy, who falls foul of the sheriff, is pinched, but wins first honors in a rodeo and saves his captor's life. He works on the Lawrence ranch, falls in love with the manager's daughter, Jean, exposes thieving foreman, is nearly lynched for a murder he didn't commit, but gets the girl and reveals himself as the ranch owner.

Clara Horton, Jim Marcus, William Cortright and others appear in important roles.

CATCH LINES

See the genuine rodeo scenes, filmed at the Alturas round-up, one of the West's greatest cowboy contests. Watch for the breath-taking stunts

Irish Luck

(Paramount—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

THERE has been a universal demand of late for better stories for Thomas Meighan, something off the beaten path of the upright youth who is always suffering because of the sins of others. "Irish Luck," supplies this demand. Here we have Tom in the dual role of Lord Fitzhugh, an Irish aristocrat and Tom Donahue, a New York traffic cop, who wins a trip to Ireland when he pulls down first prize in a popularity contest. And Tom makes good in both roles. The entire company went to Ireland to make most of the picture and during the action of the interesting plot, the observer is treated to some delightful shots of Dublin, the Killarney Lake country, the historic old abbeys, the quaint villages and the Blarney Stone itself which, of course, Tom kisses in regulation fashion.

THEME. A romantic drama that opens in New York and switches to Ireland where a traffic cop, because of his resemblance to a nobleman is able to save that gentleman from plotters after his estate and to win a pretty Irish colleen.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The opening scenes showing the children collecting the votes for Donahue, the scenes on the deck of the Leviathan, the travelogue shots.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Go after the Irish organizations and communities strong. Put on a Irish Jig contest. Try and find an Irish jaunting cart to use as a bally-hoo.

DRAWING POWER. The largest houses should do business with this one if properly exploited.

SUMMARY. At last a good story as a vehicle for Tom Meighan. Made in Ireland amid picturesque and historic scenes. Gives star opportunity for display of histrionic ability. A fine cast. A great treat for the Irish.

THE CAST

Tom Donahue / Lord Fitzhugh	Thomas Meighan
Lady Gwendolyn	Lois Wilson
Douglas	Cecil Humphreys
Earl	Ernest Lawford
Doctor	Charles Hammond
Aunt	Louise Grafton
Uncle	S. B. Garrickson

Adapted by Thomas J. Geraghty from Norman Venner's Saturday Evening Post serial, "An Imperfect Imposter." Directed by Victor Heerman. Photographed by Alvin Wyckoff.

SYNOPSIS. Tom Donahue, a New York traffic cop, wins a popularity contest, giving him $2000 and a trip to Europe. Tom decides to visit his relatives in Ireland. In that country everyone notes the striking resemblance between himself and Lord Fitzhugh. Winning a large sum at a race in the lord's name, he visits the nobleman to inform him of the fact. The two become chums. Lady Gwendolyn coming to take her brother, Fitzhugh, to the bedside of a dying uncle, finds Tom. It's love at first sight. Tom nips a plot to rob the nobleman of his uncle's estate, frees him from kidnapers and weds Lady Gwendolyn.

Thomas Meighan, star of Paramount's "Irish Luck."

Irish Luck (Paramount)

PRESS NOTICE

THOMAS MEIGHAN plays a dual role in "Irish Luck," his latest starring vehicle, which comes to the ——— Theatre, commencing ———. As a New York traffic cop vacationing in Ireland as the winner of a popularity contest and as Lord Fitzhugh, an Irish aristocrat, Tom departs radically from his recent type of characterization. Mr. Meighan and his company went to Ireland to make this picture which is rich in those Irish scenes made famous in song and fable—the Killarney Lakes, the Blarney Stone, the Phoenix Park race track, views of Dublin and quaint Irish villages.

Tom is supported by a cast which has been carefully selected as to type

CATCH LINES

An Irish star in a swift moving Irish story. Made in Ireland with the Lakes of killarney, Muckross Abbey, Dublin and the Blarney Stone as the background.

Tumbleweeds

(Wm. S. Hart Prod.—United Art.—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

BILL HART comes back! There isn't the least doubt but that this vehicle will put the man who made two guns famous back on his pedestal of popularity. Never has he had anything half as pretentious as this stirring epic of romantic chapter in the winning of the west—the great dash of the homesteaders into the Cherokee Land Strip between the states of Kansas and Oklahoma in 1889. And our hat is off to King Baggot for the masterful manner in which he has transferred this story to the screen. Not only has he achieved an atmosphere of magnitude, but he has packed in such box office ingredients as heart appeal, human interest, tense drama, pathos, comedy and through it all a delightful romance has been woven.

While the picture has more than its quota of thrills, the big wallop of the bunch is the dash of hundreds of homesteaders on horseback and in all sorts of vehicles into the land strip as a government cannon gives the signal to "step on it."

THEME. An epic drama of the settling of the Cherokee land strip in which a former ranch boss becomes a homesteader himself and puts to rout a couple of "Sooners."

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The dash of the homesteaders. The fights between Hart and the plotters. His escape from the "bull pen," and his wild ride to win the Box-K site.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Boost this as the comeback of Bill Hart. Put over book store display on novel. Put a covered wagon ballyhoo on streets.

DRAWING POWER. O. K. for the best houses in the land and should please the most jaded fan.

SUMMARY. One of the best pictures Bill Hart ever turned out and by far the most pretentious. Has a real plot, many big scenes, a good cast and a wow of a climax.

THE CAST

PRESS NOTICE

WILLIAM S. HART returns to the screen at the ——— Theatre, commencing ———, in "Tumbleweeds," adapted from the Saturday Evening Post story by Hal G. Evarts. It is the finest starring vehicle this popular actor has had during his shadow stage career. The story deals with a colorful chapter of the old West—the last dash of the American homesteaders and the settling of the Cherokee Land Strip between Oklahoma and Kansas in 1889. The picture is rich in dramatic power, heart appeal, romance, adventure, hard riding and, of course, some typical Bill Hart fights.

CATCH LINES

Bill Hart's army of admirers will be glad to welcome him back in this production, which in point of magnitude eclipses all his former efforts. A powerfull epic drama of the last dash of the American homesteaders. Filled with hard riding and typical Bill Hart fights.

Stage Struck

An Allan Dwan Production—Paramount—Seven Reels

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

GLORIA SWANSON is back in her element in this newest starring vehicle. Here she has the fun making opportunities that made such box office hits of "Manhandled," and "The Humming Bird." Miss Swanson is seen in the role of a stage struck waitress in a cheap beanery who is in love with the head wheat cake artist in the hashery and who, when threatened with losing his love to the queen of the river boat, takes up a correspondence course in acting. After a series of hilarious sequences, many of which are filled with heart appeal as well as fun, she wins out. The opening scenes, showing in natural color, the heroine's dream of becoming another Sarah Bernhardt are quite the most elaborate as well as costly of the season. Then follows a sequence of highly amusing situations showing Gloria as the waitress and Lawrence Gray as the cake juggler in action at the busy noon hour. Gloria's efforts to imitate the clothes of the river boat queen will not soon be forgotten, nor will the fistic battle between the star and Gertrude Astor at the close.

THEME. A comedy drama in which a brave little stage struck waitress makes real sacrifices to keep the love of her hero who is infatuated with a real actress; winning out in the end.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The technicolor sequence showing Gloria's dream of triumphs on the stage. The scenes in the restaurant. Gloria's imitating of the actress' makeup and costumes. The scenes on the river boat and the bout between the two girls.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the name of Gloria Swanson. Hold a Stage Struck Night offering prizes for the best amateurs.

DRAWING POWER. Should fill the best houses in the country. The kind of picture everyone will like to see.

SUMMARY. Paramount has struck just what the Swanson fans want in this picture, which is 100 per cent. entertainment.

THE CAST

Jenny Hagen ..... Gloria Swanson
Orme ..... Lawrence Gray
Waldo Buck ..... Ford Sterling
Lillian Lyons ..... Gertrude Astor

By Frank R. Adams. Screen Play by Forrest Halsey. Adapted by Sylvia La Varre. Directed by Allan Dwan.

SYNOPSIS. Jenny Hagen, a stage struck waitress in a hashery, is in love with Orme, the chief wheat cake tosser. Orme's weakness is actresses. When the Water Queen, a boat theatre comes to town, Orme meets Lillian Lyons and falls for her, Jenny in an effort to keep Orme's interest in herself takes a correspondence course in acting and imitates the ways and costumes of Lillian. Buck, manager of the boat gives Jenny her "big chance" to go on the stage. He bills her as "The Masked Marvel." The fistic bout staged disgusts Orme. Jenny in despair at failing to keep her Orme leaps into the river. Orme rescues her and all ends well.

PRESS NOTICE

GLORIA SWANSON in her greatest picture to date, "Stage Struck," comes to the ———— Theatre, commencing ————. Here again we have the rich comedy elements that helped so much to put over such pictures as "The Humming Bird," and "Manhandled," two of Miss Swanson's greatest shadow stage successes. Gloria appears as a stage struck waitress who in order to hold the love of a cook in a "beanery," takes a correspondence course in acting and imitates the ways and manners of the heroine of the river boat plays.

There are some great fun moments in the opening scenes.

CATCH LINES

Glorious Gloria as a stage struck waitress in a quick lunch emporium, who makes herculean sacrifices to hold the love of her wheat cake throwing hero, rises to new heights of heart appeal and comedy achievement.

The Wyoming Wildcat

(F. B. O.—5156 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THIS is a regulation Western, with not much variety to its plot, but running at high speed all the way and registering as an excellent vehicle to exploit the athletic abilities of F. B. O.'s new star, Tom Tyler. The latter won the national weight-lifting championship for 1925, a fact which may explain the ease with which he performs certain feats of strength in the picture, which the average man would be utterly incapable of duplicating. Tyler's horsemanship is also very much above par, as instanced in one highly sensational incident where he and his steed take a header off a high cliff into a swirling whirlpool and rescue the heroine from a watery grave. This is but one of many thrills that keep the audience gasping, and the director has wisely woven a bright thread of comedy into the plot which lightens the melodramatic stunts nicely. The romance is well developed and a satisfactory climax reached. Taken on the whole, "The Wyoming Wildcat" should prove a reliable program attraction.

THEME. Western melo with comedy relief. Cowboy hero defeats attempts of conspirators to deprive girl ranch-owner of her property, saves lady from kidnappers and weds her.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Clever horsemanship feats and strength stunts performed by star. Fast action, melodramatic punches. Sensational rescue of heroine.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill Tyler as heavy-weight lifting champion. Stress his strength and riding stunts, the romantic interest and comedy bits.

DRAWING POWER. A good card for any house where Westerns are in demand. Tyler, a new one, but they'll want to see him again.

DRAWING POWER. Story not much out of ordinary, but picture more than holds its own as exciting Western melodrama and gets the laughs with timely comedy shots. Lists as satisfactory program attraction.

THE CAST

Phil Stone ..... Tom Tyler
Blendy Betts ..... Billy Bennett
Jeff Kopp ..... G. Clayton
Rudy Kopp ..... E. Laidlaw
Isabel Hastings ..... Virginia Southern
Dan Slade ..... Al Hueston
Cyclops ..... Tom Delmar

Author Not Credited. Director, Robert De Lacey.

SYNOPSIS. Phil Stone, cowboy, gets work as foreman on a ranch owned by Isabel Hastings, and falls in love with his fair boss. Jeff Kopp, neighboring rancher, schemes to marry his son Rudy to Isabel, but she rejects the offer. The Kopps then hire a notorious bad man, Cyclops, to kidnap Isabel. Phil pursues and comes up with the bandit just as he hurls the girl over a cliff. Phil leaps his horse into space and a raging whirlpool and rescues her. Cyclops and the Kopps receive their just deserts and Phil and Isabel are wed.

PRESS NOTICE

THERE are more sensational thrills and breathless suspense contained in "The Wyoming Wildcat" than are found in the average lengthy serial. This crackerjack Western is listed as the main sceen attraction at the ———— Theatre on ————. It is the second picture in which the new Western star, Tom Tyler, national heavy-weight lifting champion, demonstrates his amazing strength and agility as a fearless horseman. In the role of a dashing cowboy he defends a lonely girl ranch-owner from conspirators who try to seize her person and property, fights like a demon, makes love like a Valentino and wins all along the line.

CATCH LINES

Watch for Tom Tyler's death-defying stunt when he leaps his horse over a towering precipice into a whirlpool. This is but one thrill in a film packed with sensational action and romance.

Bright Lights

(Metro-Goldwyn—6260 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

OFFERS excellent entertainment. Charles Ray appears in the sort of role which first won him high honors on the screen, that of a rustic youth, and does full justice to it, with Pauline Starke and Lilyan Tashman acquitting themselves creditably in the feminine leads. It is a well directed comedy drama, with alternate shades of pathos and light humorous relief, the plot is convincing, the characters life-like, and director Robert Z. Leonard has not only succeeded in developing and maintaining the human interest angle nicely, but kept the action moving at a snappy clip throughout. Mr. Ray's pantomime is natural and refreshingly unaffected, and he scores a palpable hit in the scene where the guileless hero apes the garb and manners, or rather lack of manners, of a flashily attired city loafer, in the mistaken belief that he is acquiring social polish and prestige. This is distinctly funny, yet you can't help feeling sorry for the boob. In fact much of the picture's charm lies in such transitions of mirth to sympathy and back again.

THEME. Comedy drama. Country lad and Broadway actress fall in love. He almost loses her through acquiring "fake gentleman" veneer, but all comes right in end.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Contrasted city and country atmosphere. Star's fine acting. Neat pathetic touches and amusing comedy. Skillful direction.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Charles Ray. Tell patrons star is back in kind of role that made him famous. Stress story's love interest and bright comedy.

DRAWING POWER. Has general audience appeal. Suitable for any house.

SUMMARY. Charles Ray scores heavily in this, returning to the rustic type of role which raised him to stardom. A pleasing comedy drama, with striking human values, and humor of sure-fire, laugh-arousing brand.

THE CAST

Tom	Charles Ray
Pansi	Pauline Starke
Gwendolyn	Lilyan Tashman
Marty	Lawford Davidson
Barney	Ned Sparkes

Author, Richard Connell. Director, Robert Z. Leonard.

SYNOPSIS. Pansi Delaney, actress, tires of the bright lights and goes home to her mother on the farm. She and Tom Corbin, country lad, fall in love. Tom feels acutely his lack of good manners in comparison with some of Pansi's city friends. Tom visits Chicago and is much impressed by the style of a well-dressed loafer, whose clothes and manners he imitates in the hope of pleasing Pansi. The reverse happens, however. Pansi is shocked and disgusted. Tom becomes his natural self again and the lovers are reconciled.

PRESS NOTICE

CHARLES RAY, in one of the rustic roles which won him screen fame and fortune, is the star of "Bright Lights," a comedy drama of contrasts between farm and city life which is the main attraction on the screen of the ——— Theatre on ———. The hero is a country lad, the heroine a Broadway actress. They meet and fall in love, the lad visits Chicago and tries to model himself on the lines of a well-dressed loafer whom he supposes to be a gentleman. The girl disowns him but when he becomes his old self again, they are reconciled.

Pauline Starke is the heroine, supported by a stellar cast.

CATCH LINES

Tired of Brodway's glare, this young actress sought the country and learned to love a rustic lad. When he sought social polish he got the wrong kind. Then came trouble. Don't miss Charles Ray in one of his best roles!

Stella Dallas

(United Artists—Eleven Reels)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A HEART-GRIPPING picture with undeniable audience appeal, "Stella Dallas" easily registers as one of the season's most poignant screen studies in human emotions. It is well directed, beautifully photographed, cleverly acted and strikes the key-note of sincerity with unfaltering touch. The hapless Stella is so clearly the victim of temperament and environment that she gets sympathy even in the early stages of her career when she pursues the giddy course that ultimately wrecks her home. And none will refuse her the tender grace of pity at the last, when, her self-sacrifice complete, she stands without a window in the beating rain and watches her beloved daughter's marriage ceremony, until a gruff cop bids her "move on." Nothing conventional about this ending, where intense pathos vies with joy, but we fancy its artistry will appease even the fan who demands the regulation happy finish. Belle Bennett shines gloriously in the Stella role, and every member of the cast contributes to the film's success.

THEME. Drama. Stella's frivolity results in estrangement from husband. Her final self-sacrifice leaves her outcast, but brings her daughter happiness.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The excellent acting, capable direction, sustained interest, emotional urge. Scenes where mother and daughter are snubbed at summer resort, and Stella's vigil outside house where Laurel is being married.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Go after feminine patrons, for whom this will have unfailing appeal. Stress story's trenchant pathos, emotional power. Feature principals.

DRAWING POWER. Cast names should pull 'em in. Suitable for any house.

SUMMARY. A powerful domestic drama of tremendous heart interest, vividly emotional and pathetic. Acting and direction A. I. Possesses universal appeal.

THE CAST

Stella Dallas	Belle Bennett
Stephen Dallas	Ronald Coleman
Helen Morrison	Alice Joyce
Ed Munn	Jean Hersholt
Laurel Dallas	Lois Moran
Richard Grovesnor	Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.
Miss Tibbets	Vera Lewis

Author, Olive Higgins Prouty. Director, Henry King.

SYNOPSIS. The marriage of Stephen Dallas and Stella Martin results unhappily. A separation occurs, Stella retaining her baby daughter, Laurel. Years pass. Stephen revisits his wife and finds Munn, a former lover, there, drunk. She agrees to a divorce. He weds his old sweetheart, Helen Morrison. Laurel visits her father and falls in love with Richard Grovesnor, a college lad. Stella deliberately marries Munn, knowing that Laurel will thus be driven to stay with her father. Later, through a window in a rainstorm, she sees Laurel united to Richard.

The Unknown Lover

(Warner-Vitagraph—6895 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

EXPENSIVELY produced, with a cast headed by Elsie Ferguson and containing other notable screen names, this picture doesn't register any higher than the good average program grade. The fault lies chiefly with the story, which is too improbable and absurd to pass muster before audiences demanding at least a semblance of logic. Yet the film will draw in certain localities because of the star's reputation and a seasoning of sex appeal which at times runs pretty near the censorial border, but never quite crosses it. There's a honeymoon situation that's rather "close to the knuckle" and a few studies in nudity that aren't just the thing for the family trade where community members are touchy on such points, but the majority of fans won't take offence at them. The plot concerns a woman's attempt to reform her rakish hubby, his breakdown and her wrecking of his business to save him. Old stuff and unconvincing. Miss Ferguson charming, support O. K.

THEME. Society drama. Young wife tries to reform dissipated husband. He breaks down, she ruins him financially to save him. All comes right in end.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Miss Ferguson's artistic work. Cabaret sets. Honeymoon scenes.. Nude displays in sculptor's studio. Surprise climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Elsie Ferguson, Frank Mayo, Mildred Harris, are names worth playing up heavily. If your patrons like model studies, you might mention the sculptor's studio episode. Stress wife's loyalty and reconciliation situation.

DRAWING POWER. Program attraction. Suitable for neighborhood and smaller houses.

SUMMARY. Elsie Ferguson and other good cast names should bring 'em in. Story neither strong or original, but sets are handsome, acting adequate and carefully handled sex suggestion will please certain patrons. O. K. as program film.

(F. B. O.—4452 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A WESTERN which follows the usual plot formula of its kind, but with comedy twists introduced which brighten up the yarn, and alive with slam-bang action. It keeps Bob Custer busy riding furiously, making love in bashful, yet effective style, getting into a jam by being accused of a murder he didn't commit, and coming mighty close to figuring as the chief attraction in a lynching party. All very entertaining as Westerns go and sure to make good where the fans yell frantically in praise of the regulation thrill-jolts. The mob scene showing the assault on the jail by the would-be lynchers is admirably handled and the suspense well developed and maintained, as the hero makes a getaway through the cell window with his sweetheart waiting outside. Custer shows up well in this one, and a word or two of praise is due pretty Jean Arthur for her vivacious portrayal of heroine Loria. The range-country types are life-like, locations attractive and the photography first-rate.

THEME. Western Melodrama. Cowboy is unjustly suspected of murdering employer, nearly lynched, saved by sweetheart, proves innocence, gets real criminal.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Swift action, melo thrills, comedy stuff. Attack of lynching party on jail, hero's escape. Romantic urge, pleasing finish.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as exciting Western, full of red-hot melo punches, and shot through with crisp comedy. Play up love affair. Feature Bob Custer.

DRAWING POWER. Should do business in neighborhood and smaller houses.

SUMMARY. Peppy Western, usual sort of plot, but has comedy values and travels at express speed, with Bob Custer doing some fast riding and strenuous scrapping. Good program attraction.

PRESS NOTICE

'A MAN OF NERVE," starring Bob Custer, is billed as the chief screen attraction at the ——— Theatre on ———. This is a crackerjack Western melodrama, shot through with snappy comedy, and offering an interesting love romance. It deals with the adventures of Hackamore Henderson, a young cowboy, who is unjustly accused of murder, nearly lynched, saved by his girl, and finally establishes his innocence. Custer does some great stunt riding in this film, fights ferociously and makes love bashfully, but with telling effect.

(Warner Bros.—6478 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THAT marvelously intelligent canine star, Rin-Tin-Tin, scores again in this picture in which he appears as Lobo, leader of a wolf pack, becomes domesticated, and shares the fortunes of a kindly chap who befriends him by removing a thorn from his paw. In connection with the thorn incident, Rin-Tin-Tin indulges in a bit of pantomime that gets over with great effect, his pretence of being lame standing out as a really remarkable example of animal acting. But then, his work all through is extraordinary and far above that of his average doggish contemporaries in filmland. He is, of course the central plot figure, the side issue being the villain's attempt to rob his master of a rich borax claim, with a love affair to balance things. The thrills are many and pungent, mostly arising from the endeavors to trap or shoot Lobo of folks who know that there is a price set on the head of the kingly wolf. A good audience picture, will please most adults and should draw the juvenile trade.

THEME. Western melodrama. Wonder dog Rin-Tin-Tin shown as Lobo, wolf that becomes domesticated, escapes attempts to kill him and saves master's life.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Scene where Lobo makes David's acquaintance and has thorn removed. The fast action, Lobo's escape. Killing of villain. Love interest, pleasing windup.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Boost dog star's amazing work. Play story as thrilling melo of cattle country with comedy and romantic relief. Go after kid trade.

DRAWING POWER. Has general audience appeal and should suit average house.

SUMMARY. Another dog picture in which clever Rin-Tin-Tin impersonates a wolf-pack leader that becomes tame, evades all snares set to kill him, saves his master's life. Thrills, romance, comedy. Good program attraction.

THE CAST

May Barstowe	June Marlowe
Dave Weston	Charles Farrell
Alkali Bill	Heinie Conklin
Sam Barstowe	Will Walling
Borax Horton	Pat Hartigan

Author, Charles Logue. Director, Noel Smith. Photographed by Joe Walker.

SYNOPSIS. Lobo, wolf-pack leader, has a thorn removed from his paw by prospector David Weston and becomes pal of latter and his sweetheart May Barstowe. Rangers set price on Lobo's head but he successfully evades attempts to shoot him. David discovers rich borax deposit, is attacked and left for dead by Horton, found by Lobo, who brings aid. Horton again assaults David and Lobo kills him. David and May are wed and Lobo settles down with them.

Wolf Blood

(Lee-Bradford Corp.—5400 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THIS registers as a "good buy" for the independent field. The story is chiefly concerned with a feud between two rival lumber companies, which involves a good deal of shooting from ambush, desultory scrapping and a love romance which works out rather nicely. Up to a certain point the plot travels along ordinary lines, but it takes a decidedly original slant when the wounded hero's life is saved by blood transfusion from a wolf, and is thereafter haunted by the fear that he has become half beast. This leads up to the big punch scene, as the erstwhile patient answers the call of the wolf-pack, dashes madly through the forest and is about to plunge over a cliff, when the heroine intervenes and saves him. Of course it all comes right in the end, with the villainous conspirators defeated and love triumphant. Plenty of thrills, brisk action, well photographed. Marguerite Clayton pleasing as heroine Edith Ford, George Chesbro scoring as her lover, and support adequate.

THEME. Melodrama. Lumber camp locale. Feud between rival companies, hero battling against odds, wins girl who saves his life and owns vast timber tract.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Attractive views of forest and lumber camp sites. Scene where Bannister ejects bootlegger. His fight with Deveroux. Episode where Edith pursues fever-crazed lover and prevents him from leaping over precipice.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. There's room for argument whether animal blood can be utilized for transfusion purposes, and you might start a local newspaper debate on the subject. Bill as thrilling melo, feature Marguerite Clayton and Chesbro.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for neighborhood and smaller houses.

SUMMARY. Lumber camp backgrounds, straight melo with romantic interest and odd twist to plot. Should please wherever the thrill stuff is in demand.

The Goat Getter

(Rayart Pictures—5040 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A BRIGHT comedy drama, full of snap and ginger, guaranteed to please the average fan and sure to catch the fancy of the sporting crowd. The story starts off with the hero, an aspiring young boxer, taking a chance against the lightweight champion and getting slammed for the full count, which in its way was a refreshing departure from the regulation screen formular, where the leading man is on top of the heap from the first to last. It's a good idea, for thus sympathy is awakened for the under-dog in his grim determination to turn the tables upon his conqueror. And Billy Morris's plan of getting the champ's goat by following and persistently challenging him is quite in accordance with real ring history, being a method frequently employed by ambitious scrappers in the past, although they do things in more dignified fashion nowadays. There's a whole lot of fun to Billy's pursuit, comedy, romance and thrills are joyously mingled and the Hollywood windup is mighty entertaining.

THEME. Comedy drama. Hero, enterprising boxer, defeated by champion, but pesters latter until he fights title-holder again, wins victory and girl as well.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Flashy action, crisp comedy relief, physical thrills, romantic interest. Big scene, battle before camera in Hollywood.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Billy Sullivan. Tell patrons this is not only a bully fight picture, but has romantic and humorous appeal.

DRAWING POWER. Ought to get over well where patrons like the fast-moving exciting stuff, garnished with zippy comedy and a bit of heart interest.

SUMMARY. Brisk comedy drama, prizefight sequences well handled, good comedy and romantic touches. Should get the money in average house.

The Coast Patrol

(Bud Barsky Productions—5000 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A NIPPY little melodrama neatly built around the activities of the rum-running trade which should prove acceptable entertainment for patrons of the smaller houses. It isn't the sort of thing likely to appeal to critical audiences, but there's a big percentage of fans that will respond favorably to its lively barrage of thrills, good marine atmosphere and romantic lure. The wild doings of liquor smugglers are played up to such an extent in the columns of the daily papers that the average citizen is inclined to credit most anything rumored about these gentry, and sensational as "The Coast Patrol" is, nothing in the story seems beyond the bounds of reason. Speedy action rules all the way and Kenneth McDonald fills the hero role well, with Spottiswoode Aitken contributing an excellent character sketch as the old lighthouse keeper, Fay Wray charming as the girl in the case and adequate support rendered by others in the cast. The photography is classy, including many fine sea and coastal shots.

THEME. Melodrama. Deals with rum-running and love of Federal agent for pretty girl whom he saves from clutches of bootlegger's leader.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Marine atmosphere, romantic developments, thrills, scenes where village burns, and wreck of smuggler's craft on rocks in storm.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You might get local W. C. T. U. interested in co-operation. Stress the picture's realism. Bill as exciting melo that gives the "inside" of the bootlegging game by sea. Feature McDonald, Aitken and Fay Wray.

DRAWING POWER. A good card for the smaller theatres, or wherever fast melo grips 'em.

SUMMARY. Breezy bootlegging melodrama, with fine marine atmosphere and romantic appeal. Not for over-particular audiences, but will suit the masses.

Hermann, who has been Boston salesman for Producers Distributing Corporation with headquarters in Boston, has been selected to take charge of the New Haven offices of the same company which have reopened. The New Haven offices will be at their former location at 128 Meadow street. Harry Olson, who was in charge at New Haven before the general closing of the distributing offices there early in the season, is now salesman at the New York offices covering Long Island.

Keith's Theatre at Campbello, Mass., is now open and under the management of Benjamin and Al Laurie. The latter is the son, and the former is nephew of Jake Laurie, the well known Boston theatre proprietor.

Two of Jake Laurie's Boston playhouses will reopen within a short time. It is expected that the Jamaica will be reopened about Thanksgiving and the Roslindale Theatre will open soon afterwards.

A large delegation of New England distributors have been spending considerable time in New Haven during the past few days in connection with the reopening of the exchanges there. Some of the New York managers have also been visitors to the scene.

In the remodelling of the St. James Theatre on Huntington avenue, Boston, a former stock house, the Keith-Albee interests are sparing no expense in providing the very best in the projection room and several innovations are promised. It is expected that the theatre will reopen early in December. The dressing rooms will also be equipped in the lavish manner of the Keith-Albee houses. The St. James will provide a program of pictures and vaudeville similar to those in the Keith-Albee New Boston Theatre.

Mrs. M. S. Ayer, owner of the Exeter Street Theatre, Boston, turned her theatre over to a benefit performance for the Convalescent Home of the Children's Hospital, Boston on Saturday morning, November 28.

Al Locatelli, whose Capitol Theatre is nearing completion in Arlington, Mass., has formed a separate corporation to operate the new house, known as Locatelli's Capitol Theatre, Inc., with capital of $10,000. Albert J. Locatelli will be treasurer of the new corporation. Other incorporators are John E. Locatelli, father of Al, and Felix Forte. It is expected the playhouse will be ready for opening the first of the month.

The schoolhouse department of Boston is installing motion picture equipment in several of the larger schools and has asked for bids for the equipment.

J. F. Carl of the Metropolitan Standard, has resigned and will as other exhibitor to visit the film buildings recently.

Sammy Marks, salesman for F. B.O. while away on a trip last week, suffered quite a loss when a burglar entered his home and stole a diamond ring valued at four hundred dollars and a valuable bar pin.

Maurice Strauss, manager for Progress, has resigned and his place has been filled by H. Hirsh, formerly of the Cleveland office of the same firm. Elmer McKinley will continue as office manager as of yore.

W. F. LaSance, of the Universal sales force won the Century Comedy sales contest that was recently conducted by the firm.

G. F. Passe, of the Forum theatre, Hillsborough, O., spent several days in the city last week making the rounds of the film buildings and exchanges.

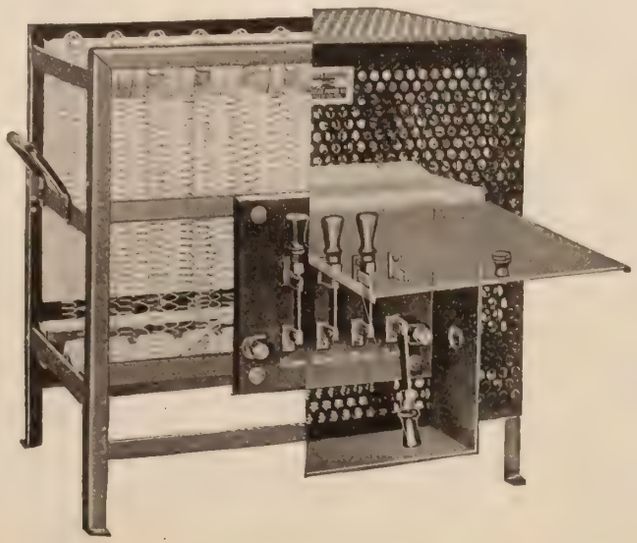
Chas. Gross, owner and manager of the Columbia theatre, Dayton, O., was another welcome visitor to Film Row last week.

Doc. Kolb, controlling numerous suburban houses in Cincinnati and vicinity, has booked some of the largest pictures obtainable for his various houses.

W. Crist of the Opera House, Williamsburg, O., and A. Herman of the Gaiety theatre, Erlanger, Ky., were also prospective film buyers last week while on a trip to this city.

Kansas City

FRANK CASS, who has been city salesman for Pathe many years, has been promoted to assume the responsibilities of West Coast Special Serial Sales Representative, covering the Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland and Seattle offices.



Exhibitors of St. Joseph held a meeting Friday of this week at which several members of the Kansas City branch attended. Among those present was C. E. Cook, business manager of the M. P.T.O.A. of Kansas-Missouri.

Among theatre changes are the following: G. E. Gamel has sold the Royal theatre, Thayer, Mo., to R. A. Griffith; the Opera House, Newberg, Mo., is under new management; J. E. Harper has opened a new Community theatre at Blythedale, Mo

Two suburban theatres turned over to the Charities Drive their entire proceeds for one night. The Ritz, new suburban house, was one of these, the Colonial the other.

C. A. Schultz, branch manager for P.D.C., is out in the territory in helping to put over the Exhibitors-Month program.

G. E. FUSED QUARTZ CONDENSERS

THE NICHOLAS POWER CO., INC. IS THE EXCLUSIVE NATIONAL DISTRIBUTOR OF G. E. FUSED QUARTZ CONDENSERS, a product of the Thompson Laboratory of the General Electric Company, representing nearly a century of scientific research and practical development. Fused Quartz is used in a variety of important scientific and manufacturing operations and is particularly valuable in the manufacture of condenser lenses for motion picture projection. It will not expand or contract except at extreme temperatures as its melting point is approximately 1750 degrees centigrade, and it transmits light with a greater efficiency than glass.

G. E. Fused Quartz Condensers have been used for over two years and in practical operation in a large number of theatres,—such as the Capitol of New York and the Palace of Washington,—the following facts have been established:

They can be subjected to intense heat or sudden change in temperature without danger of cracking.

The distance from the arc to the face of the lens is not limited, nor is it necessary to gradually raise or lower the temperature.

Pitting with hot particles of carbon and copper is not so apparent as with glass condensers and the clear fused quartz condenser therefore remains more efficient under similar conditions.

For experimental purposes a projector operating at 150 amperes was short circuited and the arc played across the face of the lens. Under such conditions the lens, of course, was badly pitted and the ordinary lens would be rendered unfit for further service. The G. E. Fused Quartz Condensers, however, were resurfaced at a cost of only $2 and were again in use within two days.

Average House Costing $283,000 to Seat Approximately 1,400; Other Data

THE latest analysis of reports of new theatre projects shows several changes to the data published on new projects in our issue of October 10th. The forty reports from which the following data is arranged, represent by no means all the new projects which have been reported to MOTION PICTURE NEWS since October 10th, but are those that have been received within the past few weeks. In our October report of sixty projects totalling an estimated building cost of $21,000,000, Illinois led with a schedule over $5,000,000. However, in this week's report California leads with a total of $5,780,000, out of a total of $11,320,000 for the entire country. In other words, California actually represents fifty percent of all the building in the country—in total investment, not number of projects. Illinois takes second place with two projects grossing $3,500,000.

Three projects call for $2,000,000 and more investment; one for $1,500,000; two for one-half million dollars, and sixteen between $100,000 and $500,000.

The average cost per theatre for these forty projects reported is $283,000—a proof that theatres today are being built on an elaborate scale never before approached. In our October report it was shown that the average seating capacity for the projects analyzed was nearly 1,400. The figure is practically the same for the theatres here analyzed.

The individual reports from which this data is compiled are listed as follows:

CALIFORNIA

Hollywood—Plans are completed for the erection of two story Class A theatre bldg. and store to be erected at 5519-33 Hollywood Blvd. Site 96 x 165. Seating Cap. 1,600; Approx. cost $200,000. Owner Bard Bros.

Hollywood—Plans are being prepared for erection of theatre bldg. store and offices to be erected at the corner of Maplewood and Western Aves. Approx. cost $150,000. Site 60 x 178. Seating Cap. 900. Owners—West Coast Theatres.

Inglewood—Plans have been completed for the erection of theatre bldg. to be erected at Balloon St. and Hawthorne Blvd. Approx. cost $100,000. Owner George Williams, City Bldg. Insp. of Hawthorne.

Los Angeles—Plans are being drawn for the erection of theatre and office bldg. to be erected at Eleventh & Hill Sts. Approx. cost to be $2,000,000.

Los Angeles—Plans are being prepared for the erection of a $2,500,000 theatre bldg. to be erected by the Fox Film Corporation. Site has not yet been selected.

San Diego—Plans are being prepared for erection of theatre bldg. on the southwest cor. of Park Blvd. and University Ave. Approx. cost $100,000; site 111 x 143. Owners—G. A. and K. G. Bush.

San Francisco—Plans are being prepared for the erection of Class A theatre bldg. with seating capacity of 1,500 to be erected at the southeast corner of 29th Ave. and Taraval St. Approx. cost $130,000. Owners—Blumenfeld Theatre Circuit.

San Francisco—Plans are being completed for the erection of theatre bldg. at northeast corner of 48th Ave. and Cabrillo St. There will be ten stores in connection with the theatre. Owner—Oceanside Amusement Co.

San Francisco—Plans have been completed for erection of theatre bldg. market and stores to be erected on the east side of Divisadero St. between Hayes and Grove. Reid Bros., Archts., have prepared plans. Approx. cost $500,000. Owners—Milton H. Lees & Samuel H. Levin.

San Jose—Binder & Curtis, Architects are preparing plans for the erection of theatre bldg. at Hester on garage site opposite the Hestor School. Seating Cap. 1,000. Approx. cost $100,000—Leasees of theatre bldg. built by V. A. Benson will be Enno Lion and E. Rosenthal.

FLORIDA

Titusville—Plans are being prepared for erection of theatre bldg. on the river front on Main St. just off Washington Ave. Approx. cost $200,000. Site 100 x 130; Seating Cap. 1,500. Owners—Mr. and Mr. Van Croix.

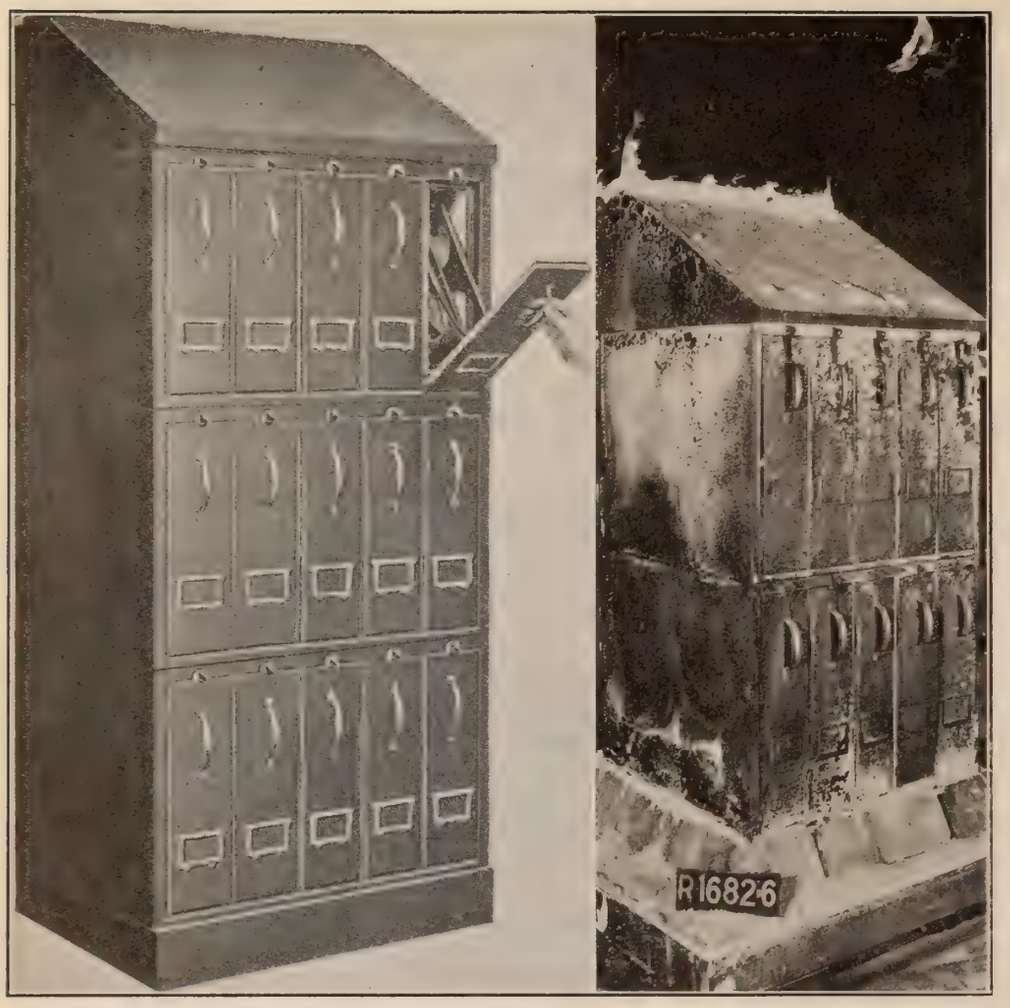
PRICES

IT is an accepted custom that no theatre equipment be bought without a certain amount of bargaining. Exhibitors never call a closed season on prices — when the prices are of equipment. Ten, twenty or twenty-five off list on standard apparatus, or the selection of a substitute apparatus of inferior quality costing less is the haven for these buyers.

Pursued equally diligently by many dealers is the practice of jacking up prices on auxiliary apparatus so that the ten, twenty or twenty-five off on the important equipment does not crimp their profit too severely — or to the same end, by the substitution of inferior products.



That this game of price jockeying — and it seems only that — actually profits either side is questionable. The exhibitor at times buys cheaper and then again he does not. He does not on the occasion where an unjustifiably large margin of profit is slapped on to any number of items that escape for one reason or another, close buying. Or he does not help his cause when he buys cheap substitutes.

But the dealer bears the blame in no small share for this price dickering. He plays the game of wits with the buyer — and usually his profit due to price cutting, added selling costs, long credit risks, etc., is severely curtailed. Unethical competition is also often to blame.

That the present buying practices tend to retard the more general use of standard high grade equipment there can be no doubt. They also make for unhealthy credit risks and business methods. The manufacturer feels their reflection in greater sales resistance.

Summed up, equipment trading as carried on today is conducted to the actual detriment of all concerned. We do not need to point to the road of reform — it's too obvious. But we do know that it is high time that this phase of the motion picture industry decided to carry on as if it were a legitimate business.

P. M. ABBOTT.

On the left is shown the American Film Safe Cabinet used for Film Storage in Projection Rooms, Exchanges, Labratories, etc. The fire charred object on the right is also an American Film Safe Cabinet after it had been submitted to severe heat tests by the Underwriters Labratories.

New Film Cabinet Reduces Fire Hazard and Insurance Rates

AN equipment that is now being installed in many motion picture theatres and which deserves comment due to its unusual features and benefits to a theatre in which it is installed is the American Film Safe, a cabinet expressly designed for the storage of motion picture film.

The American Film Safe is constructed having numerous individual compartments in which either one thousand foot or two thousand foot reels of film are stored. The reel of film is inserted by simply pulling back a conveniently arranged cover and allowing the reel to roll into place, the cover automatically closing.

Perhaps the feature of this film cabinet that will appeal most strongly to exhibitors lies in the fact that insurance organizations are making substantial reductions in rates wherever this this particular type of film safe is installed. This, because the apparatus has been passed by the Fire Underwriters' Laboratories.

The safe itself is made of rolled sheet metal and is claimed to be practically indestructible. It is of unit construction and may be added to or re-arranged at will. Each film is housed in a separate fire-proof compartment and is suspended on a film carriage, which automatically moves forward when the door to the compartment is opened, making the film readily accessible.

This new equipment is apparently in keeping with the time, i. e., new apparatus of improved design, which tend to make for more efficient operation of theatres and, also, in many instances, for better shows.

Will Build Modern Theatre At Biloxi, Miss.

Advices from Biloxi, Miss., are that Max and Jack Yellen of New Orleans, La., will build a $500,000 motion picture theatre on Lameuse street, Biloxi. The building will be three stories in height and of reinforced concrete and brick construction.

Three New Theatres For The Middle West

Contracts for the construction of a new theatre in Crystal Lake, Ill., has been awarded to the Olson & Green Construction Company of that city. Fred O. Diering, 1839 Crawford avenue, is the owner of the building. The theatre will be of pressed brick, brick and terra cotta construction and cost about $85,000.

The new Marshall Theatre, Manchester avenue, Maplewood, Mo., is scheduled to open within the next several weeks. It will seat 1,600 persons and cost $175,000.

Gray & Contrakan will open their new Pantheon Theatre on North Grand avenue, Springfield, Ill., about December 6. It will have seats for 700 persons.

B. F. Shearer, Seattle, Making Extensive Tour of East

B. F. Shearer, president of the B. F. Shearer, Incorporated, Seattle, theatre equipment specialists, recently paid a visit to the News' offices and commented on the exceptionally encouraging conditions of theatre building on the West Coast, particularly in and around Seattle. Mr. Shearer predicts that 1926 will show a record of theatre building in his territory.

B. F. Shearer, Inc., who have completely decorated and equipped many West Coast theatres, are contemplating going into this business on a national scale. Mr. Shearer announces that these plans have been made due to the numerous requests that have been received from exhibitors from various parts of the country for services of his company.

Saland, Formerly of Film Developing Co., Opens Own

Nat Saland, who until recently was connected with the Film Developing Corporation in the capacity of vice president, has recently started a new laboratory of his own which is now operating under the name of Saland Film Laboratories, Inc., and located at Hudson Heights, New Jersey. Mr. Saland has been in the laboratory business for fifteen years.

Inquiries and Comments

Standardized Screen Brightness Part I

THE society of Motion Picture Engineers, not so very long ago, took the first important step toward achieving something which long has been sorely needed in the motion picture field—the standardization of screen brightness in the motion picture theatre.

The Society appointed a committee to investigate the possibilities of bringing about the desired conditions, but like many other first efforts, little success attended them since the committee reported back that because of the many variables involved it would prove extremely difficult, if not altogether impossible, to attain a standard screen brightness in any true sense of the word.

Let us hope, however, for the general good of the motion picture industry at large and in the interests of public welfare, that the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, will in no way relax its efforts to bring about a successful termination to its investigations.

Wasteful and Dangerous

We say for the motion picture industry at large and the general public welfare for the simple reason that the present chaotic conditions in the average run of better theatres is highly wasteful to producer and exhibitor alike and highly dangerous to the visual welfare of the theatre-going public.

The producing end pays the cost in the way of short-lived film, thereby resulting in higher rentals, at the same time involving a sheer waste of income earning film. Part of this resultant increased cost is undoubtedly passed on to the exhibitor but it is not always possible, nor even feasible for that matter, to make up the loss in this manner.

Then, too it is obviously unfair to penalize all exhibitors alike for something which only a few renters may be responsible for.

We use the word few reservedly since it is our firm belief that the average better theatre in this country uses considerably more light for screen illumination purposes than is actually required for continued safe vision. (This does not hold true for the average small town house.)

The mere fact that only the worst cases are exposed, due to the pronouncedly visible harm they do, is not proof, by any means, that the danger is confined to these instances alone. The only difference between these and the milder offenders lies in the fact that the one is readily apparent while the other is not.

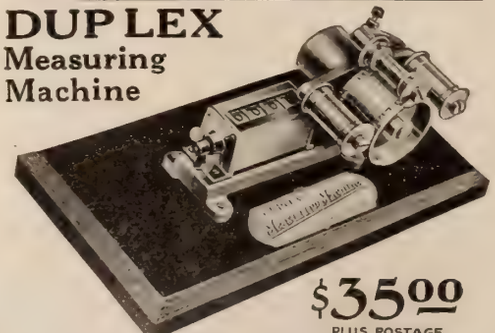
The final result, however, is inescapably the same—film scrapped long before its time.

Aware of the Fact

That the producing end of the industry is fully aware of the waste in film thus resulting is easily seen. Slowly but surely efforts are being directed toward the end of jacking up exhibitors in the way of using means to conserve the film. Periodic inspections of projectors have long been in vogue in certain localities and educational efforts are now under way to reduce the evils of excessive screen brightness.

The producing organizations taking their cue from the S.M.P.E., are becoming increasingly active in their efforts to restrict this ever growing evil.

A Growing Danger



In this matter of film waste due to its excessive illumination grave concern seems to be felt over the indiscriminate use of the high intensity arc in houses where they are not actually needed. Not only does this light source possess extreme brilliancy but the quality of its color is such as to modify the resultant color of projected tinted film.

This color has been attacked with the object of removing it but so far unsuccessfully.

The high intensity arc, however, is not alone responsible for this depreciation in film condition. From this country, Canada and European countries we have received direct reports that the concentration of heat at the aperture resulting from use of other types of arc is receiving serious attention and one English company has placed on the market a form of heat absorbing glass to be used in connection therewith.

The reason for this should be evident. In this matter of light projection anything that involves light must, by the same token, involve heat. The two are inseparable and no "cold" light has, as yet been invented. Furthermore, it can be said that any increase in light is also attended by a corresponding increase in heat as far as projection is concerned. Thus, doubling the amount of light passing through the aperture is pretty certain to result in doubling the amount of heat radiated through the aperture.

When, in addition, the lesser absorption of heat energy, due to the absence of condenser lenses in some systems is considered, it is small wonder that the spot on the aperture is more intense than with the old form of arc.

This is not the principal factor, however; there is a more serious one. The reflector arc is highly efficient. It gives the same screen illumination as the most powerful D.C. ordinary arc at one-third to one-fourth the cost of operation. Herein lies the danger.

With the old condenser form of arc the exhibitor was not prone to use any more amperage than was required for satisfactory screen results. If anything, there was a tendency to use less because of the large bills for power which acted as a check upon his "over shooting" proclivities.

Now, however, every exhibitor, large or small has it within his means to get the equivalent of a high powered arc at a fraction of his former operating expense. The fact that he can secure lower amperage sizes of reflector arcs means little since the differential in operating costs between the various amperages is, after all, relatively small. There is a lower limit below which any reduction in operating costs becomes of little importance.

The wide spread use of the reflector arc —and it will be widespread—will result in one of two things, either a clamor for standardization screen brightness or the use of heat absorbing glass.

For that matter, both appear to be desirable.

The reflector arc is here to stay. Any device which does the work of its predecessor at one-fourth the cost is not lightly to be tossed aside. Something of the kind has long been needed in the exhibiting field as the old arc was grossly inefficient.

We expect a prosperous future as far as the reflector arc is concerned. The manufacturers obviously are not concerned with the problem of film deterioration as long as their product does not involve greater danger from film fires. The danger with this device is no greater for that matter, than with others.

The exhibitor on the other hand is equally unconcerned in this matter since he is effecting great savings in operating costs. The burden of it appears to fall upon the producers. They seem to realize it and are preparing to meet it.

Film deterioration, aside from mechanical injury, is due to just one thing; that is, passing too much radiated energy in the form of light and heat, through it when at the aperture plane. It makes no difference whether this light is used to illuminate a picture at a distance of 50 feet or 300 feet the effect is the same.

On short "throws," however, a much lower intensity of light (beam candlepower, if you will) is required to produce the same screen brightness than is required at longer projection distances.

This is in accordance with the Law of Inverse Squares, the application of which to the projector beam, was established by this department.

In the light of this, why are theatres constructed which invariably have projection distances ranging anywhere from 150 to 300 feet? Any projection distances in excess of 200 feet practically necessitates the use of the high intensity arc with its attendant evils.

It matters not furthermore, that the reflector form of arc is sometimes used to replace the high intensity source since then a larger diameter of projection lens is required to compensate for the handicap in source brilliancy, which again means an equivalent amount of radiated energy passing through the film.

The net effect is, therefore, the same—film deterioration. To effect the elinination of this waste would do well to consider much shorter projection distances than are now the vogue. The crux of this entire matter really rests in this item of projection distance.

If theatre builders persist in constructing their large theatres in such a manner as to necessitate excessive illumination of the film in order to secure a picture which is no brighter than what could be secured with one-fourth the energy at one-half the projection distance, then they certainly cannot reasonably expect other exhibitors to follow preachings which they themselves do not practice.

A projection distance of about 100-125 feet in large houses is both practical and desirable

"Lights of Old Broadway"—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Capitol, New York

The World: "Gay, smart and romantically beautiful is Marion Davies' latest screen comedy . . . One of the wittiest and most sensibly directed and acted comedies of the screen which have come this way . . . In comedy Miss Davies excels. There are only a few who do . . . A large audience kept up a continuously steady ripple of laughter."

Times: "Miss Davies gives for the most part a remarkable performance in a dual role . . . This present film is quite charming, for it is concerned with the Broadway of many years ago . . . Mr. Bell has inculcated some very nice touches in this picture, especially in the scenes recalling the personages of that day."

Evening Telegram: "Marion Davies carries with consummate grace and ability the burden of a dual role in the picture . . . Miss Davies retains all the spirit and dash that mark her performances in her earlier films . . . a well directed production that provides excellent entertainment."

Daily News: "Marion Davies is delightful as Fely . . . There is much applause whenever a character from life is introduced—Roosevelt, 12, walking to school; Weber and Fields pulling a clog dance for Tony Pastor, or Thomas Edison, pictured as a moony-eyed youth, in his workshop."

Herald-Tribune: "Fely is the sort of role Miss Davies does best, and we believe there is no actress on the screen who could have played this part in so spirited a manner. She is absolutely convincing."

Evening Graphic: "Marion Davies, in the dual role of Fely and Anne, gives excellent characterizations and displays her well-known versatility . . . The historic atmosphere will give the film an appeal."

Evening World: "Monta Bell has introduced dozens of novel touches with the result that the story never sags to the ordinary . . . Miss Davies does her part well and with evident relish."

"Classified" — First National, Strand, New York

Herald-Tribune: "'Classified' is the most amusing picture Corinne Griffith ever appeared in. Al Santell's direction is sympathetic and Miss Griffith is coy, pert, wise, witty and smart, but never sad. It must have been a red-letter day for her when she received that part, and it was a great day for us when we saw her play it."

Daily News: "You don't know what a joy it is to give 'Classified' an ad. It deserves it. It's one of those movies that come our way once in a blue moon. Intelligent, human, sprinkled with laughs and with Corinne Griffith, the loveliest lady of the films, it is just about the perfect picture. The sub-titles sparkle, the direction is fine and the cast remarkable. You'll take it this is a good picture. Yes?"

Times: "'Classified' the new photoplay at the Mark Strand obviously was enjoyed by a large proportion of the audience yesterday afternoon. Miss Griffith is very attractive as Miss Comet. Jack Mulhall is a manly young hero, and Ward Crane is satisfactory as the saturnine gentleman who unconsciously brings about a happy ending."

Telegraph: "Corinne Griffith in the comedy 'Classified' will afford amusement and entertainment to patrons of the Strand this week as evidenced by the enjoyment the combination evoked yesterday afternoon."

American: "Corinne Griffith should ask Alfred Santell, her director, and Ralph Spence, her title writer, to step forward while she pins a medal on their manly chests. They have done much for her in 'Classified' for they have helped her add some real comedy to her list of other accomplishments."

Morning World: "It is amusing stuff, and its leading woman is a delight at all times."

Post: "The beautiful Corinne Griffith may be seen at the Strand this week in her newest film, 'Classified,' straight from the highly humorous pen of Edna Ferber. 'Classified' is a very amusing picture. More than that, it is a very good picture, something true to life for a change. No one is expected to believe us, of course, but even the villain is practically a human being. Everybody in the cast seems to have entered into a conspiracy to oust a large slice of movie claptrap from the proceedings and the result is gratifying indeed."

"The Eagle" — United Artists, Strand, New York

American: "Mr. Valentino has a vehicle of real color and interest. The picture is colorful, full of action and has a real love story. Not since the feminine world went on its knees and called him a hero has he had such an engaging role. It would be difficult to say where the charm begins and ends. Mr. Valentino gives a fine, intelligent performance. Vilma Banky is exquisite. Do not miss this picture which will be on your list of the ten best films, that is if you like artistic and dramatic pictures."

Herald-Tribune: "If 'The Eagle' is not a classic, then we do not know one. So much under the spell of our favorite movie hero were we that our judgment may not be accurate, but even so, every one will see it, and we hope every man, and especially every woman, will enjoy the picture as much as we did. Mr. Valentino was modest, sincere, whimsical and wistful, a most devastating combination."

Mirror: "In 'The Eagle' Rudolph Valentino has come to the screen his oldtime debonair, romantic, adventurous self. The picture shows him handsome as a Cossack, dashing in bandit garb, impassioned as the lover with Vilma Banky his captivating sweetheart. 'The Eagle' rises to the clouds of romantic heights. The story is intriguing."

Telegraph: "Rudolph Valentino offers us a romantic comedy in 'The Eagle.' When he kisses Vilma Banky and in his scene with Albert Conti, the old Valentino flashes forth like a thread of lightning. The production is superb."

Evening World: "Applause was frequent during the showing and at the conclusion of 'The Eagle,' an interesting, entertaining and dramatic picture, beautifully staged. The Cossack role is well suited to Mr. Valentino's talents. The whole production is relieved by timely humor. 'The Eagle' is a good film combining beauty and entertainment and is well worth seeing."

Journal: "The picture is delightfully polished and piquantly enjoyable Mr. Valentino does excellent work. He rides, fights, dances the mazurka, and makes love with a debonair smile, and what more could you ask of any picture—"

Graphic: "'The Eagle' is a picture that probably will over-run its schedule. There is not the shadow of a doubt that the man who popularized the word 'Sheik' is still the popular screen idol par excellence. The picture gives Mr. Valentino the opportunity to shine in the sort of role that the public loves to see him in—a dashing, romantic figure, fearless in danger, ardent in love, agile in horsemanship, subtle in diplomacy and with a goodly sense of humor. The sets are marvelous."

Sun: "'The Eagle' is a colorful, rather sumptuous production that obviously pleased the assembled multitude that jammed the Strand in pursuit of pleasurable romantic heart thrills. It is an entertaining photoplay; Mr. Valentino is picturesque as usual. The settings are rich and handsome."

"Big Parade"—M-G-M., Egyptian, Hollywood

Examiner: "'The Big Parade' marched into Hollywood last night, and triumphed on every count. Today, King Vidor, its director, is one of the most distinguished men in filmdom. After years of preparation and study he has touched a cinematic goal so exalted that his must be a steady head indeed to carry all its honors. Heralded in advance as one of the greatest pictures ever made the new film met with storms of applause, gales of laughter, excitement and torrential emotional waves, all of which testified to its success."

Times: "With a martial swing, and the rhythm of blended comedy and drama, with romance and heart interest, the great war epic has at last arrived! Never has there been such enthusiasm—such ovation—such growing and climaxing through a film presentation. The emotion of a new experience—the power of touching humanness; mirth and sorrow, laughter and bitterness all mingled and surged and conquered with something almost of relentless force a public that grew attuned every moment to the triumphing might of one of the most vigorous and compelling achievements in all the history of the motion picture."

Record: "If you never see another motion picture in your life, go see 'The Big Parade.' Go if you have to rob the baby's bank—hobble there if you have to borrow a crutch; ride in a limousine, or a street car, or walk—but get there. You—all of you, who lived through the days of 1917-18—owe it to yourselves. 'The Big Parade' isn't a motion picture, although you'll see it on the screen; it isn't a spectacle, although thousands of persons appear on its scenes; it isn't a story, although there is a love theme involved—It's War."

Herald: "'The Big Parade' is worthy of all the praise that is being written and spoken of it today, and that will be written and spoken for some time to come. 'The Big Parade' is a really great photodrama. I think it can safely be said that no picture depicting the war approaches it. It is a true picturization of conditions and circumstances in No Man's Land, vivid, pulsating, full of thrills and tragedy, with just the desired comedy interjection."

"Old Clothes"—M-G-M., Capitol, N. Y.

Sun: "That offspring of Mr. and Mrs. Coogan, who is the favorite adolescent of the film world is unusually entertaining in 'Old Clothes.' which may be seen and laughed at in the roomy reaches of the Capitol this week. He is still able to stir with his former skill the maternal and paternal complexes of his audiences. That ability is one that he shares with very few stars—and it is probably the secret of Jackie's exceptional drawing power at the box office."

American: "The mothers of New York and the surrounding country owe Marcus Loew, Jackie Coogan and all concerned in making the picture a genuine debt of gratitude. The little fellow with the big brown eyes and smile always furnishes the kind of entertainment the children can enjoy."

Daily News: "Jackie Coogan is as cute as ever and Max Davidson gives good support. There are many clever directorial touches, especially in the scene where Tim is trying to get damages from a hard-boiled adjuster. A gentle, wholesome comedy that presents Jackie as you like him."

Brooklyn Eagle "'Old Clothes' I have found to be a thoroughly satisfactory comedy. It is a light-footed composition, unhampered by too serious a plot construction and carried along easily upon a thin coating of romance in which Jackie, himself, is incidentally concerned."

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Trackless Train" completes its trans-continental tour from the Atlantic to the Pacific with a triumphal entry into Los Angeles. Photos above show highlights in a city-wide celebration marking the end of an exploitation journey both unique and successful—the company reports that the train greatly stimulated box-office receipts for theatres over the entire route. The pictures above show Eddie Carrier, "conductor" of the train, delivering the message from Mayor Hylan of New York to Mayor Cryer, to the latter; center photo shows the train going through the huge arched banner erected by the Chamber of Commerce of Los Angeles, with police escort; and at right, Irving Thalberg, Harry Rapf, M-G-M studio chiefs, and Kathleen Key, one of the company's stars, seated on the observation platform of the "Trackless Train."

Four Robert Mortons for West Coast

Four West Coast theatres, the Royal, of Los Angeles; the New Capitol of Sacramento and two others, now in process of contruction, but yet un-named, have purchased Robert Morton organs and will feature special organ recitals and musical features as program attractions.

This appears to be in line with the modern tendency to utilize the desire of communities for good music to the advantage of box office receipts.

Among other houses which will pursue the same policy are the new Levine theatre of Portsmouth, Va., which is about to install a $20,000 Robert Morton and Hancock's new theatre, now building at Stuart, Florida, which has ordered one of the new Robert Morton pit organs.

Both of these houses will exploit their musical programs as special features, which is quite practicable, at a moderate expense, as their instruments will provide them with facilities equal to that of a pretentious orchestra but at greatly minimized expenditure.

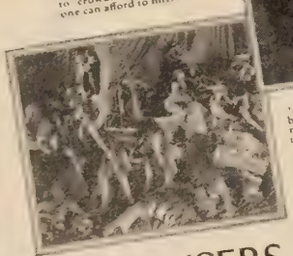
CECIL B. DE MILLE

Rising from one triumph to another, now plans a series of pictures to excel anything ever before offered—

1915: Geraldine Farrar in "Carmen", a De Mille "scoop" and a never-to-be-forgotten picture, which marked a big step forward in the film industry.



1916: Under DeMille's management, "Wally" Reid was the best loved of movie heroes.

1920: Gloria Swanson —Lila Lee—Thomas Meighan—headed for fame in "Male and Female".

1924: "The Ten Commandments"—a stupendous spectacle, still playing to crowded houses. No one can afford to miss it.

1923: "Manslaughter" brought to Meighan a new leading lady and to the public a new idol Leatrice Joy

And now "The Road to Yesterday"... great independent offering through Producers Distributing Corporation. Adapted by Beulah Marie Dix and F. G. Sutt... Macpherson and Beulah Marie Dix and F. G. Sut...

ATTITLE over ten years ago, Cecil B. DeMille was putting in his second year in the moving picture field and he was working feverishly to prove that there was a place in the motion pictures for big and better films.

In between those first desperate days and the present time a record of achievement which has been equalled by no other producer.

With each succeeding year, each triumph, it has seemed as if the topmost pinnacle of Motion Picture perfection had been reached, and yet when it seemed as though there were no further heights to which he could climb there burst upon the world, years ago, that great spectacle of Mille-spectacles—"The Ten Commandments"—a production so awe-inspiring and so absorbing that audiences breathlessly declared them that DeMille had surely reached the very pinnacle of his career as a worker of motion pictures, that he had wrought so stupendously that never could he hope to equal that piece!

WHAT will he do next? Looking forward to greater glories, greater achievements in the future. He has signed with Associate Producers to have produced a series of pictures, each one

Presents

"WITHOUT MERCY"

Is Woman's Hate Deeper Than Man's?

COULD this stern woman really have been the pitiful girl he had hurt so cruelly—in body and soul—twenty years earlier? Now he was in her power. Relentlessly, she demanded payment.

Trembling in the balance was the fate of a lovely girl, a political situation and a fortune! An absorbing story of love—hate—and a woman's revenge. Don't miss it!

A GEORGE MELFORD PRODUCTION—Adapted by Monte Katterjohn from the novel by John Goodwin. With Vera Reynolds, Dorothy Phillips, Robert Ames and Rockliffe Fellowes.

There's a Thrill in—

—The fiery furnace of a big steel plant
—The primitive battle of two strong men
—Young love that fights against tremendous obstacles.

And when you get all these thrills in one magnificent picture, you get entertainment that can't be beaten. Every minute of "STEEL PREFERRED" is breathlessly absorbing.

A stirring drama adapted by Elliott J. Clawson, from The Saturday Evening Post stories, "The Adventures of Wally Gay", by Hershel S. Hall. With Vera Reynolds, William Boyd, Charlie Murray, Ben Turpin and a fine cast.

"STEEL PREFERRED"

"SIMON THE JESTER"

LOLA was a woman of the circus, yet so lovely, so irresistible, that three men loved her madly, each in his own way—one with the ardor of youth, one with the deep tenderness of maturity and one with the wild jealousy of a passionate nature. Somebody must lose—who?

A story of strange circus people, of high society, of a gay millionaire whose days were numbered. A whirlwind of tense and fascinating situations in ultra-fashionable settings, in a second rate hotel, in a gambling dive in Tangiers. A truly remarkable picture!

A FRANCES MARION PRODUCTION—Directed by George Melford. From the novel by William J. Locke. With Eugene O'Brien, Lillian Rich, Edmund Burns and Henry B. Walthall.

THESE three splendid productions are typical of the diversified entertainment offered you by Metropolitan Pictures Corporation, Inc. Stirring drama, absorbing mystery, and tender romance are brought to life before you. Skillful players, brilliantly directed, hold your unwavering interest right up to the final moment.

Ask for these pictures, and watch for the forthcoming Metropolitan pictures at your favorite theatre

NEW WINNERS from Al Christie—King of Laugh Makers

The man who convulsed the nation with "Charley's Aunt" offers two more uproarious successes!

"Seven Days"

—from the farce by Mary Roberts Rinehart and Avery Hopwood. Directed by Scott Sidney with Lillian Rich, Creighton Hale, Lilyan Tashman, and a great cast. A spirited comedy centered about a smallpox quarantine in high society. Hilarious!

"Madam Behave"

—adapted from the French farce by Jean Arlette. Directed by Scott Sidney. With Ann Pennington, Broadway favorite, and Julian Eltinge, famous woman impersonator. Fast and furious fun with Julian Eltinge in the dual role of hero and "lady of mystery" and dainty Ann Pennington at her best.

LAUGHTER is a million-dollar tonic—and Al Christie has tapped an inexhaustible supply. With "Charley's Aunt" he set the world rocking and roaring. Now he presents a new series of laugh riots. If you want to be rejuvenated, re-invigorated, and have guaranteed entertainment, don't ever miss an Al Christie feature comedy. Soon these pictures will reach your local screen. Good morning!

Armistice day—God bless it!

The world is full of pictures this week whose stories hinge on the World war. And there's never a finer one than "Havoc" being shown

I think that I have never seen greater acting than is done by the men in this production. Walter McGrail gives an impersonation that fairly cuts you away. He completely loses himself in his characterization and engulfs you in the storm of his emotions. George O'Brien goes to the mat with his part in gripping fashion. Leslie Fenton—whom we don't know well, but from now on will know better—has several scenes that tear at your heart. David Butler and Bertram Grassby are splendid and minor rôles acted by chaps not mentioned in the cast are of sincerely and beautifully presented.

First mention for the men, with a close second for the women. The brilliant and lovely Margaret Livingston is at her best. So are little Madge Bellamy, Eulalie Jensen and Edythe Chapman.

Then sets and scenery are so perfect. The action that takes place on the battlefields "over there" is so real—so terribly real.

The story, from the play by Henry Wall, is of two men, closer than brothers, who love the same women, as the faithless as she is beautiful—and she is very beautiful.

She jilts the officer to whom she is engaged for his friend, Dick. The latter, home on leave, after a struggle—to be loyal to the man he loves, succumbs to his infatuation. He goes back to the front and makes the truth known to Roddy.

Roddy is insane with jealousy—and Roddy is his superior officer. The stern business of war becomes a factor in a soul battle.

I shan't tell you another single thing about the story because this picture is one that for nine reels will hold you breathless if you haven't heard beforehand what the plot's all about.

All left for me to say is—SEE "HAVOC."

"I buy film for Northern Division West Coast Theatres. Information complete and invaluable."—Chas M. Thall, West Coast Theatres, Inc., of Northern California, San Francisco, Cal.

"It is a book no manager of a theatre should be without."—Chas. A. Kuehle, Lisbon Circuit of Theatres, Cincinnati, Ohio.

"It keeps the 'market information' under our finger-tips at all times."—W. M. Smith, Orpheum Theatre Amusement Enterprises, Tulsa, Okla.

"Appreciate it. Fine guide to pick just what our crowds want. Invaluable for reference."—Enterprise Theatre, Glen Alum, W. Va.

"I could hardly get along without it as a source of quick reference in advertising San Francisco neighborhood theatres. The tabloid data refreshes my memory on facts I wish to confirm at a glance and reference to review dates, etc., gives me added information when desired."—W. Harold Wilson, Loew Bldg., San Francisco, Calif.

"We use it continually. It is our dictionary."—D. A. Hathaway, Broadway Amusement Co., Portland, Ore.

"I appreciate this very much. Sometimes I find a good bet that I have overlooked."—Colonial Theatre, Nashua, N. H.

"I have all nine volumes on file for frequent reference and would be lost without them."—E. O. Ellsworth, Metropolitan, Iowa Falls, Iowa.

"The Booking Guide has been of utmost aid to me."—G. Battaglia, Monroe Theatre, Troy, N. Y.

"The best and most reliable ready reference published."—Auditorium, Lincoln, Maine.

"Handiest little volume on the desk."—Lyric Theatre, Utica, N. Y.

"It is the best little reference in our library and we would be lost without it."—J. McWilliams, Madison Theatre, Madison, Wis.

"Handy reference book. I also use the short subject index to see what is available in that line."—Geo. F. Schuyler, Lyric Theatre, Ashland, Kentucky.

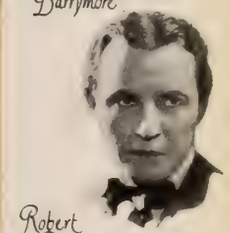
Truly Magnificent

WITH a picture that carries the full sweep of his genius, Frank Lloyd has answered the demand for a successor to "Winds of Chance."

It isn't the drama of men but of women who followed the golden trail. One was a daughter of wealth, one was a dance-hall girl; and one dressed as a man and gambled like men. She fought men and loved one man gloriously—but she would not fight for love! Words can't tell this story as Frank Lloyd and his cast of stars have pictured it.



Spectacular, thrilling in action, beautiful in romance, keen in humor, "The Splendid Road" has still a greater magnetism. It has caught that spirit which makes for phenomenal success.

Motion Picture News

Volume XXXII ALBANY, N. Y., AND NEW YORK CITY, December 5, 1925 No. 23

An Editorial for Exhibitors

WE are inaugurating this week a service to exhibitors of more than passing importance.

On pages 2667 to 2674 of this issue will be found a complete service section on a forthcoming picture.

The reader will be amazed to find here an advertisement that makes no effort to sell the picture to him. On the contrary, the entire space and all the material in it is wholly designed to help him sell the picture to his public.

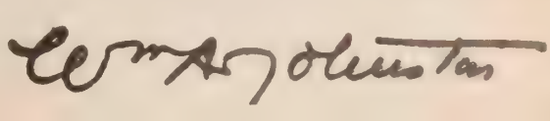
The material is brief, simple, practical. It points out the box-office values of the picture and outlines ways and means to utilize them —catch lines, newspaper advertisement layouts, lobby displays, suggestions in general.

It isn't overdone or underdone. It is practical showman stuff. The largest or smallest theatre in any locality in the country will find something here, maybe a little, but some bit of exploitation service he can use to advantage.

Furthermore, with this copy of the "News" in his file, whether he is abreast of release date or plays the picture one or two years hence, he may know that when the picture does come along he has easily and assuredly at hand just the box-office help he so certainly needs, and at the moment he needs it.

We have tried for years to get this sort of advertising copy into MOTION PICTURE NEWS. The trade paper good enough to be filed was the place, we asserted—the logical, economical place—for the campaign book and press sheet.

There are coming to our desk right now over a hundred postcards a day, testifying strongly to the service value of the recent issue of "The Booking Guide."



And, easily, every other card says about as follows: the press sheet didn't arrive—or it was mislaid. But I had "The Booking Guide" handy. Maybe its brief information sufficed. But, otherwise, it was a quick reference to the pages of the "News," and here was some more exploitation help, etc.

Another thing: campaign books and press sheets are better these days, but in the past they have been designed to sell the picture to the exhibitor, not to help him sell it. They have been bulky, ornate, extravagant in material. Today they are generally better; some are good and usable. But we have seen none more practical, useful and conclusive than the six pages included in this issue and aptly styled "A Showman's Manual."

So we hail this as real service, and a long step forward in service, and also a logical practical use of a trade paper.

It is our hope that once every month an issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS will be devoted to just this sort of exploitation material —not on one picture from one company, but on all those pictures from any company that deserve exploitation by the exhibitor.

And we might remark in conclusion that more than ninety-nine per cent of all the exhibitors in the country are more interested in this sort of material than all the trade news that New York alone considers big and all the editorials I could write about its bigness.

AN EDITOR

The Week in Review

A YOUNG man named King Vidor burst upon the New York film world last week like a comet in the sky. The occasion was the metropolitan opening of "The Big Parade," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picture of war as it is—vivid, compelling, a document not so much of realism as of reality and altogether one of the few really great films of all time.

At one bound Vidor the director, leaps to a place beside Griffith, DeMille, Cruze and Ingram. If there are others who should be named in the Valhalla of triumphant directors, Vidor would stand beside them all, and yield in importance to none.

"The Big Parade" is incomparably the finest war picture ever screened, and we forget none of them in making the assertion. It has everything, as they say in theatrical parlance. But there is something about it which makes it stand out for its own great, new, burning individuality. It has the imperishable humor of the doughboy, the moonlight and roses of romance against a background of gunfire and mud and pitiful death, and a tremendous indictment of war that never once becomes a sermon but is more powerful than spoken word or written document.

THE strategy—the composition—of this film was a stroke of genius. The first part is almost wholly comedy and romance. The young aristocrat, the ex-bartender, and the steel riveter become buddies in the cosmic disturbance known as the Great War. They are thrown into the maelstrom in France; but they are not immediately engaged in the struggle to keep alive in the midst of death.

There is the girl Melisande—not a movie heroine but the veritable incarnation of womanhood in the wake of the storm of war; self-possessed and kindly and charming. A living human being, not a marionette moving across the screen. Well, the three buddies meet her; and, of course, the young aristocrat emerges as the chosen one. He plays fair with her. They fall in love; but always across the path of their romance is the shadow of the moment when he must go up to the mud-pits of the trenches.

Thus the romance. Woven into it, in happy measure, is the comedy by-play. The spotlight is turned full upon the lowly doughboy—his miseries and his love affairs; his gifts from home and his inventive genius in improvising a shower-bath; wretchedness and laughter, incident piled upon incident in wonderfully effective contrast.

THE first part of the film builds steadily and ends upon a sequence which ranks with the Return of the Little Colonel in "The Birth of A Nation" for poignant appeal and stirring dramatic force. The moment comes for The Big Parade up to the front. The army trucks get under way, hundreds of them; scores of airplanes and artillery caissons; movement everywhere; utmost confusion in the little French village. And—Melisande, the heroine, separated from Jim, the young aristocrat, and running about wildly to find him. Just when the spectator has decided it will never happen, she discovers him on the army truck; there is a "clinch" from which he is torn away. She strives to hold back the truck; is finally left sitting in the road. And Vidor and Stallings give this scene its last touch of the pathos of realism by having the hero throw a hob-nailed army shoe to her.

This inadequate description by no means does justice to what is to us the finest single thing in the picture—more impressive even than the shellhole incident where a cigarette becomes the symbol of the brotherhood of man, or the sequence of the advance of the Americans through the woods—an amazing triumph of camera and direction.

The second part of the film, incorporating the battle stuff, stands alone among achievements of its kind. It is magnificently done. As to the players, Renee Adoree, in our estimation, wins the chief honors. John Gilbert gives a splendid performance and Tom O'Brien and Karl Dane, as his buddies, are types and players long to be remembered.

"The Big Parade" will be the talk of the industry and the talk of the public for a long, long time.

KING VIDOR will be given a lot of credit for "The Big Parade," and justly so. But let us not overlook the author, Laurence Stallings, who, we understand, worked hard and painstakingly on this picture. Authors do count enormously, you know. Stallings lived the World War and this picture is his brain-child. Moreover, as we say, he did more than create the structure: he worked on the details. And let us not by any means overlook the supervisor of the picture, Irving Thalberg; or shall we call him—the producer of it?

ON BROADWAY

By William A. Johnston

In the past of this business we had directors and few producers. Certain directors were really producers. So we gave all production credit to directors —even after prominent authors came into the picture.

Today we have producers, authors, directors, technical directors, camera men; all are important. Here and there one, decidedly, is of the most importance. But always, it seems to us, the most important is the man who hatched the idea of the picture.

ABOUT the most enjoyable, certainly the most novel film luncheon to date was the one given on Tuesday last by Will H. Hays to Mrs. Ruth Griffith Burnett, winner of the first prize in the Greater Movie Season essay contest.

In her charming little speech Mrs. Burnett said that she had often been asked what, of all motion pictures, had impressed her most. There was no one picture, she said. Her enduring impressions of pictures were those of certain characterizations and scenes.

Here is your true appeal of the pictures; and here, simply, is the reason for stars.

The fiction editor of a magazine of large circulation once told me that over ninety percent of his women readers told him that they lived, as they read, the lives of the characters in the story, that this was their supreme test of a story; authors' names, titles, illustrations and so forth were minor considerations. Did their characters live, did they enter the lives of the readers? Here was the story interest.

And so it is with pictures—the world over.

THOUGH of comparatively recent origin the Short Feature Advertising Association is making tangible progress in promoting the interests of the one and two reel productions. And what promises to be one of the most important national movements connected with the industry, National Laugh Month which will be celebrated during January, is making rapid strides under the intelligent and energetic direction of the organization.

Once more within the ranks of the industry we have a striking illustration of what can be accomplished when a group of men with common interests adopt the cooperative spirit and present a united front in advancing their cause.

The standard of production and the box office names which the producers of short features are employing at present has resulted in a supply of pictures, the quality of which entitles them to the special distinction which Laugh Month is bound to accomplish in their behalf.

It is to be hoped, earnestly hoped, that the movement will receive the support that will carry it to a great success. On their merits the short features have earned their right to a place in the sun of popularity and prestige.

IT strikes us that Carl Laemmle's deal with Ufa is one of the greatest and wisest ever made in an industry whose history is filled with spectacular business moves. We are compelled to fall back upon newspaper parlance and call it a scoop. A historical one.

While we have been discussing International film relations the fact has been accomplished. That is the broadest aspect of the matter. We may now expect an interchange of pictures and picture stars between this country and not merely Germany, but a large part of Continental Europe, for the distribution power of Ufa is a very broad one.

But also: Universal leaps with one jump right over the wall of a Kontingent, securing the release in Germany of as many feature pictures as Ufa sees fit to produce for its own broad market; Universal secures the valuable outlet for American pictures in a chain of approximately one hundred and fifty theatres including the choicest in Germany; and, knowing as we do in this country just what a theatre chain of such magnitude means to a producer-distributor, the word "exclusive" carries a world of meaning. Yes, indeed.

Universal has always been a leading concern in the foreign field. Today the foreign field means a great deal to any American concern, and in the future it will mean much more. So, by all rules of simple arithmetic, one is compelled to conclude that this one stroke of business puts Universal in a position of power throughout the film trade world today that any company can well be envious of, and undoubtedly is.

At the same time, the assured release of a certain number of its productions in America will mean a great deal to Ufa. Its recent pictures have been produced with a lavish hand and such pictures must have a world wide market to show a profit. At the same time, through the co-operation which it will have from Universal on future productions, Ufa should be able to hit the mark squarely in producing for this field.

Speaking Editorially

ANNOUNCEMENT by Jesse L. Lasky of the new production regime East and West carries great interest. Plainly, it is a program of adjustment and expansion to meet changing conditions in the trade; and it bids fair to individualize production activities to a greater extent than was possible heretofore. It is interesting to note also the accession of new directorial talent, as exemplified by the contract with Von Stroheim.

Famous Players has been noted, throughout its career, for its progressiveness; and it is obviously the company's intention to make still further history along this line. The supervisors and associate producers represent an array of talent to be reckoned with; and we shall confidently look forward to some very interesting and important developments as a result of this significant move.

JULES MASTBAUM, in a wire to MOTION PICTURE NEWS, emphatically denies that there is any truth in the reported deal with Fox, which would seem to be very conclusive on that score. Meanwhile, Fox is quietly expanding its theatre holdings in other localities, notably in Washington and Baltimore.

The consummation of a $25,000,000 deal in Yonkers between Marcus Loew and John E. Andrus, world's fourth richest man; seated: Mr. Andrus, Mr. Loew; standing: C. W. Tetche, Dr. A. M. Benedict, William D. Tucker, Stewart M. Seymour, Isidor Fry, Francis B. Upham, Jr., William H. Taylor, David V. Picker, Leopold Friedman.

JOE SEIDER and H. M. Richey exchange personal letters of good-will and mutual helpfulness; and, in the larger aspect, it looks as if the way may be opened to concrete harmony throughout the ranks of the organized exhibitors. We know of no event that would be fraught with more meaning to the welfare of the whole industry.

THE Federal Trade Commission and Famous Players are engaged in the final stage of their battle at Washington; and some acrimonious remarks are being passed between counsel—all of which adds to the interest of the case which has been in progress so long now that it is becoming a classic of the business, like "The Birth of A Nation," "The Four Horsemen," "Way Down East," "The Covered Wagon," "The Ten Commandments," and—may we add—"The Big Parade."

W. RAY JOHNSTON takes exception, in a letter printed elsewhere in this issue, to Jesse Goldburg's statement to MOTION PICTURE NEWS that "the state rights market has collapsed." We are glad to give space to Mr. Johnston's views, and to all others prominent in the state rights field.

BEGINNING next week, MOTION PICTURE NEWS will inaugurate its Theatre Management Department, announced several issues ago. This departure in trade paper journalsim will be of genuine service to our readers, we believe. Watch for it.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

Here are Sally, Irene and Mary in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture of that name—Constance Bennett, Joan Crawford and Sally O'Neill.

MEDNIKOW GIVEN DINNER

TWO hundred exchange men and exhibitor friends of Johnnie Mednikow filled the Gold Room of the Congress Hotel, Chicago, at the Testimonial dinner Monday night held to celebrate Mednikows appointment as manager of Associated Exhibitors Chicago Exchange. Mednikow recently assumed his new duties, having resigned as short subject manager of Universal, where he had made a splendid record, to accept the position with Associated.

Joe Hopp presided as toastmaster and among the distinguished guests at the dinner were Pat Powers, vice-president of Associated Exhibitors, and Dan Lederman, western district manager, both of whom came to Chicago especially for the good will dinner. Among the speakers who praised Mednikow and wished him great success in his new position were Joe Friedman, Pat Powers, Clyde Elliott, James Gillick, James Plodna, Dan Lederman, Si Grevier, Earl Johnson and William Brumberg.

Ten acts of vaudeville were presented for the entertainment of the diners and Morrie Greenwald put on his plantation show. A feature which interested the crowd was the taking of movies of the party by the International News which were developed and thrown on the screen before the gathering brok up. The guests joined in presenting Mednikow with a handsome desk set as a permanent testimonial of their regard.

Alice Joyce, one of our "first ladies of the screen," is lending her rare poise and beauty to the Fannie Hurst prize story, "Mannequin," Paramount.

When in search of beauty, try the Christie lot. Here, for instance, is Marian Andre, appearing in Educational-Christie comedies, and not at all hard to look at.

WHAT'S IN A NAME? LOTS!

A VERY possible advantage is being given the students of the Paramount Picture School in their quest of stardom, and since nothing is more important in that respect than a player's name that matter received earnest consideration last week. As a result, out of the 16 students, two names were changed.

Marian Ivy Harris, of Atlanta, Ga., has had her name shortened to Ivy Harris, the former being considered too long. Harriet Krauth, of Medford Hillside, Mass., has been re-christened Jeanne Morgan, in the interests of euphony.

When William de Mille discarded his famous hat, after years of service, Bebe Daniels, playing in one of his Paramount pictures, immediately adopted it.

Josie Sedgwick, Universal's feminine "cowboy" star, goes out and lassoes her own Thanksgiving turkey. None of your unreliable axes for Josie.

What chance has a flock of turkeys when Thanksgiving comes around against "Fat" Karr, "Fatty" Alexander, Alice Ardell, and "Kewpie" Ross, Joe Rock's funmakers in Standard and Blue Ribbon comedies for F. B. O.?

HELPING OLD SOL

HENRIK SARTOV, formerly cameraman for D. W. Griffith and now photographing "La Boheme" at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has always been of an experimental turn of mind and has contributed many interesting developments to the field of optics and lighting. Now, in connection with "La Boheme," he is trying a scheme which he calls Augmented Sunlight, which is, in effect, the use of lights in the taking of daylight scenes.

Sunlight, coming from one source only, creates hard shadows of inky blackness. This led, at an early day, to the use of white or silvered reflectors to throw a little light into the shadows. Sartov aims to improve on this by using a bank of lights to soften the effect of sunlight and take the place of reflectors. Auxiliary ray screens over the lights give just the right photographic quality to the light so that it blends properly with the daylight. The effect, it is declared, is one of unusual softness and artistic quality, and makes possible the same beautiful lighting effects in outdoor shots as have heretofore been achieved in studio scenes.

FROZEN FILMS

EARL ROSSMAN, producer of "Kivalina of the Ice Lands," which Pathe is now releasing, is credited with being the first man to show a motion picture inside the Arctic circle. An explorer and photographic hunter since the World war, Rossman has had a full quota of thrilling and hazardous adventures.

Proving that the camera never, never, deceives, here is Sally O'Neill, dainty Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer player, astride an enormous Thanksgiving bird. Sally's latest is the role of Mary in "Sally, Irene and Mary."

Came the day, as the subtitlers say, when he decided to explore the Arctic and film the life of the Eskimos atop the globe. So he established headquarters in the cabin of Captain Roald Amundsen at Wainwright, Alaska, only 18 degrees from the pole.

From there he explored the surrounding country, and at the very tip of the North American continent, 90 miles north of Wainwright, he put on his first showing within the Arctic circle. With a bed sheet for a screen and special lighting effects by Mr. Aurora Borealis, he projected pictures of native African folk dances that he had filmed in the Congo. Though the Eskimos had never seen an African, and probably never heard of one, the underlying rhythm of the dances made a great appeal to them, Rossman says, and at the end they registered applause in their own characteristic way.

DIRECTORS HONOR VIDOR

AS a tribute to his remarkable direction of "The Big Parade," King Vidor was tendered a testimonial reception and buffet supper at the Motion Picture Directors Association clubhouse in Hollywood last Monday night. William Beaudine, president, made the presentation of a handsome silver-mounted military rifle to the director. Compliments were paid to him by Louis B. Mayer, Edwards Davis and Beaudine. An elaborate vaudeville program was interspersed between speeches.

If you hear that production on the Buster Brown comedies was held up by illness of the principals the day after thanksgiving, you'll know why. Here is Buster Brown, assisted by Mary Jane and Tige, after capturing a ten pound turk.

FIFTY HAPPY ORPHANS

WHEN the filming of "Just Suppose," the new Richard Barthelmess picture, called for a scene in which Dick visits an orphanage, J. Boyce Smith, general manager of Inspiration, saw an opportunity to bring a good time to some real orphans and obtain the desired scenes at the same time. So fifty children from the orphanage of the Church of the Resurrection, New York City, were given a merry day as movie extras which they will long remember and talk about.

FRAENKEL WITH F. N.

HEINRICH FRAENKEL, the German correspondent of Motion Picture News and connected with various German film and daily publications, is now in charge of publicity for First National in Germany and will also supervise it in some of the small countries connected with that market. In addition he is cutting and titling some of the First National pictures imported into Germany.

A STAR FOR "STELLA"

ONLY one asterisk denoting merit was voted by the National Board of Review this week, but that one was well deserved and there should be no dissenting voices. It goes to Samuel Goldwyn and Director Henry King for "Stella Dallas," this producer's first release through United Artists.

Just by way of promoting the spirit of Thanksgiving, Dorothy Dwan carves a little decoration for the festal board. Miss Dwan is leading lady for Larry Semon in "Stop, Look and Listen," his first Pathe feature comedy.

Trade Commission Hears Final Arguments in Famous Case

Fuller Repeats Monoply Charge in Reply Brief

THE full membership of the Federal Trade Commission began the hearing of final arguments in the case against Famous Players-Lasky and others on chargesof attempts to create a monopoly in the picture industry and other unfair methods of competition, last Tuesday.

The arguments were opened by William H. Fuller, chief counsel for the commission, who reviewed the activities of Zukor, Famous Players, Southern Enterprises and other respondents from 1912 to the present time. He paid a great deal of attention to the alleged activities of Zukor in carrying out his plan, which he declared Zukor had admitted, of securing control of the industry.

The commission's counsel also recited the activities of Southern Enterprises in gaining control of the Southwest—the alleged "wrecking squad" which was sent through that part of the country, whose activities resulted in the purchase and erection of a number of the theatres which made up the chain. He dwelt upon the tactics pursued by Southern Enterprises, as alleged by witnesses during the hearings, for gaining control of towns and cities.

Mr. Fuller quoted from the testimony, citing Messrs. Hodkinson, Goldwyn and Fairbanks, Miss Pickford and others, to show the danger of "closed" markets and the need for "free and open competition" in the distribution and exhibition of pictures, and also went into the question of block booking.

At this point, Commissioner Thompson asked whether all companies had adopted block booking, and after the query had been thrown back and forth a few moments, Robert T. Swaine, counsel for Famous Players, stated that it had been adopted in some form by all companies except United Artists.

The New England situation was also covered in Mr. Fuller's opening argument, the acquisition of Black's New England Theatres and of other houses being detailed.

In closing, Mr. Fuller again attacked the changes which appeared to have been made by the respondent's counsel in their brief, citing the differences between the proof of the brief as filed on November 2 and the brief itself, as filed November 10.

"They point out sixteen points made against your examiner and counsel (in the proof), the closing paragraph of which is as follows:

"'The foregoing instances of perversion in the report and brief have been cited not for the purpose of concealing the issue by the throwing of mud, but for the purpose of demonstrating that both the report and brief of the commission's counsel are untrustworthy.'"

He declared that the statements in the actual brief were radically different from the above, and added that if the charges are true, the commission's counsel should be disbarred; if untrue, similar treatment should be meted out to the counsel for the respondents who had made them.

The first arguments for the respondents were made by Charles E. Rosen, representing the Saenger Amusement Company, J. H. Saenger and E. V. Richards. He asked the commission to dismiss the charges against his principals, declaring that nothing had been brought into the case to show either that the Saenger company was party to the alleged conspiracy or to show that it exercised a monopoly in its territory.

"We were brought into the case through misapprehension on the part of the examiner," Mr. Rosen said. He detailed how the holder of 40 per cent of the company's stock was negotiating with the Saengers for the sale of it; how he had been offered $300,000 for the stock by Saengers, but sold to Southern Enterprises for $350,000. The stock was then turned over by Southern to Georgia Enterprises, and the purchase was taken as evidence that Saenger was party to the alleged Famous Players conspiracy.

"The facts are that, so far from being a collusive proceeding, the Saenger people resented the fact that the people from whom they were buying pictures bought an interest in their company." Mr. Rosen declared, and told how the Saengers had refused to give Georgia Enterprises the representation on their baord which had been exercised by the former stockholder. He said that the Saengers were never satisfied until they were able to buy the stock back in 1923, for the purchase prices plus interest, making a cost of about $375,000.

Discussing the charges of monopoly, he pointed out that the commission had previously investigated and dismissed such a charge. He admitted that the Saengers booked Paramount pictures 100 per cent "because they are good pictures" and held a franchise in First National, but pointed out that they also bought from independents. He admitted that competitors could not get Paramount pictures, but pointed out that the Saengers were unable to get pictures which were booked by competitors; he admitted that they booked for other exhibitors, but declared the affiliation was voluntary on the part of the exhibitors. But, he pointed out, it cannot be said that the Saengers buy more pictures than they need or get any pictures to shut out a competitor.

"Not only has there been shown no unfair method of competition," he concluded, "but I undertake to say that never have you examined a record in which men have come through cleaner, with a more honorable record. Through their industry and effort, risking their personal fortunes, the two Saengers, Ashe and Richards, starting from nothing, have built up a motion picture industry to a point of service never before known in the territory where they operate."

Declaring that Mr. Fuller's opening argument had been a "philippic," Robert T. Swaine, counsel for Famous Players, challenged the commission to show that his organization has ever held a monopoly on the motion picture industry.

Taking up the ownership of theatres by Famous Players, he declared that the records of his company, covering 17,156 houses, indicated that there were probably 20,000 motion picture houses in the country. The examiner found, he declared, that on September 1, 1924, Famous Players owned interests in 179 theatres, of which 157 were motion picture houses, and in 98 of these theatres the interests amounted to control.

In other words, he asserted, Famous Players had interests in less than one per cent of the motion picture theatres of the United States; "it had so obtained a monopolistic position that it actually controlled one-half of one per cent of the motion picture thetres of the United States.

"This would not even constitute a violation of the Volstead act, let alone the Sherman act," he declared.

Changes alleged to have been made in the brief of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation between its initial service on November 2 and the filing of the completed brief on November 10 are assailed in the reply brief counsel for the commission, in answer to the charges made by Famous Players.

The brief at the outset declares that counsel for the film corporations in the controversy to be heard by the Federal Trade Commission on Tuesday had lost their tempers and that it would be necessary for government counsel to "dissipate the huge banks of fog which respondents have stirred up."

"The attitude of the respondents toward all who have opposed their wishes in this case," says the brief, "has been more like the unreasoning anger of a spoiled child over a broken toy than the mental control to be expected of lawyers engaged in complicated litigation."

Fuller maintains that the so-called Zukor brief filed by the accused film companies did not respond to the issue and is insufficient in its defense "of the right of the American manufacturer to sell his product directly to the consumer without the interposition of either wholesale or retail middlemen." That right, Fuller states, is not disputed.

Important Changes in German Field

News Correspondent Writes of Formation of Exhibitor-Owned Distributing Company; Ufa Expansion Predicted

THERE are rather important developments on this market at the present moment; first of all in the theatrical field. I am not speaking, in this connection, of the remarkable change and upward trend as far as exploitation methods are concerned. This had to come as naturally the standard had to be adapted to the increasing standard of production along with the increasing demands of the public. In Berlin there are about a dozen houses of good international standard (or even above it) ready or in the course of construction just now; incidentally it is a matter of course that the smaller houses which could not keep pace with the development of this business are, one by one, closing down.

This development is so natural that it hardly needs any comment. What I was driving at in speaking about important developments in the theatrical field is the fact that there seems to be a remarkable trend for "trust" formations in the ranks of the independent exhibitors. Two important formations of this kind have lately sprung into existence, one of which, called "Das Syndikat" comprising 170 exhibitors, each of whom has paid Mks. 3000.—($750) into the general fund and has declared readiness to pay up to Mks. 15.000.—($3,750) in case necessity should arise. The idea is that these "trusts" of exhibitors are hiring each film en bloc, distributing it among their members according to their own wishes. The "Syndikat" even intends to open a small renting organization of their own handling five German and five foreign films each year, and they even want to go to the length of having part of those films produced by an organization of their own. Naturally, it is rather unlikely that these ideas will be realized, and it can't be denied that the renters who are up against these developments are in a far stronger position.

Apart of these developments on this market as outlined above there is one which seems to be many degrees more important as it may have far reaching international complication as far as this trade of ours is concerned and as it certainly shall be bound to seriously affect the international trend of the film industry. Nothing definite may (and as a matter of fact can) be said at the moment as all these things are just now developing. One thing is certain, however, never in the history of this trade has there been so much "in the air" as just now. And although I am sorry not to be able to give any definite clue to the matter this week, it certainly does not require many divinatory gifts to prophesy that before long the example set by Fox in this country will be followed by other American companies, viz: production either on the unambitious lines (considering continental distributing only) of the above mentioned company, or on bigger lines or perhaps partly so. It goes without saying that also a more definite shape in the development of the import situations will be the direct outcome of those other developments hinted at above, which may be expected in the very near future.

Further Light on Latest German Developments

THE accompanying article by Heinrich Fraenkel, leading German tradepaper man and correspondent for Motion Picture News, is of particular interest this week in view of the announcement of Universal's affiliation with UFA. That deal is strongly hinted at in this article which was written nearly three weeks ago.

An interesting development along the lines of a possible German "First National," that is, an exhibitor-owned producing and distributing firm, is also dealt with.

Theatre Developments Increasing

Many Important Announcements Made During Past Week With Regard to Transfer of Holdings

THAT Los Angeles is following the lead of Chicago, Philadelphia and New York into a new era of the entertainment business seems evidenced by recent theatre building developments within the city.

The Forum, West Coast Boulevard, Figueroa and Carthay Center Theatres—all new and huge residential district playhouses—are direct evidences that Los Angeles has arrived within the sacred circle of great cities with palatial outlying theatres.

To the eyes of a close observer it would seem that a very special success awaits Los Angeles when the idea of the big suburban house is given a thorough try-out. No city in the world has quite such a congested down-town district and no city in the world, of equal size, has the homes of its people scattered over such a truly immense area.

It is significant that the men who are investing the great capital required in these big outside houses are theatre owners who have scored big previous successes in down-town theatres. John Goring, Manager of the Forum Theatre came to that house after splendid successes with the Rivoli and Rialto Theatres in New York.

The policy of the West Coast theatres to extend their activities into every corner of the city is well known. Fred A. Miller, builder and operator of the new Figueroa theatre needs no introduction. He has taken over this new residential property after a long experience with some of the biggest downtown playhouses.

Working drawings are being prepared by Architect Leonard F. Starks of Sacramento, for four re-inforced concrete and steel theatre buildings for the Paramount Theatre Corporation. These moving picture theatres will be erected at Chico, Marysville, Placerville and Oroville, California. Each building will have a seating capacity of about 1500. Construction will start about the first of the year.

Plans for the early construction of a $3,000,000 theatre and office building on Market street at 9th, by A. F. Giannini, San Francisco banker and associated interests, were revealed with the arrival from New York of Thomas W. Lamb, architect of that city for a preliminary discussion of the plans. The theatre will be leased to William Fox, movie magnate, for 30 years, the aggregate rental to be $5,000,000.

News of the purchase by the Comerford Amusement Company of Scranton, of a three-story business building in the central part of Carbondale, from the Miners' & Mechanics' Bank, has given rise to reports that the company will build a new theatre there.

One of the biggest Nebraska theatrical deals of recent years was the purchase just announced by the Hostettler Amusement company of nine theatres, seven of them in Nebraska and two in Iowa. The price was not given out but it is known to run into a big figure.

Hostettler's bought out the entire Blaine and Cook circuit, consisting of the Platte in North Platte, Nebr., the Gilbert and Rialto at Beatrice, Nebr., the Sun and Dean at York, Nebr., and the Elite and Royal at Le Mars, Iowa. The other two theatres involved in the deal were the Keith and the Sun, formerly owned by Hawley and Neville.

Six new neighborhood theatres are to be erected in Omaha by next summer. The string of theatres is to be erected by Louis and Sam Epstein, real estate dealers of South Omaha. The contract has been signed for the first of these theatres, to be built at Corby and Sixteenth streets. Each of the houses will cost about $50,000 and will have a seating capacity of 750.

A. H. Blank, head of the Blank chain of motion picture houses in Iowa and Nebraska, will erect a $1,200,000 cinema theatre on the site owned by him at the northeast corner of 9th and Locust street, Des Moines. The plans call for a structure which will be the last word in modern playhouse construction with a seating capacity of 3,600—more than twice as large as the largest picture theatre in Des Moines, and one of the largest west of Chicago.

Joseph Stern has purchased ground in Bound Brook, N. J., for the erection of a building containing a theatre seating 1500, and stores and offices.

The New Maltz theatre in Alpena, Mich., damaged by fire about a year ago, will be opened again next week by Fitzpatrick & McElroy, according to reports.

Universal-UFA in Affiliation; 15,000,000 Mark Loan Made

Laemmle to go to Berlin to Close International Deal

ANOTHER important step in the internationalization of the motion picture industry became known this week with the official announcement that Universal Pictures Corporation, through a loan of 15,000,000 gold marks (about three and one-half million dollars) to the Universum Film A.-G., better known as the UFA, of Germany, is to become affiliated with that company in production, distribution and exhibition. Universal will distributee some of the UFA productions in America and the German company will handle the pick of the output of Universal in its theatres and exchanges. Carl Laemmle left Universal City on Tuesday, enroute for Berlin to close the final arrangaments.

This marks the third important deal in the German-American situation brought about by the Kontingent system. The first was that between United Artists and the IFA which gave the American company an interest in production and distribution in Germany by IFA. The second deal was that between Fox Film Corporation and DEFA, announced exclusively in The Motion Picture News some time ago, under which Fox is producing several pictures in Germany for German distribution only, thus giving that company several Kontingent permits to import its own productions into Germany.

The Universal-UFA deal is much the most important, however, since it is the first definitely calling for an interchange of product and cooperation in production. Added importance is given by the fact that UFA will have some 150 theatres, when those now building are finished, in which Universal pictures will naturally be well represented.

Newspaper reports to the effect that the entire Universal output is to be distributed in Germany by UFA, and that Universal pictures will be the only American films shown in the UFA theatres, were strongly denied by the German company. It was pointed out that this company's investment in theatres is enormous and that it could not jeopardize that investment by discontinuing the showing of the pictures of certain other very popular American stars who have done much to build up the popularity of the motion picture in German.

It seems obvious, however, that other things being equal Universal will enjoy a strong preference in the line-up of the UFA releasing schedule and the books of the UFA theatres, giving that company a heavy advantage in the international situation.

There has been a great flurry of late in the German trade and daily press over the financial condition of UFA. Reports were published and denied to the effect that it would pass the current dividend. The company has gone into theatre construction on a large scale, at the same time expending mony on lavish film productions designed to reach the American market. With the exception of "The Last Laugh," these pictures had not yet found a place on the American market, and this is believed to have placed UFA in a situation where additional capital was badly needed to continue production and complete theatres under construction.

Once these pictures are released, it is expected, and the money tied up in them is returned, the company will once more be in a healthy operating condition. The Universal loan of 15,000,000 gold marks, running for 10 years at eight and one-quarter per cent., will relieve this stringency and enable UFA to continue its expansion policy.

It is known that other American companies have been angling for this same sort of deal, including two of the "Big Three" companies, but in each case the offer of the loan was conditional upon UFA distributing and exhibiting the entire output of that company in Germany, which UFA was unwilling to do.

A similar deal very nearly went through some time ago at the time of Joseph M. Schenck's visit to Germany in the interests of United Artists. The terms of the arrangement were practically identical, but the deal fell through because of certain demands by United Artists in regard to control of the UFA theatres, it is understood.

Just what relation the Universal deal will have to the other UFA affiliations on the Continent is not known. UFA has had a working agreement in France with Louis Aubert, who operates an extensive chain of theatres and produces for the European market. In addition, UFA recently took over the Italian branch of the late Westi organization.

The Universal-UFA deal recalls that of some time ago between Metro-Goldwyn and Gaumont in France, leading to the formation of Gaumont-Metro-Goldwyn and giving Metro-Goldwyn access to the Gaumont theatres in France. This did not call for the distribution of any French product in America, however, a fact which led to considerable dissatisfaction on the part of French producers.

Last summer Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, laid the groundwork for the plan of associting the two companies in international accord. The plan called for the ten-year loan and the distribution of each other's productions by the two firms.

It was furthermore agreed upon that the productions which UFA is to make should have the same advantages for international distribution as Universal pictures have. That is, that they should have American stars and be made with American advisors in the production department. These stars will be sent to Germany from Universal City, though several American stars may be placed under contract specifically for these pictures.

The great advantage that Universal derives from the association with UFA is the splendid releasing opportunity it will acquire in Germany. Through the German import laws it is impossible to release in Germany a foreign made picture unless the releasing company releases a German made picture. If a company releases thirty German made pictures it can release thirty foreign made pictures as well. In view of the fact that there are less than one hundred pictures made in Germany during a year's time it can readily be seen that the six hundred or more features made in America, the hundred or so made in England and the Italian, French and Scandinavian pictures all together stand a very small chance of adequate release in Germany. By the new arrangement, Universal will be able to release as many American-made pictures in Germany as UFA makes though they may not all be Universals.

The arrangement which Laemmle proposed to the UFA was undecided when it became necessary for him to return to this country, and the negotiations were left in the hands of Max Schach, Laemmle's German representative.

The remarkable UFA studios and some of its new theatres were described in a series of articles in MOTION PICTURE NEWS following the visit to Europe this summer of a staff member. The Neu Babelsberg studio, particularly, was described in great detail.

Some of the productions then in the making, and which are likely to figure importantly in the Universal line-up, are: "Variety," with Emil Jannings and Lya de Putti; "Faust," under the direction of F. W. Murnau, in which Emil Jannings, Gosta Ekman and, it is hoped, Mary Philbin, will play; "Tartuffe," from Moliere's immortal play, with Emil Jannings in the leading role and Lil Dagover, Germany's favorite, opposite; Fritz Lang's "Metropolis"; "The Waltz Dream," with Xenia Desni and Willy Fritsche: and an elaborate production of "Manon" with Lya de Putti.

F. Wynne-Jones, American representative of UFA, this week received cables from Berlin confirming acceptance of Universal's offer.

St. Louis Amusement Company Dividend Shows Increased Value of Stock

THE Board of Directors of the St. Louis Amusement Company on November 19 announced that a dividend of $1.12½ per share on the class A capital stock of the company had been declared. This places the stock on a $4.50 annual basis. When it was offered for sale to the public it was stated that the stock would pay $3 annually and it was subscribed for $37.50 a share after a banking syndicate had underwritten the issue at $30 per share.

Almost immediately the stock jumped to $50 a share and from that point moved forward until the $60 mark was exceeded. Last week the stock suffered a slight relapse, slumping off to $55 per share, but this week showed a decided recovery and was at $62 on the close Wednesday, November 18.

The $1.12½ dividend is payable on January 2, 1926, to stockholders of record at the close of business on December 19. The books of the company kept by the Mississippi Valley Trust Company and the Mercantile Trust Company, a Transfer Agent and Registrar respectively will be closed on December 19 and be re-opened for transfer on January 2, 1926.

The increased dividend on this stock has been anticipated in inner financial circles as the earnings of the various neighborhood theatres operated by the company have greatly exceeded the expectations of the company officials when the $3 annual dividend was first decided on.

It is expected that Skouras Enterprises will also be placed on a higher dividend basis as the company has a substantial interest in the St. Louis Amusement Company. The latter company is controlled by Skouras Brothers and Harry Koplar. It is operating twenty-one theatres in St. Louis and St. Louis County and has plans for two more big theatres, one of which is already under construction.

Kansas City In Building Boom

Many Plans Launched for New Theatres Throughout Missouri Territory

MANY plans for new theatres in Kansas City and surrounding territory give promise of one of the most marked building booms in many years in the Western Missouri city.

An office building, housing the largest motion picture theatre in Kansas City, now is under consideration for a site at Thirteenth and Main streets. The largest house at present is the Main street, with seating capacity of 3,500. The completion of the deal depends upon the exercising of an option held by the Midland Theatres Company. The Midland Company, which controls the site, 177 x 109 feet at the northeast corner of Thirteenth and Baltimore, would join this property with the northwest corner of Thirteenth and Main streets, 121 x 130 feet, owned by H. M. Wolff, who is interested in the Midland Company. Mr. Wolff now is in New York, but consummation of the deal is expected in a few days.

Then, in Manhattan, Kas., the Miller Construction Company is building a new 800-seat house, which will be completed soon. The manager of the theatre has not yet been named.

At Thirty-eighth and Main streets, Kansas City, the city's finest suburban house is progressing rapidly. November 17 saw the completion of the prize contest in naming the theatre, which will be known as the Madrid. The prize winner, Miss Alma Bates of Kansas City, received a season pass and $15 in gold. The theatre, which will be under the management of Jack Roth, will be completed some time in January.

But construction is not being confined to theatres alone. Dr. N. Zoglin of Kansas City has announced that he will erect a 2-story building with a 50-foot frontage at Eighteen and Wyandotte streets—the heart of Kansas City's movie row—to house film exchanges. F. B. O. and the Exhibitors' Poster Exchange already have leased space.

New Support Backs Exchange

Atlanta Board for Fulfillment of Contracts With Sale of Theatres

THE Atlanta Film Board of Trade has fallen in line with the St. Louis Board and others throughout the country, and adopted a resolution pledging support to exchanges in demanding that exhibitor contracts for film be carried out regardless of the sale or transfer of houses.

The many theatre sales or transfers in recent months in the Atlanta territory have made a ruling of this kind imperative. There have been many instances where contracts entered into by former owners were not fulfilled nor assumed as an obligation by the new owners. It is said that in some of these cases mere transfers were made of a house from one member of a family to another in order to avoid the carrying out of a contract or contracts for pictures. The exchanges are considered entitled to more consideration in this matter and it was for the fairness of this protection the Atlanta resolution was passed.

This ruling is by no means intended as a hardship upon future buyers. In fact if an exhibitor can show he is overstocked on pictures he has recourse to the Board of Arbitration, which will reduce unplayed pictures by cancellation.

Exchanges have asked this support as a protective measure and not with the idea of interfering with the legitimate rights of an exhibitor to sell his theatre. They only intend to protect their own interests by insisting that contracts be carried out.

Charnas Interests Acquire Toledo House

Nat Charnas of Toledo, in Cleveland the other day, stopped only long enough to say that he and his associates have just bought the property of the Diamond theatre, Broadway, Toledo. They will operate the Diamond as it stands for a while, but it is intended that they will build a fine new theatre on the site within a few years.

Charnas further stated that he is negotiating for another site in Toledo—a neighborhood site this time. Charnas is interested in the Strand, Superior, Lyric and Diamond theatres, all of Toledo. The Rivoli and the New Palace, just opened and managed by Howard Feigley, is included in a booking combine which also includes the other Charnas houses. On top of all this announcement of improvements and acquisitions, Charnas says that the picture business in Toledo is great.

Margaret Livingston Signs New Fox Contract

Margaret Livingston has signed a new contract with Fox, an optional agreement having been taken advantage of by the producing company two months before the expiration of the old agreement. Miss Livingston is now working in the Fox screen version of John Golden's stage success, "The First Year," which is being directed by Frank Borzage. She will next have the feature role in "A Trip to Chinatown."

Ray Ordered to Pay First National $20,000

Charles Ray has been ordered to pay First National $20,000 by Federal Judge P. J. McCormick as the outcome of a suit brought against the star by the producing company for two debts with interest. Suit was started in July, 1924.

Rothschild Re-enters Exhibition Field

HERBERT L. ROTHSCHILD, long associated with San Francisco theatricals, has re-entered the exhibition field. Announcement was made that he had purchased an interest in both the Alexandria theatre at Geary & 18th avenue, and of the Coliseum at 9th & Clement. Both houses will henceforth be under his direction and he will maintain a presentation standard at the two district houses on a level with that of downtown houses.

A complete renovation of these two theatres is planned; among the alterations included are immediate installation of modern stage and projection facilities. It will be necessary to equip both the Alexandria and Coliseum stages with up-to-date machinery to make possible the standardization of presentations at these houses. San Francisco will be the first city in the United States to elevate neighborhood theatre operation.

Harry L. David, who has been manager of the Grand Theatre, has become associated with Herbert L. Rothschild Entertainment as general manager, in complete charge of future operation of the first two houses acquired.

Lasky Reorganizes Production Forces on Unit System

FOLLOWING the conference of the production department heads at the recent Paramount convention in Chicago, Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president, this week announced a new line-up of the Paramount producing forces, under which three associate producers will have charge of the various units. The following appointments have been made by Mr. Lasky:

Hector Turnbull, William Le Baron and B. P. Schulberg will be associate producers and will be in charge of actual studio production, Mr. Turnbull and Mr. Schulberg will be the producing heads of the Lasky studio in Hollywood, and Mr. Le Baron will be in charge of production in the Long Island studio.

Charles Eyton, as already announced, has been appointed general foreign representative of the production department and will leave for Europe to make arrangements for production there.

Walter Wanger continues as general manager of the Production Department and Edwin C. King as general manager of the Long Island studio. Victor H. Clarke has been appointed general manager of the Lasky studio. Ralph Block, managing editor of the editorial department, has been appointed supervising editor at the Long Island studio as a member of Mr. Le Baron's staff. Lloyd Sheldon will be senior supervising director at the Long Island studio and other supervising directors, besides Mr. Block, will be Tom J. Geraghty, Julian Johnson, Townsend Martin and Luther Reed. On the West Coast Lucien Hubbard will be senior supervising editor and his associates will be Garnet Weston and Kenneth Hawks.

Henry Salsbury continues as manager of exhibition and distribution relations in the Home Office and John W. Butler as manager of the production department's Home Office.

"For the last several months," said Mr. Lasky, "We have been working out plans for our coming group of productions. We have evolved an organization of the producing department which gives us the producing brains of some of the ablest showmen in the picture business, and our reorganization makes it possible to give even greater individual attention to ach production."

Hector Turnbull, associate producer of the Lasky studio, comes to his new position following ten years of successful work in the producing end of motion pictures. Leaving the New York Tribune, of which he was dramatic critic, he joined the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company in 1915 and almost immediately won recognition as the author of original screen stories, among them "The Cheat," which was the first original photoplay to secure a world-wide success. When Adolph Zukor and Jesse L. Lasky merged their producing forces in the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, Turnbull went with the new organization and has remained with it ever since, except for a period of two years when he was serving his country during the war. He enlisted early as a private, saw plenty of active service overseas with the Twenty-seventh Division and was discharged a captain. For the last two years he has supervised production at Paramount's West Coast studio.

B. P. Schulberg, associate producer at the Lasky studio, was with the original Famous Players from its inception. After seven years with the organization, first as head of the publicity, advertising and scenario departments, and then as general manager of Paramount, he resigned in 1918 to become an independent producer. He produced close to 100 pictures, and, despite limited resources, won recognition for the large number of box office success to his credit, including such pictures as "Rich Men's Wives," "Shadows" and "The Virginian." His last production before returning to Paramount was "The Girl Who Wouldn't Work." During his career as a producer he was the discoverer of much brilliant directorial and player talent. He brought out two directors who were instantaneous successes, William A. Wellman and Marcel de Sano, and developed such screen personalities as Clara Bow, Donald Keith, Alyce Mills and Gilbert Rowland. Throughout the industry he is recognized as the new type of showman-producer and is credited with having an unusual box-office mind.

In the Eastern studio, which has made an enviable record for artistic and box-office successes, Mr. Le Baron's production abilties will have full scope. Editor, damatist and showman, Mr. Le Baron quickly established himself in the motion picture business as a production expert of brilliant ideas and showmanship, and a series of extremely successful productions has resulted from his work.

Victor H. Clarke, general manager of the Lasky studio, has been with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in important capacities for the last five years. Before coming to the corporation in 1920, he had wide experience as an executive. Following his graduation from the University of Illinois in engineering, he entered into general construction engineering work, which culminuated at the beginning of the war in his being placed in charge of the construction of one of the larger of the army cantonments. Following the armistice he went with Stone & Webster in an executive capacity. Shortly after joining Famous Players in 1920 he was made general manager of the Long Island studio and a year later was transferred to the Pacific Coast as assistant to Mr. Lasky. Since the organization of the Producers Association in 1922, he has been the representative of Famous Players in that body and in 1924 served as vice-president.

On Monday of this week the Paramount Junior Stars of the Paramount Picture School started work on their first production, tentatively titled "Glorious Youth," being directed by Sam Wood from a story by Byron Morgan—the combination which made many of Wallace Reid's outstanding pictures.

A reception and tea was held for the press on Monday afternoon at the Paramount Long Island studio at which the Junior Stars were introduced to the writers.

Prior to commencement of production, options were taken on the 16 students under which those whose work in this first picture is satisfactory will be given five year contracts calling for a total remuneration of $76,050, on a sliding scale starting at $75 a week and mounting for $500, with a yearly option clause.

Mastbaum Denies Reports Stanley Co. is to Sell to Fox; Fox Buys Whitehurst Chain

JULES E. MASTBAUM, head of the Stanley Co. of America, this week denied that that corporation was to pass into the control of William Fox, as reported earlier in the week. In response to a query from Motion Picture News, Mr. Mastbaum wired: "Reported deal with Fox absolutely without foundation."

This sets at rest reports that Fox was seeking to obtain control of the Stanley Co. for a consideration said to be $7,000,000.

In sixty days, however, the Whitehurst theatres in Baltimore will pass to the Fox Theatre Corporation. This includes the Century, the New, the Parkway and the Garden. Strong competitive bidders for the group are understood to have been the Stanley Co. of America, Loew's, Inc., and Famous Players.

Both the Loew circuit and the Stanley-Crandall interests have intended building in Baltimore for some time, but these plans have been held in abeyance pending possible acquisition of the Whitehurst chain. Now, presumably, they will go forward with new construction.

Fox will build in St. Louis, it is understood. Meanwhile, Goldman and Skouras Brothers are seeking additional neighborhood houses in that city.

Henry McRae Named General Manager of Universal's Studio Plant

HENRY McRAE, a veteran Universal director has just been made general manager of Universal City by Carl Laemmle, according to word received at the Universal Home Office. McRae succeeds Raymond L. Schrock, who recently resigned. He will have jurisdiction over the vast plant located in the San Fernando Valley, sixteen miles out of Los Angeles.

McRae has been with Universal off and on since the early days of the Laemmle organization. He was with the old Imp company when Mary Pickford was under the Laemmle banner. He started in the picture industry with Selig.

During the past few months McRae has been with Universal in the role of director. He recently completed a super serial, "The Scarlet Streak," with Jack Daugherty as the featured player.

Canada Considering Quota Plan

Peck Suggests Idea Now Contemplated by British Imperial Government

A HINT that Canada would follow the example of the British Imperial Government in considering a quota plan providing for a percentage of British moving pictures on the programs of all cinemas was given by Raymond S. Peck, a Canadian Government official, in an address before the Rotary Club of Hull, Quebec, on November 19, during which he reviewed the present situation in the motion picture industry in various countries. Mr. Peck has been the director of the Canadian Government Motion Picture Studios at Ottawa, Ontario, for the past five years, and is also an executive member of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers.

This was the first official public utterance in Canada regarding the British quota plan for motion pictures, although the subject has been referred to in Canadian newspapers and has been unofficially discussed in exchange and theatre circles.

In his address, Mr. Peck admitted that pictures produced in the United States were supreme on the screen and that even in the British Empire 95 per cent of the pictures shown were produced in the United States.

"It is a matter of concern to the British Government that so much of the pictures shown in different parts of the Empire are of foreign manufacture," declared Mr. Peck. "All Governments realize the importance of the film for publicity and propaganda purposes. Legislation will soon provide that there must be a certain percentage of British film shown in any of the Old Country theatres." Mr. Peck thought that this would be an excellent example for Canada to follow.

Mr. Peck recently asserted that he was of the opinion that the British quota proposal would result in quite a number of the American film companies broadening their activities by the establishment of producing units on Canadian soil so that certain pictures could qualify as British films under the proposed plan in Great Britain.

Well-known throughout Canada, Mr. Peck is a member of International Rotary, is president of the Ottawa Community Orchestra, an officer of the Ottawa Y.M.C.A., and was formerly a film exchange official in Montreal and Toronto.

Howells Returns From Orient

Made Survey for Producers Distributing; Discusses Film Situation in Far East

EDMUND HOWELLS, far eastern representative of Producers International Corporation, the foreign distributing agency of Producers Distributing Corporation, recently returned from a tour of the Orient, declares that the limited number of theatres plus the fact that in most countries they are part of chains, makes selling competition in the Far East very keen.

He visited Japan, China, Dutch East Indies, Straits Settlements, Indo China, Siam, India, Burma and Ceylon. In surveying this vast field Mr. Howells says: "It would be supposed that enormous possibilities existed in the tremendous territory of the Orient but although the population approximates a billion people, there are but two thousand motion picture theatres in all the Orient.

"Japan, the most prosperous of the Oriental countries, with a population of over seventy-five million people; living within a prescribed area of 275,000 square miles has less than one thousand theatres. This means that on an average there is but one theatre in every 275 miles of territory with an average of over 75,000 people to each theatre.

"China, whose area approximates 3,850,000 square miles embracing a population of about 400,000,000 has only sixty motion picture theatres, and of these, about twenty-five might be considered first-run houses.

"There are approximately 250 houses in the Philippine Islands. Of these, there are not over 12 first run houses. The general price of admission is about 40 centavos or 20c U. S. currency.

"The Dutch East Indies, Straits Settlements, Indo China, and Siam are generally considered the territory. The chief theatres in this territory are located in the cities of Batavia, Bandoeng, Spurabaya, Singapore and Bangkok in which there are 12 first run houses.

"India, Burma and Ceylon constitute the remaining territory of the Orient. In this territory there are about 250 houses. The important ones of which are located in the cities of Calcutta, Bombay and Rangoon.

Trend Toward Combination Houses in Ohio

Cleveland is to have a new motion picture theatre. It will be located at the intersection of Euclid and Superior avenues, and will be the largest picture house outside the down town district. It will have 2,500 seats, and will cost $400,000. Construction will be started immediately. The new theatre is to be erected by the Eucor Realty Company, in the rear of its commercial building. Entrance will be on Euclid avenue. Fred S. Stone is president of the Eucor Realty Company. Plans for the new theatre call for both motion picture and vaudeville facilities. This has been a big year in motion picture theatre building in Cleveland. And an interesting feature of this development is the fact that all of the theatres built this year are very large and almost all of them are so constructed as to permit a combination picture and vaudeville program. The demand for big picture houses seems to spring from the idea that fans prefer fewer houses in a neighborhood and having those few strictly modern, elaborate and large, to the old-time idea of having the small picture house right around the corner.

$10,000 Disappears From Detroit House

A ten thousand dollar robbery of the Grand Riviera Theatre, Joy Road and Grand River Ave., Detroit, was reported to the police last week by Bert Williams, manager. Williams said the money disappeared about the same time two employees of the theatre did. Warrants have been issued for their arrest and one thousand dollars offered for their capture by Munz Theatrical Enterprises, operators of the Theatre.

Hall And Connolly Move To Larger Quarters

Hall and Connolly, manufacturers of "H. C." motion picture apparatus, have announced the removal of their plant to 129 Grand St., New York City, where, on account of increased facilities, they will be able to serve their customers with a greater degree of satisfaction.

Parent-Teachers to Organize Censor Body

THE Parent-Teachers' Association of Minnesota is preparing to organize a committee in each of its 250 units which will act as unofficial censors mainly, according to Mrs. Foster, chairman of the Better Films Committee, to convince producers of the scarcity of good pictures for children.

The movement, says Mrs. Foster, is part of a national campaign to censor pictures. Local committees will report on all films appearing in their vicinities which reports will be forwarded to the national chairman.

"We are not going to work against but with the theatre managers in this movement," said Mrs. Foster. "They need our counsel. Our local chairmen will assure the managers of their intentions to support good pictures and will submit a list of approved films, but they will stay away when objectionable pictures are shown."

Seider Congratulated by H. M. Richey

Significant Exchange of Letters Between Important Allied Official and M. P. T. O. A. Business Manager

THERE has been a significant exchange of letters, it was learned this week, between H. M. Richey, General Manager of the Michigan M.P.T.O. and Joseph M. Seider, Business Manager of the M.P.T.O.A.

Mr. Richey wrote to offer Mr. Seider his personal congratulations and good wishes on the latter's appointment to the M. P. T. post. While he makes it very clear that he cannot pledge the Michigan organization to "a policy that I know they are not sold on now," Mr. Richey offers to give Mr. Seider his personal aid based on his experience in a similar position with the Michigan organization.

Mr. Seider's reply, summed up, is a reiteration of his platform of "strict business and no politics" and the hope that definite accomplishments under his regime will lead to the full co-operation of the Michigan organization.

This is the first definite expression from an important official of the Allied group toward the Seider appointment and is regarded by observers as being an expression of good-will which may lead eventually to complete harmony in the ranks of the organized exhibitors.

Mr. Richey's letter to Mr. Seider follows:

"Dear Mr. Seider:

"I want to take this opportunity of offering my hearty congratulations to you on your selection as Business Manager of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

"I wish you every success. Placed in the position you are I know many times you will be discouraged and I hope you will carry on, that the time may come when the exhibitors of the United States may have that which they unfortunately do not have at the present time, a real exhibitor organization.

"I believe you can do it; I hope so. We need it.

"No one hopes more than Michigan that petty politics has finally been eliminated and that constructive definite work will be the aim from now on. It is probable that many will stand off and watch with interest the progress, not yet convinced that the organization is not dominated by one personality. With the order of events that has been the diet in the past this is natural. Only real accomplishments will change that situation, for which, of course, you are not to blame.

"It will be your job to undo that which has been done, to take up the straggling ends that have been started and left uncompleted, to blaze new trails.

"If there is any time that I can personally assist you without pledging the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan to a policy that I know they are not sold on now, and which I frankly am not either and will not be until I do see some real accomplishment, I shall be happy to give you the benefit of what little experience I have had in the business.

"Sincerely yours,

"M.P.T.O. of Michigan, Inc.,

(Signed) "H. M. RICHEY,

"Manager."

To which Mr. Seider replied:

"Dear Mr. Richey:

"I am greatly encouraged indeed by your letter of November 11th. I keenly appreciate your congratulations, good wishes and personal offer of assistance.

"Politics and personalities are not conducive to good business and if we will only be permitted to 'carry on' along business lines, devoid of these obstructions, there is no doubt that ultimately we will be successful in this undertaking and that we will function for the rendering of protection and practical service to our members.

"I hope the day is not far off when our sincere endeavors will have taken tangible form and that through our activities, all doubts will have been dispersed and that we will have the full cooperation of your splendid organization and yourself.

"Again thanking you, I am,

"Sincerely and Fraternally yours,

"JOSEPH M. SEIDER."

Rayart President Denies S. R. Collapse

Jesse Goldburg's Statements Regarding End of Independent Market Strongly Denied by W. Ray Johnston in Letter to News

IN a letter to Wm. A. Johnston, editor of Motion Picture News, W. Ray Johnston, president of Rayart Pictures Corporation, strongly contradicts some of the statements made in a letter from Jesse J. Goldburg, president of Independent Pictures Corporation, and published in the News of November 21, in which Goldburg asserted that the state right market had collapsed and assigned several reasons for this.

W. Ray Johnston asserts that the state right market is far from being in a state of collapse, from his own experience with it the past year. His letter follows:

My dear Mr. Johnston:

The letter to you from Jesse J. Goldburg which appeared in your issue of November 21st is so far from the situation concerning the present status of the State Right market as a whole that I am surprised you would publish same without a thorough investigation to ascertain the actual conditions as they exist.

The Independent market may have collapsed so far as Mr. Goldburg may view it by the amount of support given to his particular product, but when you publish his letter as a statement of the situation in general a great injustice is done to hundreds of men who have large investments in the Independent Field from various angles.

We find the Independent market far from being an "Actual Collapse," as your article would lead one to believe. Our sales from November 1st last year to November 1st this year, inclusive of sales of lithographs, prints and accessories, will run in excess of the million dollar mark,—and this for a company which you might say is just starting in business. Is this a sign of collapse of the market? If we are doing that amount of business, the exchanges handling our product certainly must be doubling that amount in bookings to break even, so that this would indicate a total of at least $2,000,000 in gross theatre rentals on our product alone, and we are but one small factor in the Independent Field. I imagine any of the old line companies would be glad to add the $2,000,000 additional booking on their product.

I must again disagree with Mr. Goldburg's list of reasons for the so called "collapse" when he quotes:

1st. "Lack of ethical business methods on the part of the Independent Exchangemen."

We do not find this so to any greater extent than in any other commercial line.

2nd. "The failure of exchangemen to meet their obligations when due."

We find upon checking up on this total, only $500 in overdue paper in our files—a very small proportion for the volume of business done.

3rd. "The failure of Independent Exchange men to properly exploit their productions."

In answer to this I can only add that no national organization leaves it up to their branch managers to exploint the picture; therefore, the same theory should hold good in the Independent field,— i.e., that the New York Office should build up the picture by exploitation at its own expense, the same as a national company would do.

We supply all of our exchanges with various types of novelty mailing pieces, pamphlets, books, paintings, etc., to create interest in our productions and we feel, if we can judge by the fast growing list of customers, that these campaigns must be putting the product over or else the buyers would not come back for more of our product.

A careful estimate leads me to believe that the total business done on this so-called "collapsed market" will amount to $20,000,000 yearly in film rentals—a pretty healthy collapse.

We are sorry if Jesse feels that the market has "collapsed" so far as he is concerned, for we all like him and wanted him to remain with us in our field, but if he thinks that he will do better in the National field, then we can only wish him the best of luck.

Yours very truly,

RAYART PICTURES CORPORATION,

(Signed) W. RAY JOHNSTON,

President.

Seider Report Pleases Jersey

Important Activities Consummated Are Heard at Meeting of Exhibitors

JOSEPH M. SEIDER, president of the Motion Picture Owners of New Jersey made an inspiring report to the board of directors of that body at a meeting held at the Alexander Hamilton Hotel in Paterson November 19th. He reported much progress in negotiations with the Hays office which he hoped would materialize into protection for the independent exhibitor from what he termed "oppressive encroachments," which he termed one of the direct causes for over-seating and impoverishment of box offices.

Seider's definition of the menace to theatre interests, which he declared hidden in clauses of the proposed amendments to the copyright law prompted the directors to realize the immediate need of individual communication with their respective legislators before the Federal law makers leave their homes for Washington.

The directors were jubilant over the report on power rates, which indicate the bringing to a successful close of one of the hardest fights ever conducted by a state organization. Greatly reduced power rates were reported by Seider and others.

Vigorous opposition was recorded at the meeting against the action of Famous Players-Lasky in arranging non-theatrical showings for "The Ten Commandments," particularly in Southern New Jersey.

National President R. F. Woodhull amplified Seider's observations about the Hays M.P.T.O.A. negotiations, in that he urged all members of the New Jersey organization to be always fair and upright in their dealings with distributors.

Among those in attendance at the meeting were Peter Adams, Louis Rosenthal, Joseph Bernstein, Leon Rosenblatt, William Keegan, Pete Woodhull, Joseph Seider, Sam Bullock, Sidney Samuelson, Benjamin Schindler, Leo Kuskowitz, W. C. Hunt, A. Roth, Jacob Fox, Jacob Unger and E. Thornton Kelly.

Plan Exhibit In Philadelphia

Motion Picture Industry Will Be Well Represented at Sesqui-Centennial

THE motion picture industry will be well represented with an interesting and informative exhibit at the Sesqui-Centennial in Philadelphia next year, if plans of Louis E. Mastbaum, President of the Stanley Company of America, and others prominent in the industry are carried out.

Mastbaum has visioned to the Centennial directors a wonderful presentation that tentatively may be given the title of "In Hollywood." There will be a suggestion of the California studios and at the same time the exhibit will be concerned with giving accurate and comprehensive ideas of the entire industry's activities. This will include the exhibition of films as well as their actual creation. Every attribute of the studio will be on hand and visitors to the exhibition will have the experience of seeing directors, actors and cameramen at work.

Stages such as are in actual use in leading studios will be erected and there will be every facility to make pictures, no matter of what type. The various film companies will have opportunity from time to time to prepare pictures on indoor stages or in the open. It is suggested by Mr. Mastbaum that an incidental feature would be lectures by noted men and women in the picture field on subjects pertaining to the cinema in its every aspect.

New Associated Appointments

Smith Names Three District Directors and Three Territorial Managers

THREE new district sales directors and an equal number of territorial managers were named this week by E. J. Smith, general sales manager of Associated Exhibitors. The most prominent of these is Dan B. Lederman, veteran of the Universal staff, who has been named district director covering the following Associated offices: Minneapolis, Omaha, Des Moines, Oklahoma City, Kansas City, Denver and Winnipeg.

Lester Theuerkauf, formerly general manager of the Universal West coast theatres has been appointed director covering the far west offices in Los Angeles, Salt Lake City, Butte, Portland, Seattle, San Francisco and Vancouver.

Lew Thompson, well known to theatre managers around the Middle West, has been named director of the district covering the offices in Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and Detroit.

J. S. Mednikow, also formerly of the Universal organization is the new Chicago manager. He has had wide experience in many branches of the industry. A. Blofson is Smith's appointee to the Philadelphia office, and Raleigh T. Good has been named to succeed Phelps Sasseen as manager of the Charlotte branch. Good started in the film business seven years ago with the old Mutual and since then has seen service with Fox, F. B. O. and Universal.

New Paramount Director for Story Department

Miss Maude Kirk Miller has been appointed by Jesse L. Lasky as manager of the story department of Paramount. She has already assumed her new duties. Miss Miller for several years has served in the editorial department of the company.

Decision Reversed on Excess Profits Tax

A decision affecting invested capital, as computed for the purposes of the excess profits tax, which may vitally affect theatrical corporations which were subject to that tax following the war, has been rendered by the United States Board of Tax Appeals.

In ruling on this question the board reversed the stand of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue that subsequent deficiency assessments should be reflected in the invested capital for the year to which they referred, and held that a deficiency assessed following the year to which the tax applied should be treated by the taxpayer as a current expense and should have no effect upon the invested capital.

The importance of this ruling lies in the fact that in assessing the e cess profits tax a taxpayer was allowed an exemption of ten per cent of the invested capital, and anything which reduced that capital correspondingly reduced the exemption, resulting in an increase in tax. A theatre, for instance, with an invested capital of $1,000,000 and earning $100,000, would pay no excess profits tax for the years during which that tax was levied; if a subsequent assessment, however, reduced the invested capital to $900,000 for that year, the exemption would be but $90,000 and the taxpayer would be liable to tax on the remaining $10,000.

Missouri Town Stirred by Sunday Enforcement

The people of Montgomery City, Mo., are greatly stirred up because the fanatics and reformists of that community have been insisting that Prosecuting Attorney Glover E. Dowell enforce the Blue Laws. He has intimated that he will do so in the very near future.

The county has very rigid Sunday closing regulations and if Dowell goes through with his threat it will mean that even Sunday newspapers cannot be delivered in the county except through the mails, while gasoline filling stations will be permitted to sell only to doctors and ministers of the Gospel.

Dan B. Lederman, district sale director for Associated Exhibitors.

Henry S. Koppin of the Woodward Theatre Company will take over the Norwood theatre at Woodward and Grand boulevard, Detroit, on December first, which makes the fifteenth theatre they have acquired in one year's time. This house formerly belonged to Frank Mellon who has retired. From Hillsdale, Mich., comes word that Jim Pappas has sold his Dawn theatre to the Butterfield circuit, and he has turned right around and purchased Tiffetts Opera House at Cold Water, Mich.

A theatre deal of more than usual importance was the taking over by the Butterfield Circuit of the Wuerth theatres in Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti.

General Manager, Mr. E. C. Beatty, announces that the deal was consummated the past week, and that a long term lease was taken by the Bijou Theatrical Enterprises Company on the Orpheum and Wuerth in Ann Arbor, and the Wuerth theatre in Ypsilanti. Possession of same was taken on November 22nd.

O'Reilly Looking Over Chicago Houses

Charles L. O'Reilly, president of the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce, New York, was in Chicago, last week, looking over some of the new theatres in that city and conferring with R. Levine & Company, on the new theatre he will erect in New York City. While there O'Reilly was the guest of Eddie Grossman, former film man, who is now special representative for R. Levine & Company.

Grossman states that last week, three large theatres, designed by R. Levine & Company, were opened. They are Fischer's Fondulac Theatre, Fondulac, Wisconsin, with a seating capacity of 2,100; the Midwest Theatre, Archer Avenue and Leavitt Street, seating 2,200; and the Milo Theatre, 18th Place and Loomis Street, Chicago, with a capacity of 1,200 seats.

Alvin Neitz Will Direct Aileen Sedgwick

H. T. Henderson has engaged Alvin J. Neitz to direct Aileen Sedgwick in four pictures to be released through Chesterfield Motion Pictures Corporation.

Hodes Made President of Short Films

HAL HODES, identified with the motion picture industry since 1904, has been elected to the presidency of Short Films Syndicate, whose program for the current season offers 26 Mutt and Jeff comedies, 26 Colored Wonderbooks, 26 Colored Comics, 26 Adventures and 26 Novelties. In addition there will be available within the next month a series of single reel dramas. The company confines its efforts exclusively to the State right market.

Hodes, the new president has had wide experience in many branches of the industry. His first connection was with the old Vitagraph Company in 1904 as operator. Since then he has held executive posts with the Kalem Company, Universal and Cosmopolitan.

Anita Stewart Cast for Sebastian Production

A. H. SEBASTIAN has signed Anita Stewart to appear in a production of the "Prince of Pilsen" to be made at Metropolitan Studios for release through Producers Distributing Corporation. According to the terms of the contract she is to appear in a minimum of two pictures, with an optional contract for two additional productions.

Anita Stewart.

Miss Stewart is said to have been given the new contract largely upon the strength of her work in "Never the Twain Shall Meet." Just who will play the leading male role in "The Prince of Pilsen" has not yet been determined, but Sebastian says the picture will be lavishly produced with an exceptionally strong cast. Many of the exteriors are to be filmed in Cincinnati.

Film Industry Contributed $33,808 to Walker Drive

ALBANY, Nov. 24.—A statement filed by the motion picture division of the James J. Walker Mayoralty Committee with the secretary of state's office at Albany, reveals that the film industry contributed the sum of $33,808.18 toward bringing about Mr. Walker's victory on November 3. This statement shows many large contributions at various times, including one of $800 from New York State M. P. T. O., of which William Dillon, of Ithaca, is president; one of $3,000 from R. Cohen; one for $2,000 from W. Small; and one of $1,000 from H. Rachmil and one of an equal amount from B. Rubin, while H. A. Warner contributed $2,000. The statement shows a contribution of $100 from Thomas Meighan; one of $200 from H. Brandt; one of $500 from Sam Zierler; a $600 contribution from L. and W. Brecher, while Harold Franklin, $100; Sidney Kent, $100; W. A. Johnson, $250; Leo Feist, $100; Harry Buxbaum, $100; Jules Brulatour, $200; W. Shallenberger, $150; Leo Ochs, $100; James Grainger, $100 and P. A. Powers, $250. The entire amount was turned over to the campaign manager for Mr. Walker.

Strict Picture Censorship for The Hague

A bill, states Philip E. McKenney, Assistant Trade Commissioner at the Hague, has recently been passed by the Second Chamber of the Dutch Parliament providing that henceforth no picture shows will be permitted in the Netherlands unless the films have previously been approved by a Central Commission to be instituted by the Government.

The municipal authorities, moreover, may prohibit the showing of any film within their jurisdiction even if such film has been approved by the Government Commission. The expense connected with the examination of the films will be covered by a tax on motion-picture theatres.

Fitzpatrick, McElroy Get Additional Houses

Fitzpatrick & McElroy, who entered the Indiana theatre field a few months ago with the purchase of four theatres in Michigan City, have recently acquired the Columbia, Star and Lyric Theatres in Muncie, Indiana, which were purchased outright from C. Ray Andrews and Forest E. Andrews.

The Andrews brothers are leaving the motion picture field to devote all their time to their Florida interests. W. C. Wodjesky, who has been managing Fitzpatrick & McElroy's Benton Harbor theatres, has been transferred to Muncie, to look after the new houses. It is understood that there are several other important Indiana deals pending whereby Fitzpatrick & McElroy will acquire several more houses in the Hoosier State.

Seattle Arbitration Board Is Completed

Election of the three exhibitor members of the Seattle Film Board of Arbitration was held in Seattle last week by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Washington. The newly-chosen members are Joe Bradt, owner of several neighborhood theatres in Seattle; L. A. Drinkwine, Tacoma exhibitor and president of the M. P. T. O. W., elected two weeks ago; and F. W. Graham, exhibitor of Shelton, Washington.

These new members will act with a committee of three, representing the film exchanges of the Northwest, in the settlement of differences between exhibitors and distributing companies that are brought up at the regular monthly meetings of the Arbitration Board.

Veteran Exhibitor Dead In Cincinnati

Friends of John J. Huss, and members of the film business in general will regret to hear of his death on Friday, November 6th, after a short illness. He is survived by his widow and one son. John J. Huss was one of the pioneers in the picture game in Cincinnati. His was one of the three first picture theatres to be built in this city and when the Royal on Vine Street was built with a seating capacity of about two hundred it was considered the largest picture house in town and also the prettiest. At the time of his death he was interested in several downtown Cincinnati second run houses.

Bruce Gallup Joins Fox Advertising Staff

VIVIAN M. MOSES, director of publicity and advertising of Fox Film Corporation, announces that Bruce Gallup has taken charge of trade paper advertising and will assist in carrying out plans for merchandising the big Fox production program for the new season.

Mr. Gallup has had many years of advertising experience, entering the motion picture business about six years ago through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation. He left there in 1923 to take charge of trade paper advertising for First National, where he remained until the present time. The addition of Mr. Gallup further strengthens the Fox Films exploitation staff.

Film Boards Adopt New System

Will Select Honor Men in Cities for Service Rendered in Fire Prevention

IN the interests of further conservation, safety and fire prevention activities in e changes, the Film Boards of Trade throughout the United States have adopted a system of selecting Honor Men. Their first list, named by the Fire Prevention Committees of the Film Boards of Trade, gives the outstanding Fire Preventionists in the Film Boards of Trade of the United States.

A new vote will be taken each month. At the end of twelve months the man who has been on the monthly lists the greatest number of times will be named as the branch manager who leads all others in the United States in Fire Prevention Work. He will be awarded an appropriate prize by the Department of Conservation of the Hays Organization, which supervises the Safety-Fire Prevention work of the industry.

The following are the Branch Managers who enjoy the distinction of having been selected the best fire preventionists for October in their respective cities:

8 Hour Film Day Advocated

California Hearing Urges Overtime Pay for Extras in Studios

AT a hearing before the California State Industrial Welfare Commission held last week in Los Angeles, Fred W. Beetson, secretary of the coast organization of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America told the commission the Hays organization was willing to recognize eight hours as a day's work in the films. He pointed out however that if the employment of women extras was limited to eight hours a day it would work a material hardship on the industry. He suggested the payment of overtime would be a solution fair to both extras and producers.

Many men and women extras testified at the hearing that for the most part the day's work could not be limited to eight hours, but that it should be limited to twelve, with overtime for anything over eight. Cases were cited where women extras had worked as much as twenty hours a day.

Louis B. Mayer pointed out that many times extras are obliged to work only two hours a day and receive pay for a full day. It was suggested by one extra that tea parties and unnecessarily frequent conferences between directors, assistants and stars could be blamed for many of the abnormally long working days.

Estelle Taylor Plays Opposite Barrymore

JACK DEMPSEY, world's heavyweight champion pugilist, has expressed himself as well satisfied with the signing of his wife, Estelle Taylor, by the Warner Brothers to play a role in "Don Juan," John Barrymore's next big starring special. For several months following their marriage it was said the champion had objections to his wife appearing on the screen or otherwise professionally.

Estelle Taylor.

Under the present arrangement Mrs. Dempsey will be working at the Warner West Coast studio and Jack will be busy with his newly acquired Barbara Inn, which will keep them close enough together so that they may spend their evenings at home.

New St. Louis Companies Are Chartered

Articles of incorporation were issued in St. Louis the past week to the Ivanhoe Theatre Company, $18,000 capital. The incorporators are: S. S. Yeckel, Fred Hof, Charles Hof. The company owns the Ivanhoe Theatre building in Southwest St. Louis. Another charter issued was to The Gravois Business Block and Theatre Building Corporation, Delaware, $300,000 capital. President Reuben Levine; secretary Frank J. Carroll. Principal agent R. S. Baker, 1404 Federal Reserve Bldg.

Aschers Start Program of Expansion

THE opening of the Midwest Theatre at Archer Avenue and 35th Street, Chicago, is the start of the big expansion program which Ascher Brothers have under way. The next of the seven projected new theatres to be opened, is the Terminal Theatre at Lawrence and Spaulding Avenues, which is scheduled to give its premiere performance on December 25th.

In January, the Parthenon at Berwyn, will be added to Ascher's string, and then will follow the Colony at 59th and Kedzie; the Drake at Montrose and Drake; the Highland at 79th and Ashland, and the Sheridan at Sheridan Road and Irving Park Boulevard. This will give Ascher Brothers twenty-one important Chicago houses.

In keeping with the policy of expanding their theatre circuit, Ascher Brothers are strengthening their staff, the most recent addition being Ralph Thomas Kettering, who was, for fifteen years, associated with Jones, Linick & Schaefer, as general representative, and who as a publicity and advertising man had much to do with the building up of that successful firm.

$1,470,000 Tax Collected For Ontario

The revenue derived by the Province of Ontario from the Amusement Tax Act of Ontario for the fiscal year ending October 31, 1925, has an approximate total of $1,470,000, with some few returns yet to be tabulated. This is practically the same as the year before, in addition to which there is the revenue to the Province from theatre inspection and licensing which amounted to $209,379. The tax on theatre tickets and other amusement admissions averages about 10 per cent of the face value of the theatre prices.

Reopens Rialto, San Diego, With New Policy

The Rialto theatre, a motion picture house which has been dark for some months, has been reopened with W. H. Crawford as manager. In addition to a feature film and a comedy the programs will include a musical revue. The prices have been fixed at 25 cents for adults at the evening shows and 15 cents at the matinees, with a rate of 10 cents for children.

The house seats about 700, and has been completely renovated, changes have been made to provide for ample stage facilities, and new lightning effects have been installed.

Sunday Opening Blocked at St. Petersburg

Sales Cabinet Starts On Tour

First National Executives Will Visit Exchanges Throughout Country

THE new sales cabinet of First National has started on its first whirlwind tour of the exchanges of the organization. Samuel Spring, chairman, Ned Martin, A. W. Smith, Jr., and Ned Depinet were all scheduled to leave New York November 22nd, but Marin, sales manager of the Western territory got under way several days earlier.

The trip will keep the sales executives on the jump from city to city for the next three weeks, during which it is the plan of the cabinet to confer with all of the important exhibitors in the localities visited, in addition to holding meetings at the exchanges.

Following is the itinerary for the trip: Albany, Buffalo, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Louisville, Indianapolis, St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha, Des Moines, Minneapolis, Milwaukee, Chicago, Detroit, and Toronto. In addition, Marin will visit at Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Salt Lake City and Denver.

In every city the executives will address the sales forces connected with First National exchanges, discuss problems peculiar to the locality and meet First National franchise holders and other important exhibitors. It is the policy of the sales cabinet to establish close personal relationships with the men in the field and wherever possible to deal with exhibitors in person instead of by correspondence.

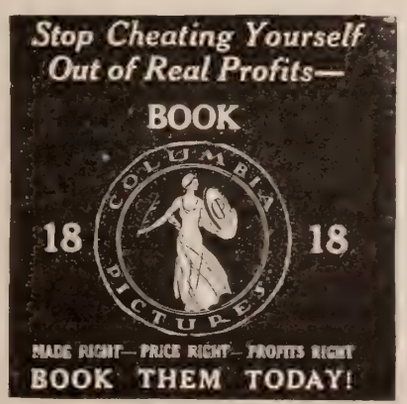
Columbia Plan Is Successful

Claim Made That National Exchange System is Now Handling Product

THE plan of organizing a national chain of exchanges for the distribution of Columbia pictures is pronounced a success by Joe Brandt, Jack and Harry Cohn, president, vice-president and treasurer respectively. Some weeks ago these executives announced they were negotiating with the exchange owners and the managers distributing Columbia productions with the idea of organizing them into a national chain for the exclusive distribution of their product.



This move to lift independent productions from the state right rut has brought many independent exchanges rallying to the Columbia banner, it is claimed and it is also contended it will have the general effect of stabilizing both independent producers and exchanges.

In closing a statement to independent exchange men, Columbia officials said: "With the state right stigma lifted from independent productions and the independent means of obtaining fair competition now in the hands of independent producers, they will become an important factor with tremendous influence for good which will react to the benefit of the entire industry. Fair competition is the life of all industry."

In all, Columbia has released thirteen pictures up to the present time of the eighteen scheduled for the year. Negatives of the five still to come are in the laboratory and will go to the exhibitors on scheduled time.

"Mummy Love" Next Blue Ribbon for F. B. O.

Joe Rock is producing a new comedy for F. B. O. under the title of "Mummy Love" with Neely Edwards and Alice Ardell in the featured roles. It is a Blue Ribbon comedy directed by Marcell Perez, better known perhaps, as "Tweedy."

"Tuneful Tornado" Next for Hoxie

Jack Hoxie's new picture for Universal has been titled "The Tuneful Tornado." It was written by Harrison Jacobs who also adapted it for the screen. Albert Rogell will supervise the making of the production.

Independent Territorial Sales

New Contracts Closed by Arrow, Weiss and Other Distributors Cover Features and Shorts

NEW sales contracts recently reported by independent distributors include several important deals involving large territories.

Among the reports is an announcement from Arrow that the franchise for the twenty-four "Golden Arrow Features" for the Eastern Missouri territory has been granted to Progress Pictures Corporation of St. Louis.

In order to introduce the Golden Arrow product to the exhibitors in this section, Mr. Lou Rogers, the general traveling salesman for the Arrow Company arranged for a previous showing of "Tessie," a Sewell Ford Saturday Evening Post story, directed by Dallas Fitzgerald, starring May McAvoy, and "The Primrose Path," an Arthur Beck production, with Clara Bow, to be shown at the Elks' Club Ballroom on Tuesday afternoon, November 17, following a luncheon given by Dr. Shallenberger to the Missouri exhibitors at the Elks' Club Grille.

Louis Weiss, managing director of Weiss Brothers' Artclass Pictures Corporation, has announced the sale of the six single reel novelty features "Guess Who" to the Federated Film Exchange Co., of Pittsburgh for Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia; and to the Oxford Film Exchange for the greater New York and Northern New Jersey districts.

Sales announced by Chesterfield Motion Pictures Corporation include the following: to Ludwig Film Co., Milwaukee, six Eileen Sedgwick and six Bill Patton productions; to Progress Pictures Corp., St. Louis, six Eileen Sedgwick and six Bill Patton productions; to Jack Weil Pictures, St. Louis, "Eyes of Hollywood"; to Grevier Productions, Chicago, "Eyes of Hollywood."

To Reelcraft Film Exchanges, Chicago, six two-reel Jungle Pictures; to Western Film Corporation, Seattle, six Eileen Sedgwick and six Bill Patton productions and "Eyes of Hollywood"; to E. L. C. Film Exchange, San Francisco, six Bill Patton productions; to Co-Operative Film Exchange, San Francisco, six Eileen Sedgwick productions; to Supreme Film Co. of California, Los Angeles, six Bill Patton productions; to Kerman Films, Inc., New York City, six Eileen Sedgwick and six Bill Patton productions.

Two Enter Production For Henry Ginsberg

With the launching of two additional features, the Henry Ginsberg Distributing Corporation now has but four pictures still to be made. Work started last week on the fourth of the Royal series, "A Desperate Moment" and the fourth of the Banner productions, "The Checkered Flag."

Wanda Hawley and Theodore Von Eltz have the leading roles in "A Desperate Moment," with Sheldon Lewis as the heavy and Leo White in an important comedy part. "The Checkered Flag" features Elaine Hammerstein.

The four pictures still to be completed are the Banner productions, "Brooding Eyes" and "Whispering Canyon," and the Royal pictures, "The Taxi Mystery" and "The Millionaire Policeman."

Murnau to Direct "Down to Earth"

WHEN F. W. Murnau arrives on the Fox lot in December he will be assigned to the direction of "Down to Earth," an adaptation from a novel by Lulius Perutz, a Viennese author. Rights to the story were purchased by Winfield R. Sheehan on his recent trip to Europe.

Herman Bing, Murnau's assistant, has been on the Fox lot for the past month studying American methods of production and organization. He has taken a keen interest in Rowland V. Lee's production of "Daybreak," and has been useful in details of staging "The Palace of Pleasure."

Vital Exchanges Move to New Offices

David R. Hochreich, President of Vital Exchanges, Inc., has leased spacious quarters on the 17th floor of the Gotham National Bank building, 1819 Broadway, New York City. More room was needed than that in use at 218 W. 42nd street where Vital is located at present.

Hillyer to Direct First National's "Second Chance"

Lambert Hillyer has been selected by John McCormick, general manager of West Coast production for First National, to direct "Second Chance," production of which will be started at an early date.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

States 3 Points In Favor Of Advance Ticket Sales

Manager Charles Campbell of the Victoria theatre, Harrisburg, Pa., who recently tried the experiment of advertising advance sales of tickets says he favors the plan in connection with big pictures for three reasons. "First," he says "it eliminates much of the congestion at the box office on the nights when big pictures are being shown; secondly, it proves a big convenience to patrons particularly in arranging theatre parties; and thirdly, it serves as an additional source of advertisement for the film play." Campbell used the advance sale for the first time as an exploitation stunt for "The Phantom of the Opera."

Stereoptican Slides Sell "Fool" In Ferry House

By placing a stereoptican in the ferry house at Oakland, the management of the Franklin Theatre in that city reached a large number of prospective patrons who commute to Frisco daily. The stunt was used in connection with "The Fool." Slides with pictures and type matter were automatically projected on the wall of the waiting room, where they furnished a few moments' entertainment and some valuable sales messages to the commuters waiting for their boats.

Suspends Banner In Form Of Balloon For Denny

A banner made in the form of a free balloon, which was cut out from beaver board and suspended from a cable stretched across the street, was one of the outside attractors which Paul Ellis, house manager of the Liberty Theatre in Youngstown, O., used for his presentation of "I'll Show You the Town."

The balloon was about six feet across, painted white and with red letters for the title. Ropes were used to suspend the basket from the bag, in which cutouts of Reginald Denny and three of the girls represented in the stock six-sheet were placed.

Miniature scene reproduction displayed in the lobby of Keith's theatre, New York City, as advance announcement of Pathe's "Our Gang" in "Better Movies."

"Fine Clothes" Movement Staged In Portland

A "Fine Clothes Club" was organized in Portland, Ore., as exploitation for the showing at the Peoples' Theatre there of "Fine Clothes." The organization received the endorsement of the Mayor and several prominent civic and social clubs.

The movement gained considerable newspaper space and as members of the club posed as fashion models at style shows, the organization's activities were directly tied up with the presentation of the picture at the Peoples.

The nominal purpose of the members of the organization was to develop a taste for the coming wearing apparel and to teach women to dress attractively at a moderate expense. Through the efforts of the president of the club a discussion was started in the Portland papers relative to matters of good taste and style. The members of the organization voted that they should be known as "fashion delineators" rather than models or mannequins.

Tie Up Exploits Ballyhoo For "Iron Horse"

By means of a tie-up with a railroad company, the Mozart Theatre at Canton, Ohio, exploited its ballyhoo, consisting of a replica of a railroad engine mounted on a motor truck, for "The Iron Horse." Great interest was stirred up by having a race staged between a passenger train and the theatre's street demonstrator.

By an arrangement with the Wheeling and Lake Erie Ry., the ballyhoo's entrance into Canton was so impressively advertised, that long before the time set for its arrival, a huge crowd was gathered about the station.

One-sheets were posted about the station and around town, announcing that "The Iron Horse" would arrive at the Wheeling station at 5.20 P. M. Thursday afternoon.

To make the ballyhoo's entry into town as spectacular as possible, it was planned to have the little ballyhoo picked up by an incoming Express train just outside of town, with a pseudo race between the two engines as they entered town.

Prizes Are Awarded In "Charley's Aunt" Contest

Prizes in the contest for the best exploitation done by the various theatre managers on "Charley's Aunt," inaugurated last Spring by the theatre department of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, have been awarded.

Frank Miller of Augusta, Ga., won the first prize, a $100 cigarette case awarded the Producers Distributing Corporation.

C. W. Irvin of the Imperial Theatre, Charlotte, N. C., took second prize, a good embossed leather case, brought over from Italy by Pat Dowling, publicity director of the Christie Film Company.

Third Prize, a hundred initialed cigarettes, went to C. B. Stiff, manager of the Imperial Theatre, Columbia, S. C.

Decisions were made in the contest by Harold B. Franklin and L. L. Stewart of F. P.'s theatre department.

The "free shoes for baby" stunt used by the America theatre in Denver, for Univrsal's "The Goose Woman," recently related in an article in these columns, was aided by the ballyhoo shown above. The stunt, in which a local shoe merchant co-operated, was tied up with Denver's "500,000 in 1930" campaign, and netted a large amount of free publicity for the theatre.

'Pony Express' An Exploitation Film

Campaigns in Many Parts of Country Cited as Evidence That Cruze Picture Lends Itself to Big Co-operative Drives

PARAMOUNT officials believe that "The Pony Express" is one of the greatest exploitation pictures ever produced. This opinion they point out is based upon concrete evidence of what has been achieved.

Revival of the pony express has been perhaps the best thing yet done in these campaigns. The reason for assigning it to the lead position is its national appeal, and the unlimited advertising and publicity which it has been accorded.

Two old trail drivers revived the pony express in Texas. For the run from St. Joseph, Mo., to Kansas City a modern pony express—an automobile—was used. A rider reenacted this historical episode in a run from Salem, Ore., to Portland, where the picture played at the Liberty theatre. One run was from Fruits, Palisades, Whitewater and Redlands into Grand Junction, Colo., where the attraction was booked into the Avalon. Four riders rode from surrounding territory into Durango, Colo., for presentation of the picture at the American. Another revival was for the benefit of the Strand at Middleton, O., and the Palace at Hamilton. One rider in Ohio visited more than two dozen towns in a period of a few weeks.

Newspapers Cooperated

Newspaper cooperation has been an outstanding feature of these revivals. State and city officials and editors have cooperated in the success of these undertakings. Schools have treated the stunt with consideration owing to the historical merits of it.

In advance of the run of the picture at the Apollo theatre, Indianapolis, an essay contest among school girls and boys was conducted through cooperation of the Indianapolis Times. For the best compositions on the historical significance of the pony express awards of $20, $10, $5 and free tickets were made.

A comprehensive campaign preceded the Portland, Ore., showing at the Liberty theatre. The revival of the pony express in its run from Salem to Portland had the approval and backing of the governor of the State. In addition paper replicas of the colorful Indian headgear were distributed to children. Indications of the governor's interest in the picture was his address from the stage.

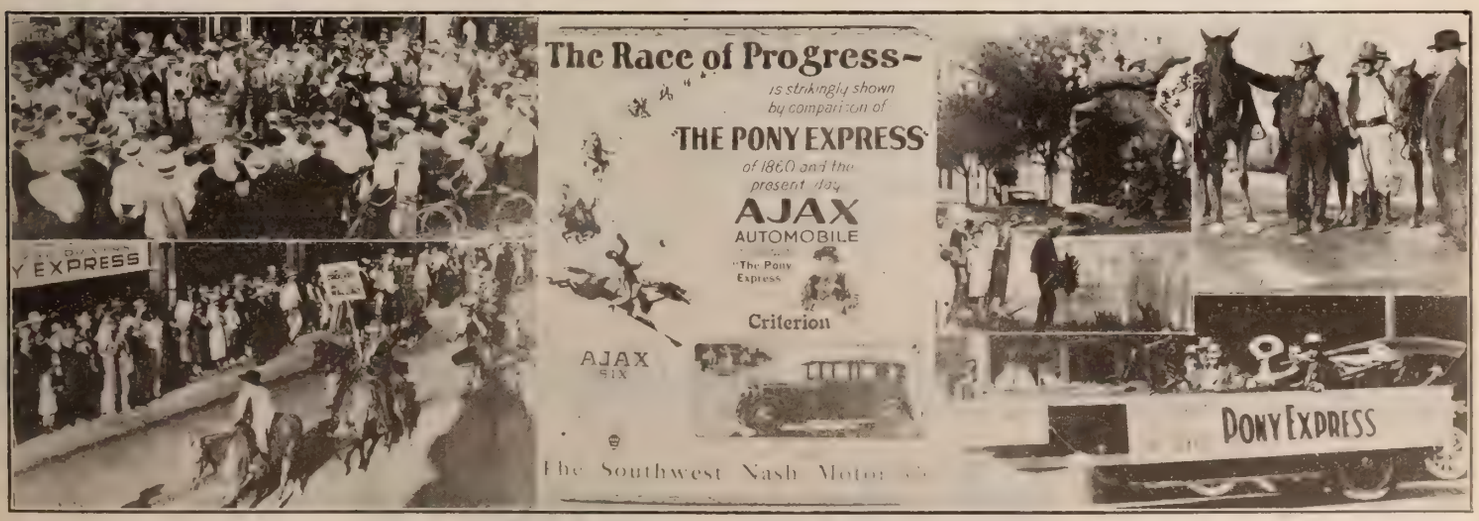
Arrows Mark Trail

An effective placard used in the Cataract theatre campaign in Niagara Falls was cut in the shape of an arrow. These placards, sniped throughout the city and in rural districts, bore the message, "The Trail of 'The Pony Express' leads to the Cataract theatre.

In Kansas City, where the picture showed at the Royal, the campaign was furthered by the Women's City Club, the motion picture committee of which sent cards to its 2,700 members urging them to see the attraction. An old pony express coach owned by Buffalo Bill was used as a street ballyhoo.



Local Interest Story

An unusual story was developed for the picture's showing at the Strand in Middleton, O., and the Palace in Hamilton. In Middleton, the fact that City Manager Waldner was christened by a minister who travelled with the pony express in the early days, was widely publicized by papers.

In Milwaukee, where the picture held the screen at the Merrill, special heralds were distributed by the main library and its fourteen branches. Fifteen thousand Postal telegrams and rotos also were distributed. Boy Scouts paraded to theatre to see picture. Fifty 24-sheets were posted. Cuto t of pony express rider was displayed in Gimbel window. Stills were displayed in silver frames in jewelry store window. Sixty piece high school band and Postal telegraph messengers paraded. Sixty banners were placed on wagons of American Express Company. Street cars carried specially designed cards. Eighteen grocery stores tied up on Monarch brand product. In addition there were radio and book store tieups.

The Pantages theatre, Toronto, used the radio, telegraph and taxicabs effectively. In all stores handling the DeForest Crosley radio, were display cards illustrating the great span between the days of the pony express and the day of the radio.

An outstanding campaign was conducted by Rex Midgley, manager of the American theatre, Oakland, Cal. Postal telegraph messengers publicized the picture through placards on their bicycles. One of the most unique stunts was the placing of Pony Express stickers on all milk bottles delivered to the homes in the morning.

TRADE MARK

Big Campaign for Paramount's "Rainmaker"

TEN special attractions will come from the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation studio for release during the spring and summer of 1926.

Emphasized in each as in the balance of the program, according to Paramount executives, will be the showmanship element. Stories have been selected, these officials point out, which lend themselves readily to the most comprehensive advertising and exploitation. Casts are composed of box office names.

This production policy, officials state, will be exemplified in "The Rainmaker," a drama of the race track which, under the title "Heaven Bound," was one of the most popular stories published by Red Book Magazine.

Two valuable names for the billing on this attraction are Allan Dwan, the director, and Bessie Love, who has the leading feminine role, that of a pretty nurse who, driven out of town in disgrace because of her innocent love for a jockey, becomes queen of a Tia Juana cabaret.

"The Rainmaker" will be given an advance publicity campaign reaching millions of readers daily through the syndicate servive maintained by Paramount. This publicity, strengthened by Paramount's national advertising, will provide a ready-made public for the picture when it is released.

A comprehensive campaign will be outlined in the press book, and from the company's exploitation representatives in the key cities exhibitors will receive cooperation and ideas for effectively selling the picture.

Paramount's exploitation department, under the direction of Claud Saunders is now considering a national tieup which will have far-reaching effect in making this attraction a box office success.

"The Rainmaker" is a red-blooded drama of the race track, a Mexican Cabaret and a raging tornado as a spectacular and colorful background. It is the story of Robbie Robertson, one of the most famous jockeys in the world, who is thrown from his horse in a spectacular race track spill and goes to the hospital. He is nursed by pretty, innocent Nell Wendell and they fall in love with each other. She falls aleep, tired from overwork in his room one night and is driven from the hospital in disgrace. She becomes hardened and bitter and is next discovered dancing in a cabaret near Tia Juana, Mexico.

Robbie tries unsuccessfully to find Nell. Recovering his strength, he becomes known among race track people as "Robbie the Rainmaker," because he can bring rain by praying for it. He is paid big money by the owners of mud horses to bring rain.

Drifting from track to track, he reaches Tia Juana and meets a girl whom, under spangles and paint, he recognizes as Nell, now known as Mexican Nell. Nell tries to send him away but he refuses to go.

A priest, preaching against the wickedness of the town, warns that a devastating plague is coming. His prediction comes true. People die like flies, gasping for water, water. Nell is attached by the plague and is dying. Rain alone will save her and the town. Then Robbie kneels and prays, "Lord, gimme a muddy track for my girl. C'mon you rain. Lil' cloud grow big. It's Robbie callin." Mud horse on the rail and it's gonna win. Black cloud growin' bigger. It's Robbie rootin'. C'mon rain."

In a roaring flood the rain comes and Robbie and Nell and the town are saved.

The theme of the story suggests many exploitation possibilities. Previout to the opening and during the run of the picture pretty girls wearing raincoats and carrying umbrellas could parade the streets. On the umbrella have the sign, "The Rainmaker" is coming, or "The Rainmaker is at the Strand.

Tieups may be arranged with stores dealing in raincoats, umbrellas, rubbers, etc. Many towns have men who boast that they have the power to bring rain. Engage a queer looking man to parade the streets, handing out cards reading, "Robbie Robertson, The Rainmaker."

Testimonial Dinner For Sid Grauman

THE Wampas is to sponsor a huge testimonial dinner to be tendered Sid Grauman by the motion picture industry at the Biltmore Hotel in Los Angeles on the evening of December 3rd. The affair is being given in recognition of Grauman's activities in Los Angeles and Hollywood and his interest in the motion picture industry throughout the country.

Mayor Rolph of San Francisco and other prominent government, state and county officials will augment a list of more than 500 motion picture executives, directors and male stars compiled by the Wampas for the invitation list.

The committee in charge of the arrangements for the affair is composed of Harry D. Wilson, chairmon; Ham Beall, James Loughborough, Bob Doman, Peter Smith and Mark Larkin.

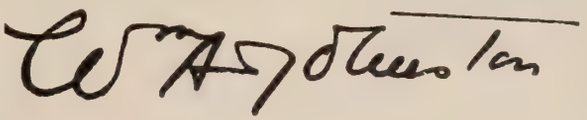
Paramount SHOWMAN'S MANUAL

Special Bulletin



It Contains All the Showman Needs to Know About

The Great Paramount Special

"A KISS FOR CINDERELLA"

The reader will be amazed to find here an advertisement that makes no effort to sell the picture to him. On the contrary, the entire space and all the material in it is wholly designed to help him sell the picture to his public.

We have tried for years to get this sort of advertising copy into MOTION PICTURE NEWS. It is our hope that once every month an issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS will be devoted to just this sort of exploitation material. So we hail this as real service, and a long step forward in service, and also a logical, practical use of a trade paper.

NOTE: This bulletin is not designed to sell you "A Kiss for Cinderella." It is designed to help you sell "A Kiss for Cinderella" to the public. It is one of series of showman's bulletins Paramount is issuing on the Greater Forty pictures. The purpose of the bulletins is: (1) To broadcast sane, practical exploitation aids; (2) To analyze each Paramount Picture separately in order to bring out and emphasize its box office assets.

Ask the branch manager, exploiteer or any salesman at your Paramount exchange about the Showman's Manual Bulletins. This is the seventh one that has been issued. Get your name on the list to receive them.

IF YOU DIDN'T GET PREVIOUS BULLETINS—ASK YOUR EXCHANGE FOR THEM

HOW TO SELL THE PUBLIC

24-sheet. Note great chance for cut-out.

CHIEF SELLING POINTS

Buy miniature photos of Betty Bronson at your exchange. Imprint on back as above.

"A Kiss for Cinderella" is the annual Paramount holiday special, of which the tremendously successful "Peter Pan" was the first.

Over 200 representative theatres are playing "A Kiss for Cinderella" the week of December 27th and will clean up with it.

It is a lavishly produced romance that will appeal to all classes and all ages. Everyone who has seen it pronounces it even better than the famous "Peter Pan". It has the same appeal as "Peter Pan", but differs in that the heroine is not a fairy but a real, lovable little girl of flesh and blood.

The box office names: Betty Bronson (the "Peter Pan" girl) as the heroine; Tom Moore giving the greatest performance of his career; beautiful Esther Ralston; Flora Finch, and 750 others.

The director: Herbert Brenon, who made "Peter Pan"; the author: J. M. Barrie, who wrote "Peter Pan".

The big scenes: Astounding transformation of pumpkin and mice into golden coach and horses; the magnificent Ball of the Golden Slipper; the London blizzard; the Penny Shop, and a hundred others.

"A Kiss for Cinderella" will not only make money for you; it will establish you as the highest type of exhibitor in your town.

"A KISS FOR CINDERELLA" TIE-UPS

HOOK IN WITH BIG NATIONAL SHOE CONCERNS

READ THE DETAILS: Paramount's exploitation department has arranged a valuable tie-up between "A Kiss for Cinderella" and the nationally sold Queen Quality and Dorothy Dodd Shoes, made by Thomas G. Plant Co., Centre and Bickford Sts., Boston, Mass.

The shoe people are circularizing 5,000 dealers on this tie-up. The following advertising material is available to exhibitors and dealers desiring to hook in: Window cards as above; 2 styles of newspaper ad mats; sample tie-up rotogravure sections showing Betty Bronson wearing Queen Quality shoes; publicity in shoe trade magazines.

Ways of using tie-up: Get dealer to have window display centering around very small pair of shoes, offered as prize to the local "Cinderella" who can get them on; lucky number contests with shoes as prizes; shoe style shows, with prizes to girls with prettiest ankles; paint huge Cinderella slipper, mount on beaver board, put pretty girls inside and transport around town on trucks; prizes to children for best account of old story of Cinderella and slipper.

Teaser Cut 1TA Get it from Exchange.

Here are other tie-ups available on Betty Bronson and "A Kiss for Cinderella:"

With local Oldsmobile dealer (a tie-up first used in connection with "Not So Long Ago").

With Betty Bronson-Bucilla Aprons (first used with "Golden Princess").

With Peter Pan Fountain Pen.

Ask your local Paramount exploitation representative about all these tie-ups and get his cooperation in putting them over.

How to Use Newspaper Ads From Press Sheet

The first row above reproduces the 1, 2, 3 and 4 column newspaper ads from "A Kiss for Cinderella" press sheet. The rest of the page shows additional ads made by simply slightly manipulating the cuts and mats used in the original ads, all of which you can get at cost from your Paramount exchange

"A KISS FOR CINDERELLA"

EXPLOIT IT WITH A MODERN CINDERELLA FOOT AND ANKLE CONTEST

These Midget Cuts Tie In. Available at Exchanges.

This stunt is being worked to great advantage as we write: The Chicago Evening American gives first page each day to a Modern Cinderella Contest, tying up with showing of "A Kiss for Cinderella" at Balaban & Katz houses.

The paper offers $500 and purchase certificate worth $25, redeemable at any Chicago retail shoe store as first prize; second prize, $250 and $20 certificate; next ten prizes, $25 each and certificate for $15, to be awarded to winning contestants by National Shoe Retailers' Association. Women and girls of Chicago to send foot measurements following directions of Chicago American chart:

"Ankle..... Heel..... Instep.....
Calf..... Length of foot.....
Name..... Address..... Age... Weight...."

Theatrical contract to be given winner by Balaban & Katz.

This, or a modification of it, can certainly be worked in your town.

PUT A "PENNY FRIEND" BOX IN LOBBY

Teaser Ad 1TB Available at Exchanges.

Betty Bronson in "A Kiss for Cinderella" runs a "Penny Friend" shop in which she administers to the needy of London and charges them only a penny each for her services.

Put booths or stands in lobby and on street corners and label them: "Buy a Kiss for Cinderella. The Penny Friend." Have modern Cinderellas in charge of the booths. For a penny, let them give the donor a candy kiss. Proceeds collected in this way to go to some local charity, with credit to your theatre.

This stunt is particularly good during the holidays.

Other stunts: Cinderella Costume Ball; Special Kiddies Matinees; tie up with local police, as policeman is hero of story; get out card so that kiddies can send "Kiss for Cinderella" by making impress of lips on card and mailing to Betty Bronson, care of your theatre.

Get in touch with your local Paramount exploitation representative.

How to Use Newspaper Ads From Press Sheet

The top row above shows the 1, 2 and 3 column scene cuts from the press sheet on "A Kiss for Cinderella." The rest of the page shows the great variety of good newspaper ads you can make by using the same cuts or mats used in these scene cuts. All of them available at a very low price at your Paramount exchange

"Stella Dallas"—United Artists, Apollo, New York

American: "'Stella Dallas' is the most touching example of mother sacrifice I have ever seen on screen or stage. It is a picture that will not let itself be forgotten. It carries an appeal to mothers, fathers, grandparents, and even children. Anything as fine and sincere should be seen by everyone. Indeed, there has been no picture to surpass 'Stella Dallas,' or even to equal it. In all my years of reviewing films I have never been so profoundly touched by anything as by this picture."

Herald-Tribune: "Perhaps 'Stella Dallas' is not the finest picture we ever saw, though at this writing we are pretty sure it is. We do know that one scene in the picture —the birthday party—never has been surpassed. The fact that we cried means nothing, but the fact that nearly everybody else cried means something. The acting here is superb, Belle Bennett contributing something that probably never will be forgotten in the cinema world."

Times: "'Stella Dallas' is a picture with a powerful appeal, sad and stirring, and a subject that Henry King has directed in a masterly fashion. The picture is one which tells a story surely, faithfully and earnestly. It is a story which will wring many a tear from those who see it. Belle Bennett, who is entrusted with the part of Stella, delivers a memorable performance, one which is rarely seen on the screen."

World: "'Stella Dallas' is a good and dignified film play, easily among the best. The portrayal of its leading role by Belle Bennett is a true, moving and infinitely superior example of casting, directing and acting. Laurel, contributed by Lois Moran, also is to be considered among the much better things of this or any other season."

Telegraph: "Emotionally 'Stella Dallas' is the big picture of the year, and it may be, too, the most perfectly directed, perfectly acted and perfectly photographed picture ever made. One doesn't think of such things while watching it; it goes flawlessly on its way. The audience at the Apollo was stirred as rarely an audience is ever stirred."

Mirror: "'Stella Dallas' takes its place as the most sincere, the most superb, the most beautiful mother love story ever depicted on the silver sheet, and we say this with no apologies to 'Humoresque.' It is a photoplay that is different. It is free of jazz, of accentuated sex appeal. Don't miss seeing it. You'll never forgive yourself if you do."

Sun: "'Stella Dallas' is a good box office achievement, and it is the prediction of this forecaster that it will make Samuel Goldwyn considerably richer than he is at present. Originally 'Stella Dallas' was a best selling novel. Now it is a motion picture mint, a logical successor to such money making films as 'Over the Hill,' 'Sally of the Sawdust' and 'Drusilla With a Million.'"

Evening World: "If any heart fails to throb to the screen version of 'Stella Dallas' the fault is with the heart and not with the picture. The program quotes Samuel Goldwyn as asking 'Will They like it?' There is only one answer. They will!"

Telegram: "The audience seemed to enjoy 'Stella Dallas' very, very much, and, after all isn't that what you want to know."

Journal: "The audience applauded, wept and smiled through its tears. It is the most tender, the most emotionally artistic film offering of its kind I have ever seen. 'Stella Dallas' is a picture that has a universal appeal, acted and directed with poignant sincerity. The picture is real, and it is human."

Post: "'Stella Dallas' is recommended to everyone who enjoys good acting and an interesting picture. If you feel like crying, so much the better, for there is nothing more pleasant, according to large sections of our population, than a good, hard cry."

"The Last Edition"—F. B. O., Cameo, N. Y.

American: "I confess the composing room of a newspaper in a film play always thrills me. That is why 'The Last Edition' held my interest from scene one to the very end of the picture. In this busy melodrama, as full of action as any I have seen in many a day, an attempt is made to glorify the American newspaper man; probably that is why I enjoyed the picture so much. This is the first time that I have seen newspaper scenes as faithfully portrayed since the memorable 'Great White Way.'"

Mirror: "'The Last Edition' unreels a lively 'behind the scenes' newspaper romance . . . snappy, vivid entertainment. The tribute to the men who make newspapers is sincere and . . . well done. You will be intrigued by the 'behind the scene' views of a big newspaper. You will enjoy this production."

Times: "An interesting document that gives an unusually clear idea of the thought and action involved in bringing out a newspaper. The work in the different departments, such as in the city room, the composing room and the pressrom, are exceptionally well filmed and the scenes depicting the 'making over' for an extra edition are decidedly impressive."

Telegraph: "The film has the merit, uncommon in most newspaper pictures, of being accurate in every detail. It is the best picture he has made and may be called a box-office success. The picture winds up in a burst of excitement, including the burning of the newspaper plant; the action here is speedy and the suspense well built up. Ralph Lewis plays the old man with his usual excellent pathos. Alberta's Vaughn's sister, Adamae is good."

Journal: "The picture is . . . fascinating and well handled."

Post: "An exciting newspaper tale . . . glorifies American journalism and includes an explosion, a very realistic fire and a number of other thrilling matters. The story is swiftly developed and . . . entertaining with Ralph Lewis doing very well indeed with the leading role. Also contains some excellent scenes of newspaper making, amounting almost to a personally conducted tour through the plant."

"Dark Angel"—First National, Strand, New York

Times: "This is by all means the best picture George Fitzmaurice has to his credit. One cannot help being stirred by the gentle charm of the love story. A beautiful screen conception of 'The Dark Angel,' the play, the narrative being unfolded with admirable skill."

World: "'The Dark Angel' and Vilma Banky are among the two finest exhibits which the pictures have provided in years and years. I do not at the moment, and probably will not to-morrow, remember having seen a girl of more exquisite natural handsomeness than Mr. Goldwyn's importation. She does, in fact, perform in 'The Dark Angel' so beautifully and so realistically her audience is swept into tears at the climax."

Tribune: "'The Dark Angel' remains Fitzmaurice's best picture, which in itself insures it long life and prosperity. There are some photographic effects of great beauty. Vilma Banky, the foreign actress who here makes her screen debut, is a handsome young blond, who plays with considerable charm."

Morning Telegraph: "'The Dark Angel' has a story which never has been surpassed on the screen for beauty—as delicate and yet as moving a romance as has ever been pictured. It is superbly acted by an excellent cast, it is directed with skill and intelligence, and the settings are lavish, charming and tasteful. And behind all the outward evidences of goodness there is a spirit so high and a thought so fine that the simple climax leaves you gasping. Vilma Banky proves her right to rank with the movie topnotchers. She is beautiful, poised and clever. 'The Dark Angel' has everything."

Daily News: "The story itself is one of those dear, romantic stories. Just the sort of movie to enjoy at a matinee—one of those romantic tender pictures where you can cry unashamed or sigh over the love scenes between Vilma Banky and Ronald Colman. They throw a glamour over the piece with their fine performance."

American: "Samuel Goldwyn has proved again that he can walk off the beaten path and make a new road popular and prosperous. I approve of 'The Dark Angel' and take off my new Winter chapeau to him for giving us an actress as arresting and appealing and as beautiful as Vilma Banky. I do not know whether Frances Marion digressed from H. B. Trevelyan's play, but if she did she must have improved it, for she has given Mr. Goldwyn one of her finest scenarios."

The Post: "'The Dark Angel' is a beautiful picture. The adaptation has improved upon the play. Miss Banky is splendid. She is really a screen 'find' an emotional actress of ability and charm."

Journal: "'The Dark Angel' is sympathetically told, acted and directed, the settings are lovely and the situations are thrilling."

Evening World: "The settings in Rural England are uniformly beautiful and in keeping with the production. 'The Dark Angel' is a picture to see. To borrow a parallel from music, it is a cinema symphony. There are three outstanding features of the picture: Vilma Banky, the story and the direction and photography."

The Sun: "'The Dark Angel' is a pretty tale. Mr. Colman gave us excellent cinema playing as did Miss Banky. It is worth seeing."

The Graphic: "This story lends itself extremely well to screening. The photography is unusually good. The pathos of the romance is fully sustained throughout."

"Phantom of the Opera"—Universal, Rialto, Washington, D. C.

Star: "The audience which clamored for admission yesterday aftennoon more resembled the seething mob of a French revolution than of orderly humans in search of entertainment. Beyond question it is one of the most thrilling pictures ever presented on the screen."

Times: "'The Phantom of the Opera,' laid in medieval times, is as modern a thriller as 'The Gorilla,' 'The Monster,' or 'The Last Warning,' and under the guiding hand of Director Rupert Julien it becomes a bold competitor with the best of them . . . Chaney's record for going a step farther than anyone else in make-up, still stands—'ray for him."

Herald: "Unquestionably a great piece of movie craftsmanship . . . at times towering. The story shows excellent direction. There are fine touches throughout. Most of the action cannot be adequately described—it must be seen."

News: "'The Phantom of the Opera' compels with all the power of black magic . . . you cannot understand the eerie spell of the unfolding lest you, personally, witness it. It is good movie—one of the FEW of the year."

Post: "Washington has waited a long, long time for 'The Phantom of the Opera'—and the wait has not been in vain, for this attraction is indeed one of the finest pictures shown in Washington in months. A great movie —the brilliant scenes are beautiful. The picture is a massive spectacle . . . 'The Phantom' is perfect by reason of the artistry of Lon Chaney . . . Mary Philbin and Norman Kerry also contribute the finest bit of acting since their efforts in 'Merry Go Round.'"

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"The Green Archer"
(Pathe-Serial—Three Episodes)
(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

Mystery, romance, thrills and suspense! Puzzling complications that point with suspicion toward more than one. Recurrent green tipped arrows that persist in crashing thru the window panes of an old castle—and sometimes thru more human targets! They are all here—in fact there is everything that goes toward the making of a corking good serial in this latest one from Pathe. If the balance of the picture has been worked out as skillfully as the first three episodes, there can be no question that they will please the majority of serial fans for the final chapters of those that were shown, carried the necessary suspense at the end of each one.

Allene Ray has again added to her laurels as a serial star and is further given the opportunity to display some smart fashions from the New York Shops. Walter Miller is always ready to do or die and Burr McIntosh is fine as the troubled old owner of the castle. The supporting cast is entirely adequate.

The Cast

Valerie Howett	Allene Ray
Jim Featherstone	Walter Miller
Abel Bellamy	Burr McIntosh
Julius Savini	Frank Lackteen
Walter Howett	Stephen Grattan
John Wood	William R. Randall
Cold Harbor Smith	Walter Lewis
Spike Holland	Wally Oettel
Butler	Tom Cameron
Elaine Holding	Ray Allen
Creager	Jack Tanner

The Story—Abel Bellamy, a heartless old man because of some mysterious reasons, has risen from a day laborer to a millionaire and with the exception of a couple of servants, apparently lives alone in a huge old castle overlooking the Hudson River. He never entertains—no one ever calls—and he eats behind locked doors, always ordering enough food for two. His secretary and handy man is Julius Savini who has served several prison terms and is now supposed to be treading the straight and narrow path. However, his greed for money leads him to give information to Valerie Howett, a neighbor who believes that Bellamy is secretly hiding a woman who has been missing for a long time. Elaine Holding is the missing woman's name and Captain Featherstone of the State Police is also interested in solving the mystery. And then—the Green Archer appears—or at least the servants swear that they have seen a green robed figure during the night. At any rate, from time to time, his arrows are found impaled on the door and they are looked upon as a death warning. Bellamy quarrels with Creager, who for some reason is a pensioner. Creager decides to betray Bellamy and arranges for Spike Holland, a reporter, to come to his home to hear the story. That same night Creager is shot and killed by a green arrow! As Spike runs out of the house, he comes face to face with Valerie Howett who has a long bow and arrows in her hands. She faints and when Spike returns with water, has disappeared. That night a handkerchief with the initials V. H. is found in the castle after Bellamy has an encounter with the Green Archer with a number of shots exchanged. Captain Featherstone turns up at Valerie's home with a gun shot wound.

Summary—A fast moving serial, skillfully worked out in the matter of suspense, so necessary to this type of picture. It should go over in great shape with all serial fans.

Scenes from "The Ghost of Bellamy Castle," the first episode of "The Green Archer," a Pathe release.

"Isn't Love Cuckoo?"
(Pathe—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

There is a good assortment of laughs in this one from Mack Sennett and it should prove to be first class entertainment. Lloyd Bacon is the director and there is a special cast. Raymond McKee must have sold automobiles at one time so well does he take the part. Eugenia Gilbert, also registers and Marvin Lobach is always good for a lot of fun making. Ruth Hiatt is his fiancee and Frank Bacon, her father.

The Cast

The Auto Salesman	Raymond McKee
His Sweetheart	Eugenia Gilbert
The Elk Tooth Dealer	Frank Bacon
His Daughter	Ruth Hiatt
Her Fiancee	Marvin Lobach

The Story—Raymond and Eugenia are both associated with an automobile agency and are well on the way to become sweethearts until a wealthy dealer in synthetic elk's teeth arrives with his daughter in search of a new car. Here is where Raymond displays his abilities as a live wire salesman and arranges a unique demonstration. He is also very much attracted to the wealthy man's daughter in spite of the fact that she is engaged to be married at an early date. The day of the marriage falls at the same time that the car is to be delivered. When the groom presents the bride-to-be with a set of intimate photographs, the sight of them is too much for her and she seeks to escape in the new car that is being delivered by the salesman. Here, a laugh-making chase develops and his former sweetheart and her mother appear on the scene. Both couples are finally sorted out and re-arranged and everything turns out alright.

Summary—Most of the fun in this one revolves around the auto demonstration and there are a lot of good laughs that will put this two-reeler over.

"Laughing Ladies"
(Pathe—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

Here is a corking comedy from the Hal Roach studios that should get a big hand, for it is packed with laughs from beginning to end. James W. Horne did the directing and he certainly made a good job of it. Katherine Grant's work, as the girl who takes too much laughing gas, is something to write about—and for that matter so are the efforts of Lucien Littlefield, Tyler Brooke and Gertrude Astor.

The Cast

The Dentist	Lucien Littlefield
His Patient	Katherine Grant
The Police Captain	Tyler Brooke
His Wife	Gertrude Astor

The Story—Lucien Littlefield is a dentist who believes in giving generous doses of laughing gas to the patients. On this occasion when a girl arrives at his office with an aching molar, he administers even more than the usual quantity. Under the influence of the laughing gas, she leaves the office and trips blithely along thru all kinds of dangerous traffic, makes love to a married man while his wife looks on and succeeds in getting herself into several difficulties. In the meantime the dentist pursues with a restorative.

Summary—An unusually good comedy with an all star cast. Well produced and directed and should go over big.

"Marionettes"
(Educational—One Reel)

THIS is the picturization of a legend done in color, with some beautiful photography, an interesting story and some gorgeous gowns displayed by Hope Hampton, who is the central figure. It is a pretty little love romance in which the marionettes are given life by a mortal possessed of wondrous powers. They are admonished that to give utterance to a single wish means a return to their former state.

In the garret of their dreams Pierrot and Colombine find happiness until a villain intrudes and offers Colombine untold wealth to flee with him. She yields and Pierrot is comforted by Zenette, the couquette. Both relent and each wishes for the other, again taking from them life and freedom and leaving only their love. This is a distant novelty and one that should be appreciated in almost any house.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Happy Go Lucky"
(Universal—Blue Bird—One Reel)

THIS is a pretty lively little comedy, featuring Neely Edwards. It is just a succession of gags and knockabout stuff, but it maintains a lively pace and holds the interest throughout. It is the story of four members of a bachelors' club and a pretty girl. Three of these bachelors, who have been repulsed by the girl, bet Neely Edwards that he cannot meet her by 6 o'clock that night. Neely goes through a lot of the wildest kind of escapades before he is hurled through the top of the cab in which she is riding. He feigns injury, is pitied and stroked by the girl and rides her back before the envious gazes of his fellow bachelors.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Peg of New York" Girl Named at Hippodrome

THE judges at four different performances at the New York Hippodrome, together with the audience selected Dorothy M. Kitchen as their unanimous choice for "Peg of New York." This wound up the contest conducted by Universal and the New York Daily Mirror. More than 65,000 girls are reported to have participated in this exploitation contest. Of this number 22 semi-finalists appeared at four consecutive night performances at the Hippodrome, where the final selection was made by the audiences and the judges, who were, Howard Chandler Christy, Mrs. Oliver Harriman, society matron; Dr. Robert Bachman, Philadelphia artist; George M. Cohan, Broadway star and musical comedy producer, and Miss Dorothy Herzog, Daily Mirror motion picture critic.

"Breaking Loose"

(Educational-Mustang—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

PEE WEE HOLMES and Ben Corbett offer another of their series of western comedies in this one, which hops all over the small town in which it is laid looking for the few laughs contained in the two reels. The comedy is a trifle forced though there are a few humorous situations and a fair gag or two. An old maid and her monkey, the latter being responsible for exposing the circus bearded lady and the Siamese twins as fakes add some to the humor. For the rest of it Magpie Simpkins and Dirtyshirt Jones indulge on a wild ride on an elephant, out of which an attempt is made to develop much merriment.

The Cast

Magpie Simpkins.....Pee Wee Holmes
Dirtyshirt Jones.....Ben Corbett

The Story. Lucy Whittacker is returning home from her finishing school and bringing her teacher with her. She warns the community teacher is a heartbreaker. Teacher brings her pet monkey with her, but hardly comes up to her advance billing in the way of looks. Pa Whittacker details Dirtyshirt Jones on a ride through a bandit-ridden territory. Magpie is jealous and rigs up a speaking tube with which he waylays them on a lonely road. Through the speaking tube Magpie orders Dirtyshirt Jones to beat it with the homely girl and leave Lucy behind. Magpie then puts in a timely appearance and rescues Lucy, whom he takes to the circus, where he is met by Dirtyshirt and the teacher. The latter's monkey plays havoc with the sideshow attractions and eventually Magpie and Dirtyshirt are thrown on the back of an elephant. After a wild ride they are rescued by the local fire department.

Summary. This is just an average western comedy with a few humorous situations. It has no connected story and its gags will hardly provoke much laughter. It may go fairly well in some of the neighborhood houses.

"The Fighting Dude"

(Educational—Two Reels)

IF all two reelers were as chock full of entertainment as this one which features Lupino Lane they would make it pretty tough for a lot of feature pictures. There is not much that could be put into a comedy that is lacking in this one, for it is hard to imagine anything of a humorous nature Lane cannot do well. He is given full scope for the display of his talents and that means at least a laugh a minute.

The comedian goes through some exceptionally humorous antics in a gymnasium where he has gone to learn something of boxing, but these only serve to get you in the right mood for the fight in which he engages with the popular clubman athlete. Wallace Lupino plays the latter role and between them they stage one of the funniest scraps ever seen on the silver sheet.

The Cast

The Dude.....Lupino Lane
His Rival.....Wallace Lupino
His Valet.....George Davis
His Girl.....Virginia Vance
The Athletic Instructor.....Glen Cavender

Written and directed by William Goodrich; photographed by Byron Houck.

The Story. Lupino Lane is a wealthy young sap very much loved by the young hostess at the party, but not by the young clubman athlete who is his rival. The latter finds cause to eject him from the house and does so. Lane is advised to start training in a gymnasium and eventually to get his revenge. After six lessons he thinks the time has arrived, but gets himself another beating. A month later a regular bout between them is arranged and after a terrific battle Lane is again defeated. Still later he meets the girl and his rival on the links and in a rough and tumble fight wins, only to find the girl has fled over the course with two other suitors.

Summary. This is an exceptionally good two-reeler with more humorous action in it than ordinarily is found in half dozen short comedies. It tells a good story and reveals Lupino Lane as one of the best all-around comedians seen on the screen. It is an attraction for any type of house.

"Papa, Be Good"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

This is Glen Tryon's latest two reel subject out of the Hal Roach studios and was directed by Fred Guiol under the supervision of F. Richard Jones. In this one, Tryon as the youth with the Don Juan characteristics, provides an entertaining comedy. Marjorie Whiteis is the wife who has promised to love, honor and watch over him and Katherine Grant, the attractive matron who lives across the way. Tyler Brooke is the latter's wandering husband.

The Cast

The Youth.....Glen Tryon
His Wife.....Marjorie Whiteis
Her Neighbor.....Katherine Grant
Her Wandering Husband.....Tyler Brooke

The Story—There is a youth who, though married to an attractive little girl, still has a marked fondness for the ladies. In an apartment across the way, there is another couple and the male member of this family has a weakness for wandering away. Our hero seeks to recover a comb that the lady across the way has dropped and introduces some thrills when he attempts to crawl across to the neighboring apartment on a plank. He finally reaches his goal only to meet the returning husband. Complications follow. The innocent flirtations of the two couples eventually lead to the court room.

Summary—A pleasing comedy with some thrills introduced during the first part. Most of the real comedy appears during the last half. Should prove satisfactory.

Production Humming on Educational Lot

Billy Dooley has started work on his third Christie comedy in this years series for Educational which is titled "A Salty Sap." Supporting the comedian is Amber Norman, a newcomer on the Christie lot. Aileen Lopez, a Spanish beauty will appear regularly in the new pictures. Fred Peters and Walter Hier, both injured while making picture scenes have recovered and will soon be back at work. Bobby Vernon is making a new comedy in which will be seen Frances Lee, Bill Irving and Lincoln Blumer, all of the regular stock company. Earle Rodney is directing. Yola D'Avril, recently elevated to leading roles plays one with Neal Burns in that star's latest two-reeler.

Lionel Barrymore Signed By Hal Roach

Hal Roach has signed Lionel Barrymore to appear in one short comedy feature for Pathe release. The Barrymore comedy, it is announced, will be of the same quality as the vehicle in which Theda Bara will make her debut in short comedy features also with Roach.

Highlights from the Mack Sennett comedy starring Harry Langdon titled "There He Goes," which is released through Pathe.

Short Subjects and Serials

Universal Releases "Red Riding Hood"

"Red Riding Hood," a two-reel Century Comedy special heads the Century schedule of releases this week. It was adapted from the famous children's story. Peter the Great, the dog star, is featured as the wolf with Baby Peggy as Little Red Riding Hood. The picture is an ideal holiday subject and is scheduled for release through Universal Exchanges in time to be set for presentation during Universal Joy Week, the holiday period of short subject and novelty programs. The release date was November 21st.

Virginia Vance Is Playing Opposite Lane

Virginia Vance is playing opposite Lupino Lane in his latest comedy for Educational which is now being made at the Educational studios. This marks Miss Vance's second appearance opposite Lane.

Norman Dawn Will Direct Gump Comedies

Universal has signed Norman Dawn to direct the Gump comedies which Samuel Van Ronkel is now making at Universal City. Joe Murphy and Fay Tincher will continue to impersonate Andy and Min.

Scenes from "The Peacemakers," one of the "Helen and Warren" series being produced by Fox Films.

A trio of scenes from "Cleaning Up," a two-reel Educational comedy, starring Johnny Arthur.

Serial Heads Pathe Releases

First Chapter of "Green Archer" Among Features Due Week of December 6

PATHE promises a number of interesting subjects on its short feature release schedule for the week of Dec. 6th. Not the least important of these is the opening chapter of the new mystery Pathe-serial, "The Green Archer." An "Our Gang" comedy, "One Wild Ride," also adds to its attractiveness. Other subjects include, "Hold Everything," a single reel Roach comedy; "The Bonehead Age" of the "Aesop's Film Fables"; Pathe Review No. 49, Topics of the Day No. 49, and two issues of Pathe News, which is now celebrating its fifteenth anniversary.

The initial chapter of "The Green Archer" is titled "The Ghost of Bellamy Castle." Allene Ray and Walter Miller have the leading roles, while others in the cast are, Burr McIntosh, Frank Lackteen, Stephan Grattan, William Randall, Walter P. Lewis, Tom Cameron, Wally Oettel, Dorothy King and Ray Allen. Spencer Bennet directed.

"One Wild Ride" will bring out the full strength of the "gang," with Farina the victim of the wild ride. It was directed by Robert McGowan.

"Hold Everything" is a Hal Roach one-reeler featuring Eddie Borden, Katherine Grant and Martha Sleeper.

Pathe Review No. 49 presents a trio of subjects: "The Timber Farmers," showing how the Government is replenishing the great Western forests; "Makers of Men," showing how West Point builds America's military man-power; and "The Gorges of the Cher," Pathecolor views

"The Bonehead Age" is the animated cartoon of the "Aesop's Film Fables" series. "Topics of the Day" and two issues of Pathe News complete the schedule for December 6th. During its Fifteenth Anniversary period each issue of Pathe News will show selected scenes from the "Flashes of the Past," a compilation-review of historic events of the past fifteen years.

"Laugh Month" Looms as Big Event

Movement Gaining Headway As Committee In Charge Shapes Details of Huge Advertising Campaign Material

UNDER a momentum that is carrying it forward at an astonishing rate, the National Laugh Month drive, to be held in January, and during which one and two reel comedies will be given a prominence never before accorded these pictures in advertising to the public, is assuming greater proportions than had been anticipated even by the organization, the Short Features Advertising Association, which formulated the idea and launched it only a few weeks ago.

The response which the movement has received at the hands of distributors of short features and especially by exhibitors has encouraged the committee in charge of the details of the campaign to enlarge their original plans and present indications are said to make it apparent that the drive will develop into one of the biggest national movements of its kind.

Distributors have responded to the call with elaborate preparations in the way of special releases, many productions scheduled for later issue being moved up in order to assure theatres of a plentiful supply of exceptional comedy films for the arrangement of special programs designed to take advantage of the general interest which is to be stimulated in the short features during January.

Preparations are under way for the issue of an elaborate press book to be supplied theatres throughout the country in connection with Laugh Month. The books are to be mailed as soon as the poster sketches are ready. The books will include a wide range of advertising suggestions and material ready for use by the theatres tying-in with the movement. Among the features will be a list of slogans paraphrazed from national advertising.

The committee of the Short Features Advertising Association which is handling the details of the campaign is made up of Gordon White of Edutional, chairman; P. A. Parsons, of Pathe; Nat Rothstein, of F. B. O.; Julian M. Solomon, of Davis Distributing Division. Mr. Solomon is directing the work of preparing the posters, slides, cuts, press material, etc., with which the exchanges of the companies interested in the drive will be equipped.

The latest organization to join the movement is the Rayart Company. W. Ray Johnston, president of Rayart, signified his willingness to participate in the campaign upon his return last week from the Coast. He promised the committee financial assistance and pledged the support of his company in furthering the short feature drive during January.

The distributing companies which have joined the drive are: Educational, Pathe, Universal, F. B. O., Davis Distributing, Fox, Arrow, Rayart.

Educational's Schedule

Releases which Educational has nominated for the month's program are the following: "Maid in Morocco" and "The Fighting Dude," two-reel comedies in which Lupino Lane is starred; "The Movies" and "Framed," starring Lloyd Hamilton; "Watch Out," "Slippery Feet" and "Oo-La-La," starring Bobby Vernon; Walter Hiers in "Off His Beat," "Hot Doggie" and a third subject as yet untitled and which is now nearing completion at the Christie studios.

The Tuxedo group includes "The Tourist," "Cleaning Up" and "My Stars," featuring Johnny Arthur. Five Christie comedies have been named for the month, these being "A Misfit Sailor" and "A Goofy Gob," with Billy Dooley; "Soup to Nuts" and "My Swedie," with Neal Burns, and another to be titled, featuring Billy Dooley. Eight Mermaid Comedies scheduled are "Pleasure Bound," "Spot Light," "On Edge," "Cheap Skates" and "Lickety Split," featuring Lige Conley, and "Fair Warning," "Fire Away" and "Live Cowards," with Al St. John. "Big Boy," Jack White's baby prodigy, will be seen in "Baby Be Good," "A Bachelor's Baby" and "Sea Scamps." In addition there are several Cliff Bowes single reel Cameo Comedies and "Felix the Cat" reels which will be entered in National Laugh Month programs by Educational.

Pathe Backing Movement

Pathe is getting behind "Laugh Month" with full force and announces a list of twenty-three laughmakers on the January short feature release program, which is headed by a Harry Langdon special comedy made by Mack Sennett and includes four two-reel comedies from the Sennett Studio, five two-reelers and three single reelers from the Hal Roach lot, and five releases each of "Aesop's Film Fables" and "Topics of the Day."

Popular comedy stars and featured players who will be seen in Pathe comedies during "Laugh Month" include Ralph Graves, "Our Gang," Alice Day, Clyde Cook, Harry Langdon, Charlie Chase, Billy Bevan, Glenn Tryon, Andy Clyde, Al. St. John, Lucien Littlefield, "Husky" Hanes, Jimmy Finlayson, Lige Conley, Martha Sleeper, Dot Farley, Kewpie Morgan, Madeline Hurlock, Cissy Fitzgerald, Jack "Rube" Clifford, Thelma Parr, Marvin Lobach, Paul Parrott, Douglas Gerrard, William McCall, Ruth Hiatt, Peggy Montgomery, Vernon Dent, Sue O'Neil and Vivian Oakland.

Titles of Pathecomedies listed for "Laugh Month" include the following: "Saturday Afternoon," three reel Harry Langdon-Mack Sennett comedy special; "A Punch in the Nose," two-reel Hal Roach comedy; "The Gosh Darn Mortgage," Sennett two-reeler; "Good Cheer," "Our Gang" comedy; "Soft Pedal," one-reel Roach comedy with Paul Parrot; "Don't Butt In," a one-reel Roach film with Paul Parrott; "Don't Butt In," Meals," one reel Roach comedy with Paul Parrott.

Comedies Named by Davis

Among the short features

Visualizing Laugh Month

First of a Series of Cartoons to be Published in Motion Picture News During the National Laugh Month Campaign named by Davis Distributing Division as suitable to the purposes of theatres which will offer special "Laugh Month" programs are the following: "Hey Fellas;" "Saturday," "Fire Flies," "The Tin Hoss," "What Price Orphans," "The Klynick," "Six Faces West," "Ringling's Rivals" and several others, titles of which are not yet ready. The "Sheiks and Shebas" comedies available are, "Peggy The Vamp," "Peggy in a Pinch," "Peggy's Putters," "Peggy's Pests," "Peggy's Heroes," "Peggy's Helpers' and "Peggy's Reward." Additional titles will be announced before January.

The Herrick "Fragment of Life" series of two-reelers without sub-titles have an element of comedy although these are dramatic subjects and where exhibitors want to play all short feature bills the Fragments should be considered. They are, "It Might Happen To You," "The Promise," "The Invention," "Crooked," and "The Valiant Skipper." Other short product available are the "Cinema Stars" reels showing the stars at work and at play and the two mystery serials "The Mystery Box" and "The Power God."

F.B.O.'s Laugh Month Releases

F. B. O. has seven short subjects listed for release during January, 1926.

"Height But Not Handsome," No. 9 of "The Adventures of Mazie," starring Alberta Vaughn, heads the imposing list, being scheduled for January 3rd release. "Mummy Love" a Blue Ribbon comedy starring Alice Ardell, will be shown on January 10th. Another January 10th release is "The Giraffe's Long Neck," a one reel novelty from the Bray Studios.

"Little Andy Looney," No. 10 of "The Adventures of Mazie" will be shown on January 17th, while "In The Air," a two reel Standard Fat Men comedy, featuring "Fat" Karr, Kewpie Ross and "Fatty" Alexander, will be distributed on January 24th. The same day will see the release of "Dinky Doodle At The Studio," a one reel novelty in which Dinky Doodle cavorts merrily with Walter Lantz, his creator. January 31st is set for the release of No. 11 of "The Adventures of Mazie" series, as yet untitled.

Fox Supporting Drive

Fourteen corking two-reel comedies will be the contribution of Fox Films to National Laugh Month.

Included in the list of Fox Films comedy releases for November, December and January are three Van Bibbers, "The Wrestler," "A Parisian Knight" and "The Feud"; two of the O. Henry series, "Failure," and "Cupid a la Carte"; seven Imperials, "Strong For Love," "East Side, West Side," "Control Yourself," "Heavy Swells," and "The Flying Fool" and two untitled two-reelers, two of the Helen and Warren Married Life series, "The Peace makers" and "His Own Lawyer."

The Fox Company program presents many exploitation possibilities. Linked with the Van Bibber comedies is the name of Richard Harding Davis, the celebrated American author who wrote the stories on which they are based.. O. Henry has become known as the world's greatest short story writer. Mabel Herbert Urner, author of "The Married Life of Helen and Warren," is now writing stories which are syndicated to eighty-one of the most important newspapers in the country. Each of them runs pictures of Kathryn Perry and Hallam Cooley in scenes from the Helen and Warren comedies.

Universal's Line Up

Sixteen pictures, comprising thirty-six reels, have been listed for release by Universal during the drive period. In these more than a dozen stars will appear and a wide range of subjects will be included in the pictures presented.

The feature players include Jack Daugherty, Edna Marian, Wanda Wiley, Arthur Trimble, Al Alt, Joe Murphy, Charles Puffy, Neely Edwards, Arthur Lake, Fred Humes, Josie Sedgwick, Edmund Cobb, Ben Corbett and Pee Wee Holmes. Universal's publicity, exploitation and advertising departments have effected several sure-fire tie-ups on these stars, destined to create considerable nation-wide interest in these players' releases.

They will appear in the following pictures: "The Scarlet Streak," Adventure Serial; "The Honeymoon Squabble," "Buster's Bust-Up," "Her Lucky Leap" and "Helpful Al," Century Comedies; "Min's House on the Cliff" and "Min Walks in Her Sleep," Gump Comedies; "The Horse Laugh," "The Honeymoon Hotel," "Prep School" and "Ups and Downs," Bluebeard Comedies; "The Call of Hazard," "Montana of the Range," "Hearts of the West," "The Man With a Scar" and "The Hero of Pipe Rock," Mustang Westerns.

Thematic Cue Sheets for Pathe Comedies

THEMATIC cue sheets will be issued by Pathe with its short subject comedy product starting with the releases the week of November 29th. These include the first Harry Langdon three real special comedy made by Mack Sennett, and "Laughing Ladies," a Hal Roach two-reeler.

The issuance of the music cue sheets is said to be the result of many requests made by exhibitors. An unusual demand was started for them by the musical tie-up effected with Whitmark and Sons on the special "Our Gang" edition of "Stay in Your Own Back Yard," which was issued coincidentally with the release of "Your Own Back Yard."

The Pathe comedies being provided with the cue sheets are produced by the Mack Sennett and Hal Roach studios.

"Flashes of Past" Pathe News Feature

"FLASHES OF THE PAST" will be an added feature of each issue of Pathe News during the fifteenth anniversary period, which began on November 14th. Outstanding world events of past years will be included in each issue. Among the events included will be the following:

Theodore Roosevelt's trip into Africa in 1910, the Coronation of King George of England in 1911, the Indian Durbar in 1912, the Dayton Flood in 1913, the Rushing of the Belgian troops to the War Front in 1914, the San Francisco Pan-Pacific Exposition in 1915, the launching of Border Raids by the Mexican Leader, Villa in 1916, the outbreak of the Russian Revolution in 1917, the Armistice Celebration in New York in 1918 and many other similar events.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

Once In A Lifetime

(Gerson Pictures Corp.—5000 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A COMEDY drama with all the thriller essentials and a lot of knockabout fun projected by continously fast action. It measures up to the best of Richard Holt's previous vehicles and should please all admirers of the stunt star, as well as those who like the lighter brand of screen entertainment. Dick appears in the opening reel as a confirmed golf addict, knocking balls about his home lawn with such reckless abandon that the aggrieved passers-by organize a man-hunt in his behalf, and there follows the chase which leads him into a string of adventures in which the mayor's daughter unwittingly participates. Starting on this lively chord the director succeeds in keeping up the swift tempo throughout and the result is an amusing hurlyburly of melodrama and slapstick humor. Holt has plenty to do and does it with his customary vim, with Mary Beth Milford scoring as an attractive heroine and capable support given the principals by the rest of the cast.

THEME. Comedy-drama. Hero a golf fanatic whose lawn practice gets him into trouble with pedestrians, escapes from pursuers, saves girl from kidnappers and gets involved in a maze of adventures out of which both emerge happily.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Zippy action, incessant thrills and slapstick comedy. Episode where lovers are carried off on freight train. Holt's stunts and finale.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The golf opening scene suggests a tieup with sporting stores. Feature Holt's stunts and bill as wildly exciting comedy drama.

DRAWING POWER. Good wherever Holt is favorite. Likely card for the small houses.

SUMMARY. A typical Holt picture shot through with thrills, stunts and rough-house comedy. Will entertain star's followers and admirers of snappy action films.

THE CAST

Glenn Horton ..... Richard Holt
Edna Perry ..... Mary Beth Milford
Martin Perry ..... Wilbur Higgins
Tommy ..... Theodore Lorch
Hobo ..... Les Bates
Marty Taylor ..... Jack O'Brien

Author, Grover Jones. Director, Duke Worne.

SYNOPSIS. Glenn Horton, practicing golf on his front lawn, drives the balls so recklessly that he upsets passers-by and is chased to a freight yard. There he rescues the mayor's daughter from thugs kidnapping her, but the pair are carried off in a box car as the train starts, and involved in a maze of adventures. Finally Glenn saves the mayor from being shot by the chap who planned the abduction and marries the girl.

Richard Holt, star of the Gerson production titled "Once in a Lifetime."

Once In a Lifetime (Gerson Pics)

PRESS NOTICE

RICHARD HOLT, king of stunt actors, in a madly amusing comedy-drama entitled "Once in a Lifetime" will be the star screen attraction at the ——— Theatre on ———. In this picture Holt appears a youth addicted to golf, whose lawn practice leads to his being chased by a crowd to a freight yard, where he saves the mayor's daughter from kidnappers. The pair are carried off on a freight train and involved in a whirl of adventure, which ends with the hero saving her father's life and wedding the girl.

Mary Beth Milford is the heroine of this mirthful and thrilling film, with Wilbur Higgins, Les Bates and others in support.

CATCH LINES

Dick Holt as a golf fanatic and a box car loaded with thrills on the Loveland Limited! Fights galore, slapstick comedy of the real laugh-getting brand, a pleasing romance! Watch for "Once in a Lifetime!"

A Fight to the Finish

(Columbia Pictures Corp.—4514 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

ANOTHER lively William Fairbanks vehicle that travels at a slap-dash pace from start to finish and registers as sufficiently amusing entertainment for the average fans. The picture lives up to its title by staging a prize fight scene that is well handled and ends in unexpected fashion when the hero is knocked out. This isn't according to established screen ethics, but there's a "joker" in the proceedings, for it transpires that the loser was doped. Moreover, he takes justifiable revenge by beating the victor to a pulp in the dressing-room, immediately after the regulation contest, so that matters are evened up nicely after all. Also, he wins a pretty girl and is reconciled to a wealthy parent who was weary of his "knock-about-town" tactics. The film won't appeal to the high-brow element, but those who enjoy rough physical thrills with a bit of romance on the side will pronounce it O. K.

THEME. Fight melodrama. Hero cast off by wealthy father, whips boxing champion in street fight when latter insults girl. He meets champion in ring, is doped, defeated; but thrashes victor in dressing-room, wins girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Comedy stuff at start. The street scrap. Scene where hero is knocked out in ring and later thrashes conqueror in dressing-room.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Bill Fairbanks and clever work of Phyllis Haver in feminine lead. Boost the fights scenes. Bill as crackerjack thrill melodrama.

DRAWING POWER. Should get the money wherever they like the fighting game and sustained fast action.

SUMMARY. A typical Bill Fairbanks film, speedy and full of ginger. Stages good boxing contest.

THE CAST

Jim Davis ..... William Fairbanks
Mary Corbett ..... Phyllis Haver
Cyrus J. Davis ..... Tom Ricketts
Pat O'Brien ..... Pat Harmon
Henry McBride ..... William Bolder
Battling Wilson ..... Leon Beauman

Author, Dorothy Howell. Director, Reeves Eason. Photographed by George Meehan.

SYNOPSIS. Jim Davis' escapades about town result in his wealthy father pretending to be bankrupt and turning Jim loose to shift for himself. Jim thrashes a husky who insults Mary Corbett in the street. The whipped one turns out to be Battling Wilson, the State boxing champion. Urged on by Mary, Jim tackles Wilson in the ring. He is doped and suffers defeat, but exacts revenge by beating up his conqueror in the dressing-room. Jim wins Mary and is reconciled to his father.

William Fairbanks, the star of "A Fight to the Finish," a Columbia picture

A Fight to the Finish (Columbia Pictures

PRESS NOTICE

THAT ever-popular athlete and stunt actor, William Fairbanks, will be seen in his latest starring vehicle, "A Fight to the Finish," at the ——— Theatre on ———. This film presents Fairbanks as a young chap whose penchant for having a good time leads his wealthy father to pretend he is bankrupt and send the son out to hustle for himself. When the hero whips a boxing champion who insults a pretty girl, he sees fame ahead and tackles the fighter in the ring. He is doped, knocked out, but has revenge by thrashing his conqueror with his fists.

Bill Fairbanks is at his best in this, supported by a fine cast, with Phyllis Haver as heroine.

CATCH LINES

How good is a champion outside of the ring? Might a chap who didn't know the champ beat him if he wasn't scared by the boxer's reputation? You'll find the answer in this picture!

One of the Bravest

(Gotham—5679 Feet)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

GOTHAM has a good action and thrill picture in this one, which has Ralph Lewis in the starring role. It is the same general type of many of the fire pictures that have gone before, but it has some elements about it that have been missing in the others. Director Frank O'Connor handled his material nicely and the cast throughout does its work well. There is a touch of the Abie's Irish Rose style of comedy in the picture, which might have spoiled the whole thing had it been less deftly done. The comedy has not been overdone and the conflict between the Irish and the Jewish element adds much to the attractiveness of the picture both in humorous situations and pathos.

THEME. Melodrama, in which the young hero with an inborn dread of fire rises to the supreme occasion, proves himself one of the bravest, recovers the fire department funds which have been foolishly invested by his mother and wins the girl of his choice.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The fire scenes which show the collapse of an entire building. The sensational jump into the fire net when young Dan Kelly saves the man who has swindled his mother of the fire funds.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The easy and effective tieup with fire departments. The thrilling fire scenes and daring rescue.

DRAWING POWER. Should be very pleasing wherever a real thrill picture is appreciated. In addition it has a logical story well above the average.

SUMMARY. A good action thrill picture with many daring exploits, well acted by a competent cast and well directed. Has an abundance of suspense and some good comedy angles that are not overdone.

THE CAST

John Kelly.....Ralph Lewis
Dan Kelly.....Edward Hearn
Morris Levin.....Sidney Franklin
"Satin" Sanderson.....Pat Somerset
Mrs. Kelly.....Claire McDowell
Sarah Levin.....Marion Mack

Story by James J. Tynan. Directed by Frank O'Connor; continuity by Henry McCarty; photographed by Ray June.

SYNOPSIS. Young Dan Kelly passes the fire department examinations and is assigned to the battalion under the command of his father, John Kelly. The youngster has an inborn dread of fire and falters in his first assignment. He is threatened with dismissal by his father. Young Dan is in love with a Jewish girl, whose father advances funds when Mrs. Kelly misappropriates the money of the fire department left in the keeping of John Kelly. Young Dan is called to a fire, sees the swindler, who has made prey of his mother, trapped on the top floor of the burning building. He mounts a scaling ladder, battles with the swindler, recovers the money and saves himself and the swindler by jumping into the fire net. The Irish and Jewish families become reconciled and Dan marries the Jewish girl.

PRESS NOTICE

ONE of the most thrilling fire pictures ever made comes to the ——— theatre next ———. It is "One of the Bravest," a Gotham production, with Ralph Lewis in the starring role. A different fire picture is promised in this one. It contains all of the sensational features that characterize productions of this type, but at the same time it has a logical story with comedy situations of the Abie's Irish Rose type between a Jewish and an Irish family.

The Los Angeles Fire Department was used in the two thrilling fire scenes which actually depict the burning of a seven story apartment house.

CATCH LINES

See the thrilling seven story jump into the fire net. A new type of photo-drama with a different kind of story. That sterling actor Ralph Lewis as One of the Bravest. The greatest and most spectacular fire scenes ever made.

We Moderns

(First National—6655 Feet)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

THIS one looks like a ready-made box office success. It has all the ingredients calculated to please the taste of present day picturegoers. It is an adaptation of the Israel Zangwill's play and deals with the "wild" doings of an English flapper and her "set." While the picture hasn't the punch of "Flaming Youth," and the action lacks interest-holding qualities at times, Miss Moore works like a Trojan to put it over and everyone, no doubt, will vote that she succeeds in making her role at least, worth the money to see. One of the highlights of the production is the Treasure Hunt, a fad of the flapper's companions, and which takes her on a tour of London. Here we have some genuine shots of the British metropolis, made during Miss Moore's recent trip to Britain. The other big moment comes when an airplane crashes into a Zeppelin in which a gay party is being staged. The plane falls and the Zeppelin, enveloped in flames, follows. This sequence is done in color and carries a good kick. There are many comedy situations in the earlier reels. Miss Moore is supported by a good cast, including Jack Mulhall as leading man.

THEME. A comedy drama in which an English flapper "has her wings singed" but comes out O. K., and decides to drop her wayward ways.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The "Treasure Hunt." Colleen riding horse into drawing room. Scene when heroine's fiance discovers her in Pleat's rooms.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Inasmuch as Flaming Youth was such a box office hit and this one is along the same lines, emphasize this fact in selling it to the public. Boost this as Miss Moore's best work since Flaming Youth.

DRAWING POWER. Will undoubtedly do business because of popularity of star and good box office title.

SUMMARY. Colleen Moore scores once more in this comedy of post-war London. There's a lot of fun, and good punch in the crash and fall of the Zeppelin.

THE CAST

Mary Sundale.....Colleen Moore
John Ashlar.....Jack Mulhall
Oscar Pleat.....Carl Miller
Sir Robert Sundale.....Claude Gillingwater
Lady Kitty Sundale.....Clarissa Selwyn
Dick Sundale.....Cleve Moore
Joanna Herzberg.....Blanche Payson

By Israel Zangwill. Directed by John Francis Dillon. Photographed by T. D. McCord.

SYNOPSIS. Mary Sundale, a product of the post-war period, keeps her parents in a continual state of anxiety with her unconventional ways. She becomes infatuated with Oscar Pleat, egoist, author and "God's gift to women." In the course of a Treasure Hunt, Mary enters Pleat's rooms, but is saved by John Ashlar, who really loves her. But Mary continues to associate with Pleat and accompanies him and a party on a ride in a Zeppelin, which is struck by an airplane and destroyed. Mary escapes. She sees the follies of her ways and reforms. She weds Ashlar.

The Part Time Wife

(Lumas Film Corp.—5900 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

AN independent production of superior quality, "The Part Time Wife," with a title bound to arouse curiosity, has two angles to its plot that should insure box office success. The first is that the fans are given a very comprehensive view of picture-making in Hollywood, something that always pleases them even though such peeps behind the scenes have been frequently utilized as screen material. The second is that the story brings up the vexed question of whether a man can be happy when married to a woman whose earning ability puts him completely in the shade. Most folks are familiar with such cases, although the participants in the marital problem may not be up against the high financial film game; and will therefore watch with interest for the picture solution. There's a genuine human touch to this feature, which is well acted and directed, with Alice Calhoun and Robert Ellis giving fine emotional performances as the leads, and excellent support furnished by the remainder of the company.

THEME. Heart drama. Married life of film star and poor newspaper man almost wrecked by wife's preoccupation with her work, but both find happiness at last.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The Hollywood atmosphere and interesting shots of films in making, studio sets, views of screen celebrities. Emotional urge. Scene where husband thrashes wife's leading man.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Harp on question of whether marital life can go smoothly where woman earns more money than husband. Play up the Hollywood stuff big.

DRAWING POWER. Has general audience appeal, should win in average house.

SUMMARY. A good heart drama. Shows life behind scenes at Hollywood, colorful, entertaining, emotionally effective. Plot tackles interesting domestic problem.

THE CAST

Doris Fuller	Alice Calhoun
Kenneth Scott	Robert Ellis
Dewitt Courtney	Freeman Wood
Ben Ellis	Edward Davis
Allen Keane	Charles West

PRESS NOTICE

A COMPREHENSIVE view of films in the making around the Hollywood studios is presented in "The Part Time Wife," a heart drama of absorbing interest which will be the big screen attraction at the ——— Theatre on ———. The picture deals with marital troubles of a newspaper man and his wife, the latter a noted screen star. She leaves the profession at his request, but later returns and only lives with him at intervals. The final break occurs when he thrashes her leading man. Reconciliations come when the husband writes a successful play and regains his wife when she is injured in the studio.

Alice Calhoun and Robert Ellis are the leads.

CATCH LINES

Borrowed Finery

(Tiffany Productions—6500 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

MELODRAMA, with society trimmings, a bit of underworld atmosphere, as exemplified in the person of a canny high-class crook who wheedles the innocent heroine, a pretty model with a weakness for costly clothes, into aiding his unlawful quest for jewels; and a generous sprinkling of thrills. While the plot is rather far-fetched and unconvincing in spots, such little inconsistencies are covered up by rapid action and effective characterizations contributed by the leading players. As a program offering "Borrowed Finery" should prove a satisfactory investment for the exhibitor. It is lavishly produced, with handsome settings, a party scene that is full of "pep," and a gown display of regal magnificence that has a great appeal for feminine patrons. Louise Lorraine carries off chief dramatic honors in the heroine role, Ward Crane registers as a capable lover, Lou Tellegen shines as the polished crook gent and Gertrude Astor portrays the wordly-wise dress model successfully.

THEME. Melodrama, with innocent heroine fond of fine clothes, who becomes dupe of society crook, but is rescued by honest suitor.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The gorgeous dress-parade, fashion show. Party scene. Scene where Harlan steals jewels. His arrest by hero. Happy climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up title. Boost fashion display as lure for feminine patrons. Advertise society atmosphere, as well as thrilling melo punches and heart interest.

DRAWING POWER. A good card for neighborhood and smaller houses.

SUMMARY. Fast-moving melodrama with society backgrounds, elaborate settings, a fashion show that will please women folks, plenty of thrills and satisfactory romance.

THE CAST

Sheila	Louise Lorraine
Channing Maynard	Ward Crane
Harlan	Lou Tellegen
Billy	Taylor Holmes
Mrs. Borden	Hedda Hopper
Maisie	Gertrude Astor
Mrs. Brown	Trixie Friganza

Author, George Bronson Howard. Director, Oscar Appel.

SYNOPSIS. Channing Maynard falls in love with Sheila Conroy, a dress model. Harlan, a society crook, posing as a Government agent, hires Shelia as an assistant and enlists her aid in obtaining jewels belonging to Mrs. Borden. After various adventures, Harlan gets away with the jewels, but is pursued and arrested by Maynard. Sheila again seeks work as a model, but Maynard persuades her to marry him.

Louise Lorraine who appears in "Borrowed Finery" a Tiffany production.

Borrowed Finery (Tiffany Prod.)

PRESS NOTICE

THE trials of a working girl whose love of costly clothes unwittingly leads her into the clutches of a clever society crook, form the theme of "Borrowed Finery" which is listed as the main screen attraction at the ——— Theatre on ———. This fast-moving society melodrama is packed with countless thrills and never-failing suspense, offers an appealing romance, and stages a fashion show guaranteed to win the admiration of all feminine patrons. Charming Louise Lorraine gives the best performance of her career as heroine Sheila.

The supporting cast includes such well known players as Ward Crane, Lou Tellegen, Taylor Holmes, Trixie Friganza, and other popular lights of the screen.

CATCH LINES

Hungry for the beautiful things of life, this girl dressed herself in borrowed finery.

Hogan's Alley

(Warner Bros.—6310 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

STRAIGHT hokum melodrama, thrills piled up regardless of logic, hurry-up action all the way, slap-stick comedy, East Side settings and manners with contrast obtained by an excursion into the realms of higher social strata—of such old-fashioned material is "Hogan's Alley" constructed. The so-called "intellectuals" will turn thumbs down upon it, of course, as crude entertainment. Just the same, there's a ready market awaiting such films in certain communities where patrons will get all worked up over the slam-bang excitement of the prize fight scene, cheer the hero's aeroplane pursuit of the train carrying away his sweetheart, gasp with satisfaction when he knocks the villain for a goal and laugh in sympathy with the picture's somewhat primitive brand of humor. Its box value depends altogether on the class of trade you are catering to. Monte Blue performs with dynamic vigor as the pugilistic hero, Patsy Ruth Miller is attractive as his little Irish sweetheart and Willard Louis scores as her uncouthly comic papa.

THEME. East Side melo with comedy twists. Hero a pugilist, in trouble through injuring ring opponent, has lurid adventures, saves sweetheart from designing rascal.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The big fight scene. Shots of former ring champs. Comedy relief. Hero's escape from police.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Monte Blue and Patsy Ruth Miller. Play up the ring contest, Monte's successful dodging of the cops, scene where he chases train in plane. Bill as strenuous East Side melo.

DRAWING POWER. Should win wherever they want action plus, redhot thrills, fun and romance and aren't too particular as to logical plot development.

SUMMARY. Lots of hokum melodrama and comedy in this one. Something doing all the time, story offers various absurdities, but fast action and spectacular thrills make it a likely box office card for many houses.

THE CAST

Lefty O'Brien	Monte Blue
Patsy Ryan	Patsy Ruth Miller
Michael Ryan	Willard Louis
Dolly	Louise Fazenda
A Stranger	Ben Turpin
Battling Savage	Frank Hagney
Mother Ryan	Mary Carr

Author, Gregory Rogers. Director, Roy Del Ruth. Photographed by Charles van Enger.

SYNOPSIS. Lefty O'Brien, pugilist, is engaged to Patsy Ryan, East Side belle. A wealthy doctor's attentions to Patsy cause trouble between the lovers. Patsy is induced to accompany the doctor on a train to his mountain lodge. The train halts when it hits an auto in which Lefty is riding, engineer gets off and the train runs wild. Lefty pursues in an airplane, stops the runaway, finds the villain making advances to Patsy in a drawing-room car, thrashes him and wins back his girl.

PRESS NOTICE

A RIP-ROARING melodrama of New York's East Side, with plenty of comedy relief is presented in "Hogan's Alley," which is scheduled for the screen of the ——— Theatre on ———. The hero is a pugilist and the opening reel offers a prizefight of tremendously realistic proportions. His sweetheart, a little Irish girl, is decoyed away by a wealthy physician who takes her on a train. The hero pursues in an aeroplane, boards the train and rescues her. Thrills and red-hot spectacular action all the way through. Monte Blue and Patsy Ruth Miller in the hero and heroine roles.

CATCH LINES

Monte Blue and Patsy Ruth Miller in a picture that vibrates with thrills, laughter and romantic lure. Look for the big prizefight scene and the spectacular stunt where Monte chases and boards runaway train from airplane.

The Unguarded Hour

(First National—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

HERE we find the hero of "The Sea Hawk," Milton Sills, in a decidedly new role, that of an Italian nobleman who has banished women from his heart and spends all his time wrapped up in radio experiments. And then one day an American girl (Doris Kenyon) seeking new fields of adventure, arrives at the duke's home, rather unexpectedly in fact as her plane crashes into the radio towers and falls a mass of wreckage in the nobleman's garden. And then the girl by her unconventional ways soon has the duke head over heels in love with her. There are some fine comedy moments, credit for which should go to Miss Kenyon who in this instance deserves as much praise as the star for putting the feature over. Laid in a beautiful Italian setting for the most part, the production is one of rare beauty from a scenic viewpoint.

THEME. A romantic drama of an American girl who goes to Italy and tames a woman-hating nobleman, bringing him to her feet.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The crash of the airplane into the duke's garden. The "rescue" of the girl by the duke. The "Unguarded Hour" sequence. The love scenes between Sills and Miss Kenyon. The discovery of the villain attempting to attack the heroine.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Boost the names of the stars. They are box office magnets. Clock displays, using posters advertising picture and cards warning folk not "to be late for 'The Unguarded Hour.'" Stills of Sills and his laboratory in radio window displays.

DRAWING POWER. Should attract good business to any house.

SUMMARY. Real entertainment every foot of the way. Artistically mounted and beautifully photographed. And several thrills thrown in for good measure.

THE CAST

Andrea	Milton Sills
Virginia Gilbert	Doris Kenyon
Bryce Gilbert	Claude King
Duchess Bianca	Dolores Cassinelli
Russell Van Alstyne	Cornelius Keefe
Gus O'Rorick	Jed Prouty
Stelio	Charles Beyer
Elena	Lorna Duveen

By Margaretta Tuttle. Directed by Lambert Hillyer. Photographed by Roy Carpenter.

SYNOPSIS. Caught about to elope with Russell Van Alstyne, Virginia Gilbert is shown the folly of her act by her father. The elopement is called off and Virginia goes to Italy to visit the Duchess Bianca to whom her father is engaged. Virginia at once tries to interest Duke Andrea, radio experimentalist. He eventually falls in love with her. The duke's sister, Elena, is involved in an affair with Count Stelio, who refuses to marry her. The count makes advances to Virginia. He is discovered by Andrea, who seeking to avenge his sister, dashes for Stelio who falls to his death over a balcony. Virginia and Andrea wed.

(First National)

PRESS NOTICE

MILTON SILLS and an excellent cast, including Doris Kenyon in the leading feminine role, comes to the ——— theatre, commencing ——— in "The Unguarded Hour," from the pen of Margaretta Tuttle. Sills is seen in the role of an Italian nobleman, interested in radio experimentation, who hates all women—until Doris Kenyon visits his home with her bewitching ways makes him fall for her like a ton of bricks. Of course the star gets plenty of opportunities to do his usual "he man" stuff and there is a typical Sills fight at the close.

CATCH LINES

A madcap maid out to win the heart of the man who hates all women. One glorious hour of romance on the Riviera. The drama of a man who hid from love and the girl who found him.

The Only Thing

(Metro-Goldwyn—5736 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A TYPICAL Elinor Glyn picture, with mythical kingdom background, an unhappy princess betrothed to a king who sports a peculiarly beast-like countenance, and a handsome young English Duke who wins the royal lady's favor and carries her off from her unpleasant surroundings. It is beautifully produced, too much praise cannot be given the exquisite photography and attractive settings, and both Eleanor Boardman and Conrad Nagel are not only good to look at in the leading roles, but give performances remarkable for sincerity and natural appeal. This combination of artistic camera-work and excellent acting achieves wonders in the way of agreeable entertainment with a plot that, lacking such aids, or possibly the skilled guidance of director Jack Conway, wouldn't grade very high as an amusement factor. As it is, the feature runs smoothly, revels in spectacular thrills and hectic romance and has all the earmarks of a successful box office product.

THEME. Romantic drama. English Duke visits mythical kingdom of Chekia, wooes princess betrothed to reigning monarch, wins and carries her off triumphantly.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Acting of Miss Boardman and Conrad Nagel, good work by huge supporting cast. Superb photography, alluring backgrounds. Meeting of hero and princess. His swordsmanship. Their escape to yacht.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up Elinor Glyn. Feature Conrad Nagel and Miss Boardman. Praise story's romantic appeal, magnificent settings, colorful atmosphere.

DRAWING POWER. A first-run attraction which should have equal success among the smaller houses.

SUMMARY. Looks like a good box office asset. Follows much the same trail as most of Elinor Glyn's yarns, but is so beautifully produced, well directed and cleverly acted that it promises to satisfy fans in general.

THE CAST

Princess Thyra	Eleanor Boardman
Vane, Duke of Chevenix	Conrad Nagel
The King	Edward Connelly
Sir Charles Vane	Louis Payne
Gigberto	Arthur Edmund Carew
Princess Erek	Vera Lewis
Princess Anne	Carrie Clark Ward

Author, Elinor Glyn. Director, Jack Conway.

SYNOPSIS. Harry Vane, Duke of Chevenix, visits Chekia, falls in love with Princess Thyra. Latter marries the King, but immediately after the wedding a revolution starts and the monarch is killed. Thyra is carried off by Gigberto, leader of the rebels. Later, Gigberto is imprisoned by the people. Vane disguises himself as Gigberto. He and Thyra are tied together and thrown into the bay. Vane manages to sever their bonds, and supporting Thyra, swims to his yacht, anchored near by. Thyra admits her love for her rescuer.

PRESS NOTICE

LOVERS of romance framed in a setting of royal pomp and magnificence can look forward to a treat when Elinor Glyn's latest story in picture for—"The Only Thing," is presented at the ——— Theatre on ———. This is a mythical kingdom tale, wherein an English Duke visiting abroad falls in love with Princess Thyra, betrothed to the king. The marriage takes place, the king instantly killed in a revolution, and the young lovers pass through many spectacular adventures ere they find refuge on board the Duke's yacht. An exceedingly beautiful production, with Conrad Nagel and Eleanor Boardman as hero and heroine, alive with thrilling action.

A large and talented supporting cast is in evidence.

CATCH LINES

The titled lover wooed the Princess who was betrothed to the King. She wed the monarch but Fate dissolved the unnatural union.

Two Fisted Jones

(Universal—4555 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

AN entertaining Westerner, with a mystery angle to the plot that is cleverly developed and piles up the suspense, without the spectators being able to solve it until the final reel. The picture opens in rather deliberate style, but soon gathers speed and once it does there's no slackening of fast and furious action throughout. They've given Jack Hoxie quite a lot of love-making to do in addition to his usual riding feats and exhibitions of physical prowess and he acquits himself admirably as a "squire of dames." There's some regular hurricane stuff in the scene where Jack and the cowboys round up a bunch of rustlers and save the cattle that are being run off. The big punch registers when Hoxie gallops his horse into the midst of a wedding ceremony and stops the tying-up of his girl to the other chap. Kathryn McGuire is a pleasing heroine, Frank Rice makes a definite hit as "Old Bill," William Steele does excellent work in the villain role and the support is O. K.

THEME. Western melodrama. Hero pursues search for a mysterious person named "Two Fisted Jones," gets involved in variety of adventures, and saves girl he loves from marrying an impostor.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The sustained swift action, riding and fighting thrills, sentimental sequences, local color. Hoxie's ride to halt marriage ceremony.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Jack Hoxie. Play up the mystery complications. Bill as exciting Westerner with unusual amount of heart appeal and decisive thrills.

DRAWING POWER. Good for any house where peppy Westerners are in demand.

SUMMARY. A brisk Western melodrama. Well handled mystery element lifts plot out of familiar paths. Has plenty of thrills and satisfactory love interest.

THE CAST

Jack Wilbur	Jack Hoxie
Mary Mortimer	Kathryn McGuire
Hank Gage	William Steele
Bart Wilson	Harry Todd
Old Bill	Frank Rice
The Traitor	Paul Grimes
Henry Mortimer	William Welsh
Paul Jones	Frederick Cole

Author, Sarah Saddoris. Director, Edward Sedgwick. Photographed by Harry Newman.

SYNOPSIS. While hunting for a missing man out West Jack Wilbur falls in love with Mary Mortimer, whose ranch is in danger of seizure by money-lender Wilson. Latter hires rustlers to run off Mortimer's cattle. Hank Gage induces Old Bill, a hermit, to identify an imposter as the man Jack is seeking, and the former is scheduled to marry Mary. Jack, after joining cowboys and spoiling rustler raid, rides into the church and stops the wedding. Old Bill recognizes Jack as the missing man and the lovers are united.

PRESS NOTICE

JACK HOXIE in "Two Fisted Jones" an exciting Western melodrama, with a curious mystery angle and well developed romance, will be the chief attraction on the screen of the ——— Theatre on ———. This is one of Hoxie's best pictures in which the star distinguishes himself not only by his horsemanship and physical feats, but the appealing style in which he plays the loyal lover. The story turns on a question of identity, with a bully climax in which Hoxie rides into church just in time to save the girl he loves from marrying an imposter.

Kathryn McGuire appears in the heroine role, with William Steele, Frank Rice, Harry Todd and other favorite players in support.

CATCH LINES

The bride at the altar with an imposter! Up the aisle dashes a grim-faced cowboy. Clear the way!

The Scrapping Kid

(Universal—4664 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A WESTERN melodrama with the usual quota of physical thrills, better developed romantic interest than is generally found in this type of picture, timely comedy relief and enough realistic hand-to-hand battles to satisfy those whom its title will lead to expect a generous helping of combat diet. The hero is a philanthrophic sort of cuss, who adopts an orphan family without knowing that one of his wards is Betty, an eighteen-year-old girl. When he does find out, he turns her and the kids over to the sheriff's guardianship for propriety's sake and begins to consider an altogether different form of relationship to the winsome Betty. So starts the love affair, the smooth course of which is interrupted by the activities of three bandits with whom the hero has his hands full. The running down of these gentry provides all the excitement, and Art Acord, as the grim avenger, demonstrates his right to rank with the best of Western riding and fighting stars. The support is adequate and photography excellent.

THEME. Western melodrama. Ranchman adopts orphan he thinks is a child, but falls in love with her when he finds she is grown girl. Rescues her from bandits and gets big Government reward.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Fast action, glints of comedy, sentimental interest. Clever work of trained dog. The exciting fight episodes. Acord's athletic stunts.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as fast Westerner, with sustained romantic interest, fights galore, spectacular thrills. Feature Art Acord.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for neighborhood and smaller houses.

SUMMARY. Breezy Westerner. Lives up to title by offering plenty of furious fighting; comedy stuff bright and neatly interpolated. Has romantic appeal as well as melodramatic punch.

THE CAST

Bill Bradley	Art Acord
Betty Brent	Volma Connor
Mike Brent	Jimmy Bodwin
Hank Price	C. E. Anderson
Pete Hendricks	Jess Deffenbach
Slim Hawks	Hank Bell
Cliff Barrowes	Edmund Cobb
Sheriff Bolton	Dudley C. Hendricks

Author, E. Richard Schayre. Director, Clifford Smith. Photographed by William Nobles.

SYNOPSIS. Bill Bradley, ranchman, is in love with Betty Brent, who lives with the sheriff's family. Three bandits hold Bill up and throw him in his ranch cellar. Betty is decoyed to mountains by the outlaws. Bill escapes and pursues. After several hard fights he rounds up the bandits. The sheriff's men arrive and take charge of the prisoners, who are found guilty of a mail robbery. Bill gets a reward of $5000 from the Government, pays off a mortgage on his ranch and settles down with Betty.

PRESS NOTICE

A TALE of love and adventure in the "great open spaces" is offered by "The Scrapping Kid;" listed as the banner screen attraction at the ———— Thetre on ————. This is a bully Westerner, in which Art Acord portrays a fighting ranchman who runs down a trio of bandits guilty of robbing the U. S. mails, gets a big Government reward and wins a pretty girl for his wife. The picture is alive with action from start to finish, studded with realistic combats and winds into a crashing climax. The love interest never fails, with Velma Connor giving an appealing performance as heroine Betty.

Edmund Cobb, Dudley Hendricks, Jimmy Bodwin, C. E. Anderson appear in important roles.

CATCH LINES

Wages For Wives

(Fox—6650 Feet)

(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

ANOTHER John Golden stage success "Chicken Feed" is brought to the screen. This like others has undergone a change of title and at the same time a play that, on the stage, offered rather buoyant, though frail, entertainment gets long-winded and somewhat slow of foot in picture form.

It is a story having the advantage of general appeal, for its theme is concerned with the subject of financial distribution in the home—the division of the pay envelope. The subject leads to a strike of wives, a good comedy device and one which, we think, will serve as good material for that bright banter which is ever noticeable, and apparently ever new when the young and old married folks indulge in repartee for the purpose of "brightening up the party." It should, on that account, get a lot of publicity through conversation. It is interesting in spots—possibly interesting enough to get it over the ground where the travel is slow and laborious.

THEME. Comedy dealing with a trio of wives who go on strike for a more even split of the pay envelope.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The small town atmosphere and accurate detail in picturing the home life of the characters with which the play is concerned.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Concentrate on idea as to whether a "wife is a wage slave and if so is she underpaid," in publicity, contests, teaser ads and billing. Sell as diverting comedy dealing with a subject of vital interest.

DRAWING POWER. Seems best suited to score in houses with community following and smaller theatres.

SUMMARY. Lacks sufficient material to fill out the footage accorded it. Has some general appeal because of characters and is supplied with some good atmosphere, but slows up a lot in various places throughout the play.

THE CAST

Nell Bailey	Jacqueline Logan
Danny Kester	Creighton Hale
Hughie Logan	Earle Foxe

Based on "Chicken Feed" by Guy Bolton. Directed by Frank Borzage. Scenario by Kenneth B. Clarke.

SYNOPSIS. On the night of her wedding, Nell Bailey decides that she will not be a wife at all unless Danny Kester agrees to split fifty fifty with her on all he earns. He refuses and she goes on strike, succeeding in getting her mother and another young wife to join her. The deserted husbands have a hard job getting along but they hate to give in. Finally the striking wives and the husbands meet each other half-way and the strike comes to an end.

PRESS NOTICE.

JUST what happens when a wife goes on strike for higher wages is humorously related in the screen version of "Chicken Feed," a stage success which has been transferred to the photoplay by William Fox, with Jacqueline Logan, Creighton Hale, Earle Foxe, Zasu Pitts, Claude Gillingwater, David Butler and other well known players in the principal roles.

"Wages for Wives" tells the story of a bride who suddenly calls off the honeymoon because her husband does not agree that marriage should be a fifty-fifty partnership and that everything the man earns should be evenly divided between himself and the wife. She induces her mother and another woman to join her in the strike, which results in humorous and dramatic consequences which must be seen to be appreciated.

When Husbands Flirt

(Columbia Pictures Corp.—5500 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A COMEDY of errors and domestic complications wherein an innocent husband is made the goat for the escapades of his no longer young, but still gay partner, "When Husbands Flirt" trips along at a merry gait and affords amusing entertainment. There isn't much meat to the plot, which consists mostly of broadly humorous episodes rather loosely linked together, but breezy action and clever characterizations by the players keeps its interest alive, and there is no doubt that it will "get the laughs" in the average house and stack up well as a box office asset. Dorothy Revier and Forrest Stanley are the featured players, the former scoring as the suspicious wife and the latter a hit as the harassed hubby. But Thomas Ricketts gets the most fun out of his role—that of the elderly, deboniar and skirt-chasing Wilbur Belcher, whose night wanderings cause all the trouble between his young partner and the latter's spouse.

THEME. Domestic comedy. Young husband is unjustly blamed by his bride for philanderings with vamp for which his elderly but gay business partner is responsible, but proves himself innocent after much tribulation.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The net work of double-crossing by various characters. Wilbur's adventures with vamp. The lively comedy situations and good acting.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You can boost this as full of peppy incident and laughing gas. Title has pulling values, play it up. Feature three players mentioned above.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for neighborhood and smaller houses.

SUMMARY. A domestic comedy with all kinds of comic complications, a blameless husband suffering for pranks of elderly beau who is his business partner. Has considerable audience appeal as light entertainment.

Authors, Paul Gangelin and Dorothy Arzner. Director, William Wellman. Photographed by S. Landers.

SYNOPSIS. Violet Gilbert is annoyed when her recently acquired husband Henry, a lawyer, is obliged to work late one night. That evening his gay old partner, Wilbur Belcher, borrows Henry's car and goes joy-riding with Charlotte, a blonde vamp. Violet finds Charlotte's card case next day and plans a divorce, with Mrs. Belcher's assistance. Various complications follow, with innocent Henry suspected on all sides. He is finally cleared when the vamp explains matters to Violet.

Dorothy Revier, star of "When Husbands Flirt," a Columbia production.

When Husbands Flirt (Columbia Pictures)

PRESS NOTICE

A side-splitting comedy of domestic complications, one of the big laugh-getters of the year, "When Husbands Flirt" will be given its initial local showing at the ———— Theatre on ————. Snappy action and riot of fun distinguish this production which treats of the trials of a young, newly-wed husband whose wife suspects him of philanderings with a blonde vamp. The actual offender is his elderly but gay business partner, who borrows the younger man's car to take his charmer around. Forrest Stanley and Dorothy Revier fill the leading roles.

Thomas Ricketts makes a great hit as the flirtatious old beau, with Ethel Wales and other prominent players figuring in the support.

CATCH LINES

A five-sided, love mix-up that is full of pep and laughter.

Morals for Men

(Tiffany Productions—6500 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

CONFUSED continuity and the director's failure to make some of the most important situations stand out clearly hamper this picture's appeal to such an extent that it classes as nothing better than an ordinary program attraction. Critical audiences won't find it attractive, but there are enough sensational punches, backed up by society atmosphere and a flavoring of sex suggestion, to get it over in certain communities. The plot pivots on the regeneration of a man and woman, the former winning through, the latter eventually finding suicide her only resource, this gloomy bit being partially lightened by a happy reunion between the male principal and his wife. Poor photography still further hurts the film, some of the lighting effects being simply atrocious. Conway Tearle does forceful acting in the hero roles, Agnes Ayres, as the luckless Bessie, hasn't a pleasant part to play and goes through it in listless fashion, while pretty Alyce Mills outclasses the leads by her clever portrayal of Tearle's wife.

THEME. Regeneration drama. Girl bootlegger and her "man" reform. He weds society girl and finds happiness. She is constantly blackmailed and commits suicide.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The hounding of Bessie by former confederate. Tearle's rescue of Marion from drowning. Society atmosphere. Scene where Bessie confesses past to husband and is cast adrift. Her suicide. Tearle's reconciliation with Marion.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as society drama with regeneration theme, sensational thrills, and stress idea that "the woman always pays" in the long run.

DRAWING POWER. Depends on reaction of patrons to emotional thrills and sex appeal.

SUMMARY. Title and cast have pulling values. Film poorly directed and photographed. Has sex and sensational appeal. An average program offering.

THE CAST

Joe Strickland	Conway Tearle
Bessie Hayes	Agnes Ayres
Marion Winslow	Alyce Mills
Frank Bowman	Otto Matiesen
Mary	Mary Beth Milford
Leonard Wallace	John Miljan
Harvey Ober	Robert Ober

Adapted from Gouverneur's Story, "The Love Serum." Director, Bernie Hyman.

SYNOPSIS. Joe Strickland and Bessie Hayes decide to reform. They separate. Joe saves Marion Winslow, society girl, from drowning, redeems himself and weds her. Bessie is hampered by the blackmailing tactics of a former confederate. Joe aids her, his wife grows jealous and threatens divorce. Bessie, who has also married, is cast out when she confesses her past to husband. She straightens cut matters between Joe and Marion, but finally kills herself.

Morals for Men (Tiffany Productions)

PRESS NOTICE

THE story of a man's regeneration, and failure of a woman who had sunk low in the social scale to redeem herself is told in "Morals for Men," a heart-gripping drama which comes to the screen of the ———— Theatre on ————. It is a drama rich in colorful society atmosphere, sensational thrills and stringent heart appeal, with Conway Tearle giving a forceful performance as the man who wins out, and Agnes Ayres depicting the sad role of the "woman who pays." The work of Alyce Mills as the girl with whom the hero finally finds happiness stands out vividly.

Otto Matiesen, Robert Ober, John Miljan and other well known lights of filmdom appear in support.

CATCH LINES

Her past haunted her like a grim spectre, when she found there was one standard of morals for men and another for women.

The Man From Red Gulch

(Producers Distributing Corp.—5437 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

AN entertaining melodrama of the California gold rush epoch, the days of '49, well directed, handsomely photographed and providing Harry Carey with a role exactly suited to the capabilities of that versatile star. Folks who like the open air adventure films, garnished with the necessary romatic touch and stress of combat won't be disappointed in this feature. It's hardly the correct thing however, to advertise it as an adaptation of Bret Harte's "Idyl of Red Gulch," for not a single trace of that story's theme is to be found in the supposed picture version. But the film plot is quite exciting enough to stand on its own merits, the costumes and customs of the period are colorful and accurate, and its backgrounds exceedingly attractive. Harry Carey works in his usual vigorous style and gives a capital impersonation of the kindly-hearted hero Sandy, aided by an excellent supporting cast. The thrills come thick and fast, culminating in a fight aboard a river steamer that is a realistic ripper.

THEME. Melodrama of California '49 period. Hero befriends children of slain partner, wins love of their aunt and avenges pal's death at the finish.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The Indian battle. Sandy's adoption of the kids and meeting with Betsey. His ride to save latter from villain and scrap aboard steamer when bad man is knocked overboard and killed. The colorful atmosphere, fast action.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Don't bill Bret Harte's name, as patrons who expected a picturization of that author's work would feel they were tricked. Boost as vivid melo, with strong heart interest and feature Harry Carey.

DRAWING POWER. Good card for any house where slam-bang melodrama holds them.

SUMMARY. Snappy melo, with excellent California gold days atmosphere. Replete with exciting situations, adequate dash of romance, colorful and interesting.

THE CAST

Sandy	Harry Carey
Betsey	Harriet Hammond
Falloner	Frank Campeau
Frisbee	Mark Hamilton
Lasham	Lee Shumway
Mme. Le Blanc	Doris Lloyd
Colonel Starbottle	Frank Norcross

Scenario By Elliott Clawson. Director, Edmund Mortimer. Photographed by Georges Benoit.

SYNOPSIS. Sandy's partner, Falloner, is killed by gambler Lasham, who previously eloped with Falloner's wife. Sandy goes to take care of Falloner's two children and falls in love with Betsey, their aunt. Lasham induces Betsey to take the night boat for Sandy Bar with him, under the pretence of finding the children's mother. Sandy rides in pursuit, catches up with the steamer and swims to it. In the fight that follows Lasham is knocked overboard and drowned. Sandy marries Betsey.

The Man From Red Gulch (Prod. Dis. Corp.)

PRESS NOTICE

AN epic melodrama of the California gold days of '49, "The Man from Red Gulch," is the main screen attraction at the ——— Theatre on ———. Harry Carey appears as Sandy, the hero, whose partner is killed by a gambler that previously eloped with his victim's wife. Sandy vows vengeance, goes to take care of the dead man's two children and falls in love with Betsey, their youthful aunt. Lasham, the slayer, decoys Betsey aboard a river steamer. Sandy pursues, swims to the vessel and Lasham is knocked overboard and drowned in the fight which ensues. Sandy weds Betsey.

Harriet Hammond plays the feminine lead, supported by a sterling cast of screen favorites.

CATCH LINES

A stirring romance vibrating with colorful thrills, with the California Sierras for background in the days of old, the days of gold, the days of '49. A wonder picture of charm and beauty.

Three Pals

(Davis Distributing Div.—4987 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A ROMANTIC drama with a good deal of sympathetic lure, presenting a story not of extraordinary originality, but so pleasingly acted and well directed that it ranks as a likely box office asset for the average house. A quarrel between two hot-blooded old Southern gents which breaks up an engagement of their respective youthful descendants, a murder mystery and villain who goes to all lengths to gain the heroine's hand, with a good old race finish in which the girl in the case rides to victory—these are the chief ingredients of the tale, served up with colorful settings and seasoned with appropriate thrills. A couple of trained horses do some skilled detective work and are instrumental in bringing the arch-criminal to justice, they strain the probabilities, but it's a safe bet that nine out of ten fans will be rapturously excited over this specimen of equine sagacity. Marilyn Mills is wistfully pretty and appealing as Betty Girard, Walter Emerson a nice juvenile hero and the support is capital.

THEME. Dramatic romance, dealing with temporary separation of young lovers through parents' quarrel, a murder mystery, and big horse race with happy climax.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Marilyn Mill's clever work and intelligent stunts by her two equine pets. The romantic interest, thrills and exciting race scene.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as romantic drama with appealing love affair. Stress the animal detective idea as first time horses have figured in such capacity. Feature Marilyn Mills and play up the race for the Owner's Sweepstakes.

DRAWING POWER. Should prove satisfactory card for neighborhood and small houses.

SUMMARY. Pleasing romance with good dramatic punches, a murder mystery and bully horse race to wind up with. Novel stunt developed of having two pet steeds discover clues which bring slayer to punishment.

THE CAST

Betty Girard	Marilyn Mills
Colonel Girard	Josef Swickard
Major Wingate	William H. Turner
Uncle Lude	Martin Turner
Larry Wingate	Walter Emerson
Wingate's Secretary	James McClaughlin

Author, L. V. Jefferson. Director, Wilbur F. McGaugh. Photographed by Robert De Grasse.

SYNOPSIS. A quarrel between Colonel Girard and Major Wingate separates Larry Wingate and Betty Girard, youthful lovers. Wingate's secretary fails to acknowledge receipt of a note paid by Colonel to the Major. Girard demands explanation, and the Major is shot and killed while calling on him. Girard is arrested. The secretary demands payment of the note or Betty's hand in marriage. She rides and wins $10,000 in race. Clues dug up by Betty's two pet horses establish the secretary's guilt as slayer. The lovers are reunited.

Marilyn Mills, star of "Three Pals," released by Davis Dis. Div.

Three Pals (Davis Distributing Div.)

PRESS NOTICE

A PLEASING romance of the Southland is presented in "Three Pals," starring Marilyn Mills, which comes to the ——— Theatre on ———. The story deals with the trials of two youthful lovers, temporarily separated when their respective fathers quarrel. There is an absorbing murder mystery, and a unique situation developed when the heroine's two pet horses dig up clues which result in the conviction of the slayer. Toward the climax an exciting horse race is staged, with Miss Mills winning a $10,000 stake which tides over all financial troubles, and paves the way for the lovers' reunion.

CATCH LINES

An enthralling romance of the sunny South, wherein two young lovers prove their loyalty. Thrills, suspense, a dark murder mystery, and wonderful exhibition of animal intelligence, all combined in "Three Pals."

Albany

JAMES R. CONKLIN, manager of the Rialto theatre in Glens Falls, reopened the house last Saturday night, following construction that has been under way for several months past. The house was badly damaged by fire last March. The policy of the house from now on will be a combined program of vaudeville and pictures. The house has a seating capacity of about 1,300. The orchestra is being directed by Albert Smalldone, while James Hickok, who has been connected with Keith's theatre in Brooklyn, will act as organist.

Miss Renee Craven, of the First National exchange, has returned to her duties after a week's illness at her home.

Arthur G. Whyte, of the Peerless Booking Agency in New York city, was in Albany last Friday night, and on Saturday went to Glens Falls, to attend the opening

In addition to a program of double features, the Harmanus-Bleecker Hall in Albany, featured Eva Fay in mind reading tests for three days last week, and played to capacity business. The Hall is to add to its income through two or three stores that are now being constructed on the front of the theatre, and which will be ready for occupancy in the very near future.

According to Jake Golden, manager of the Griswold theatre in Troy there appears to be no end of persons in that city to enter the song contest that is being run each Monday night during November and December with the finals the fore part of January. Not only is Mr. Golden giving cash prizes to the winners each week, but as a further inducement, the winner of the contest itself will be given a week's vaudeville engagement at the Proctor houses in Troy and Albany.

The Charleston dance contests at the Harmanus-Bleecker Hall, along with the pictures, still draw heavily despite the fact that they have been going on for several weeks. Some of the other motion picture theatres are also adopting the idea, the Rose of Troy, running a Charleston dance one night last week in which both men and women from Troy and Albany took part.

Walter Roberts, of the Troy theatre, came within the money in a bowling contest held in this city last week, and which was open to all persons.

No change is to be made in the officers of the Motion Picture Machine Operators' Union in Troy. Harry M. Brooks was nominated to succeed himself at a meeting of the union last Sunday. Mr. Brooks has headed the union for several years and after January first he will become a member of the New York State Legislature, having been elected to the Assembly.

The Rose theatre in Troy was packed to its doors on the nights of November 23 and 24, when Jacob Rosenthal, owner of the theatre, presented five live turkeys each night from the stage to the holders of lucky coupons.

Helen Foster, who appears in Educational comedy release.

Information from Mechanicville is to the effect that William Tweedy will make no effort whatever to reopen his theatre there, despite the fact that all the state department of labor required of him was the installation of a fireproof booth. There was some talk after the house was closed, that it might be turned into a garage, but up to the present time absolutely nothing has been done in this direction.

Robert Wagner, former manager of the Gateway theatre in Little Falls, has just associated himself with Clifford Servatius of Utica, and taken over a theatre in Middleville, which will be reopened in a somewhat remodeled form the fore part of December. It is said along Film Row that the two men are planning to acquire other houses from time to time until they can form a circuit.

Tom Thornton, who runs the Orpheum in Saugerties, fairly outdid himself on the night of November 30, with his customary entertainment for members of the village fire department. The event is always one that is eagerly looked forward to by residents of the village and on the present occasion, the audience numbered several from along Film Row.

Film personals for the week include the fact that Louis Schine has returned from a trip that took him to many of the Schine houses in various parts of the state, while Nate Robbins of Utica, is back home from a trip to New York city.

Excellent progress is being made at the present time in the erection of W. H. Linton's new house in Utica. Mr. Linton was unfortunate enough to lose his theatre last spring less than two weeks after it had been opened to the public, fire originating in a nearby restaurant, sweeping through the theatre and reducing it to charred embers within an hour. Mr. Linton's new house is being erected on the site of the other one, but will be somewhat larger.

John Augello, who is building a new theatre in Utica, with about 1,000 seats, is in hopes of having it in readiness for opening the first week in January. Chris Marx, who owns the Rialto and Highland theatres in Utica, is back from a trip overseas.

There is to be a change at the Albany Zone committee rooms, Miss Carolyn Goodman, who has served as stenographer since the rooms were opened, having resigned. It is understood that Miss Goodman will leave on or about December 1, and up to the present time her successor has not been appointed.

The Watertown theatres received a visit last week from George Ames, the new manager for Pathe in Albany, and who was accompanied on his trip by Charles Henschel, the eastern district manager. Miss Eleanor Tenney, of the Pathe exchange, is now a bride, having married Dick Struwe, who has been a student booker at the offices for the past two or three months.

There was a meeting of the Arbitration Board last Monday, and among those in town for the occasion was Charles McIvor, who runs the Star in Norwood, as the Empress, in Norfolk.

Business has been so good with Julius Byck, in Tannersville, that instead of closing his house down simply because it is located in what is generally termed a summer resort town, he will run the theatre throughout the winter and plans to increase his patronage with a wider distribution of his advertising matter.

Changes at the Warner brothers' exchange here include the resignations of Dick Bennett, as cashier, and Walter Vadney as shipper in order that they may take a more active part in the management of the Hudson theatre in Watervliet. Mrs. H. M. Carkner, who was with the Vitagraph exchange for seven years, has become cashier at Warner brothers and Everett Ingram has been named as shipper. J. N. Klein, manager of the exchange, greeted Abe Warner, one day during the past week while Mr. Warner stopped over a train while on his way back from Chicago to New York. Vic Bendell, who quit the film selling business several months ago, and vowed that he was through with it, is once more back in the game, this time representing Warner Brothers over the northern territory and succeeding Bert Gibbons.

The theatre which is being run by C. N. Lewis, of Grand Gorge, is now being remodeled and according to expectations of its owner, it will be in shape to reopen some time in January.

The American theatre in Canton, which is one of the houses in northern New York, run by the Papayanakos boys, had the St. Lawrence University football team as its guests the other night.

It now looks as though the city of Gloversville would have a new theatre. It is said that two companies are seeking a site in that city for a large house of about 1,800 seats. The parties concerned are not known generally, although it is surmised that perhaps the Schine brothers, who have their headquarters, employing upwards of forty persons in Gloversville, may be interested in the project, particularly in view of the fact that the building proposed is a combined theatre and office building.

Junior movies continue to draw capacity audiences of boys and girls on Saturday mornings in Albany, Troy and Schenectady. The idea is receiving the hearty sanction of the city officials as well as the parents and the programs being presented covering about two hours' entertainment are being enhanced by additional features appealing to the children.

The Opera House in Lowville, which is now being leased by E. J. Wolfe, may be taken over by the village itself and to that end a special meeting of the town board will be held in the very near future, as Mr. Wolfe's lease expires the middle of December.

No one from here attended the meeting of the directors of the New York State M. P. T. O., which was held in Buffalo the fore part of the week.

One of the most notable openings of a motion picture theatre in Central New York in several months occurred on the night of November 23, when the beautiful Capitol theatre in Ilion, was opened under conditions that left nothing to be desired. The house has been in course of construction for several months, and is owned by Whitney, Young and Pierce. The occasion was one in which the entire village took much interest and there were also exhibitors and notables present from Utica and other places.

Alex Herman, local mannager for the First National exchange, met and conferred here last Monday with a number of First National officials, including A. W. Smith, Sam Spring, M. Marin and N. Dipinnet.

E. O. Brooks, of New York city, a serial sales manager for Pathe, was in Albany for a portion of last week.

Special programs were given at many of the theatres in this part of the state on Thanksgiving Day with particular attention paid to the musical end of the entertainment. Many of the houses were decorated for the occasion and after a summer and fall of excellent business, the owners and managers, expressing themselves on Thanksgiving Day, declared that they were looking forward to an excellent winter.

Film exchange managers in Albany are wondering if Lew Fischer, of Fort Edward, has been lost, strayed or stolen, for Mr. Fischer, who used to drop in at the exchanges at least once a week, has not put in an appearance for several weeks.

No trace has yet been secured of the person or persons who entered the Rose theatre in Troy, two or three weeks ago, and made off with the sum of $186.

Buffalo

JUDGE CHARLES HICKEY in county court has handed down an order granting a stay of execution of the order he gave out several days ago directing the sheriff's department to dispossess Allan S. Moritz from the Ritz theatre, Niagara Falls, because of his non-payment of rent to the owners for several months. The stay was granted pending the outcome of an appeal taken by Moritz to the Appellate Division in the summary proceedings by which Abram and Mary Atlas, owners of the house, formerly the Lumberg, sought to recover possession of the theatre. Judge Hickey last week decided the case in favor of Mr. and Mrs. Atlas. In granting the stay of execution of the dispossess order, Judge Hickey required Moritz to furnish a bond of $10,000 to guarantee payment of the rent.

Frank Ganello of Pittsburgh has leased the Hippodrome theatre in Niagara Falls from James Wallingford of Buffalo who has been operating the house for a year or so.

Mr. and Mrs. Aikens of Randolph, N. Y., were killed in an auto accident last week. The couple had been operating the Gem theatre in that town for several years.

A new Dalite Gold Fibre screen has been installed in the Rialto, Lockport, and plans are being made to improve the Wurlitzer organ. The Rialto is a link in the Schine chain.

Manager Johnny Carr received many congratulations on the new units which have been added to the Wurlitzer organ in Shea's North Park theatre, Buffalo. The improved instrument was dedicated Thanksgiving Day. Units have also been added to the Wurlitzer organs in the Victoria and Frontier theatres, two West Side community houses.

George Albert Bouchard, former organist at the old Mark-Strand and recently at Shea's Hippodrome and the Hotel Statler, has been engaged to play at the Rialto theatre in Lockport, where the management is out for the bonus prize offered to the link in the Schine chain in the state doing the biggest business during Schine Month.

The strike of musicians and stage hands is still on in Niagara Falls. The members of Local 106, A. F. of M., are continuing to insert ads in the Gazette calling the attention of the public to the fact. Meanwhile the managers of the Strand, Bellevue and Cataract theatres have forgotten all about the matter, going ahead on an open shop basis.

It is reported that because of the proximity of the proposed new motion picture house which the Askey-Hager company plans to build at Main and W. Northrup streets, Buffalo, to a new gasoline station, the fire department is putting up an objection. The United Brethren church on the opposite corner is also understood to be up in arms over the theatre. It is planned to build an 1800 seat house with an entrance and lobby at 3174 Main street. The building would be 80 feet wide, 120 feet long and 30 feet high and of brick construction. The council has granted the petition subject to consent of nearby churches and residents.

The Hollywood theatre in Holley, N. Y., formerly operated by George McCargo and Francis O'Brien, is now being run by Nat Freedman and Rolf Brotman of Rochester.

Richard C. Fox, district manager of Vital exchanges, with headquarters in Buffalo, announces the appointment of Frank C. Moynihan as manager of the Albany exchange, succeeding Joseph Cantor, resigned. Mr. Fox also announces the appointment of Frank Young, former booker at the Buffalo Renown office, as assistant manager of the Albany exchange. George Schaefer is representing Vital in the Rochester district. Mr. Fox left for Detroit the first part of this week to open an exchange there.

Frank S. Hopkins, well known in Buffalo where for many years he was manager of the old Victor Film Service exchange, has been appointed general manager for Associated Exhibitors in Canada, with headquarters in Toronto.

Romance has hit Film Row in Buffalo. Frank Swalbert, managing director of the First National shipping department, marched up the aisle with Miss Beulah Serius and said "I do!" Mrs. Swalbert has been with Dependable several years in the poster and advertising accessories department. Miss Ella Burg, a member of the First National office force, was also married last week. Adam Trabka of Renown's shipping department has also said farewell to that out every night stuff. He was married the other day.

Bill Mack, Pathe short subject sales manager, was in Buffalo the other day for a conference with Branch Manager Basil Brady and a visit with Mike Shea. Buffalo exhibitors will be interested to know that George Hickey, former Metro manager in Buffalo, has been transferred from Boston to Philadelphia with the same company.

Jacob Farber, the Jackson street clothing merchant in Batavia has purchased the business building at 49 Jackson street from Daniel MacNeil. The property is next door to the new Lafayette theatre, which Mr. Farber owns and which is operated by Fred M. Zimmerman of Buffalo.

Mike Shea and Vincent R. McFaul were in New York city all last week conferring with Paramount theatre department officials on the merger of the Buffalo Shea interests with the F.P.-L. chain. The deal is expected to be finally closed in a few days. Charley Hayman of the Strand and Cataract, Niagara Falls, was also in New York for several days.

BUTTE

W. J. HEINEMAN is now manager of the Universal exchange in Butte.

Frank Murphy, manager of the Famous Players-Lasky corporation, has big signs "No Smoking" posted above all the doors in his office suite. It is very evident that he takes no chances of being burned out.

C. R. Wade, the hustling manager for the Producers Distributing corporation, spends much of his time visiting the key cities of the state.

The employees of the Silver Bow Amusement company were treated to dance on last Thursday evening at the close of the theatre hours. The dance was held in the American Hall and the music was furnished by Ted Rose's Band. A number of guests outside the ranks were invited and all were enthusiastic over the delightful affair. Mr. Sullivan, the Manager and host, believes "that all work and no play make Jack a dull boy."

William Hughardt is back in Butte again at the head of Associated Exhibitors. Mr. Hughardt's popularity will make him a strong factor in the success of his company in Montana as he is one of the strongest salesmen in the film work in this section. His many friends are glad to welcome him to Butte again.

J. J. Harrington, the genial head salesman for Associated First National, is in Butte for a few days to file his shipping orders.

Philadelphia

SIDNEY R. KENT, general manager of Famous Players; George W. Weeks, general manager of distribution, and Phil Reismann, assistant division sales manager, were the leading figures in a sales conference of the Washington, Wilkes-Barre and Philadelphia sales forces of Famous Players recently held in the Hotel Sylvania, Philadelphia. The conference was intended primarily to familiarize the sales forces with the forthcoming product. Mr. Kent delivered a talk on "Man Power," which was declared by those who heard it to be one of the ablest addresses on the correlation between man power and the motion picture industry that has ever been delivered.

The Philadelphia Board of Trade has appointed the following new committees to serve during the ensuing month: Arbitration committee, Jack Hennessy, United Artists; Wm. Heenan, First National, and Miles F. Gibbons of Pathe. The Credit committee consists of C. S. Goodman of Educational, Percy A. Bloch of Famous Players, and Ben Amsterdam of Masterpiece. John Bethel of American Feature Film Exchange, Jerry Safron of F. B. O., and Wm. G. Humphreys of P. D. C., will serve as members of the Fire Prevention committee during the month of December.

J. H. Harvey, of the Hays office, was a recent visitor in the city and addressed a meeting of the Film Board of Trade.

Sunday evening, January 3rd, is the date decided upon for the dinner dance to be given by the M. P. T. O. A. of Eastern Penna., Southern N. J., and Delaware. It was originally intended to give the affair to the members of the organization without cost, but it was found that the total expense would exceed $1,200. After receiving the approval of the body at large to give the affair, the committee asked for a special meeting in order to present fully the probable cost, not feeling warranted in taxing the treasury to that extent without the approval of the membership. It was finally decided to charge $5 per plate, both for members and non-members. Approximately 500 covers will be laid.

Edgar Moss, Philadelphia branch manager for Fox, is now spending three weeks at Hot Springs, Va. Mr. Moss' application to his duties as branch manager has been so untiring that he recently collapsed on the street, suffering a breakdown that necessitates a prolonged vacation.

Prominent exhibitors in this territory are planning to set aside the week of December 14th as "Oscar Neufeld Week" as a tribute to Mr. Neufeld, who has done much to advance the motion picture industry in Philadelphia and surrounding territory.

Harry Bodkin, who entered the employ of Metro-Goldwyn a short time ago, has been temporarily assigned to the Philadelphia office. He will spend several months in the various M. G. exchanges throughout the country, familiarizing himself with conditions.

The Independent Theatres Company, of which Len L. Berman is the head, has taken a lease, with an option to purchase, on the Victoria Theatre, Baltimore.

Central Penn

DANIEL L. HAKE, formerly manager of one of the leading picture theatres of the Nathan Appell Enterprises in York, was stricken with paralysis in Philadelphia on November 17, and at this writing is in a critical condition.

Owing to delays in the rebuilding of the Orpheum theatre, Harrisburg, which is to be known hereafter as the "State house will be delayed until at least the middle of February. Theatre," the reopening of the

The Strand theatre, York, has adopted a plan of starting the first show on Saturdays at noon instead of at 1 p. m. as heretofore. This is the earliest any picture show opens in York.

Manager Gipple, of the Majestic Theatre, Harrisburg, in order to oblige the Harrisburg Consistory of Masons, who desired the use of the Theatre on the afternoon and evening on November 19 for initiatory exercises, omitted the usual picture and vaudeville programs for that day.

Walter C. Simon, organist of the Hippodrome theatre in York, has composed a wedding march. He says he will play it for the first York couple desiring to be married.

By the first of December it is expected the roof will be on the new $600,000 theatre which the Comerford Amusement Company of Scranton is building in Hazleton, adjoining the new Altamont Hotel. It is proposed then to rush the interior decorative work with a view to having the formal opening of the theatre take place about February 1. The theatre will have a seating capacity of 2,300.

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Walter J. Hurley, manager of the Orpheum Theatre, Allentown, and formerly press representative in Harrisburg for the Wilmer & Vincent theatres in that city, and Miss Viola E. Burd, an accomplished musician, of Harrisburg, who has been closely associated with theatrical work.

Detroit

ALEC SCHRIEBER, well known Detroit exhibitor who owns the Frontenac and New Plaza theatres in this city is a proud father these days. He's another Alec the boys say.

Although country stores and household nights at community theatres are nothing new, Detroit's neighborhood houses, it has been noticed, acclaim the idea a very successful one and it is the intention of these exhibitors to continue to offer their patrons useful articles each week.

Business over at Universal's Broadway Strand theatre in Detroit, according to Manager Jimmie Carrier has improved so well in the past eight months that everyone is happy. Jimmie attributes most of his success to the fact that proper stage presentations have a lot to do with it and we'll say he's put on some good ones.

Jules Pinkett opened his new Famingo theatre at Gratiot and Seven Mile road in this city with appropriate ceremonies on Thanksgiving Day, and it takes its place among the leading suburban houses of this territory. The new theatre has a capacity of twelve hundred. Mr. Pinkett formerly owned the Grosse Point Park theatre which he sold to Fred DeLooder.

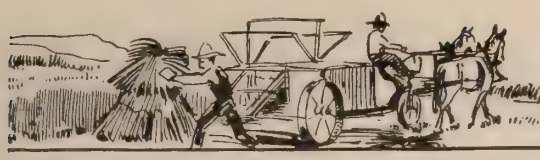
Charlie Garfield up in Flint, Mich., has taken over the old Globe theatre closed for almost three years and feeling kind of "Ritzie" himself, has renamed the house Ritz. The theatre is now a first run house and according to Charlie business is very good.

Florida

HAWKINS and Hudson, of Brooksville, who operate a string of houses located in Inverness, Bushnell, Dunnellon and Brooksville, are adding two more. They have taken a lease on the new house now building in New Port Richey and are building one at Williston. R. H. Palmer, Jr., former manager of the Highlands at Frostproof, has been engaged to manage the Williston house.



The corner of Polk street and Florida avenue seems to be very attractive to the movie men of Tampa now, and especially so for John B. Carroll, General Manager of the big houses of the Consolidated Amusement Co., for on that corner their latest house, The Tampa, is being built. The new house will have entrances on three streets and will have a seating capacity of over 2,500.

O. G. Finley, who has been assistant manager under George B. Peck, of the Strand, Tampa, has been made manager of the Grand. George Edwards takes O. G.'s place at the Strand, and David Ginsberg, former manager of the Grand, goes with the evening paper, The Times.

Down in Pierce, the American Agricultural Chemical Company, who own the great phosphate mines of that section, have opened up two theatres for the benefit of their employees. One is for the white people and the other for the colored. They are putting on the late releases and making a charge of only 5c and 10c. The company will make good any losses on the venture.

"Phantom Red" is being featured in window displays of shops of all descriptions in a tie-up with the showing of Universal's "The Phantom of the Opera." Photos above show displays by a woman's clothing shop in Milwaukee featuring the engagement of the picture at the Alhambra in that city. Right, a window display in a men's furnishing store in Chicago.

Des Moines

A NEW theatre is opening up in La Villa, Iowa. There has been a house there for some time, but it has been closed. E. C. Bunker is the owner of the La Villa Theatre.

The Universal Club recently organized at the Des Moines office of Universal, is proving a success. The next thing on the program is a party. Ruth Morgan, bookers' stenographer and chairman of the social committee, excels in managing affairs of a social nature and so the blow-out is sure to be a big success. There is to be dancing and maybe eats and hard telling what else. The Universal Club was addressed at the last meeting by Mrs. Chas. Grahl, NEWS correspondent, who talked for five minutes on "The Longest Way Round is the Sweetest Way Home."

C. H. Macke is the manager of a new theatre at Vail, Iowa. He has not yet given the house a name, but has been buying quite a lot of new equipment.

J. H. Feldhans has bought the Princess Theatre at Odebolt. He bought the theatre from H. H. Cone.

I. L. Dutton, salesman for F. B. O., won the division prize last week in the contest now in progress. This is the second time that a Des Moines salesman has won the district prize since Fairchild finished at the head of the list the week previous.

Mildred Rubenstein, formerly of the staff of Metro-Goldwyn at Buffalo, New York, is temporarily filling the place of contract clerk at the F. B. O. exchange, while Bernice Tilton, the regular incumbent, is in Minneapolis.

Mrs. Bert Hall is recovering rapidly from a serious operation.

S. Cathro, formerly with Universal is now two-reel comedy salesman for Pathe in the San Joaquin valley and the South Coast.

St. Louis

SKOURAS BROTHERS took over the Missouri Theatre on Saturday, November 21.

To fill the vacancy in the West End Lyric's orchestra pit, Allister Wylie has organized a new orchestra.

The grand opening of the St. Louis Theatre, Grand boulevard and Morgan street, was held on Monday, November 23. This house has 4,080 seats and is the third largest in the world. Its policy will be first run feature pictures in conjunction with Orpheum Circuit vaudeville.

A nervous, well dressed young man held up the cashier of the New Maplewood Theatre, 7170 Manchester avenue, Maplewood, Mo., at 10 p. m., November 18, and escaped with $188 in cash, after exchanging shots with Patrolman Walters of the Maplewood force.

About 500 persons were in the theatre at the time and many of them ran out to see what was happening when the bandit and patrolman began firing.

Suit to determine whether he has any interest in a lot at the corner of Union boulevard and St. Louis avenue, St. Louis, has been filed in the St. Louis Circuit Court by E. A. Freudiger, who names William Goldman, Samuel Goldman, Jr., and Maxwell Goldman as defendants to the action.

William Goldman is the owner-manager of the Kings, Queens, Rivoli, Woodland and Kingsland theatres, and has plans for a 1,800-seat theatre to be erected on the Union boulevard site.

Freudiger, who sets forth that he was formerly employed as an auditor for William Goldman, alleges that a year ago he put up $2,000 to join the Goldmans in purchasing the Union boulevard lot. He said that William Goldman put up $3,500 and the other two $2,500 toward the initial payment of $10,000 on the lot. He asked the court to order a partition of the property so that he can realize on his alleged one-fourth interest in the property.

Title to the property is in the name of William Goldman.

Goldman announced last week that he intended to start construction of the Union boulevard theatre in the immediate future. It will cost upwards of $150,000.

Barney Rosenthal, president of Columbia Pictures Corporation, has announced that the St. Louis Theatre, Grand boulevard and Morgan street, will have the first run of three of the big pictures to be re-released through his exchange.

Seattle

OREN WOODY, special representative of the Associated Exhibitors' home office, spent several days here last week, on a tour of the Pathe and Associated exchanges. He was received here by Paul R. Aust, manager of the Associated interests in this territory, and by L. A. Samuelson, manager of the local Pathe branch office.

Robert W. Bender, live wire manager of the Columbia Theatre, essayed a neat bit of showmanship last week, when he presented a groupt of twelve concert artists for a two-day engagement on his regular program.

Fred G. Sliter, manager of the First National exchange, left recently for a trip to several of the larger cities in Alaska in the interests of the new First National releases, and expected to be away for several weeks. Mr. J. W. Parry, office manager, is in charge of the exchange's activities during the absence of Mr. Sliter.

Announcement was made last week to the effect that William Hugheart had resigned his associations with the Fox exchange to take over the management of the Associated Exhibitors office in Butte. He was to have been installed in office there by Paul R. Aust, division manager of this territory for Associated, who also announced last week that he had secured Clyde P. Beasom as a sales representative for his company in the Montana territory, assisting Mr. Hugheart.

C. B. Heartwig, theatre operator of Montana, reported last week that he has reopened the Antlers Theatre in Helena. The house has been closed since last June, during which time it has undergone a thorough renovating and remodeling to put it in shape for the fall and winter season.

J. M. Hone, executive secretary and treasurer of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners' of Washington, last week announced five new memberships granted in this exhibitor organization, including close to two hundred theatres in the state. The new members are F. S. Barkus of the Anzier Theatre, Seattle; O. L. Klawitter, manager of the Community Theatres circuit of Seattle; E. A. Prickett of the Olympic Theatre, Sequim, Washington; F. J. Talabere, manager of the Legion Theatre at Walla Walla, and A. C. Barclay, owner of the Grand Theatre at Leavenworth, Washington.

Seth D. Perkins, former manager of the Metro-Goldwyn exchange in this city, and now western district representative for that organization, spent several days here last week with C. M. Hill, local manager.

Leo Seltzer, well-known theatre man of the Oregon territory, recently announced plans for the construction of a new 750-seat motion picture house in a prominent neighborhood district of Portland. Plans have already been completed and work started on the house during the month of November.

L. A. Todd, manager of the Interstate Film Exchange at Spokane, a State Right office, spent a few days here on Film Row last week.

Waldo C. Ives, formerly associated with the Famous Players exchange, and now entitled to the distinction of Washington's youngest theatre owner and manager, through his connection with the Empire Theatre in Anacortes, was last week reported to have taken on additional enterprises. It was announced that he has purchased the interest of H. E. Ulsh in the motion picture house at Mount Vernon, heretofore owned jointly by Mr. Ulsh and O. O. Ruth. Mr. Ives spent several days in this city early this month.

R. Clint "Monty" Montgomery, well-known thespian and film salesman of the Northwest, last week announced the severance of his associations with W. H. Drummond's local Producers Distributing Corporation exchange, in order to take on the task of sales representative for the Western Film Corporation of this city.

Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Downard and Robert Pryde, residents of Red Lodge, Montana, have announced the construction of a moderate-sized house in that town. It is expected to be opened shortly.

Among the out of town exhibitors who spent the recent week-end in Seattle were Hugh McCredie, owner and manager of the Venetian Theatre in Portland, and Geo. Hunt, theatre magnate of Medford, Oregon.

Denver

F. H. (RICK) RICKETSON, retiring manager of the Rialto and Victory theatres, was surprised last Monday night by all the employees of the above theatres who called on him to stage a farewell party. More than forty couples attended. A. H. Vincent, who succeeds Mr. Ricketson, was toastmaster, and Wiles Hallock, assistant to Mr. Vincent, presented Rick with a scarf pin as a token of regard on behalf of the theatre employees. Rick recently severed his relations with the Paramount houses so that he could devote his entire time to the management of the chain of D. & R. theatres.

B. P. McCormick, owner and operator of the Liberty theatre, Florence, Colorado, and the Jones Opera House, Canon City, Colorado, has accepted a challenge to debate before the Women's Club of Florence. Mr. McCormick will champion the powers of the screen in an argument entitled, "Power of the Screen vs. The Press." His opponent will be the editor of the Florence Daily Citizen. The affair will take place Monday night.

Fred Lind, formerly assistant manager and booker for F. B. O., is taking a trip over the Western Slope visiting his exhibitor friends.

James S. Hommel, manager for Producers Distributing Corporation, took a short trip to Colorado Springs and Pueblo during the week. J. H. Ashby, First National Manager, made a run to Fe on a business trip.

M. C. Gerhart of the Empress theatre, Ft. Collins, Colorado, is rapidly improving from his recent illness resulting from an operation in which, it will be recalled, he was on the operating table for some two hours and forty-five minutes. A number of managers called upon Mr. Gerhart a week ago and found him sitting up and in the best of spirits. He stated that he was expecting to be out doing his work as usual within two weeks.

Eugene Gerbase, Universal manager, was painfully burned a few days ago when an accumulation of gas exploded while he was attending his furnace. The right side of his face and shoulders were burned by the flame. Mr. Gerbase, however, was down on the job as usual, not having missed a single hour's work on account of the accident.

Charles R. Gilmour, local Warner Bros. Manager, held a "peppy" sales meeting this week. His salesmen, Bob Ryan, R. L. Harris, and E. J. Lustig were all in for the meeting.

C. H. Reeder, former exhibitor a LaVoye, Wyoming, has taken over the L. & A. theatre, Edgerton, Wyoming.

James Gilmour has accepted a position as salesman with the Associated Exhibitors. Mr. Gilmour was formerly associated with F. B. O. and is well known in all parts of the Denver territory.

Kansas City

IF the M.P.T.O. Kansas-Missouri fails to reach its goal of 500 active members it will be no fault of C. E. "Doc" Cook, business manager. Scarcely had "Doc" returned from a tour over the territory, that he departed November 16 for another 10-day jaunt. He will visit exhibitors in Southern Kansas and Western Missouri.

Fire of undetermined origin destroyed the Grand theatre of Moberly, Mo., early November 16, the loss being estimated at $150,000. The fire also destroyed adjoining buildings.

The Empire theatre, Chillicothe, Mo., last week was purchased by Sam Minich, owner of the Electric theatre of that city, for $24,000. The deal will become effective January 1. A lease held on the Empire has several months to run, it is understood. Mr. Minich plans to remodel the house.

C. H. Badger of the Stebbins Picture Supply Company, Kansas City, is responsible for the statement that the supply business is better than in several years previous.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market last week were: Mr. and Mrs. H. Winkler, Main street, Lexington, Mo.; E. E. Frazier, Grand, Pittsburg, Kas.; Harry McClure, Strand, Emporia, Kas.; L. Brenninger, Crystal and Cozy, Topeka, Kas.; A. Hawkins, Banks, Lenexa, Kas.; W. E. Shilket, Rex, Joplin, Mo.; Mr. and Mrs. W. Christian, Casino, Excelsior Springs, Mo.; G. E. Earl, Strand, Eskridge, Kas.

The Orpheum theatre, Kansas City, combination motion picture and vaudeville house, set a new precedent last week when the entire vaudeville bill was held over for another week. This is the first time in history that the order of booking at that house has changed and thus far the bill has been received by capacity houses this week.

A north wind added to the briskness along Kansas City's movie row last week. C. E. Allen, assistant P. D. C. branch manager, returned from a trip through his territory. George Hartman, Educational representative, will resign soon to enter a new business. C. A. Schultz, P. D. C. branch manager, made a hurried business trip to Wichita, Kas., but returned in time to meet J. M. Flinn, home office representative. Ben Blotcky Paramount branch manager, has been busy with the duster since returning from the recent sales convention of his organization in Chicago. Bob Gary, Universal exploiteer, is back in town. Harry Taylor, Universal branch manager took to the road himself to pocket a few contracts. W. E. Truog of Kansas City, Universal district manager, visited the Omaha and Des Moines offices and found business good, while O. H. Lambert, Metro-Goldwyn office manager, returned with the same report from the territory. Frank Cassil, Associated Exhibitors branch manager, has assigned B. O. Whittaker to Western Missouri, M. C. Seneft to Northern Kansas and Fred A. Dohr to Southern Kansas. "Gib" Jones, Metro-Goldwyn booker, was showing onlookers how to "take" the corners in his new Chevrolet. So good has business been of late that the Universal branch is enlarging its quarters at Eighteenth and Wyandotte streets.

Atlanta

FRED L. FREEMAN of Live Oak, Fla.; A. H. McCarty of the Mildred Theatre, Barnesville, Ga., and Chas. P. Bailey, manager of the 81 Theatre, Atlanta, are among the exhibitors in this territory building or remodeling their theatres this month. The Consolidated Amusement Company of Lenoir City, Tenn., headed by C. E. Hughes, are planning on several important features, including an expensive pipe organ, to go in their new theatre at Athens, Tenn., which will be opened November 27th. In Atlanta, the new West End Theatre, a suburban house being built by Arthur Lucas, prominent film executive and theatre owner, and his associates, will be ready for opening next week.

A dramatic touch was given the regular weekly meeting of the Atlanta Film Board of Trade, Monday noon, when the portrait of the late James J. Burke, Jr., which occupies a place of honor in the Board's assembly room, was wreathed in flowers. That day marked the first anniversary of Jim's death and George R. Allison, newly installed president of the Board, fittingly arranged the silent tribute to his memory.

Loew's Vendome Theatre in Nashville, Tenn., which was closed last month for a short time to be remodeled and redecorated, opened again last week. It is understood that about $50,000 was spent in overhauling and refurnishing the house. Howard Price Kingsmore manages Loew's Vendome.

Loew's Grand Theatre, which has been undergoing a course of redecorating and refurnishing during the past three weeks without interfering in any way with the daily program of pictures and vaudeville, will be ready for what will be called a "Fall Opening Week" on Monday, November 30th.

C. J. Sonin, general purchasing agent for Loew's, Inc., and the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Corporation, arrived in Atlanta early in the week to pay the local Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exchange a short visit.

O. K. Bourgeois, who has been local manager of Associated Exhibitors' interests in this territory for the past several months, severed his connection with that company last week, and will become a salesman for Pathe, traveling out of Atlanta. Mr. Bourgeois is succeeded by W. G. Minder, who was formerly a salesman for Flim Booking Offices in this territory.

Raymond R. Miller, who took over the management of the Alamo No. 2 in August, when Matt Whitam resigned to accept a managerial position with Famous Players in West Palm Beach, Fla., will terminate his connection with the Alamo No. 2 this Saturday.

Ira P. Gillette, head of the motion picture department of the Eastman Kodak Company, spent several days in Atlanta last week-end on his way to the Coast.

Work on the Wescon Company's new theatre in Birmingham, Ala., is progressing with good strides, it is reported. The new house will be called the Picadilly Theatre, and while small, will be first-class in every respect.

Metro-Goldwyn's Atlanta exchange will celebrate the first two weeks in January, beginning the 3rd and 10th respectively, as "Jimmie Hanlon Weeks," and already comes the report that business from his host of exhibitor friends is pouring in to put this popular manager's sales drive emphatically over the top.

Charles E. Kessnich, district manager for Metro-Goldwyn in the southern territory, has inaugurated the drive for "Managers' Week" in Atlanta, New Orleans, Dallas, and Oklahoma City.

Sammy Mayer, popular young athlete and salesman for Associated Exhibitors, traveling out of the Atlanta office, was in town several days this week. He left for his territory during the week-end.

James Hamilton, of the Hamilton-Beach Company, is recovering this week from a very painful cut in his hand, The accident occurred in his work-shop, and it was necessary to take seven stitches in the wound.

Jimmie Hanlon, Metro-Goldwyn's energetic branch manager in the Atlanta exchange, just returned to the city after having made a trip through their Florida territory.

Ernest Neiman, representative for Producers Distributing Corporation in this territory, will remain in Atlanta quite a while on his present trip, it is understood.

Bill Sharp, who travels for United Artists in this territory, arrived in town early in the week.

P. C. Parrish, manager of the Atlanta office of the Southern Theatre Equipment Company, left early in the week on a business trip to several points.

James Buchanan, who films news for Pathe in this territory, returned to Atlanta early in the week.

Hank Hearn, manager of Liberty Film Distributing Corporation's local exchange, was operated on in the St. Joseph's Infirmary last Tuesday. He is reported as doing nicely, and expects soon to be at work again.

W. E. Callaway, southern district manager for First National Pictures, with headquarters in New Orleans, stopped off in Atlanta for a few hours, Tuesday, on his way to attend a special conference at the home office.

J. J. Durfield, Metro-Goldwyn's salesman for the Florida territory, arrived this week with Jimmie Hanlon, branch manager of the Atlanta exchange, from Florida.

M. J. Mullins, purchasing agent for Southern Enterprises, Inc., left town Wednesday for Jacksonville, to remain there a short while. Mr. Mullins was accompanied by S. E. Posey, also of Southern Enterprises.

L. J. Davies, representative for F. A. Leatherman in Birmingham, came to Atlanta for several days this week on business.

Jack Elwell of the local Metro-Goldwyn exchange, left town the first of the week to be gone several days.

Cleveland

THE Cameo, the ninth and the newest picture theatre of Loew's Ohio theatres, opened its doors to the public the day before Thanksgiving. The new Cameo used to be the old Star Theatre. But all that remains of the original burlesque house are the walls. Everything else is new. The house is located on Euclid Avenue, in the heart of the shopping district. It has about 1,250 seats. The Cameo will play a straight picture policy. Fred Coddington has been appointed manager of the Cameo Theatre. And J. E. Murdock, formerly associated with the Crandall theatres in Washington, D. C., has been appointed manager of the Mall, succeeding Coddington. The other local theatres operated by Loew's Ohio theatres are the Stillman, Allen State, Park, Mall, Alhambra, Liberty and Doan.

Bill Raynor, manager of Reade's Hippodrome, is surely going to hang up his stocking this Christmas eve. The other day he lost his diamond stick pin, and anyone who wants to get into Bill's good graces can do so by just slipping another one like it into the hanging sock.

"Mayor" Frank Kelly of the Lincoln Theatre, Massilon, was in Cleveland last week on a very pleasant mission. He came to get his wife from a local hospital and take her home for Thanksgiving.

Edward F. Allman, manager of the Pike Theatre in Dover, was in town recently.

"Doc" Brody's newest theatre, the Cedar-Lee, will open on or about Christmas day. This will be a 1,200 seat picture house located in the exclusive Cleveland Heights residence district, and will be the second theatre on the Heights. The other one is called the Heights, and is operated by Louis Israel. There are no Sunday pictures on the Heights. Dr. Brody has built three other fine neighborhood theatres within the past few years.

Lew C. Thompson has been named district supervisor of sales for Associated Exhibitors. He will cover the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, Indianapolis and Detroit offices, with headquarters in Cleveland. Thompson has been in charge of city sales for Producers Distributing Corporation. Tom Colby is Cleveland exchange manager for Associated. C. S. Littman has been appointed salesman for the Youngstown territory, E. A. McAuliffe covers the Akron territory, and O. G. Yeisley covers Toledo and its environs.

Ned Holmes, director of exploitation for Fox Film Corporation, was in the city last week and while here, he, together with Roger Ferri, resident Fox exploiteer, effected a local newspaper tie-up.

Joe Ferte has resigned from the Associated Exhibitors sales force, to cover the city for Producers Distributing Corporation. There's a reason why Ferte is in great demand, for he has a "golden voice." Listen in some night to Station WTAM.

We have a new exchange in Cleveland. It is called the Ivanhoe Film and Vaudeville exchange and is operated by two boys who have been in the film business for a considerable time. J. E. Greenley, formerly with the Fischer Film Company, is one of the partners, and the other is Nate Schultz, previously with the Cleveland Lande exchange.

The Fischer Film Exchange has outgrown its initial location on the main floor of the Film Exchange building and has moved to larger quarters in No. 518 of the Film Exchange building.

E. W. Kramer, Universal's new sales manager, made his maiden trip to Cleveland last week in that capacity. It was just a one-day visit to visit local exchange Manager Al Mertz.

J. S. Jossey of Progress Pictures took his newly painted Wills St. Clair out into the territory last week to make some personal visits on the exhibitors.

A. E. Davies, formerly with the sales force of the Cleveland office of the Progress Pictures Company, has been transferred to the Cincinnati office of that company, where he will be associated with "Baron" Hirsch, who last week assumed the title and the responsibilities of Cincinnati branch manager.

CONSTRUCTION & EQUIPMENT DEPARTMENT

Owner Should Inspect Specifications

Points For Exhibitors To Consider In Sizing Up Clarity and Fairness

By H. Robins Burroughs, Theatre Engineer

THE subject of specifications is one that is usually not given much attention by owners, who contemplate building. This is probably due to the fact that specification work is considered more or less technical and is something that the average owner feels that he is not qualified to pass upon. This may be true to a certain degree but on the other hand, if he were purchasing an automobile, for instance, which is admittedly a technical subject, considerable attention and study would be given to the specifications of any given automobile or automobiles which it might be contemplated to buy. This point may be illustrated by a remark made to the writer by a theatre owner who had taken sufficient interest in the construction of his theatre to familiarize himself with the various angles of construction, some of which were more or less technical, and particular reference was made to the purchase of two projection machines. The question was raised as to the whys and wherefores of certain parts of this machine to which it was answered that this particular manager to whom he was talking was not familiar with the subject. The owner replied that, were he in the manager's position, he would know all about just how the machine worked. So it is with owners who are really managers of their construction work. They should interest themselves at least to the extent of knowing in a general way the different types of construction and be able to judge their value to such a degree that, when they authorize work to be done or sign contracts, they know that the amount of cost involved is approximately correct.

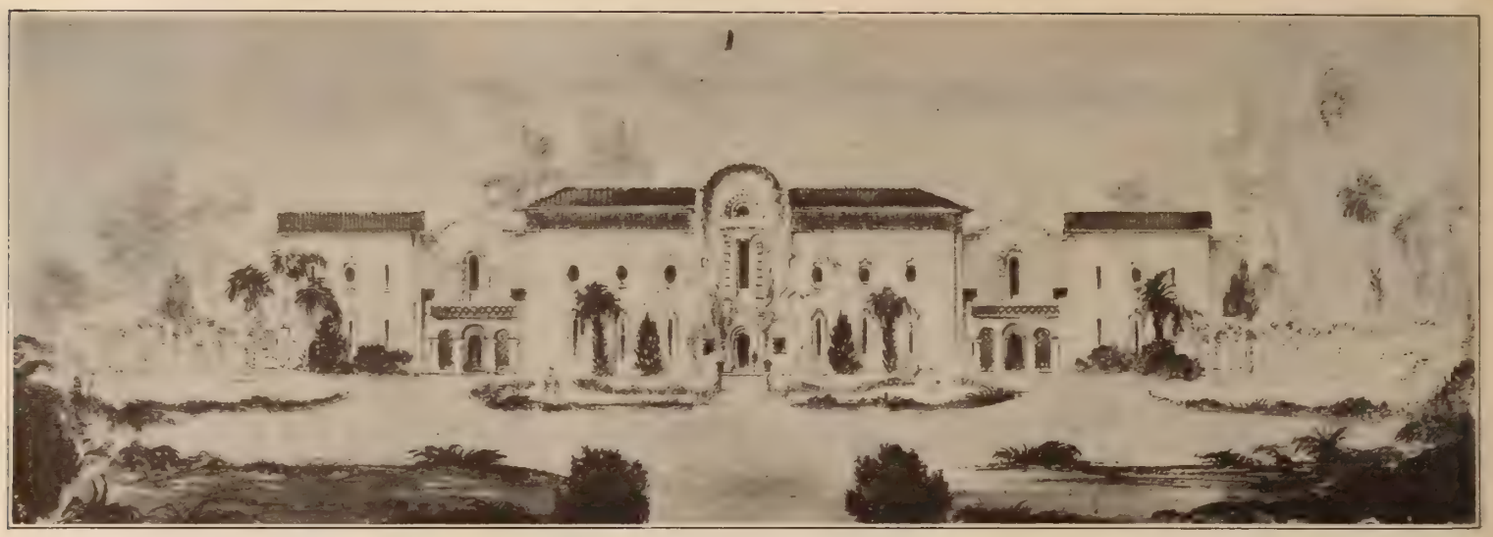
It may not occur to every building owner who reads these lines that a specification is really a part of the contract. No one would think of signing a contract without a careful reading of each paragraph, yet frequently the same men, who are accustomed to give the most careful consideration to a building contract, will affix their names or initials to specifications without reading them carefully. This is a mistake from every reasonable point of view. It may be that the specifications are bulky and usually make dry reading. They offer, however, an effective cure for insomnia but for the investor or owner to ignore them on the supposition that all architects or engineers write good specifications is probably paying too high a compliment to them. While it is true that a determined effort is being made by some of the engineers and architects, who are striving with the help of good contractors to standardize specifications, and the technical magazines are supporting this effort in a very helpful spirit, it is nevertheless a fact that many specifications which are issued in connection with important projects are carelessly drawn, full of contradictions or overlappings and are excellent illustrations of the art of "passing the buck." It would be an interesting subject for investigation by laboratory or psychology to trace a reason for the intellectual laziness in this field which leaves to someone else the work of writing the specifications or the job of looking them over before they are issued to the builders. Lest the writer be misunderstood, he would admit that possibly he too has been guilty of this so-called intellectual laziness in this field of construction practice. He remembers very carefully the strain of specification writing made doubly hard because of a cordial dislike for the task and a preference for the graphical side of the work, but he had to learn his lesson in due time and that lesson was to the effect that success in practice must be achieved by scrupulous care in attending to the prosaic or uninteresting phases of routine office work. This may seem more or less like preaching a doctrine but it actually is nothing more or less than sound common sense. The writer believes that poor specification writing contributes to the high cost of building. There is no doubt about that. It is consequently with sincere convictions on the subject that he addresses himself to the investor.

It is not possible in the small amount of space allotted to a brief article to completely de-

CREDITS

THE credit situation is clearing up most encouragingly throughout all phases of this industry. The last strong hold of poor credits is being successfully attacked with promises of a complete victory in the not distant future. This latest trend toward better business methods is the result of a concerted effort on the part of important equipment manufacturers who are now demanding payment of goods sold on terms in agreement with established precedents of other industries. This procedure is a mighty good thing for everybody concerned, even those who derive the benefits—if they actually were that—from unbusiness like credits.

It was only a short time ago that credits were the very bugaboo of the motion picture industry. Eventually, however, methods of paying for film, more or less satisfactory both to exhibitors and distributors, were fixed upon. Collections by equipment manufacturers, nevertheless, continued in their former slovenly hit or miss method.



To demonstrate the extreme degree of mistreatment tendered equipment credits, by exhibitors to distributors and distributors to manufacturers, it is sufficient to point out that one of the world's foremost makers of electrical products found the situation so hopelessly involved that they withdrew from this field—in face of the fact that they were doing good business.

This industry is operated on essentially a cash basis—the source of the gross revenue for its entire operation starting with strictly cash customers. It therefore follows that practically cash payments should prevail right on down through. Such a system certainly makes for most healthy and sound business principles and operates to everyone's advantage. There are still exceptions to this sound policy in the equipment field but every indication points to their elimination.

It certainly is a proud day with this industry when it can lay claim to high standards of business methods on a par with the older established industries. Every industry while in the formative stages, goes through practically the equivalent cycles of stabilization. It is the final step when definite credit policies are established.

We can now look forward to many more manufacturers of high grade equipment placing their products before this market—which all tends toward better theatres and bigger business.

Specifications Should Be Inspected

scribe a good specification. It would seem better not to attempt to cover too much ground but to confine this paper to pointing out some of the more common faults which occur and to assist the investor or owner to size up in general the specification in order to appraise its value in clarity, simplicity and fairness. The owner's agent, acting in the capacity of engineer or achitect, is in honor bound to write the specification so that both owner and contractor are treated with equal fairness. If, through carelessness, he makes a contractor feel that with him it is a case of "heads you win, tails I lose," the cost is undoubtedly increased for the reason that the contractor who figures work in competition has to make allowances for careless wording of specifications and has to add a sufficient amount to cover the most extreme interpretation of the plans and specifications. Some specifications are so much inclined this way that one might readily feel that it was done with intention so as to allow a wide range of interpretation unless the bidders are aware of this and make due allowance. However, trouble is sure to follow. In any case the owner is the one who has to pay either in the original contract price or in delays due to controversies between the builder and the architect or engineer.

Frequently, one may find that an engineer or achitect, not having given the proper attention to the standard forms of specification writing and being desirous of getting into his specifications certain paragraphs he has been accustomed to using, proceeds to duplicate some of the subjects in the body of the specifications, which are already covered in the General Conditions. This is not only a useless duplication of effort but it presents an opportunity for conflicting interpretations. The General Conditions, as usually issued and as are issued by the American Institute of Architects, are complete in themselves and nothing should be added except paragraphs required to bring out special points not covered in the standard form. If, for any reason, certain parts of the standard form are unsatisfactory or do not apply to any particular job, these parts that are not applicable may be crossed out and notes should be included calling attention to these cancellations and the paragraphs that have been inserted in their place.

Let us consider some of the reasons why specifications are usually not as well done as the working drawings and details. One of the chief reasons is the fact that specifications are written during the rush of completing the working drawings. There is usually pressure exerted upon the office force to clear up the job and get it out as scheduled to bidders. It may be that the owner is not able to make up his mind about details, certain plans or the exterior or interior design, consequently the work has dragged. Perhaps those preparing the plans have had new work coming in on which it has been desirable to place the same draughtsmen who are engaged in "cleaning up" a set of working plans. As a result, the word is passed along that the job has dragged and consequently is costing more than it should and, in order to balance up, the men must finish up quickly even if night work is required. In the midst of this scramble to complete, the specification writer endeavors to produce a businesslike document, tying together the various trades which are involved in the production of the completed building. Perhaps it should be said that it is a wonder the specifications are as good as they are under those circumstances and, in view of the aforesaid, it might be well to here point out to the owner that he is the one to finally carry the burden if delays are caused by his inability to reach decisions.

Another reason for unsatisfactory specifications and final results is due to the employment on specification work of men who are ranked as designers and are not familiar with the practical side of construction. The artistic designer is supposed to be temperamentally unfit for the task of specification writing. The writer is of the opinion that the designer must of necessity have considerable to do with specification work for the reason that the designer visualizes the finished effect he has worked to achieve. Therefore, to delegate the description of the finished work or kind of construction to be used to one who is not familiar with the results to be obtained is certainly a mistake.

Specifications are required for two reasons: first, to describe the materials to be used in the construction of the building and how they are to be finished, and second, to enable a builder to determine the cost. If the specifications are written so as to make easier the task of the estimator, the cost of will be lower, which means that the overhead expense of the builder will be reduced. Since the owner eventually pays for this overhead, it is to the owner's interests that the architect or engineer prepare his specifications from the estimator's viewpoint. This may appear to be self-evident. However, it is no exaggeration to state that only a small percentage of specification writers concern themselves with this point of view. Another common weakness among writers of specifications is the tendency to "pass the buck" or introduce so-called jokers in the specifications. One of the clauses frequently used in this connection may be mentioned as follows: "The contractor must supply everything required to complete a first-class job whether or not specified." Another clause which often is a source of trouble is to describe a certain piece of workmanship and finish for a certain section of the building and to add the words "unless otherwise specified." This is the direct result of the aforementioned intellectual laziness plus an unwillingness on the part of the architect or engineer to assume responsibility. In as much as the responsibility for success or failure must be charged to him, it should be assumed by him from the beginning and consequently the bidders should be furnished a complete and accurate schedule of all work to be done.

Another term frequently used in specification work is "or equal." In certain instances this may be obligatory. It cannot be claimed that the use of these words is due to laziness on the part of the writer or his desire to "pass the buck." It is usually the outcome of an effort to preserve competition even when the preference for a certain material is indicated. A builder, let us assume, decides to take a chance while preparing estimates by ignoring the article directly specified and substituting another which he intends to claim as being within the "or equal" required. The specifications

Standardized Screen Brightness

PART II

EXCESSIVE illumination of the screen in the general run of Motion Picture Theatres, which has at last stirred up activity directed toward the end of arriving at some kind of standardization of screen brightness, is costing the motion picture industry thousands of dollars annually.

This evil plays no favorites and strikes producers, exhibitors and theatre patrons alike. With the first two groups it is a matter of financial loss entailed by waste and in the last it involves acute discomfort and the likelihood of serious impairment to vision. In extreme cases loss of patronage with its consequent effects down along the line, is the ultimate outcome.

Small wonder, then, that responsible bodies like the Society of Motion Picture Engineers and large producing companies alive to the dangers underlying this pernicious practice are considering measures to assist in eliminating it. It is a good sized job, that is true. A tremendous amount of educational work must be done before the average exhibitor can be made to see the advantages of using a safe and sane intensity of screen illumination.

At this point, however, we are a little ahead of our story. Aside from the necessity of selling exhibitors and projectionists alike on the idea there remains to be evolved a practical method whereby a practical standard for screen brightness can be established. The problem has many angles.

Any talk of a standard screen brightness immediately opens up the question of a standard film density. It is useless to talk standardization when the density of film at present released by exchanges varies all over the lot and then back again.

Steps have been taken by certain producers to use a constant standard intensity of light for printing purposes. Some progress has been made along these lines already but the difficulty lies in convincing a sufficiently large percentage of them to follow the practice of a constant, well regulated, printing intensity.

Passing the Buck

The usual argument of a certain class of producers, when approached with this end in mind, is that no good can result from regulating the density of film as long as the conditions of projection vary as greatly as they do. The film which is projected with an intensity of four foot-candles in one theatre may easily encounter 10 to 12 foot-candles in the next. It is obvious that in one of these two theatres the picture will be either brilliantly illuminated or greatly under-illuminated.

The usual arguments such as condition and type of screen surface and conditions of local surroundings are also advanced to support the main one of widely varying projection intensities encountered. There is a certain amount of logic in this line of reasoning. It is true as far as it goes. The point that is overlooked is this. The producing companies, in a way, represent the source of this evil. Widely varying film densities practically render it necessary for the exhibitor to overpower his projectors so as to be prepared to meet all conditions of film and at the the same time provide him with a powerful argument wherewith to resist efforts to have him to change.

That argument should be taken away from him.

Standard film density comes first. After that we can talk standard screen brightness.

Exhibitor's Loss

The exhibitor's interest in this matter lies in effecting economies of operation in addition to being able to present pictures so as to bring out fine effects on which the producer has expended much time and money to incorporate in the scenes.

Let us consider the first item—that of lower operating costs—since that is easier to calculate.

In order to be conservative let us place the number of theatres in this country at 14,000.

All of these theatres certainly do not operate on a ten hour daily schedule for six days per week but it would probably be safe to say that the equivalent of 10,000 theatres in this country average a total of sixty projection hours per week.

In some localities theatres operate longer than this but in many others the period is much less. A fair figure, however, would seem to be that given above. The total number of hours operation per year, would therefore be about 3,000 for each theatre, and for 10,000 theatres the total for the country would be 30,000,000.

No projection device is 100 per cent efficient and the projectionist does not live who can attain the same degree of efficiency in his work. Some loss is therefore, inevitable. Suppose every one of these theatres wasted 100 watts of electrical energy during projection of the picture. The total waste for the country would be 3,000,000 kilowatt hours annually and at an average power rate of five cents per kw. hr. this would represent a yearly loss of $150,000.

Now a 100 watt loss in the case of 25 ampere reflector arc would mean an operating efficiency of about 95 per cent. Does it seem probable that projectionists in this country—or any other for that matter are that efficient. If personal observation in a large number of theatres counts for anything we should say that such a figure is indeed highly improbable.

It can be safely said that the average projectionist will not deliver more than 75 per cent of the full value of electrical energy on the screen in the form of light. We know many who are not doing that good.

Somewhere we once saw figures which purported to show that the average size of arc used for projection purposes was of 50 amperes capacity using direct current. We have no idea as to whether or not this figure is correct and for that matter, we doubt whether anyone else has. It seems, however, like a fair average for all the theatres.

A 50 ampere D. C. arc supplied by a motor-generator set would require a total power consumption of about 4,000 watts. If 25 per cent of this energy is lost in projecting the picture to the screen the total loss for the country would be 30,000,000 kw. hr. at a cost of $1,500,000. Surely no small item! There is a strong possibility that the actual loss due to inefficient operation even exceeds this figure.

It is claimed for both the reflector arc and Mazda lamp that savings of from 25 to 75 per cent over the old form of arc can be obtained. Yet with either of these devices a power loss of from 250 to 400 watts is involved due to faulty operation. If every theatre in the country was equipped with one or the other of these two most efficient projection means, a total loss of from $450,000 to $600,000 would probably be involved. It is our guess that in excess of $2,000,000 is annually wasted due to inefficient devices and methods of projection.

All that has been said so far has to do with natural losses which can hardly be avoided unless expert projectionists be employed in every theatre.

In addition to the large waste which occurs due to natural factors of operation, the exhibitors are voluntarily saddling themselves with the burden of a far greater waste by using power in excess of that required for same projection results and by accepting, or promoting, such designs of theatres that the most powerful projection devices are required to supply a picture no brighter than could be provided by a more economical projection lamp used at a shorter distance.

It is unusually the case, when improvements in any device are wrought, to use such improvements for securing better operating results rather than lower costs. This has occurred time and again in the lighting industry where the improvements in the way of increased efficiency in incandescent lamps has invariably been applied to secure higher intensities of illumination, rather than a lower cost of operation.

So also with the projection field. Coupled with this fact we have the natural proclivity of the exhibitor to over exert himself in securing a bright picture, no matter what the projection device be.

It would be useless to attempt even a wild guess as to the power waste which yearly occurs due to "overshooting" but it is intended in future articles to outline a method for arriving at a desirable value of screen brightness.

Kunsky Opens New Theatre At Detroit, Mich.

With the opening of the new State theatre at Detroit, Mich., on Thursday night, October 29th, John H. Kunsky has added another beautiful house to his already powerful circuit. The reported cost of this new house is $2,000,000.

Beauty, harmony and comfort have been the keynotes in the construction of the State. Marble pillars rise from the floor and the well chosen drapes that hang from the walls and pillars, harmonize perfectly.

Deep carpets, worked in blue on a red background, cover the floors, staircases and aisles and add to the comfort of the patrons. The color scheme throughout the playhouse is blue and gold with a delicate touch of pink. The theatre chairs are particularly restful and have been placed far enough apart to insure plenty leg room.

Howard O. Pierce who is in charge of all the Kunsky stage presentations, fairly outdid himself in preparing an elaborate program and stage settings for the first night audience.

The State orchestra which is equal in size to that of the Capitol, will be in charge of Herbert Straub, former conductor at the Madison theatre. Edward Werner, conductor at the Capitol was the guest director of the overture.

The huge Wurlitzer organ is mounted on a special platform, raised and lowered from view by the means of hydraulic lifts. The orchestra platform is controlled in a similar manner.

The picture policy of the State will be the same as the Capitol, that of continuous performances daily from noon to eleven p. m. with the Kunsky scale of popular prices prevailing.

Vacant Seat Indicators Proving Help to Exhibitors

The Guerin Theatre Seating System, Inc., manufacturers of vacant seat indicators report that their latest model has been received enthusiastically by all exhibitors who have had an opportunity to use it. It is claimed for this seating system that the time required for ushering is reduced seventy-five percent and enables ushers to signal just how many seats there are and whether singles, doubles, etc. in any part of the house, thus, it is pointed out eliminating constant walking up and down aisles by ushers. The feature, it is said, that appeals most strongly to the theatre manager is the fact that through this system a maximum number of seats in the house can be kept filled thereby decreasing standees.

St. Louis Building Program Totals 10,000 Seats

The new St. Louis Theatre, Grand boulevard at Morgan street, St. Louis, Mo., will be opened on November 23, Clarence Williams, manager, has announced officially.

The house will be operated by the Orpheum Circuit as a combination first-run motion picture and high class vaudeville theatre. It was built by the Metropolitan Theatre Corporation at a cost of $2,000,000 and is the third largest in the United States, seating 4,100 persons.

Construction has started on the St. Louis-Gravois Theatre at Gravois and Ellenwood avenues in South St. Louis. The project will cost approximately $1,000,000 and will seat 1,850 persons. There will be 450 seats in the mezzanine balcony.

This project was promoted by Reuben Levine of Chicago and the Gohman-Levine Construction Company, Chicago, are the builders.

Fred Wehrenberg also plans to start construction shortly on his new house at Grand avenue and Bates street. He also has plans for a new house at Grand boulevard and Meramec street. These houses will have a combination seating capacity of 3,500 persons.

C. Sharpe Minor, nationally known Organist will incorporate his ideas with those of The Link Organ Co.

Marr And Colton Organ Co. Report New Sales

The Marr and Colton Organ Company of Warsaw, N. Y., have recently installed instruments in the following theatres: The Elk Theatre, Mahanoy City, Pa., Messrs. Oppenheimer and Sweet at Shenandoah, Pa. and Wilmer and Vincent's New State, Altoona, Pa. Other installations include the New Thurston Theatre, Rochester, N. Y., The Winter Garden at Jamestown, operated by Peterson and Wood, the Zaring Egyptian Theatre, Indianapolis, Ind., and the New Hinsdale Theatre at Hinsdale, Ill.

The Guerin Theatre Seating System, Inc., of New Orleans, La., claim their latest model Indicators reduce ushering seventy-five percent.

Link-C. Sharpe Minor Unit Organs Placed on Market

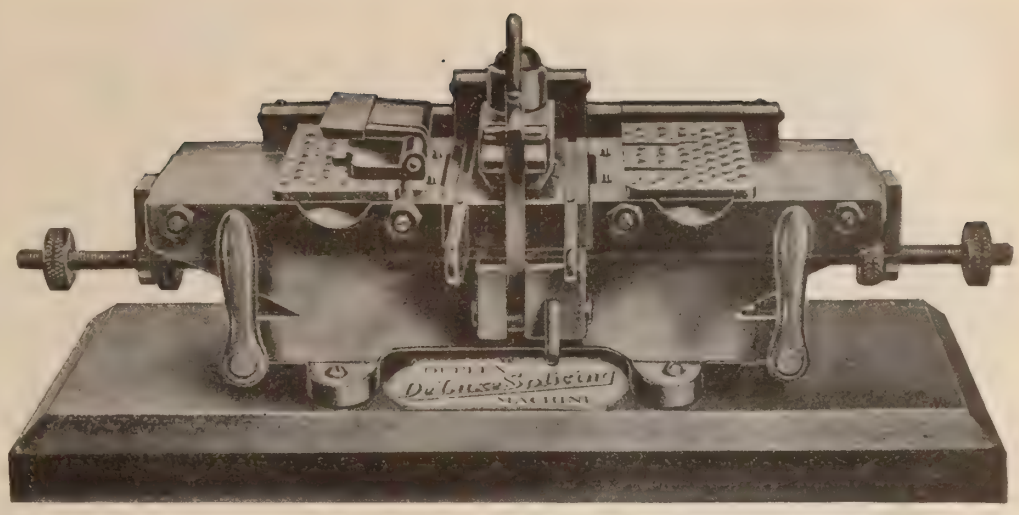
C. Sharpe Minor, theatre organist of national repute has recently successfully terminated his long planned initiation into the field of theatre organ manufacturing, as this noted organist has recently become affiliated with the Link Company, one of the oldest manufacturers of musical instruments. This combination of Link and Minor is now manufacturing Link-C. Sharpe Minor Unit Organs which it is claimed incorporate both the features of the Link Company standards and original ideas of Mr. Minor. It is said that this new unit organ is successfully finding its place in motion picture theatres.

C. Sharpe Minor, it will be recalled, enjoyed a nation wide reputation, and during his career played practically every type and style of organ manufactured. Mr. Minor started his business career as an automobile salesman at Seattle and decided to join the Musicians' Union and cultivate his love for music. It was not long afterwards that he was engaged as pianist in Jenson and Von Herberg's Mission Theatre in Seattle. From that start, his interpretation of the photoplay pleased Mr. Jenson and he was soon made chief organist at the Liberty Theatre. It was from this start that his rather meteoric career led him to the enviable position of the highest salaried theatre organist in the country.

The motion picture industry will watch with interest, the future career of this well known organist now that he has definitely entered the field of organ manufacturing in combination with the well known musical instrument makers.

Trend Toward More Space In Projection Rooms

The Hertner Electric Company finds that the old cramped projection room is becoming a thing of the past. In the theatre of to-day it is the general practice to allow much more space and the transverter, itself, has some bearing on this on account of specifications calling for the horizontal instead of the vertical type.



Recent installations of Hertner Transverters include the Marshall Theatre, Maplewood, Mo.; Crown Theatre, Houston, Tex.; Loew's Burland Theatre, New York City; New Linden Theatre, Columbus, Ohio; Kenmore Theatre, Inc., Buffalo; The Princess Theatre, North Little Rock, Ark., and The Orange Theatre, Orange, N. J.

"Simplex Service for Better Projection" Booklet Issued

A very interesting booklet entitled "Simplex Service for Better Projection" has just been published by the Precision Machine Company, Inc. This bulletin is exceedingly well written presenting valuable information on Simplex Projectors and also contains dissertations on the importance of good projection and services that distributors of Simplex machines are in a position to render their customers. A copy of this booklet may be obtained by writing to the Precision Machine Company, Inc., 317 East 34th Street, New York City, and is well worth the effort of obtaining.

Duplex M. P. Industries, Inc. Now Mfg. Film Splicers

The Duplex Motion Picture Iindustries, Inc., makers of Duplex Deluxe products, one of which is their film splicing machine reports that this particular apparatus has received the approval of numerous projectionists, laboratories, exchanges, etc., wherever motion picture film is spliced. This machine is claimed to be absolutely accurate and practically fool-proof, and makes any size of patch. It is also said that this apparatus is particularly well adapted for rapid splicing to handle both new and sunken negatives. This company is also making a splicing block that is patching machine containing many of the features contained in their Deluxe model, though selling at a much lower price.

Fabian Theatre, Paterson To Hold Premiere

Jacob Fabian, well known theatrical magnate, has announced the completion and forthcoming opening of his newest theatre, The Fabian in Paterson for some time late in November.

There has been much speculation and no little interest in the disposition of this great Fabian building, in the course of construction, on Church street, near Market, for the past few months. Adjoining the Alexander Hamilton Hotel, and located in one of the city's most valuable spots, its quickening into activity is a matter of some moment in Paterson's civic life.

The theatre will be dedicated to the proper presentation of the finest films of the cinema world.

Number fourteen of a dignified chain of houses, the Fabian represents a reported investment of a million and a half dollars. It will have a seating capacity of 4,000, a symphony orchestra, and a Wurlitzer organ.

There is a good bit of sentiment in the forthcoming premiere of this house. John Fabian has his home in Paterson. His sons have grown to manhood there and have become associated with their father in the working out of their theatre-interests. Eleven years ago he opened the Regent Theatre, achieving then the ambitions of theatre-perfection. The Fabian Theatre represents a much higher achievement.

New Theatre at Ilion, N. Y., Opens Nov. 23d

Everything is in readiness for the opening of the new theatre in Ilion on the night of November 23. Robert Pierce, who will manage the house, was along Film Row during the past week, and gave out considerable information regarding the theatre. The house will have a seating capacity of about 1,500 and the fore part of each week will be devoted entirely to pictures, while the last half will be given over to a program of vaudeville. A ten-piece orchestra is to be installed to furnish the music.

provide that the architect or engineer's decision in such a case would be final. The substitution is submitted for approval and disapproved. The builder either loses the contract in the beginning by figuring only on the articles named in the specifications or he loses money eventually through the architect or engineer's ruling; so, in that case, it must be assumed that it is a case of "heads you win, tails I lose" for the builder. This opportunity for ambiguity can be eliminated. What is primarily desired is to secure close competition by having all the builders estimate on the same basis. Consequently, if the architect or engineer prefers a certain article or material but wishes competition among dealers, he need only name in the specifications the article preferred and request bidders to state the addition or deduction which would ensue if any one of two or three articles also mentioned is substituted. This process is a very simple one and yet it offers a perfectly fair basis of competition and comparison of costs. In certain cases it may be possible to specify two or three articles with a simple statement that any one of them would be acceptible. The builder will, of course, supply the one he can secure at the best price, but this leaves the element of competition entirely free and open.

The best specifications are so subdivided into trades that a general contractor can turn over to a sub-contractor that part of the specifications which refers to the particular trade to be figured, together with all drawings that have to do with that trade. It is important that the specification writer should understand the contractor's responsibilities in this connection. By this is meant, the way in which one trade comes in contact with or over-laps the others. Extreme care must be taken so that over-lapping of contracts does not occur.

In conclusion, the writer would advise owners, investors, and others, contemplating building theatres or other buildings, to make certain that, when they employ an engineer or architect, they secure the services of those who will write him complete, economical, clear, fair specifications and that will not lead to controversies and ambiguities. Your specification is your Bible for, after the contract is signed, sealed and delivered, nothing else counts except that which is absolutely and clearly stated in the specifications beyond any possibility of question. Contractors are ever on the alert and it seems to be one of the main objectives of their business to pick to pieces and find flaws in specifications and thereby obtain extras or delays which will ultimately materialize to their benefit.

Goss To Market Equipment From Atlanta

C. K. Ground Broken For New Jamaica Theatre

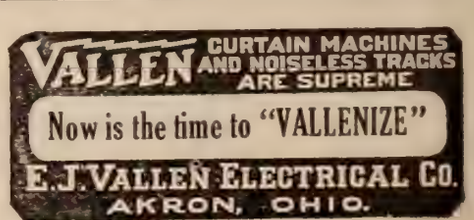
Leases were signed on Monday for the erection of a $1,000,000 theatre in Jamaica by the Tri-United Corporation, Robert A. Wolfe, President, of No. 50 East 42d Street, Manhattan. The design is by Eugene De Rosa, architects, and plans have been filed with the Building Department. The theatre when completed will contain approximately 3,000 seats and will be modern in every respect. The lease is for twenty-one years, with privilege of renewal, and rental is rumored to run into figures in excess of $1,500,000. Contract has been awarded the Glen Cove Construction Co., Inc., Morris Tucker, President.

The opening of the theatre is scheduled for Sept. 1, 1926.



Mr. Wolfe announces that the house will run pictures and vaudeville.

WURLITZER
UNIT ORGANS

The Spice of Picture Presentation!

Three Views of New Lincoln Theatre, Lincoln, Neb.

THE real punch of pictures is organ music—the white streak of lightning through turbulent clouds, the pounding hoofs of racing horses, the silver melody of rippling waterfalls—are inanimate without the thunderous or soft and mellow accompaniment of an organ, and no instrument is as responsive and majestic in effect as a Wurlitzer Organ.

Leadership, whether it be in the production of super-photoplays, precision in the manufacture of equipment, or dependability in organ construction, is established by a recognized superiority over similar products. World leadership in organ building is the direct result of Wurlitzer success in producing an organ of finer tone, a greater volume and wider variety of effects than found in any other organ.

Ask Exhibitors!
Ask Yourself!

why is Paramount's new group of 1926 Spring Pictures being booked faster and wider than any group, Spring or Fall, that Paramount or any other company ever offered before?

IF you're an exhibitor, you know!

YOU know how wise showmen act when they're offered the first and only group of BIG PRODUCTIONS FOR SPRING RELEASE ever known in this business! 30 Showman Specials, including a comedy release from Harold Lloyd, "The Wanderer," "The Vanishing American" and at least 12 other long-run gold-getters—right when you need them most!

EVEN with our formal announcement splash still to come, far-sighted exhibitors are snapping up this group of pictures as fast as they can write their names.

IT'S in the air. It's the talk of the trade. You hear it everywhere:

MANNEQUIN

The Outstandingly Great American Novel of the Year

Starts in this week's Liberty, out today

Greater than "Humoresque"—more heart appealing than "Stardust"

Illustrated by James Montgomery Flagg

FANNIE HURST, artist in laying open the pulse of human emotions, painter with words of the nakedness of life, its heights and depths, its sinister passions and wholesome loves; the woman whose Humoresque exhausted edition after edition in book form, and filled the motion picture theatres of the world to overflow for over two years, has overshadowed even herself in Mannequin, Liberty's great $50,000 prize story starting today.

A story so grippingly true to your own life and your neighbors' that it won in competition against more than 100,000 others submitted . . . so dramatically powerful that the great Famous Players Lasky Studio is adapting it to the screen in one of the greatest productions of the day.

From the time she was 10, this wonderful girl fought every day to protect her virtue

Here is this wonderful girl, the buffet of a Fate which must rank among the most thrilling conceptions in fiction, faced day by day, from the time she was ten years old, with a constant battle for her virtue.

How she does it, how she wins and loses, how she falters in the balance, is told as only Fannie Hurst, of all living writers, could tell it.

$50,000 for an idea

LIBERTY paid $50,000 cash for the "idea" for this remarkable story

Famous Players Lasky are adapting it to the "movies" under personal direction of James Cruze—famous director of "The Covered Wagon."

So gripping, dramatic is the "idea" behind Mannequin, that for the first time in the history of motion pictures, a specially expensive play is being produced from a novel as yet unpublished, DIRECT from an author's manuscript.

Every week actual studio illustrations by James Montgomery Flagg of the Famous Players Lasky Productions will be printed in the story and the play progress.

Start today from the beginning. Follow this remarkable story as it appears. Take your first behind-the-scenes excursion to the making of a great photo-drama from a great novel.

Famous Players Lasky screen production will appear while story is still running in Liberty

So amazing is the "idea" dominating Mannequin that for the first time in screen history a great producing company will produce a play from an unpublished novel.

The Famous Players Lasky have made the radical departure of producing a play direct from the author's manuscript. James Cruse—foremost among directors—director of "The Covered Wagon"—was chosen to direct the production of Mannequin.

That play will be shown in leading Motion Picture Theatres throughout the United States some time during the period that the story is running in Liberty.

It is now in course of production. It is not finished. Thus, for the first time, the public will be taken behind the scenes as a great movie is being produced.

Actual studio illustrations by James Montgomery Flagg to be published weekly

Each weekly installment of Mannequin will carry actual studio illustrations of the Famous Players Lasky production by James Montgomery Flagg.

You can picture, in your own mind, as you go along, how this play is being made; how it is progressing, how well the screen version will follow the play.

Never before has the public thus been initiated in the behind-the-scenes progress of a great film play

Cover by COLES PHILLIPS

The first screen appearance of Mannequin will be at the Chicago Theatre. Watch for announcements

Liberty Magazine has spent $100,000 advertising "MANNEQUIN" in newspapers all over the country! That's in addition to the front covers, double spreads and editorials Liberty has printed in its own columns on this great story. No wonder every man, woman and child who can read, eagerly awaits "MANNEQUIN!"

"Road to Yesterday" Is Road to Success

By William J. Reilly

CECIL B. DE MILLE has roped and thrown a bucking, plunging thought. In the celluloid coils of "The Road to Yesterday" he has firmly caught the idea of RE-INCARNATION. It is one thing to corral an idea with WORDS. Quite another to lasso it with PICTURES.

There is hardly a man or woman in the world who has not, at one time or another, held the thought that in the dim yesterday he or she lived and loved under ANOTHER GARB and under ANOTHER PERSONALITY.

For that reason ALONE "The Road to Yesterday" will make picture audiences talk. It has every quality of GREATNESS:—the real de Mille directing, story, acting, action, a big PUNCH, heart interest, a PORTABLE, TALKABLE idea.

Trains have been wrecked in feature pictures before. In "The Road to Yesterday" a freight train TELESCOPES the Pullman train carrying a highly DRAMATIC passenger cargo. The audience last Friday at the Embassy midnight showing, most of whom had come to the picture from other theatres, SHOUTED its approval when the freight engine in a HEAD-ON shot, wormed in THROUGH the sleeping car. WRECKAGE that BUILDS.

The picture takes a group of people caught in the grip of a powerful set of MODERN circumstances; develops the action to a climax on the terrific train wreck; and then cuts back to the YESTERDAY when the same characters mixed ale and swordplay, lordly arrogance and gypsy love.

Beulah Marie Dix who wrote the ORIGINAL play with E. G. Sutherland collaborated with Jeanie Macpherson on the film adaptation. The story is IDEAL screen material. We understand that it was long de Mille's AIM to make "The Road to Yesterday" into a picture but that litigation tied up the screen rights. HAPPILY, the story was available in time for his FIRST personally supervised production for Producers Distributing Corporation. You will like Joseph Schildkraut, Jetta Goudal, William Boyd, Vera Reynolds, Casson Ferguson and Trixie Friganza. So will your audiences. Even their feet ACT.

And it is "The Road to Success" for P. D. C. and the exhibitors who have allied themselves with this AGGRESSIVE organization.

EXHIBITORS DAILY REVIEW

WILLARD C. HOWE, Editor

De Mille and the Box Office

HOWEVER doubtful we may be as to the selling power of brands and trade-marks applied to pictures, there can't be any doubting the pulling power, with the whole public, of the name of a man who is everywhere identified, in the popular consciousness, with most unusual pictures. Tie to any series such a name; say to the public, "these pictures were made by and supervised by this man who, as you know, is a master in the making of screen entertainment" and you have a selling leverage of tremendous magnitude.

In all the history of motion pictures there have been few such names to conjure with. Of the few, Cecil B. De Mille ranks top.

This is important to all exhibitors. Because De Mille is getting into his stride. He has a happy lineup. He is in position to exercise his genius without hindrance. He is in position to make pictures that can carry his name without apology.

Under such circumstances, the De Mille name should be capitalized to the limit by every theatre playing the product. Taken alone, it will prove the most effective sort of exploitation. The public will respond, because the public associates De Mille with pictures it enjoys.

Speaking Editorially

WE sat in the crowded Embassy Theatre the other night and saw Cecil B. De Mille's first independently produced picture, "The Road to Yesterday." The hour was very late—in fact it was midnight when proceedings began and quite a little distance into the morning when they ended. But the picture held—every foot of the way.

All the De Mille magic was present. For thrills, there is a sensational train wreck,—quite the best the screen has ever seen. There is a love story, which gains through transition back to "Yesterday" and again back to modern times; it is well-acted, elaborately staged; compelling; highly interesting. Everything in this picture has been done well. It hits the mark—artistically, dramatically, and box-office wise. A fine picture, a great picture, a credit to De Mille and a golden thing for P. D. C. and the exhibitors who will play it.

MOTION PICTURES

De Mille the Tremendous

CECIL DE MILLE announces on the screen in the introduction to "The Road to Yesterday" that the production is his first as an independent producer. Evidently Mr. de Mille has not joined the ranks of those who like to consider independence as a new name for applesauce. He's proud of his independence and the independent movement is justly proud of Cecil de Mille.

"The Road to Yesterday" is in many respects the greatest box office picture ever produced. It has size, importance, power and thrill—absolutely smashing thrill. It is lavishly made and one tried and true thing is done so much bigger and so much better than ever it was done before, that it proves the greatness of the man who did it. This is a railroad wreck that brings the spectators to their feet and sets them applauding in sheer astonishment and admiration.

An engine telescopes a coach and for all practical purposes the audience is in that coach.

Joseph Schildkraut mars a brilliant performance by an atmosphere of bursting conceit, and, in contrast, William Boyd just walks away with the honors.

Vera Reynolds rises to the highest peaks of excellence as the story unfolds and in the role will climb higher in public estimation.

The cast is large and well chosen and in the transposition from the modern to the feudal periods the characters, in new garb grow in the power of their performances.

It is our opinion that the religious dashes in the picture, while dangerous material, will not serve to lessen its popularity.

Taken in its entirety it is an amazing production and Producers Distributing Corporation may be assured that they have a tremendous attraction to offer their customers.

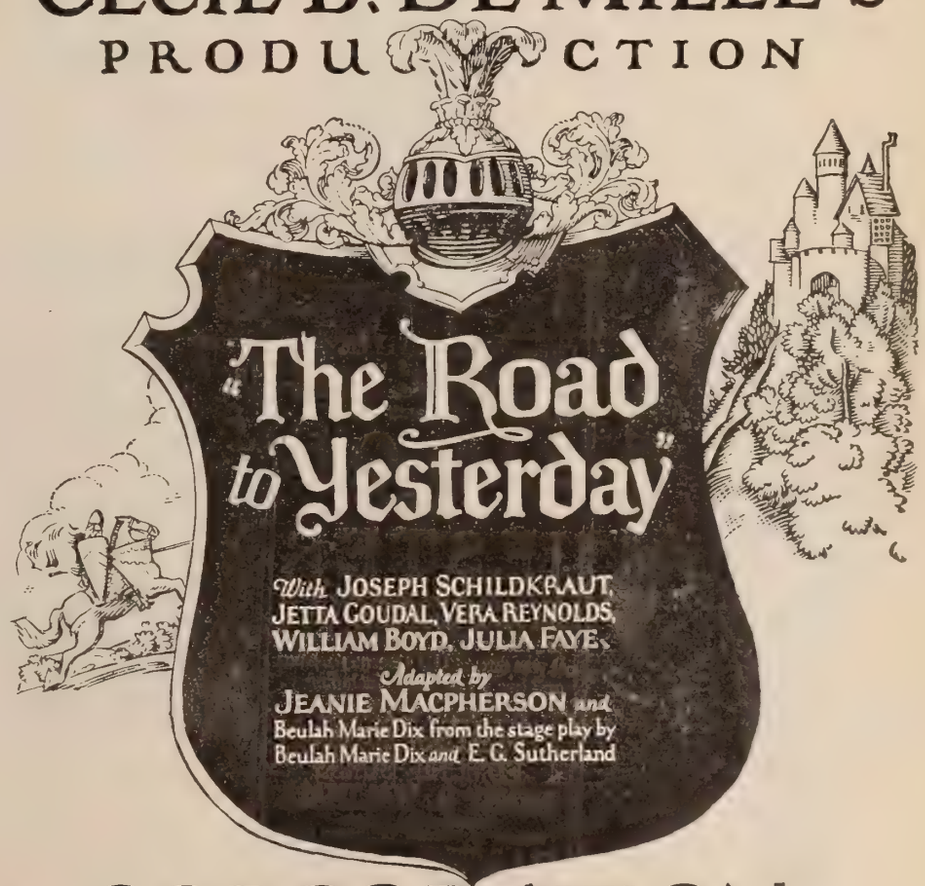
De MILLE

By DANNY



His first big one for Producers Distributing: "The Road to Yesterday," magnificent, typically a DeMille in production a bit too long, but showing the finest, most sensational train wreck ever put on the screen, and photography that is little short of amazing. Plus a splendid cast.

This, in a nutshell, is the first reaction of "The Road to Yesterday." DeMille has turned out a picture which for sheer lavishness easily ranks way on top. Every setting is gorgeous; every opportunity to "dress" the picture is taken advantage of, and DeMille has regarded box office to a material extent in his first for his new alignment.

The train wreck is a triumph. When the big locomotive comes crashing through the screen you feel it is going to plough right down into the audience. On the front, crushed among timber and steel, are two of the cast, and the remainder fight their way through the wreck to safety. But it is a great thrill; a tremendous thrill.

When the story gets into the costume period it slows a bit; there is too much of it; but it finishes to a whirlwind clinch. William Boyd easily is the outstanding member of the cast, although excellent performances are given by practically all of them; Jetta Goudal, Vera Reynolds, and Joseph Schildkraut. But Boyd stands out as a he-man; not a typical movie star, and the women will tumble for him. That's sure. From a production viewpoint DeMille shows all of his former tricks. Each set is beautiful; the costumes are little short of gorgeous, and the photography is marvelous.

To tell the public you are showing Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures is smart showmanship.

M-G-M pictures have leaped into national prominence with one success after another.

Everywhere the talk is Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

In fan magazines, newspapers, reviews.

This mouth-to-mouth advertising is worth money.

The public has to decide between competing attractions.

They're buying tickets for the talked-about pictures that are creating the big reputation of today for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

It's smart showmanship to cash in on this popularity.

Tell them you're showing Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures.

They're looking for the trade-mark in your ads and in your lobby.

The M-G-M trade-mark is an asset.

Smart showmen are wise to how it can swing a ticket-buyer into their theatre, instead of across the street.

The big audience hits bear the M-G-M name.

The talk of the industry.

The talk of the public.

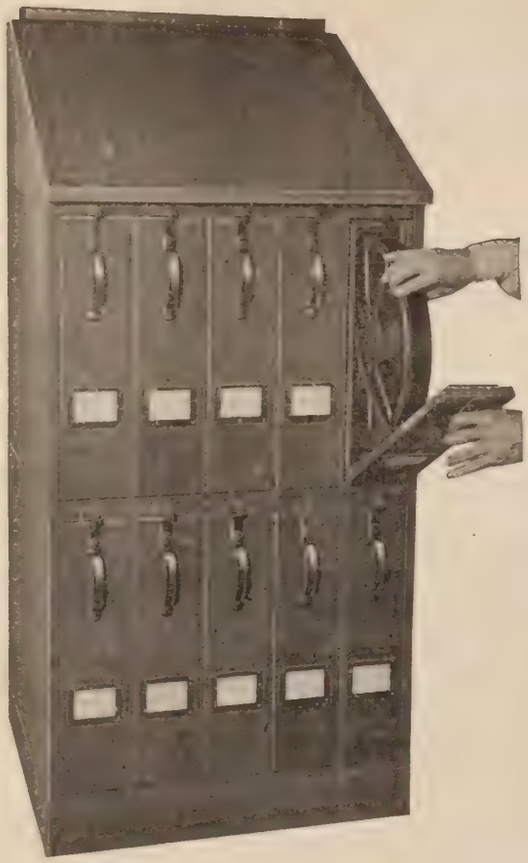
No audience can resist the high-powered, human appeal of "HOGAN'S ALLEY." From every possible angle, this feature is a superlative attraction for the crowds—combining in perfect unity all the ingredients of popular appeal.

Results—not statements—PROVE IT!



Against the strongest type of competition, this feature not only created a house record at Warners Theatre in New York, but is being held over for a second week.

Thrills galore—romance to tug at the toughest heart-strings—comedy that will convulse—everything that the public craves and adores.

It is a great convenience to have a handy receptacle in which to file or to store films.

If the receptacle is fireproof it becomes a real asset for it protects films and property against loss or damage by fire.

When the receptacle possesses these two valuable features, and at the same time pays back an actual profit to the owner it cannot be classed then as other than an unusually good business proposition that no exhibitor can afford to overlook.

That is precisely how many exhibitors have expressed their opinions of the American Film-Safe.

The American Film-Safe
for Studios, Exchanges, Laboratories and Theatres.

American Film-Safes are of Unit Construction so that when once installed they can be added to or rearranged at will.

They are made of full cold rolled sheet steel and are practically indestructible. Exterior surfaces are finished in baked enamel. Standard color is olive green but they may be had in a variety of other finishes.

There are two sizes, style 1100 has five compartments for five 1,000 foot reels. Style 1200 has five compartments for five 2,000 foot reels.

A Few Installations

American Film-Safes are now standard equipment in all Fox theatres and will be installed in all new Famous Players theatres. Other recent installations include:

Saves Its Cost in a Year

The American Film-Safe is the only film receptacle available in this country that has been listed as standard and labelled by the underwriters' laboratories.

Insurance Rating Organizations know the significance of that fact. They make reductions in insurance rates wherever American Film-Safes are installed. In many cases these reductions are so substantial that in one year they amount to more than the total cost of the Safe.

Here's the whole story on Emory Johnson's "THE LAST EDITION"
with
RALPH LEWIS and an all-star cast
Story and continuity by
EMILIE JOHNSON

It's cleaning up for hundreds of theatres. Have you booked it yet?

CLASS A

THE LAST EDITION (F. B. O.). Here is a picture which has literally everything. Melodrama, comedy, pathos, thrills—all in proper proportion. It is entitled to be rated as a "Natural" for the following reasons: It is an Emory Johnson production released by F. B. O. This combination in the past has meant genuine Box Office success for the theatre owner. It is entertainment with a capital "E," being directed in masterly fashion by Emory Johnson, and acted in convincing and natural fashion by Ralph Lewis and the supporting cast. The theme is the sympathetic one of a faithful pressman and his devotion to his paper. His son, a youthful lawyer, secures a position in the District Attorney's office and is framed by a crooked, bootlegging, political boss. As the paper is being printed with this front page story of his son's disgrace, the old pressman discovers it and wrecks the presses. All ends happily however. There are some wonderful fire scenes with the fire department playing water on the flames. These scenes are realistic in the extreme.

Ralph Lewis is perfectly cast as the old pressman and the supporting cast lend him every aid. The picture is entertainment plus, and lends itself to a multitude of exploitation angles. It should prove a potent tonic for any ailing box office.

CLASS B

THE VANISHING AMERICAN (Famous Players). Cut down to normal feature length, this story of Indian life in America featuring Richard Dix, would be of very good entertainment values, and exploited properly could be made into a good

The Super-Theatre

AL WOODS, veteran theatrical producer, makes the statement in a New York newspaper that within two years the stage producers will be making forty-five minute plays for motion picture theatres.

Which may or may not be. But there remains little doubt that, in all the large centres of population, the theatre of the very near future and of the indefinite future will be the modern motion picture palace, whose capacity and appointments seem to know no bounds, and which will call for the best offerings of the whole amusement business.

This is the era of the motion picture theatre; and it is just the beginning of it.

Mr. Woods is wise in his forecast of stage entertainment. It will have to meet, somehow, the demands of the modern movie palace, because the latter is meeting the demands of the public for popular entertainment.

When a motion picture theatre can take in upwards of forty thousand dollars a week the theatre map is going to change to meet this new box-office income.

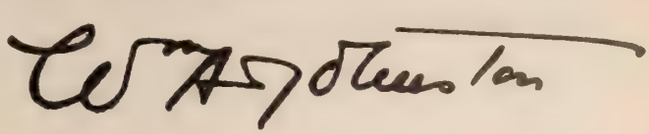
But there must, as we say, be corresponding entertainment to fill these great theatre capacities; and we take this occasion to emphasize again what we have repeatedly pointed out—that not alone the stage but also the screen must rise to this new situation. In other words, we want big pictures; we need a good many of them. And we positively do not want the ordinary feature picture that is just one of the several hundred a year. We do not want the picture of bulk production. Its day is gone. It won't fill seats. It cannot be made nor distributed nor exhibited, at a profit.



The wise producer today is the one who aims, with concentration and a solid policy, at either extreme of the production scale—at either big and expensive and showy pictures or at inexpensive ones. The deadly commodity is the in-between one, not good enough for high prices and too expensive for low prices.

When we speak of the movie palace of the great centres of population we are not, of course, forgetting the thousands of frequent change theatres of the smaller communities which will always and successfully exist when they are not swallowed up by the new theatre palaces of the big centres. These theatres need a lot of pictures: but they want pictures especially made to fit their box-offices. They don't want the picture that fails to meet the exactions of the super-theatre and yet is compelled to ask a rental above its box-office value.

Lots of humdrum pictures are costing too much these days.

The super-theatre is just arriving. It is highly successful. It is going to put a strain on picture making. And our picture producing resources are going to meet the exactions. But not until we discard a lot of policies and ideals that belong to the past, chief among which is the impossible effort to make too many pictures per season.

Speaking Editorially

SAM SPRING, head of the First National sales cabinet, on a tour of the key cities with his associates, reports to the home office that conditions were never brighter. He foresees 1926 as the industry's biggest year. Which tallies with other observations and facts as they are. The motion picture moves steadily along from year to year, but the forthcoming twelve months promise to be even more prosperous than waning 1925—in itself a record-breaker.

A VERY definite indication of conditions in the trade is given in the announcement from Hollywood by Jesse L. Lasky that the Paramount studio facilities are being enlarged in preparation for the biggest production schedule in the company's history. A year ago, at this time, studios were closing down, for a short interval at least. This year the situation is exactly opposite.

OUR predictions as to Sam Rork's "Clothes Make the Pirate" have been amply fulfilled. The picture has proved to be a big hit at the Strand Theatre, New York; so much so that on the opening day it was actually necessary to suspend the sale of tickets for half an hour, so great was the crowd seeking admission. The day's receipts were within easy hailing distance of the Strand record; and the end is not yet.

After this emphatic box-office demonstration—which has been sustained throughout the week—there can be no doubt whatever that the picture will register, in big fashion, with the public wherever it is shown.

IN this issue will be found the announcement of the Associated Exhibitors "Triumphant Thirty." Listed is a group of pictures which any exhibitor will do well to consider—carefully—in making up his booking chart.

Associated is moving along at a rapid pace these days. Vigorous and able showmen are directing its activities. Oscar Price and P. A. Powers have still larger plans in view, of which the industry will hear in due time.

"THE BIG PARADE" is the reigning sensation of Broadway, and road companies will be started out in a short time. On Christmas Eve "Ben Hur" will come into view.

ONE of the events of the week was the special showing by Warners of "Lady Windemere's Fan"—a fine picture which fully reflects the artistry of Ernest Lubitsch, and is a distinct credit to all concerned in its making. There is another Warner special of which one hears much these days: "The Sea Beast," which is being given the term "big." It will present John Barrymore in a vigorous, two-fisted role.

This great actor will then further demonstrate his versatility by starring in "Don Juan," already in production. Another of the important specials which Warner will offer is Sabatini's "The Tavern Knight," again with Barrymore, in still another colorful, different role.

AGAIN, the picture industry is deeply indebted to Ernst Lubitsch and Warner Brothers. "Lady Windermere's Fan" is a piece of screen literature. It is exquisitely done. Never before, to me at least, has the screen fairly talked—and with such a brilliancy, forcefulness and finish. Lubitsch tells in a flash, and with lasting effect, what novels must explain in chapters. This, it seems to me, is the inherent power of the screen. Lubitsch has brought it forth in all its fullness. He is, without any doubt, the foremost screen writer of the day.

AN UNGRIZZLED VETERAN

IN a recent issue of the New York World, in the "Behind the screens" department, an interesting sketch is given of Sidney Olcott, the director, and since that youthful veteran's history runs parallel with the development of this industry, in a large degree some of its highlights should be of interest to our readers. Here are a few extracts:

"He began his career by acting for the Mutascope, that curious little peep-show machine that filled the lobbies of the penny arcades on 14th street. At this form of entertainment you were your own operator as well as audience, for by turning a crank yourself you could watch a succession of miniature dreams with rapid, not to say lurid, plots.

"Mr. Olcott, who was playing in stock companies in the winters, found that you could tide over the long summers by acting in these dramas. The occupation had much the same relation to art as posing for animal crackers had, but it was novel work and entertaining, and Mr. Olcott says he 'liked the crowd.' He is probably the only man in existence, however, who didn't foresee the immense future of the movies (or say he did, at any rate, now that the future has arrived).

" 'I never thought in those days that the Mutascope would be anything but a toy,' says Mr. Olcott. 'But it paid the rent in the summer and provided much merriment for as lively a company of pioneers as you can imagine. Of course, we hadn't the slightest idea that we were pioneers, and it wasn't until the first Kalem Company started that I had some inkling of the marvelous opportunities in these early wavering shadows on the screen.

Fifty youngsters from the orphanage of the Church of the Resurrection, New York City, had a happy time when they were used as extras in Richard Barthelmess' new Inspiration picture "Just Suppose" for First National.

Vera Steadman and Olive Hatch, two of the girls at the Christie studios who won events at the recent Alamitos Bay Water Carnival on the West Coast.

Mary Ann, Billy B. Van's infant daughter, who will appear with Douglas MacLean in that comedian's next for Paramount release, "That's My Baby."

Dolores Costello need no longer be referred to as the daughter of Maurice.. Ths is her role in "Mannequin" (Paramount), now being filmed.

Ben Lyon has the finishing touches put to his beard for "Bluebeard's Seven Wives" a Robert Kane production for First National, by Josef Bischof, the hairdresser, while Lois Wilson and Director Al Santell look on.

" 'I was one of the first directors for Kalem. All I had to do was to direct the pictures, take care of the properties, attend to transportation (by ferry and street car at that time), write the stories and play the leading roles. For this I drew $25 a week and gained experience that I wouldn't take a thousand for now. We made "Ben Hur" in one reel and "The Fall of Jerusalem" (with forty-three Romans) also in one reel, thereby establishing a record, I think, for brevity and elimination. When I watch the elaborate, endless reels of some of the "super-spectacles" these days I often wonder how we got it all in, but we did—and apparently to the satisfaction of our fast-growing audiences.'

"Later Mr. Olcott took his own company abroad. They spent most of their time in Ireland, where their director produced a series of vignettes around Blarney Castle and the Lakes of Killarney. It was the beginning of a long list of foreign pictures with which this director has been identified—for a natural wander-lust and a peculiar sense of foreign atmosphere has made him the most enthusiastic globe trotter of his class. He was also a pioneer in these foreign ventures—for, until he blazed that first trail in Irleand, it had never occurred to the film powers over here that foreign background couldn't be just as successfully manufactured on the old home lot."

INTERVIEWING MISS BARA

THEDA BARA, after a few days in New York, departed on Tuesday to start work in her first two-reel special comedy for Hal Roach. At noon the Lady Press Agent called up to announce that if we would meet her by the information desk at Grand Central we might interview Miss Bara between 2:10 and 2:45, the hour of departure of the 20th Century. Here is a schedule of the interview as clocked off by our trusty Little Ben:

2:10 Arr. G. C. T. On time for once! No Lady Press Agent.

2:15 Still no Lady P. A.

2:20 Still no L. P. A.

2:25 The L. P. A. arrived with the usual story about the taxi-cab and the traffic tie-up. (Now you tell one!)

2:26 Searching madly for Miss Bara.

2:27 Found her.

2:28 Introductions all around.

2:29 Miss Bara expressed her regret at leaving New York after so short a stay.

2:30 Introduced to someone who had come to see Miss Bara off.

2:31 Asked Miss Bara about her forthcoming work with Hal Roach.

2:32 Introduced to someone who had come to see Miss Bara, etc.

2:33 Miss Bara explained that while the full details were not yet settled when she left the Coast, she liked the plan as set forth to her by Hal Roach very much.

2:34 Introduced to someone who had come to see, etc.

2:35 Miss Bara wanted to correct the impression that had been given that she was to burlesque her former "vamp" roles. This is absolutely untrue, she said. She will play her role absolutely straight, as will the other dramatic players signed by Roach, thus acting as a foil for the comics.

2:36 Introduced to someone who, etc.

2:37 Began the long walk to Pullman coach No. 44 on the 20th Century.

2:42 Arr. coach No. 44.

2:43 Introduced to someone, etc.

2:44 "All ashore that's going ashore!" Good-byes all around.

2:45 The 20th Century departed.

WHEN HIS SEVEREST CRITICS

WHEN Victor Schertzinger started shooting on "The Golden Strain," down at Fort Huachuca in Arizona, he found himself surrounded by a group of the severest critics whom any director was ever called upon to satisfy. And unlike most critics, they displayed great unwillingness to talk.

Chief among these were twetny-two Apache scouts who have served Uncle Sam long and faithfully along the Mexican border. These scouts, headed by a withered veteran who has been in the service for forty-eight years, are very watchful but very silent. It is almost impossible to get one of them to say anything. When an effort was made to photograph them, long conferences were necessary—and even then the actual "shooting" had to be delayed.

"These men," said Lieutenant Fred C. Thomas of the 10th U. S. Cavalry at Fort Huachuca, "have been at this fort for years. They were here when the oldest soldier came—and they have remained throughout the years.

"There are only twenty-three Indian scouts in the service of the Government. One is stationed in Oklahoma. The other 22 are under command of Colonel J. C. Rheat at Huachuca.

"Among the 22 are several who go back to the time of Benjamin H. Grierson, first colonel of the Tenth Cavalry. They are very wise—and they know Arizona as few white men know it."

The oldest of the Fort Huachuca scouts is Tehnehjiheh. He merely smiles when you speak to him.

Tehnehjeheh is a man of amazing wizardy. He is eighty years old, but he doesn't seem sixty—and he can take you from Fort Huachuca in Arizona to Mexico City without following a roadway or riding on a train. According to Colonel Rhea, this Apache is intimately acquainted with every ancient custom and he knows more about secret mountain passes than the famed and much dreaded Ceronimo ever dreamed of knowing. He has been forty-eight years a paid scout of the government. The remaining scouts are Joe Adley, Ivan Antonio, Jess Billy, Charlie Bones, Big Chow, Julius Colelay, DeKlay, Eskipbygojo, Tonay Pope, Alejo Quintero, Siner L. Riley, Kessay Rivers, Benson Sisto, Thomas Sye, and Silas E. Tenijieth. All are privates in the cavalry except Big Chow and Nonotolth. They are corporals.

Big Chow, who ranks next to Tehnehjehein in point of service has been stationed in or near the famous old fort for more than 26 years. Charlie Bones in next, with 2 years service. Nonotolth and Thomas Sye have been with the government for 20 years while DeKlay has been at the fort nineteen years.

They are called "detachment Indian scouts," and it is their business to trail bad men into obscure corners. Old Geronimo and Sitting Bull clashed with the forebears of these men—and several of the scouts remember Tom Horn and Al Sieber quite well.

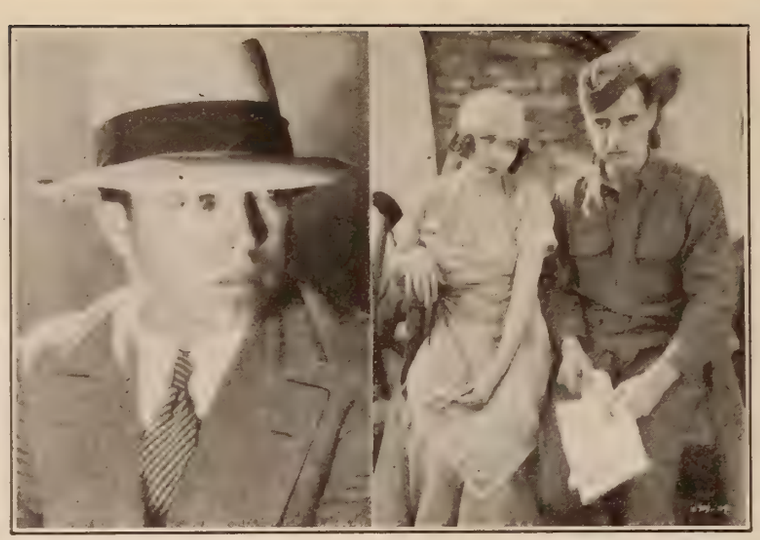
"Me with Sieber when Captain killed in Mexico," said old Tehnehjeheh, when he was finally persuaded to talk. "Tom Horn, him young fellow. I know."

His reference was to the death of Captain Emmet Crawford, who was shot by Mexicans while pursuing Geronimo in Mexico. Sieber, a famous scout working out of Fort Huachuca, headed the Indians who trailed the old trouble-maker across the border. Eskipbygojo and Charlie Bones were members of that expedition.

Colonel Rhea regards these men with the keenest interest and declares their services are invaluable along the Mexican border. No man has ever been able to get more out of them than Rhea, but even the colonel admits they have secrets of which he knows nothing. They are a silent band, but deadly, and they have an uncanny sense of direction. Few murderers have ever escaped justice when this relentless band takes up the trail. No mountain fastness is closed to them. They ride good horses and carry standard government equipment. Their village is a part of the Huachuca reservation, the latter comprising 100 square miles.

PLAY BALL!

THESE days, when the chill winds whistle around 729 Seventh Avenue, and the East is feeling the hard coal shortage, it is nice to know that there is one place, at least, where baseball is the order of the day and thoughts of skiing and tobogganing are far away.



The Christie Comedy studios baseball team, having downed the O. K. Transportation ball tossers last week in the decisive win of 16 to 3, are now tackling the Los Angeles Fire Department Sunday on the sandlots of Westwood and they are anxious to stir up something among the other studies. The comedy boys want the blood of the film colony and say they are open to challenges from other movie aggregations, according to Bob Thornby, their manager, and Secretary George Sperry who has issued the defy.

Playing on the Christie team of ball smashers are Gus Peterson, Herb Reynolds, Pop-up-Baker, George Hall, Austin Herrick, Holbrook Todd, Fred Widdowson, Frank Sullivan and Bud Rike.

It is understood that a studio league may be formed soon if the various film teams can get together. So far the Keaton, Lloyd and Christie companies are the only ones who have announced themselves as candidates.

MAKE YOUR RESERVATIONS EARLY

ONE fan, at least, has made sure of his seats for the opening of the new Roxy theatre next October in New York City. He is H. W. Llewellyn of Newark, N. J., and his letter to S. L. Rothafel last week was as follows, a blank check being enclosed:

My dear "Roxy";

Back, far back in the dim past, when a motion picture theatre was a "Nichelodian" and the writer was a clerk in the Erie Freight House at Honesdale, Pa.; he attended a performance directed by Sam Rothafel. During the past three years the writer (and his wife) have been regular followers of all your activities.

Back, far back in the dim past; when a "Radio Set" consisted of a chunk of galena and a Quaker Oats box wrapped round with wire; Roxy's first concert came to us. Last week it came over a five tube Super-Het.

And so, partly to continue the record, but more as an expression of kindly interest and confidence, I am enclosing a check payable to you, which I am going to ask that you place in the hands of the proper party to assure my being favored with two good seats for the first public performance at the new Roxy Theatre.

And in the meantime we hope that you will continue to give us the same human, kindly concerts, which we enjoy so much.

Pease extend our warm personal regards to the "gang" especially the inimiatble "Gamby" with the irrespressible giggle.

Cordially yours,

(Signed) H. W. LLEWELLYN.

Barbara La Marr in "The Girl from Montmarte" (First National) introduces something new in the way of a small comb interlaced with real flowers.

THE SPANISH DISTRIBUTOR RETURNS

THE steamer " De Grasse " this week included on its passenger list M. De Miguel, leading Spanish distributor and producer, who is returning to Spain after an extended absence in Italy, Germany, France, England and the United States. He made preliminary arrangements while here for an elaborate production in Spain of " Don Quixote," which will be continued after his return to Spain. He visited several American studios and theatres while here, studying methods and conditions.

THE SOLITARY AWARD

ONLY one asterisk of merit was awarded to the week's crop of films by the National Board of Review, the lucky subject being the current issue of Pathe Review. This release has been figuring in the asterik column frequently of late, a tribute to the efforts of the editor, Emanuel Cohen, and his efficient staff.

One of the high spots of "Fifth Avenue" (Producers Dist. Corp.) will be the lavish sequence in which Grauman's Egyptian Girls will figure prominently.

Harold Lloyd, Director Sam Taylor and Ted Wilde, scenarist, preparing for a scene in "For Heaven's Sake," the comedian's first contribution to the Paramount schedule of releases.

THE WHEELERS DEPART

LARRY WHEELER, producer of Western dramas, whose wife is the charming Patheserial star, Allene Ray, gave a luncheon to several members of the trade press last week, the guest of honor being Spencer Bennett, director of " The Green Archer," in which Miss Ray is starred.

Wheeler expected to return to the Coast this week to film several Western specials which he is under contract to deliver, and Miss Ray will accompany him if production plans permit. At the moment of writing, it has not been determined whether Pathe's next serial will be filmed in California or Florida.

Which reminds us of an anecdote Wheeler relates concerning a Florida promoter who was trying to persuade a company to come to Florida for a picture.

"Why," said this promoter, "we have everything in Florida that you have in California, sea, jungle, farms, cities—everything except mountains, and I understand they're not using them any more!"

A NIGHT CLUB PRE-VIEW

SOMETHING a bit different in premieres was sprung on the New York film colony this week, when Warner Bros. gave their pre-view of " Lady Windermere's Fan " on Tuesday night at the Casa Lopez, the night club where Vincent Lopez and his band hold forth. Two hundred guests were in attendance, and following dinner and dancing the picture was screened in the night club, a noval setting for the occasion. Irene Rich, who plays Mrs. Erlynne in the photoplay, was present and received an ovation at the close of the showing. San E. Morris, general manager in charge of distribution for Warner Bros., introduced her.

Irene Rich, Warner Bros. star, returning from Europe is met by Vincent Lopez, the well known musician and orchestra conductor. The premiere of "Lady Windermere's Fan," in which Miss Rich appears, was held at his Casa Lopez in New York City.

DIFFICULTIES OF A PRODUCER

BEFORE leaving for the Coast the other day, Jack Coogan, Sr., entertained a few members of the press at an impromptu luncheon at the Astor. During the course of the luncheon he gave an interesting illustration of the difficulties which a producer constantly faces, in this case his troubles in finding a suitable story for Jackie's next picture.

" We don't want just a story," he said, " but something with a big theme to it, something worth while. ' Oliver Twist,' for instance, did Jackie a world of good, because it brought to him the prestige of Charles Dickens, and one of his most famous novels. I'd like another story like that — something with a strong, vital idea and a strong acting role for Jackie. At the same time, we've got to avoid costume as far as possible, and keep the story in a modern setting. Maybe that sounds easy, but it's far from it."

Several stories are under consideration, he said, but none of them is just what is wanted.

Al St. John cuts up capers for Virginia Vance, his leading lady in some of his Mermaid comedies, on the new stage being erected at the Educational studio at Hollywood.

MORE PUFFY THAN HUNGRY

AN arrival in New York this week was Charles Puffy, the Hungarian comedian who has been playing in "fat man" comedies for Universal. He is here conferring on plans for the coming year, and upon his return to the Coast will start on a series of two-reel comedies from stories by H. C. Witwer.

Puffy, before coming to this country, was a recognized legitimate actor in Budapest.

He had a difficult time of it for a year in Hollywood, for there were many "fat men," and he found it hard to convince anyone that he had personality and acting ability as well as avoirdupois. Then he played a bit in " The Rose of Paris," and Tamar Lane devoted extensive space to it in The Film Mercury, commenting very favorably on his performance. This came to the eye of Carl Laemmle and he put Puffy under contract for five years.

Puffy is a remarkable pantomimist and in the course of a few minutes makes you forget that he is obese. He is thoroughly familiar with the Continental drama, and during the conversation with this writer illustrated some of the bits of business which he had employed in some of these dramas — touches which, as pantomimic artistry, take rank with the best.

Recently, at a premiere in Los Angeles, he was introduced by Charles Murray as follows: " Ladies and gentlemen! Allow me to present Charles Puffy, of Hungary — but from his looks I would say that he is more Puffy than Hungry!"

CRUZE PLANNING NEXT

"Old Ironsides" to be Elaborate Production

JAMES CRUZE, producer of "The Covered Wagon" and others of the screen's most outstanding successes has departed for Europe to gather data and select locations for the screening of "Old Ironsides," through which forever will be commemorated the firgate Constitution. Cruze will visit Tripoli, where the Constitution reached the climax of its naval fame during the war against pirates of the Mediterranean by the United States in 1804.

Jesse L. Lasky has announced that the gripping story of "Old Ironsides" will be filmed in its entirety on an elaborate scale. Preliminary work on the production has been in progress for several months at the Paramount studio. Harry Carr and Walter Woods are responsible for the story, which is said to be historically accurate in every detail, Secretary of the Navy, Curtis D. Wibur, is giving full cooperation of the United States Navy to the gigantic undertaking. Cruze has been taken off of all other directorial work in order that he might devote all the time necessary to the forthcoming prooduction.

Stage Group May Film Plays

O'Neill, MacGowan, Jones, Anderson and Stearns Included in Interesting Venture

THE possibility of some interesting contributions to the screen was foreshadowed this week in the announcement that the group of men prominent in the theatre now holding the Greenwich Village under lease may embark shortly in the production of motion pictures based upon stage plays controlled by them. The men included in the group are Eugene O'Neill, Kenneth MacGowan, Robert Edmund Jones and Maxwell Anderson, to which has been added Myron M. Stearns because of his familiarity with practical production.

Plays controlled by this group include "Beyond the Horizon" and the other Eugene O'Neill plays, Maxwell Anderson's "Outside Looking In," "Ruint," by Hatcher Hughes, author of "Hell Bent for Heaven," and other miscellaneous properties.

MacGowan, when interviewed this week, stressed the fact that this was not to be considered a "highbrow" or "art film" venture, but was a businesslike, practical proposition.

"We simply feel that we can bring a certain guidance and supervision to the filming of these plays," he said, "much as Joseph Hergesheimer did with 'Tol'able David,' and with results which need no comment. We are not going to make pictures and then negotiate for a release, or anything of that sort. Unless we find that we have a saleable idea, we will drop it at once, but present indications are very favorable.

"Probably the first production would be either 'Beyond the Horizon' or 'Outside Looking In.' The Eugene O'Neill plays are primarily plays of characterization and atmosphere, with the plot secondary and hence susceptible to alteration for screen purposes. O'Neill is entirely willing that such changes should be made and realizes the requirements of the screen in that direction. In 'Beyond the Horizon,' for instance, it will be possible to throw the emphasis on the other brother, so that there will be a happy ending for him, retaining the tragic finish of the other brother who should have gone 'beyond the horizon' but didn't.

"The distributor will have the usual supervision over story, treatment, continuity, director and cast, so this is by no means an experimental or art theatre scheme. We simply want to make intelligent picturizations of these plays, if it can be done to commercial advantage, simply lending what guidance and counsel we can to the filming.

Spring Enthuses Over Future

Chairman of First National Sales Cabinet Pleased With Tour Results

SAMUEL SPRING, chairman of First National's Sales Cabinet, whose members recently started on a tour of the key city exchanges in behalf of First National month in January, has wired Richard A. Rowland, general manager of the company, that he has never known prospects to be brighter than for the coming year. He is enthusiastic in his prophecy that it will be the biggest year in the history of the motion picture industry.

Spring has reached Cincinnati with Ned Depinet, sales manager of the southern territory and is prepared to start on the second lap of the whirlwind tour, conferring with exhibitors, branch managers and salesmen.

Spring reports that he has found a spirit of optimism among all of the exhibitors whom he has met. On every hand there is confidence that the public never was more ready to respond to high grade pictures. Prosperity is genenral and theatre attendances show a steady increase.

A. W. Smith, Jr., sales manager of the Eastern territory, accompanied Spring and Depinet to Albany and Buffalo, where the sales executives found a most enthusiastic response to the campaign outlined for First National Month. A. Buckley, representing the Leland and Clinton Square theatres, was present at the Albany meeting and promised his whole-hearted support. Walter Hayes, representing the Moe Mark interests, guaranteed the fullest cooperation of that important combination, giving first run dates for his houses in Albany, Syracuse, Troy and Utica.

Another meeting was held in Buffalo where Vincent McFaul of the Shea enterprises pledged his co-operation and promised all the available first-run dates for the month of January.

The reception was repeated at Cleveland. Messrs. Spring and Depinet had their Thanksgiving turkey in Pittsburgh, following a morning meeting at the exchange, attended by the complete personnel of that office and a number of prominent exhibitors. Cincinnati was the next stop, then Louisville and Indianapolis. Other cities to be visited are St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha, Des Moines, Minneapolis, Milwaukee, Chicago, Detroit and Toronto.

Having visited Chicago, Milwaukee and Minneapolis, Ned Marin, sales manager of the Western territory has headed for the far West where he will conduct meetings at exchanges and confer with exhibitors in Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, Los Angeles and Salt Lake City. Before his return, Mr. Marin will also make stops at Des Moines and Detroit.

Age Limit Set for Young Baltimore Actors

According to an opinion drafted by J. Hubner Rice, Assistant Attorney General of Maryland, only children of 16 years of age and over will be permitted to display their ability on amateur nights at the various movie or legitimate theatres to comply with the State Child Labor Law. But the opinion goes on to say that this ban does not cover plays such as are given at schools and Sunday Schools of an amateur character even though an admission is charged.

Where the regular theatres are concerned, however, it makes no difference whether the performers are paid or not. Dr. J. Knox Insley, State Commissioner of Labor and Statistics, asked that the opinion be handed down.

Thalberg at Studio after Illness

AFTER an illness of several weeks, Irving Thalberg, associate executive at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio is back at his desk and ready to supervise production on a number of important features.

Forthcoming productions which will be in his charge include King Vidor's "La Boheme," starring Lillian Gish and based on Henry Murger's "The Latin Quarter"; "Brown of Harvard," directed by Jack Conway; Rafael Sabatini's "Bardelys the Magnificent," starring John Gilbert and directed by King Vidor, and "The Temptress," by Blasco Ibanez.

Among recent Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer successes made under Thalberg's supervision were "The Big Parade," "The Unholy Three," "Lights of Old Broadway" and "The Tower of Lies."

United Artists M-G-M Deal Declared Off

Exhibitor Protests Are Cause, Says Joseph Schenck

NEGOTIATIONS for the distribution merger between United Artists and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer are off. They came to an end on Tuesday, December 1, with the issuance of the following statement in Hollywood by Joseph M. Schenck, Chairman of the United Artists Board of Directors:

"Merger permanently abandoned by mutual consent, due to protests from exhibitors and not from any individuals represented in deal. United Artists will increase production fifty percent for the coming year."

Nicholas M. Schenck, of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, who returned to New York this week after being present at the conference in Hollywood, also said that negotiations had been discontinued and added: "It would be unwise for us to join together unless every membr of United Artists as well as ourselves would be happy in the union. That seemed unlikely; therefore it was determined that it would be best to discontinue all negotiations and continue our separate ways."

In well-informed circles the understanding is that Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford are in favor of the merger, and it is said in some quarters that negotiations, probably on a different basis, may be taken up later.

It is also understood that it was Charles Chaplin's refusal to "go along" finally which sealed the fate of the merger. No official announced to this effect was made, however.

Charles L. O'Reilly, President, and Sydney S. Cohen, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce of New York City, made public this week a telegram from Mr. Chaplin, in response to a protest they had telegraphed to him. Chaplin's wire was dated November 20th and indicated his hesitancy in going into the merger. A wire to the same officials from Douglas Fairbanks was also given out for publication, together with replies to both Chaplin and Fairbanks from Cohen and O'Reilly.

Announcement by Joseph M. Schenck of the termination of the negotiations came after extended conferences in Hollywood, in which Mr. Schenck, his brother, Nicholas M. Schenck, Hiram Abrams, President of United Artists; Mr. Fairbanks, Miss Pickford and Mr. Chaplin; Dennis F. O'Brien, counsel for the two former; Nathan Burkan, attorney for Chaplin; and J. Robert Rubin, of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, participated.

At one time it appeared that the merger would go as planned, but late last week reports of the Chaplin opposition began to come through from Hollywood, and it appeared then that a serious hitch had occurred.

Marcus Loew left for the Coast Saturday, November 28, and was due in Los Angeles December 2 or 3.

Following is the text of the telegram sent by Mr. Chaplin to Messrs. Cohen and O'Reilly, dated Hollywood, November 20:

"Gentlemen: In reply to your telegram of recent date I wish to state that the proposed cooperation of the United Artists with the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Company has by no means matrialized. It is merely a plan submitted for the consideration of both companies the thought of which was to economize on the physical distribution of our product, only that is by reduction of overhead for office space and exportation of films, etc. We will maintain the same sales force and then their negotiations with the exhibitors will continue precisely as before and they will not help to sell Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer products, nor will Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer help to sell United Artists products, nor will they be sold together. The sales forces of the United Artists and the sales forces of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will remain the same two distinct units, each selling their products through the one office of this proposed organization. If such cooperation along these economic lines is of a constructive nature, it should be to the advantage of all parties and will harm no one. If, after a thorough investigation of the proposed plan, which of course I intend to make, I discover that it tends in any way towards a monopolization or trustification of our industry, I will be the first to oppose it. My principal is and always will be a fair and equitable relationship with the exhibitor, which can only be maintained by an independent and open market. With kind regards, sincerely,

CHARLES CHAPLIN.

To which Messrs. Cohen and O'Reilly replied ten days later as follows:

New York, N. Y.,
November 30th, 1925.

"Charles Chaplin,
"Hollywood, California.

"Appreciate your wire which was read at meeting of board of directors of theatre owners chamber of commerce today. Regret to advise that theatre owners do not consider that your claims are valid, that independence will be preserved intact or that merger is for added purpose of effecting economies in distribution. It is well known that physical handling is cheapest item in distribution of films. Surely the cost of United Artists distribution cannot be high at this time with small force engaged therein, coupled with fact that theatre owners seek your product which virtually sells itself in contrast to other companies which use large force to sell their product and prices you obtain are far above average usually paid for pictures and assuredly more than fair to you. If you are desirous of effecting these small economies why not affiliate with concern distributing only short subjects and who are not operating theatres. Then your name and prestige with that of Pickford and Fairbanks will not be used as bait to sell entire Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Program nor used to force theatre owners to tie up all available play dates with product of combined United Artists and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer companies thus denying theatre owners opportunity of playing meritorious product of other producers and discouraging that independent effort and initiative without which the motion picture industry cannot long survive. Remember, too, that Loews, Inc., are theatre owners as well as a distributor of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer product and operate in direct competition with us and thousands of other independent theatre owners who by this competition with its control of production distribution and exhibition are thus denied the opportunity of playing the pictures made by you and your associates Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks even though we offer the same or greater film rental. Therefore in name of that independence you profess to cherish and in name of the independent theatre owners and the public who have done so much to make possible your great success we enjoin upon you a warning to consider well the loss of prestige you will suffer and the suspicion of bad faith you will incur by submerging your artistry in the proposed merger for the reasons you advance.

"Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce.
" Charles L. O'Reilly, President.
"Sydney S. Cohen
Chairman Board of Directors.

The following telegram from Douglas Fairbanks, dated Hollywood, November 20, and addressed to the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, was made public:

"Plans for proposed association of United Artists and Metro Goldwyn distributing organizations in no way presuppose statement contained in your telegram but on the contrary will afford better opportunity for us to produce and market our pictures in the independent manner in which we have been heretofore doing.

"Respectfully yours,
"Douglas Fairbanks."

Messrs. Cohen and O'Reilly sent a telegraphic reply on November 30. It was virtually the same as the telegram sent by them to Chaplin.

Loew's, Inc., Enjoys Banner Year

Statement Shows Net Profit of $4,708,631; Goldwyn, Metro and Theatres Add Much to Profits

LOEW'S, INC., with a net profit of $4,708,631 after all charges and dividends on preferred stock of subsidiaries had been paid enjoyed its most successful year in the fiscal year ending August 31st, 1925. This is equal to $4.43 a share on the 1,060,780 no par shares, as against $2,949,052, equal to $2.78 a share in 1924.

The Wall Street Journal analyzing the statement, attributes much of the added success to increasing returns brought from the purchase about a year ago of Goldwyn Pictures Corporation and to the marked improvement in earnings of Metro and increased theatre revenues.

The Journal says: "Purchase of Goldwyn about a year ago was a shrewd piece of business on the part of Marcus Loew. Goldwyn was bought for $5,000,000 Metro-Goldwyn 7% preferred stock of which $4,430,666 is outstanding. Annual dividends on this are about $300,000. The income from Goldwyn's half interest in the Capitol theatre, New York, more than pays the dividends on the preferred. The Goldwyn property also included a valuable studio lot in Hollywood which Loew's will be able to sell at a handsome profit when it seems advisable. Since Metro also has a studio lot in Hollywood it is probable that sooner or later one of the tracts will be sold.

"Feature of the balance sheet is the wiping out of an item of $10,977,083 for leaseholds, contracts and good will by writing up the property account. Loew's has extensive real estate holdings consisting of theatre and business buildings in choice sections of important cities all over the country. Many of these properties were acquired five years ago and have since appreciated greatly in value. In two properties Loew's is understood to have a profit of over $1,000,000 each.

"Property and plants are now carried at $25,846,040, against $18,841,967 in 1924 and $14,677,689 in 1922. Investments, including real estate of subsidiaries, are carried at $10,590,392, against $6,296,682 last year and $3,315,418 in 1922.

"The company has an interest in a total of 105 theatres, and owns outright 33 theatres, four office buildings and two studio lots. A new $1,000,000 theatre is being built in Atlanta, and large houses are being built or leased in New Rochelle, Coney Island, Birmingham and Norfolk.

"Working capital position has been much improved this year. The increase is mainly due to larger inventories of films which stand at $11,864,862 against $6,548,209. Loew's has been steadily expanding its producing business until it is now second only to Famous Players in film making. This inventory consists almost entirely of 1925 film output, according to the policy of depreciation employed by all important film producers, and is not incommensurate with the increased volume of business. Gross income in the last fiscal year was $56,294,745, against $42,937,268 in 1924 and $19,634,355 in 1923, an increase of nearly 150% in two years.

"Following table shows changes in gross, net, working capital and surplus in the last four years:

"Earnings of Loew's last year were larger than the average net income of Famous Players in recent years and only about $700,000 less than Famous Players net last year, which was the largest in its history. In other words Loew's has built up in four years a structure that is a close second to the greatest moving picture producer in the world. Another year as good as the one just closed may bring even more important development to this rapidly growing company.

"At present the weak point in Loew's structure is the comparatively small amount of cash, $1,547,585 in relation to inventories."

The article also includes the following table showing changes in gross, net, working capital and surplus in the past four years:

	1925	1924	1923	1922
Gross	$56,294,745	$42,937,268	$19,634,355	$19,608,301
Net income	4,708,631	2,949,052	2,415,488	2,267,871
Current assets	15,977,163	13,057,117	7,456,831	5,854,732
Current liabilities	4,417,718	5,188,036	1,719,350	2,260,594
Working capital	11,559,445	7,869,081	5,737,481	3,549,138
Surplus	6,376,049	3,788,978	2,961,486	545,997

Famous, B. & K. Launch Publix Chain

New Corporation Embraces and Will Run Entire Holdings of Extensive Chain of Picture Houses

PUBLIX THEATRES, INC., is the name under which the amalgamated Famous Players and Balaban and Katz houses will function in the future. Incorporation papers have been filed in Albany in that name, with Sam Katz as president. The new corporation embraces the theatre holdings of Famous and Balaban and Katz, as well as the latter's interest in B. & K. Midwest Theatres, Inc., the Kunsky chain and the Lubliner and Trinz circuit. Famous owns all of the stock, but Balaban and Katz will operate the houses for a portion of the profits.

Additions are constantly being made to the already extensive holdings of the organization. Among the houses now in course of construction are the Keith, Atlanta; Olympic, Miami; Florida, Jacksonville; Tampa, Tampa; Florida, St. Petersburg, Tennessee, Knoxville; Jersey, Morristown; Texas, Houston; Alabama, Birmingham; Texas, San Antonia; and the new Paramount in Times Square, New York.

The newly organized corporation has signed a long term contract with John Murray Anderson as director of productions. Productions include the elaborate presentation acts which are becoming more and more a special feature of motion picture presentation.

Anderson, original producer of the Greenwich Village Follies, was engaged recently by the company to produce the stage portion of the entertainment at the new Metropolitan Theatre in Boston which recently opened. His unique and exceptional style of stage presentations in Boston have met with approval and as a consequence the Boston public has taken the Metropolitan Theatre to its heart.

In connection with the engagement of Mr. Anderson it has been announced that his first presentation work for New York will be put on at the Rivoli Theatre in December. Work is now being carried out at the Rivoli providing for construction and decorative changes both in the stage and auditorium. The theatre will close at midnight, Saturday, Dec. 19th, for five days to allow completion of the construction work and will reopen Christmas day with an entirely new type of entertainment, something never seen before in New York.

It is hoped to make the Rivoli a distinctive and unique part of New York's entertainment offerings, to establish it in the theories of courtesy and service and of exceptional quality of entertainment that will be a mark of distinction in all the Publix Theatres throughout the United States.

The new policy of entertainment at the Rivoli and the special Murray Anderson presentations include a new idea in symphonic syncopated orchestral effects, new lighting and color effects, new decorations, dances, ensemble and novelty effects. The first picture to be presented will be Paramount's production of J. M. Barrie's "A Kiss for Cinderella," recently completed by Herbert Brenon and featuring Betty Bronson, the Peter Pan girl who made her first ascent to fame at Christmas time a year ago.

Corporation Formed to Expand Universal Theatre Circuit

Will Buy Only Where Forced Out, Says Laemmle

By L. C. Moen

UNIVERSAL and Dillon, Read & Co., of New York, are forming a corporation to take over the present Universal theatre holdings and to acquire, if necessary, as many as one thousand more in cities and towns where Universal is not being given what it considers a "fair break" in the matter of showings. Universal will hold an interest, but not a controlling one, in the new corporation.

Carl Laemmle, president of Universal Pictures Corporation, particularly stressed the fact that the move was not for the purpose of entering into competition with exhibitors friendly to Universal or of creating a monopoly.

"We will buy or build theatres only in towns where we are shut out," said Mr. Laemmle. "The exhibitor who plays Universal pictures, or even any part of our program, need never fear that we will enter into competition with him. We don't want to go into theatre operation, but there are, today, many exhibitor-owned towns where they offer you a ruinous price and tell you to take it or leave it. In such towns we will either buy or build, preferably the former, but our customers will never find us in competition with them."

R. H. Cochrane, vice-president, also stressed this point, adding that it was a campaign of self-protection, not aggression, and that Universal could not continue its existence under present conditions without the acquisition of theatres in which it was assured fair representation.

Dillon, Read & Co., which will handle the stock issue for the new corporation, has also handled the preferred stock of the Universal Pictures Corporation.

Carl Laemmle

What the name of the new corporation will be, who will head it, what the stock issue will total, how many theatres will be acquired and where—these things are as yet undetermined. Officials of Universal and Dillon, Read are now working out these details and some of the more important points will probably be ready for announcement within a week or ten days.

President Laemmle is sailing for Germany this Saturday to arrange the final closing of the Universal-Ufa deal, but preparations for the new corporation will go ahead rapidly as the office will be in touch with him at all times.

Certain matters of policy have at this time been worked out and can be stated as follows:

The new corporation will, first of all, buy the present Universal theatre holdings. The exact number of these houses has not been announced, except that it is in excess of one hundred. Figures published in Motion Picture News from time to time regarding the acquisition of houses by Universal would bring the total to around 130, though the leases on some of these may have expired in the meantime.

The next step will be the purchase of circuits and individual houses in cities and territories where Universal product is not now being shown. Where houses cannot be bought, the matter of new construction will then come up.

The best brains in the theatre field will be attracted to the new venture, as far as possible, so that the entire circuit may be operated as efficiently and profitably as possible. Just who will have charge of the theatres has not been announced, and is probably as yet undetermined.

Universal will not own the new corporation outright, nor will it even hold a controlling interest. It will hold a block of stock and will have an arrangement with the corporation guaranteeing it a fair showing in its houses, no more.

One point which is stressed is that the new corporation will be operated primarily to make money and only secondarily to show Universal pictures. Universal product will have the preference, but if, in a particular community, Universal pictures do not prove profitable, then product will be used that can be shown at a profit. In other words, houses will not be maintained at a loss, merely to provide an outlet for Universal product.

The programs of the houses will not be confined to Universal pictures alone, but other available, meritorious product will also be used.

The number of houses to be acquired has not been arbitrarily set at one thousand, as certain newspaper reports have tended to indicate. The corporation will be financed so that it can, if necessary, acquire that number, but the total will be determined purely by practical considerations. If a smaller number will open up the requisite territory, no more will be acquired, but if more than a thousand theatres are needed to serve the purpose, then the circuit will be expanded to that point.

Universal, in thus forming a separate corporation for its theatre holdings, is following the lead of Famous Players, Fox, Metro-Goldwyn and Warner Bros., all of whom have had or have recently organized separate units for this purpose. There are certain very definite advantages in this from a banking standpoint, it is pointed out, since the financing of a theatre corporation is relatively simpler than motion picture finance, while the latter is protected at the same time through the assurance of an outlet for product financed.

Universal, however, is making it very clear that its purpose is not the formation of a powerful theatre combine, but the protection of Universal's existence in accordance with rapidly changing conditions.

New Amusement Company in Scranton

M. B. Comerford, of the Comerford Amusement Company, of Scranton, Pa., which controls a big string of theatres in the hard coal mining regions of Pennsylvania, is treasurer of the Queen Esther Amusement Company, of Scranton, which obtained a charter at the State Department in the capitol in Harrisburg on November 27.

The corporation was formed to "operate and manage theatres and other places of amusement," and is capitalized at $20,000, of which $2,000 has been paid in on the basis of $100 par value per share. Comerford holds 100 shares, and the other incorporators are Bernard Shucktes, of West Pittston, 50 shares and Joseph P. Machutus, West Pittston, 50 shares.

Woodhull, Brylawski and Chadwick To Attend Ohio Meeting

R. F. Woodhull, President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, and A. Julian Brylawski, Chairman of the Administrative Committee, will represent the national organization at the annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Ohio, to be held at Columbus December 8 and 9.

President I. E. Chadwick and General Manager Frederick H. Elliott of the Independent Association of America will also be present.

Vice President J. J. Harwood of the Ohio theatre owners organizaton telegraphed Mr. Elliott extending an invitation to President Chadwick to address the convention on Tuesday afternoon, and it is not unlikely that the I. M. P. A. President will remain over for the banquet Tuesday evening, when he has also been invited to be one of the principal speakers.

General Manager Elliott will go to Columbus in advance of President Chadwick for conference with the officials of the Ohio State body, also with President Frank J. Rembusch of the M. P. T. O. of Indiana who has advised that he will meet him in Columbus next Monday.

It is not improbable that the I. M. P. A. executives, while in the middle west, will have conferences with the M. P. T. O. officials and independent theatre owners from adjoining states who are to attend the Columbus convention.

Non-theatrical Shows Flayed

Joy Says That Church and School Showings Lower Value of Pictures

COLONEL JASON JOY, head of the Public Relations department of the Hays office, in an article in "The Playground," makes a forceful denouncement of free showings of films by schools and churches. In part, Colonel Joy says:

" * * * I am certain that the recreation departments showing pictures in school houses should make a regular charge for those who see the films. While it is perfectly true that by securing a splendid class of films they are creating a demand for such pictures, they are, at the same time, unconsciously lowering the estimation and value placed on those films when they display them free of charge. This is purely a psychological fact. If the best films are shown free they are proportionately discouraged as business projections. People have a habit of judging pictures, in some degree at least, by the money value that is placed upon them.

"In addition, it is patently unfair for community centers supported by taxation and relieved from the necessity of paying taxes themselves, to show motion pictures free in competition with the regular theatres in the city. It is unfair competition to the theatre owner whose livelihood comes from the showing of pictures, who has a large investment in his property, his building, his music, and his film rentals, and who pays high taxes, insurance rates and the like from which community centers are exempt. He is engaged in an essential business and deserves consideration and support.

"The entertainment picture—the sort we have in our theatres—is a commodity the same as any other article that is for sale and should not be used for other purposes than that for which it was intended. However worthy a purpose may be, to use an entertainment motion picture to advance that purpose or idea at the expense of the motion picture is unfair.

"To operate a motion picture theatre requires money. There are necessary overhead expenses that must be met. Taxes must be paid. Insurance must be carried. And films must be paid for. If someone else comes in and takes away the clientele of that picture house and offers it the same thing for nothing, the theatre is bound to suffer and, if the practice is carried far enough, the theatre will be forced sooner or later to close its doors.

"The motion picture theatre is the place for the entertainment picture just as the drugstore is the place for drugs and the schoolhouse for education. If any pictures are shown elsewhere they ought to be such pictures as are made especially for the other purpose. That is, a pedagogical picture should be made especially for the schoolhouse; the church picture for the church." * * *

Fox Plans to Enter St. Louis

Report Says Concern Will Enter Theatre Field There On A Large Scale

IT is reported in St. Louis film circles that the Fox interests plan to enter the St. Louis theatre world on a large scale. The plans are said to contemplate a very large first run picture palace either in the down-town district or on Grand boulevard with an interest in a chain of second run houses.

The name of a prominent local theatre owner has been linked with this report, but no official announcement has been forthcoming.

Fox has not had a St. Louis first-run connection since disposing of the lease on the Liberty theatre to Oscar Dane more than a year ago.

William Goldman has announced plans for the erection of a 1200-seat theatre at Eighteenth street and Park avenue, St. Louis, on the site of the Elite Airdome operated by Sigoloff Brothers. Under arrangements perfected Sigoloff Brothers will build the theatre and lease it to Goldman for a term of twenty or more years.

Plans for the theatre building are being prepared by Kennerly & Stegemeyer, architects, Title Guaranty Building, and construction contracts will be let in the near future. The structure will also contain stores and apartments and cost approximately $150,000.

Goldman recently took over the Kingsland and Woodland theatres on Gravois avenues formerly operated by Freund Brothers and has announced plans for new theatres at Union and St. Louis avenue and on Hodiamont avenue near Easton avenue.

He has been operating the Kings, Queens and Rivoli theatres and several weeks ago an agreement was filed in the Recorder of Deeds office whereby he and Skouras Brothers will form a new corporation to operate the Kings, Grand Central and West End Lyric when the new Ambassador theatre is in operation. Under this arrangement Skouras Brothers would hold 55 per cent of the stock and Goldman 45 per cent.

First National Month Plans Set

ELABORATE advertising and publicity plans have been mapped by First National for First National Month in January, 1926. The material was planned well in advance in order that it may be in the hands of exchanges and exhibitors in ample time.

Special advertising calling attention to the month and to the pictures to be shown will be carried in national magazines, newspapers and trade publications. Each exchange will be supplied with a cut-out stand about six feet by three, in color. Envelope stickers in two colors will be used on all exchange mail.

A banner in three colors for display in front of theatres will be supplied; also two-colored heralds and two-colored window cards allowing space for the theatre imprint. A special eight-page press sheet outlining the advertisements, stories for newspapers, posters and exploitation stunts for all types of theatres will be sent to exhibitors. A thousand foot trailer presenting facts of interest concerning First National stars who will be seen in pictures shown during the month, will be another valuable feature.

Fox Carrying Out Elaborate Expansion Plans

Increase Theatre Holdings and Production Equipment

ELABORATE extension plans in all directions have been inaugurated by Fox Film Corporation, which eventually will give them a first-run theatre in all important key cities and will extend their production activities and facilities far beyond the scope they have had in the past.

"Regardless of rumored motion picture combinations or any other factor affecting the industry in the United States today, Fox Film Corporation will ultimately have one or more first-run theatres in every important key city in the country," said James R. Grainger, the organization's general sales manager, who is in Los Angeles.

"Expansion plans with this object in view have been under way for some time. Building sites have already been secured in Boston, Detroit, Chicago, Washington, Buffalo, San Francisco and Los Angeles. In New York City a 4,500-seat theatre is being built to replace the old Academy of Music, the scene of Mr. Fox's real beginning as an exhibitor. The recent organization of Fox Theatres Corporation, when $12,000,000 of a stock issue was placed upon the market, was but one move toward the consummation of the expansion plans. It is expected a more detailed announcement of the program Mr. Fox has under consideration will be issued from our New York office within a short time.

"General Manager W. R. Sheehan has been on the coast for the past six weeks and I came to consult with him and General Superintendent Sol M. Wurtzel regarding the remainder of this season's product and to formulate plans for our 1926 convention, which will be held here in April.

"For the first time since Fox Film Corporation was organized, the annual convention of branch office managers will be held outside of New York City. We will bring upwards of 100 managers from the various exchanges in this country and in addition to them will bring perhaps 50 managers from Europe, South America, Australia and the Far East."

Constantly increasing studio activities, unprecedented production expansion plans, and a building program designed for the purpose of making Fox Films properties among the leading show places in Hollywood and Westwood, involve an expenditure of approximately $500,000, according to a statement made by Winfield R. Sheehan.

New building operations at both the Hollywood and Fox Hills studios have already been started. When the entire program at the Hollywood studio has been carried out, there will have been completed a new Administration Building erected at a cost of $50,000; a new previewing theatre costing $10,000; a new wardrobe building costing $20,000; a new still-portrait studio completely equipped, costing $5,000; a new stage on the East Lot, costing $75,000; and an entirely new reception building for the North Western Avenue lot inclosure extending from Delong Pre Avenue to Sunset Boulevard, costing $75,000. In addition to these improvements, an entirely new and elaborate landscape garden plan will be carried out.

The new Administration Building, occupancy of which was taken this week, was erected to take care of these departments; First floor—business manager and personal staff, scenario editor and personal staff, individual offices for scenario editor, directors, assistant directors and their staffs. Second floor—art director and his personal staff, scenario writers and readers, technical staff, library.

The new building is of Spanish architecture, the exterior being of stucco with red tile roof and artistic wood trimming. In its construction particular care was given to lighting and ventilation facilities. The new library, which occupies the southeast corner of the second floor of the Administration Building, is believed to be the most complete library ever installed for motion picture purposes.

William Fox

In addition to the library there is a large script room where all manuscripts are handled under the direction of a chief script editor and staff. The studio telephone exchange also occupies the Administration Building, and there is a complete dictaphone system in operation in the executive offices.

Now under construction and soon to be completed is the new front on the North Western Avenue site of the West Lot. When completed, entrance to the West Lot will be into a reception lobby 40 by 60 feet in dimensions. This lobby will be elaborately finished with a tile floor, tile wainscoting, ivory colored plaster, all of Spanish design, heavy beamed ceiling, and in one corner there will be a pool and wall fountain. An elaborately designed wrought iron door of Spanish design will guard the entrance.

One of the most important innovations in connection with these extensive building operations will be the new previewing theatre, which will occupy the site where the present cafeteria is located. The cafeteria is to be removed and the building razed. The new previewing theatre will be the finest miniature theatre of its kind in the world. Both its exterior and interior will be of Spanish design.

The new wardrobe building to be erected on the East Lot will be 36 by 110 feet in dimension, which will make it the largest wardrobe in Hollywood. Aside from housing perhaps the largest assortment of wardrobes in the motion picture industry, there will be accommodations for customers and assistants, special fitting rooms, and one floor entirely for the use of extras.

The new still photograph portrait studio has already been installed and is now in operation. An expert photographer and staff of assistants is busy from morning until night making portaits of artists under contract to Fox.

For some considerable time since Fox acquired the Fox Hills property, building operations have been going on. Numerous buildings have been erected for permanent use, and a number of streets have been laid out for production purposes. These include a Western Street, a New England Street, a Spanish Street, an old English Street, a French ruin street, two haciendas and detached farm house. In addition to these, operation has been begun upon the construction of a reproduction of the city of Johnstown, Pennsylvania, as it appeared in 1889 when the great flood swept it from the valley. This facsimile of Johnstown will be used in connection with "The Johnstown Flood," which is now being produced. Other building operations at Fox Hills include the erection of cyclorama, a treadmill, skyline, the largest individual motion picture stage in the world, a new permanent portable stage, and new electric generator sets.

Charles Chaplin Making Ready to Start Production of "The Circus"

CHARLIE CHAPLIN in "The Circus" is the latest announcement coming from the Chaplin studio. The comedian is getting ready to start production on this picture and hopes to have it ready for release next Spring or Summer.

The interior stage at the studio has been transformed into a circus gymnasium and Chaplin and his assistants are going through a daily routine of trick stunts. The story was conceived by Chaplin and the action will center around the "big-tops." Charlie will not appear in the usual garb of the circus, but in the usual habiliments of old, the baggy pants, trick hat and cane, the mammoth shoes and minute moustache.

Georgia Hale will be the girl in "The Circus" in the role of dancer and equestrienne, and Henry Bergman will again be in the cast as the ring master. Rollie Totheroh, A. S. C. and Jack Wilson, who have been Chaplin's cameramen for ten years will again be the men behind the cameras. Actual camera work is scheduled to start in the near future.

The Chaplin studio staff, comprising General Manager Alfred Reeves in charge; Danny Hall, technical and art director; Edward Manson, editorial; Joseph Van Meter, master of properties; Frank Testera, chief electrician; William Bergdonoff, master carpenter; Harry Levin, laboratory chief and the numerous assistants are looking forward to a busy winter.

Predicts Epochal Year for '26

Fraser Foresees Keener Competition From Production and Selling Angle

THE keenest competition, from a production and selling angle, the motion picture business ever has known, is going to make 1926 an epochal year for the cinema, in the opinion of William R. Fraser, general manager of the Harold Lloyd Corporation.

"The year which is now rapidly drawing to a close, was, taken on the whole, a very good year from a production standpoint," states Mr. Fraser, "but developed little of a sensational or startling nature. But every idication points to a remarkable year during the next twelve-month, because the competition will be so keen every individual producer in the industry will have to be on his mettle to meet the high class product of his rival. This goes for big companies as well as for the smaller producing units.

"A picture-educated public has demonstrated more forcibly than ever during the waning year that they no longer will accept the poor pictures, and on the other hand that they will give the fullest measure of support to the higher grade product.

William R. Fraser, general manager of Harold Lloyd Pictures Corporation.

"The main trouble with most pictures during the present year has been their lack of story material. It has been demonstrated time and again that the storyless motion picture is passe. In my opinion the star will always remain paramount in this indutry, as in almost any amusement or sport, but even the greatest luminary left high and dry with poor story material is bound to suffer a loss of public prestige. I think this was clearly illustrated in a number of instances through 1925.

"You cannot escape from the fact that a popular star is a great goodwill asset for any theatre. There are countless thousands who never go to a motion picture theatre except when their favorite star, or stars, are playing there. Take for example the tremendous run enjoyed by 'The Freshman' at the Colony Theatre in New York. Mr. Lloyd's picture ran there for ten weeks. New Yorkers in the industry figured no picture ever could do that at the Colony. Yet 'The Freshman' did.

"There apparently is a dearth of story material available for the screen, and I sincerely hope that the new year will bring out a new angle of thought amongst writers who know how to pen words that can be transcribed into motion picture action. It seems to me that many great writers fail at motion picture work because of their inability to grasp the difference between high sounding words, and faultlessly constructed plots, rather than to words that could be photographed in action. In other terms, they lacked what has come to be known as 'picture minds.'

"Keep your eyes on the comedy field this year. The greatest triumphs of the 1925 screen year have been comedies. Comedies throughout the entire year have been the big bets, and in 1926 they will continue to have the same box office potency. I look for the spectacle to have another vogue this year, with the release of pictures like 'Ben Hur,' and 'The Wanderer.'"

Lasky Announces Expansion Program

FOLLOWING his return to Hollywood, Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in charge of production announced a gigantic expansion program to provide facilities for a far more extensive production program than ever before contemplated. Huge stages will be built to embrace two square blocks and the Realart studio will be reopened on Beverly Boulevard.

Jesse L. Lasky

Regarding the program Lasky said: "In 1922, stage four was built at the Lasky studio to provide an additional 30,000 square feet which brought the total up to 90,000 square feet. We felt that that would be ample to take care of production for a period of 10 years. But a year ago we found it necessary to add another 10,000 square feet of stage space, which was done on our Argyle street lot, bringing the total to 100,000 square feet.

"Now the first conference on my arrival in Hollywood has resulted in plans for immediate reopening of the Realart studio to provide us with still additional 41,000 square feet and construction of other stages on the Hollywood studio premises. We are beginning the most splendid era in the annals of motion pictures, one that we are assured will bring our ideals of the silent art to fruition. Of necessity there will be changes and additions in the line of progress, but these are of a nature that depend upon developments."

Yeggs Hold Up King Bee in St. Louis

Two men held up the King Bee theatre, 1710 North Jefferson avenue, St. Louis, at 11 p. m. November 26 as Patrick Collins, manager, was about to depart for his home. While one of the bandits forced two ushers to lie face downward in the darkened auditorium the other took Collins to the office and compelled him to open the safe. Receipts totaling $557 were taken.

Two weeks prior to that burglars broke into the theatre, blew the safe but were frightened away, leaving the contents scattered about the floor. The theatre is operated by the St. Louis Amusement Company.

The Policy of Hippodrome, Spokane, to Change

Spokane sends announcements to the effect that Maurice Oppenheimer will soon change the policy of the Hippodrome Theatre from a ten cent to a twenty-five cent house, running first-run pictures. Further reports, unconfirmed as yet, indicate that Ray Grombacher of the Liberty Theatre has made and is making attempts to purchase the Hippodrome from Mr. Oppenheimer, and also is negotiating for the American Theatre, owned by John Danz of this city.

Trade Commission Hears Final Argument in F. P.-L. Case

Decision Not Expected For Several Weeks

FINAL arguments in the Famous Players-Lasky case were completed before the Federal Trade Commission on November 24, and the commission now faces the task of considering the 17,000 pages of testimony, the several thousand pages of briefs and the final pleas, which go to make up the record in the case.

The final day's argument brought but one suprise, which came when William H. Fuller, chief counsel for the commission, abandoned his argument and sat down without using more than half of the time allotted him for his final plea for the issuance of an order requiring the respondents to discontinue block booking and to dispose of their theatrical holdings, which he had asked for in his briefs.

Mr. Fuller's abandonment of his argument came after members of the commission had asked a number of questions regarding the refusal of the examiner to permit counsel for the respondents to ask questions which had been allowed when the commission's attorney asked them, and regarding the question of monopoly which Mr. Fuller had insisted was bound up in the case.

Following, as it did, a really brilliant argument by Robert T. Swaine, counsel for Famous Players, Mr. Fuller's action caused considerable surprise and resulted in the respondents' attorneys feeling that they had been very successful in rebutting the Government's charges.

The day opened with Mr. Swaine continuing his argument, started the previous day, challenging the charges of the Government and repeatedly asserting that Famous Players, with interests in but one per cent of the theatres of the country and a controlling interest in but one-half of one per cent, had no monopoly but was the subject of attack because it was probably the most efficient organization in the industry. He declared that the charge that Adolph Zukor had admitted his desire to dominate the industry came from J. D. Williams whom he characterized as "the arch-enemy of this company," but that the charge of monopoly was not made until late in the case.

"This proceeding throughout was an attack upon the right of a motion picture producer to distribute a picture—that a producer did not have the right to own exchanges or theatres," he asserted. "It was not until after the commission's brief had been filed that the question of monopoly came up."

Discussing block booking, Mr. Swaine declared that First National, the organization which has repeatedly been quoted as the obstructing stone to Zukor's ambition, was a greater user of block booking than any distributor, since the entire organization was built on a block-booking plan.

Famous Players went into the South because that section was far behind the rest of the country both in theatres and in theatre management and Paramount Pictures was not getting adequate representation. It was in connection with the acquisition of theatres here, he asserted, that the examiner had refused to permit the respondents to bring out their side of the case, citing a number of questions which were asked, objected to by Mr. Fuller and thrown out by the examiner. Chairman Van Fleet at this point asked for the record showing the throwing out of these queries.

Zukor foresaw what would happen when Famous Players began to take over theatres, Mr. Swaine asserted, and knew that the exhibitors all over the country would organize in opposition "to thwart our efforts to sell our product directly to the public."

Famous Players never required exhibitors to take all pictures or none under the block booking system, he declared, and they were free to take as many or as few as they wished, paying advanced prices where the block was refused. But the advance did not average more than 25 per cent, he asserted.

"This commission is without power to fix the price differential which we shall charge when we sell all of our product to a man or part of it," he said.

Paul Cravath presented the final arguments, for the respondents, going over Mr. Swaine's argument briefly in summation. "I think the commission must have observed by this time that this proceeding has been conducted not as an impartial investigation of the motion picture industry but as a vigorous prosecution of these respondents," he said in opening.

"I regret that the record in this case does not present a more complete picture of the motion picture industry. I regret that probably half of our part of the record is made up of testimony which was offered by us and either rejected in the first instance or ordered stricken out by the examiner."

Discussing the charges of unfair practices, he said, "the cases cited are indicative of the conditions which prevailed in the early days of the industry and probably among competitors as well as in Famous Players. If you investigated the early days of the standard industries you would have the same result.

"The primary question before the commission," he continued, "is: Are the respondents in this case now pursuing or threatening to pursue unfair methods of competition in violation of the law? Is the Famous Players, as now organized and with its present relations, a monopoly or an unlawful restraint of trade in violation of the Sherman law?

"There is no ground for declaring this enterprise unlawful for the simple reason that it is not a monopoly nor does it dominate the motion picture industry. Any theatre owner in the United States can get an adequate supply of films from our competitors suitable for his theatre."

Mr. Fuller's reappearance for his final argument was the signal for the unloosing of a number of questions by Chairman Van Fleet and other members of the commission on the points previously alluded to by counsel for the respondents. Mr. Van Fleet told him that the sole question was whether Famous Players had acquired a monopoly regardless of how they may have acquired it.

The counsel declared that they did have a monopoly in the South and in New England, and submitted from the record tables showing the theatres acquired in the South, enumerating a number of cities where they had not only secured sufficient houses to ensure adequate representation for Paramount Pictures but had acquired practically all of the houses, the record showing that while they own or have interests in only a small fraction of the total theatres of the country they do control an appreciable percentage of the first-run houses in many "key" cities.

During the course of his questioning Mr. Fuller remarked that half the cases brought before the commission are dismissed.

Famous Players acquired theatres throughout New England and the South with intent to monopolize the industry in those sections, he insisted, and the commission, under the Federal Trade Commission act, has authority to deal with the case.

Some weeks will probably elapse before the commission announces its decision in this case.

Yeggs Get Loot in Kansas City Houses

A wave of theatre robberies swept over Kansas City last week. From the safe of the Linwood theatre, large suburban house, robbers obtained $1,173 the night of November 22. The safe, which weighs 1,000 pounds, was dragged thirty-five feet from the office on the ground floor in the front of the building and the combination hammered off. The loss was covered by insurance. Only a few days ago W. O. Lenhart, manager of the house, was robbed of a diamond ring in front of his home at 2710 East Fortieth street. The robbers entered the theatre through a rear window after midnight.

At the Pantages theatre, first run down town house, a bandit rushed in front of the box office, in full view of a down town throng, pointed a revolver at Miss Blanche Shaw, and escaped with $25 in bills, the afternoon of November 23.

Brady Head of Canada Owners

Is Named President of Exhibitor Body at Annual Meeting in Toronto

J. C. BRADY of Toronto was elected president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Canada, Ontario Division, at the Annual Convention which was held at the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, Nov. 27. Mr. Brady's interest in the independence of the exhibitor has covered a great number of years. He received his election running on a ballot with two other nominees.

Roy O'Connor, manager of the Prince of Wales Theatre, Toronto, was elected vice-president. Mr. O'Connor has also identified himself with organization work and is becoming a factor in the Independent movement in Canada.

Joe Cohen was unanimously accorded the privilege of treasuring the funds in the capacity of treasurer, while Roy Lewis of Toronto was again accorded the honor as secretary.

The Board of Directors by a standing vote unanimously elected Harry Alexander as chairman of the board, the members being: Harry Ginsler, S. Major, H. Alexander, Sam Bloom, S. Fine, George Lester, S. Lent, C. Rottenberg, A. Pollakoff, with a reservation for the election of three more members from the Province of Ontario, not domiciled in Toronto.

The Board of Directors is to elect the Grievance and Arbitration Committee from its board, this committee to be rotary, a new representative being elected for each case to be arbitrated. Headquarters for the organization will be secured which can be utilized as a club-room, the room to be utilized for social and fraternal purposes.

V. Saxe, of Mt. Forest, Ontario, was made a member. Toronto exhibitors who attended the business sessions: J. C. Brady, Ald W. A. Summerville, Harry Alexander, Mrs. Bloom, Ray Lewis, H. King, J. C. Cohen, R. O'Connor, H. Ginsler, S. Ulster, S. Bloom, M. Mental, H. Lester, S. Fine, A. Applebaum, G. Lester, A. Pollakoff, S. Major, J. Smith, N. Rittenberg, J. Gertzbein, S. Krestell, C. Baillie, Sam Lent, S. Lester, C. Rottenberg and A. Rottenberg.

Big Chance for Young Authors

$20,000 Offered for Best First Novel by First National and Book Concerns

THROUGH a combined competition offered by First National Pictures, Inc., Pictorial Review, Dodd, Mead and Company and Curtis Brown, Ltd. young authors whose talents have not been recognized, will have an opportunity to establish themselves in the forefront of the literary field.

The plan as mapped is a First-Novel competition, which assures recognition for the winner through serialization in Pictorial Review, publication in novel form by Dodd, Mead and a screen production by First National. The contest will be managed by Curtis Brown.

The prize offerings include from First National $10,000 for the motion picture rights; from Pictorial Review $5,500 for serialization in the United States and the Dominions of Canada and Newfoundland; from Dodd, Mead the usual book royalties with an advance of $2,000 against such royalties.

The judges of the competition are Arthur T. Vance, representing Pictorial Review; Frank Dodd, representing Dodd, Mead and Company, and Richard A. Rowland, representing First National Pictures.

According to the terms of the competition all novels must be submitted before September 1st, 1926. The prize-winning novel will be published in Pictorial Review by November 1st, 1927. The book will be published by Dodd, Mead on or before November 1st, 1927, but not earlier than the completion of the serial.

The contest is open to all writers whose work has not yet appeared in novel form. It is a definite move towards revealing new talent and fresh inspiration, which, it is generally agreed, are needed in the creative fields of motion picture production. No limitations are placed on the type of story that may be submitted. It may deal with any phase of life that inspires the author to sincere expression.

Before a decision is reached, it is agreed that the three judges must be of the same opinion in regard to the best work submitted. If for any reason one of the judges named is unable to act, it is understood that the concern which he represents shall appoint a substitute. Contributions will be judged solely on their merits as works of creative writing adapted to publication and motion picture presentation.

Lionel Barrymore Signed for Ginsberg Release

LIONEL BARRYMORE has been signed to play the part of Slim Jim Morey in "Brooding Eyes" the fifth Banner production for release through Henry Ginsberg Distributing Corporation.

Lionel Barrymore

Barrymore was selected from among many players as the actor with the requisite qualifications to play the name role in this story of the underworld which tells of a super crook who pits his brains against another master mind in a struggle for the life and happiness of his daughter. The picturization will be made from the novel by John Goodwin.

Delay Colorado Action On Sunday Shows

The City Council of Golden, Colorado, continued definite action on the Sunday closing ordinance until their first meeting in December. After a red hot session in the City Hall last Friday evening in which every conceivable argument for and against Sunday movies was heard by the capacity crowd, it was thought best to continue any definite action until a later date.

W. M. McFarland, manager of the Gem theatre, Golden, presented a petition for a repeal of the blue law which was passed in 1879 and which prohibits exhibitions on Sunday in Golden. Manager McFarland made a lengthly argument in favor of Sunday shows. He presented a communication from the School of Mines Student Body Council favering Sunday movies, together with other evidence that the general public of Golden was favorable to his theatre being open on Sunday.

M. D. Flattery, Theatrical Magnate, Dead

M. Douglas Flattery, one of the leading figures in theatrical financing in Boston and vicinity dropped dead on Boylston street, Boston, on November 26. He was 55 years old. Flattery, a native of Dungarvan, Ireland, was a former captain in the British army and had served as college professor, lawyer, and was author of many books and plays. He built the Copley theatre, Boston, in 1914, the Orpheum in 1916, was vice-president, secretary and managing director of Loew's Boston theatres, vice-president and managing director of State Theatre Realty Company and connected with many other firms both in the motion picture and other lines of business.

Funeral services were held Saturday, November 28, practically every one having to do with the picture business being present.

Seven New Members Join Kansas-Missouri

Seven new members were added to the M.P.T.O.A. Kansas-Missouri roster following C. E. "Doc" Cook's trip through the territory. "Doc" is business manager of the organization and he says the exhibitors were in a fairly good frame of mind.

New Sales Promotion Director for F. B. O.

R. K. BARTLETT, one of the veterans of the motion picture industry, has joined F. B. O. as Sales Promotion Director to replace Al Boasberg, who recently left for Hollywood as gag man for Buster Keaton.

Mr. Bartlett began his film career at the Old American Biograph Studio, and later went abroad as manager of Earl's Court Exhibition and Olympia, London, Magic City Park, Paris and the American Park at Marseilles. He was later vice-president and general manager of the Stanley Film Co. of London and for four years general representative in Great Britain of the late Thomas H. Ince. His most recent affiliation was with H. Grindell-Matthews, when he publicized and exploited the famous "Death Ray" picture.

M-G-M Likely to Control K. C. House

Persistent Rumor Says Company Will be in Charge of Booking; Millions in Theatres Planned

NEW houses running into millions of dollars are announced this week as ready to go into construction, with rumors in one case at least as to whom they will be controlled by.

Along with an additional announcement of plans concerning the proposed $3,000,000 Midland theatre in Kansas City, a house which will seat 4,000 persons and which will follow the presentation policy of the Capitol theatre in New York City, there is spreading a persistent rumor that the house will be controlled by Metro-Goldwyn, as far as the booking is concerned.

With Paramount and Universal in the majority control of down town first-run houses, it is known that Metro-Goldwyn for many months has been seeking a suitable opening in Kansas City for its product. Officials of the Midland Theatre Company, which will erect the theatre, neither deny nor confirm the Metro-Goldwyn phase of the project. The ten theatres in Kansas operated by the company strictly are chain houses, but the Kansas City theatre presents an entirely different proposition, it is said. That an alliance with "one of the large producing companies" is expected, officers of the company readily admit.

The layout of the theatre will permit an orchestra of more than forty pieces. Some idea of the scale of the building planned is gained from the fact that it will have a total frontage of 514 feet on the three streets—Thirteenth, Baltimore and Main—mostly available for an impressive collection of shops. The theatre entrance will be on Main street, but exits will lead to all three streets.

Herbert M. Woolf is president of the Midland company and M. B. Shanberg, manager. Additional announcement of the plans for the theatre will be made soon, Mr. Woolf said.

Definite announcement was made in Seattle by the representatives of the Orpheum vaudeville circuit to the effect that they will begin construction within the next thirty days of a 3,000 seat theatre that will eclipse in grandeur and size any house in the Pacific Northwest. The house will be built on an entire square block bounded by Fifth and Westlake Avenues and Stewart and Virginia streets, purchased late in November for a total cash consideration of $350,000. The theatre itself will represent a construction cost of close to $1,250,000.

As forecast several weeks ago in MOTION PICTURE NEWS, the house will probably be devoted to a combined motion picture and vaudeville policy, although this is not positively assured as yet. It depends on the disposition that is made of the lease on the present Orpheum theatre at Second Avenue and Virginia Street. The theatre will include every late construction feature known to theatre architects. It will seat 1,500 on the lower floor and the same number on the balcony. There will be no gallery in the house. Elevators with a capacity of 50 persons between the main floor and three mezzanine floors and dressing rooms with shower baths and private telephone connections are among the features to be included. B. Marcus Priteca, well-known as the architect for many of the Pantages Theatres throughout the nation, is responsible for the plans of the new Orpheum. The theatre will be ready for a gala opening on September 1, 1926.

A new $300,000.00 theatre in the Capitol Hill District of Denver will be erected at the corner of East Colfax and Race Street. Harry E. Huffman, owner of the Blue Bird and Bide-A-Wee Theatres, and President of the M.P.T.O. of Colorado, announces the purchase of seven lots on the corner of East Colfax Avenue and Race Street and the completion of plans for his new $300,000.00 Aladdin Theatre. The theatre will be six stories in heighth and will have the second largest capacity of any play house in the city. It will be patterned after the Taj Mahal Temple of India and will mark the latest development in the motion picture industry of Denver. Its plans will follow closely the oriental style in lines and color, and with every known comfort and convenience included in its specification. It will also contain a number of innovations for Denver Theatre fans. Financial arrangements have been completed for some time, but it was only a few days ago that the purchase of a suitable location was finally completed. It is expected the theatre will be completed August 1, 1926.

Exhibitors Backing Laugh Month

Theatre Owners And Circuit Heads In All Parts Of Country Notify Committee They Will Support Drive

THE committee on the Short Features Advertising Association in charge of the National Laugh Month drive to be held during January reports that exhibitors in all parts of the United States have written in to signify their endorsement of the movement and pledge their active cooperation in making the campaign a successful one from every standpoint.

According to the report from the committee the earliest in the field, with elaborate plans to aid in the campaign, is the West Coast Circuit, which will undertake to promulgate the short feature subject throughout the Pacific Coast territory. A special meeting was held last week on the West Coast, attended by representatives of producers of short-features, at which each individual was assigned a special part in the work of developing the "National Laugh Month" idea in his territory. Cooperation of the numerous studios producing comedies has been promised, and not the least of the events planned for the drive is the personal appearance in theatres throughout the territory, of many comedy stars who will be working at the different West Coast studios during the month.

Chicago and the Middle West "sees its duty and does it" as witness the news from the Windy City that the entire Balaban and Katz circuit, as well as the Midwest organization will do everything in its power to make a success of the "National Laugh Month," with the Lubliner and Trinz houses to aid in making it unanimous.

The Stanley Company of America, in Philadelphia, which demands a place in the sun of "Laugh Month"; the Stillman and Allan Theatres in Cleveland, giants of the Loew string in Ohio, with their lesser satellites; the Rialto of Washington, D. C.; the Alhambra of Milwaukee; the Broadway Strand of Detroit; the Cameo of Pittsburgh and its namesake in San Francisco; the American in Denver; the Columbia of Portland, Oregon and the Columbia of Seattle, Washington; the Clemmer, Spokane; the Liberty, Kansas City; the Randolph, Chicago; the Rivoli, St. Louis; the Capitol at Dallas, Texas and the Olympic of Buffalo, are backing the drive wholeheartedly.

In the meantime the committee in charge of the drive has not neglected the local territory. Major Edward Bowes, managing director of the Capitol Theatre, New York, has expressed himself as in favor of the short feature. In an interview on this subject given out last week, he said:

"I believe very strongly in the use of short units. Beyond a certain number of minutes you cannot hope to hold the interest and attention of your audience.

"We cannot, with each number, hope to please everybody, but by offering a variety of quick, bright numbers we strike a happy average in the entertainment so that there is something that everybody can enjoy.

Dave Loew, one of the executives of the Loew circuit, comes out in favor of the "Laugh Month" idea. Lee Ochs, one of the foremost of New York exhibitors, has expressed a desire to take an active part in the campaign. Dave Lustig, of the Regun Theatre, New York, has declared himself for it. Hy Gainsboro, with his headquarters in Flushing, is casting about for ways and means of selling "Laugh Month" to his Long Island audience. At a meeting of representatives of producers in Albany, New York, a strong program has been laid out. As early as this, the State Capital agencies have been assured by Mr. Hill of the Albany Strand and Mr. Roach of the Farash Theatres in Schenectady, that their towns will come through strong.

A late dispatch from San Francisco advises that among the prominent First Run theatres of that city which have promised to support the "Laugh Month" movement are the California, the Granada, the Warfield, and the St. Francis. The telegram further advises that additional circuits and theatres are being lined up for the occasion.

Yost Goes Back to Fox Publicity

R. M. YOST, until recently Los Angeles exchange manager for Fox has been appointed head of the West Coast publicity department for Fox by Winfield R. Sheehan, general sales manager. After a period of newspaper work Yost became identified with Oliver Morosco when the latter was producing "Peg O' My Heart" and other plays of that period and soon became a well-known figure in the theatrical world through his success in putting over Morosco's productions. He served as an officer in the world war, after which he joined the Fox West Coast publicity department but left to take charge of the Los Angeles exchange. Now that he's going back to publicity work George Hanes, who has been assistant manager of the exchange will succeed him as manager.

Rules School Boards Can't Spend Public Money

Public School motion picture exhibits were dealt a blow by a ruling of Attorney General C. C. Crabbe to C. L. Swaim, prosecuting attorney of Clinton County. The opinion holds that school boards are without authority to spend public money for motion picture equipment or to enter into contract with private concerns for exhibitions which the contract involves public money, and admission is charged, though proceeds go to the schools.

School boards, may, however, expend money for motion pictures as a part of any branch of study. The opinion does not say whether contracts for the showing of motion pictures in schools can be made where no public funds are involved.

Robert Kane Will Produce "Dancer of Paris"

Screen rights to Michael Arlen's "The Dancer of Paris" have been acquired by Robert T. Kane, who will place the story in production immediately upon completion of "The Reckless Lady," which is now in its third week at the Cosmopolitan Studio, New York. "The Dancer of Paris" will be distributed by First National. Alfred A. Santell will direct.

New Booking Plan Inaugurated by Goetz

A New co-operative booking deal has been worked out by Charles Goetz of Dependable Exchanges of New York, distributors of the twelve Gotham productions for New York state exclusive of Manhattan, whereby Dependable Exchange will donate 15% of all bookings taken in in this territory to the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York State. In return, by an arrangement with Lou A. Buettner, of the Majestic theatre, Cohoes, N. Y., and Chairman of the Albany zone of the M. P. T. O. of N. Y. and Jules Michaels, Chairman of the Buffalo Zone each member of the M. P. T. O. of N. Y. will cooperate with Dependable in securing bookings for Goetz.

This plan is considered to give the exchange a large staff of live-wire salesmen who will be in the position of also being buyers of the product they are selling.

Helen Kennedy, Vaudeville Star, in Picture Field

Helen Kennedy, a singing and dancing violinist who is well known to theatregoers throughout the U. S. and Canada, is entering the motion picture field and will appear shortly in leading picture houses which feature added attractions and special musical acts.

Miss Kennedy is a versatile performer who plays the violin, dances and sings. The act carries an elaborate wardrobe and a brilliant stage setting. Her accompanist does a piano specialty, and a lyric tenor yodeler aids her in putting over special song number arrangements.

Al Hicks Managing Gold Theatre In Chicago

Al Hicks, formerly manager of Simansky & Miller's Windsor Theatre, and at one time publicity man for Paramount in Charlotte, North Carolina, is now manager of Samuel Abraham's Gold Theatre at 3411 W. Roosevelt Road.

"Scarlet Letter" Next for Lillian Gish

"THE SCARLET LETTER" will be Lillian Gish's next starring vehicle for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer following "La Boheme," which is now nearing completion. An elaborate picturization of the Nathaniel Hawthorne story is promised. No director has yet been decided upon for the picture, but an announcement will be forthcoming in the near future.

Asher to Make One for First National

By the terms of a deal just concluded between E. M. Asher of Faultless Pictures, and R. A. Rowland, the former will produce the Drury Lane melodrama, "Good Luck," for First National release. Conway Tearle is to be seen in the starring role. The production is scheduled to start in Los Angeles about the first of the year. Asher is the producer of Corinne Griffith picture.

"Chimes of Normandy" for Anita Stewart

Anita Stewart, who has just been placed under contract by A. H. Sebastian, will have the starring role in the Metropolitan picturization of the musical comedy success, "The Chimes of Normandy." The screen version is being prepared by Anthony Coldewey. Miss Stewart will have the orle of Serpolette, while the leading male role will be in the hands of Allan Forrest. Other parts will be filled following the selection of a director.

"Among Those Present," starring Harold Lloyd. A popular demand edition of one of Lloyd's most successful comedies.

Three Warner Releases for December

THREE Warner Brothers features are set for release in December. They are; "Hogan's Alley," "The Pleasure Buyers" and "Lady Windemere's Fan." The two former have already had successful pre-release showings at Warner's Theatre on Broadway, New York.

The first of the trio to be released will be "Hogan's Alley," starring Monte Blue, with Patsy Ruth Miller playing the leading feminine role. Others in the cast are Willard Louis, Louise Fazenda, Max Davidson, "Texas Kid," Frank Hagney, Frank Bond, Nigel Barrie, Mary Carr and Ben Turpin. Roy Del Ruth directed. The release date is set for December 12th.

On December 19th "The Pleasure Buyers" will be released with Irene Rich in the stellar role. In the supporting cast are Clive Brook, Ed Piel, Frank Campeau, Heinie Conklin, Gayne Whitman, Don Alvarado, Winter Hall, June Marlowe, Frank Leigh, Carey Harrison, John Dillon. Chester Withey directed.

"Lady Windemere's Fan" is set for release December 26th. The world premiere took place Tuesday night of this week at Casa Lopez in New York. In the cast are Ronald Colman, May McAvoy, Bert Lytell, Edward Martindel, Carrie Daumery, Helen Dunbar and Billie Bennett.

U. K. Exhibitors Veto Quota Scheme

Referendum Among Theatre Men Shows 679 Against, 609 For; Canada Interested in Production Possibility

BY a vote of 679 to 609, British exhibitors have rejected the trade's production scheme calling for an initial 10 per cent. of English films in all programs on January 1st, 1927, rising to 25 per cent. by 1929, according to word received this week. Only about half of the members of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association voted on the matter.

It has been rumored in certain quarters that if the British trade did not come to agreement shortly upon a workable plan, the Government would impose a scheme of its own, supposed to be much more severe than that worked out by the trade committee. This is rather indefinite, however, and many observers doubt that the Government will actually interfere therefore in the question.

According to the Canadian Department of Trade and Commerce, Ottawa, one of the first things that must be decided under the British quota plan for moving pictures is just exactly what is meant by a "British picture."

Already a cable has been sent from the Department to Hon. P. C. Larkin, Canadian High Commission at London, England, relative to the subject and announcement was made at Ottawa on November 27 that an official of the Moving Picture Branch of the Canadian Department of Trade and Commerce would be sent to England in January if necessary to discuss the definition of "British Picture" with British legislators and cinema authorities in the Old Country.

Fifteen Houses Building in Buenos Aires

CHARLES KING, manager for United Artists in Argentina, Chile, Urguay, Paraguay, Bolivia and Peru, who is now here awaiting the return from the coast of Hiram Abrams, president of United Artists, states there are fifteen houses under construction or planned in Buenos Aires, the city, one with a population of 2,000,000 having only 200 theatres at present. King also declared business is good in his territory which covers a larger area than the United States.

In his opinion American distributors would do better to launch offices of their own in South America instead of the practice of disposing of their product to local distributors. According to King, United Artists, Famous Players, Fox and Universal are the only American distributors who have organizations of their own in Argentina.

Twenty-four sheets stands are few in number, most of the outdoor advertising being confined to one-sheets plastered on the walls of buildings. Interest in new pictures, states King, is worked up almost entirely through the newspaper columns.

The Canadian Government is very much interested in the proposed quota plan in the United Kingdom.

"Anyone can see the immense possibilities for Canada under this arrangement," declared an Ottawa official in an interview. "If Britain decides that a British picture is one that must be made in the British Isles, then it will be discrimination against Canada and Empire preferential treatment will have been forgotten. It will mean a lot to Canada in the form of a new industry if United States film companies are encouraged, under legislation, to come to Canada for the making of pictures for British consumption. Canada has everything in the way of scenery and the producers can make all the pictures required during the eight months of open summer weather."

Canada's position is this:—It is desired that the Imperial Government will make a ruling that a British picture can be made in any part of the British Empire, after which the Dominion of Canada will do everything possible to encourage U. S. companies to establish producing units in Canada.

Attention is also drawn to the possibilities for Canadian-made pictures under the Most Favored Nations Treaties between Canada and some 20 other countries and Dominions, including France and her colonies, The Netherlands and colonies, Italy, Spain, British West Indies, Australia and others. Canadian-made pictures would gain special tariff concessions under these trade agreements.

Ufa Will Distribute Thirty Jewels

Universal to Select Other American Product Here for German Firm; Other Exchange Systems Acquired

ALTHOUGH many of the most important details will not be settled until the arrival in Germany of Carl Laemmle, president of Universal Pictures Corporation, to close the deal with Ufa announced last week, Mr. Laemmle this week gave out some interesting features of the plan. As stated last week, the deal means interchange of product between the two companies, with Universal assisting Ufa in the production of pictures suitable for this market.

Just how many Universal pictures Ufa will distribute and shows in its theatres is not certain, but it is assured that Ufa will handle the 30 Universal Jewels, at least. The balance of the Ufa program will comprise its own production and a considerable number of other American pictures, to be selected in the United States by Universal in consultation with an expert of the Ufa company, familiar with German public taste.

The Ufa chain of theatres embraces at the present time 143 theatres, but the company books for 600. In addition to this, Ufa maintains a system of exchanges in Germany, Austria, Holland, Switzerland and other European countries.

Craver Resigns Carolina M. P. T. O. Post

R. D. CRAVER, president of the Carolina Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association, has resigned. Charles Picquet, who was vice-president of the organization has been elected president for the remainder of the term, by the executive committee which is comprised of A. F. Sams, Jr., A. F. Sams, Sr., of Winston-Salem, James Estridge of Gastonia and R. D. Craver of Charlotte.

Mr. Laemmle stated this week that Universal had definitely acquired the releasing rights to Ufa productions in all English-speaking countries, and would also handle them in any country where Ufa did not now have an efficient distributing organization.

Ufa's agreement to distribute the Universal Jewels will not go into effect this season, as Ufa has already contracted for a number of pictures from Famous Players, Metro-Goldwyn and others, and all existing contracts will be carried out. Next summer, presumably, the selection of the first Universal-Ufa program will commence.

The acquisition of two other German exchange systems was also announced by Mr. Laemmle this week. One is the Landlicht exchanges, a subsidiary of Ufa, and the other is the Bruckman chain of exchanges, recently acquired independently of the other deal. This will give Universal a major portion of the releasing facilities in Germany.

Carl Laemmle sails for Germany on Saturday of this week, where he will sign the final papers and make the first payment on the 15,000,000 gold mark loan. Details regarding the interchange of players, directors and the like will be taken up at that time. Laemmle has already under contract E. A. Dupont, one of the outstanding Ufa directors, to take effect in 1927, but he may be brought here sooner under the new arrangement. Certain Universal stars will be loaned to Ufa, and Ufa stars may be brought here. Ufa desires Mary Philbin for the role of Marguerite in "Faust," but there is some question as to whether the production at Universal City can be arranged so as to permit of her absence for so long a period.

Fairbanks "Black Pirates" Ready for Sea

Douglas Fairbanks and his "Black Pirates" company will spend a week at sea on board the Llewelyn J. Morse, recently purchased by Fairbanks and remodeled into a pirate ship. On the sea voyage some of the most dramatic scenes in the picture will be shot.

Accompanying Fairbanks and Director Albert Parker will be Donald Crisp, Sam de Grasse, Charles Stevens, Al Mac Quarrie, Charles Gorman and Roy Coulson. A band of wrestlers and ex-prize fighters will go along as pirates.

Schooner Purchased For "Desperate Moment"

Henry Ginsberg has purchased a schooner for the filming of the sea sequence in "A Desperate Moment," the fourth Royal Picture for Henry Ginsberg release. Wanda Hawley and Theodor Von Eltz are the featured players. In the supporting cast are James Neill, Dan Mason, Bill Franey, Sheldon Lewis and Leo White. Jack Dwan is directing.

Leonard Completes "Dance Madness" Cast

The cast for Robert Z. Leonard's production of "Dance Madness" for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has been completed with the addition of Mario Carillo in the role of Count Strokoff. Claire Windsor and Conrad Nagel have the leading roles. The other two important roles are played by Hedda Hopper and Douglas Gilmore.

William Humphreys Joins "Danger Girl" Cast

"The Danger Girl" cast has been augmented by the addition of William Humphreys. This is Priscilla Dean's starring vehicle for Metropolitan Pictures Corporation. John Bowers is appearing opposite Miss Dean.

De Mille Starts "Volga Boatman"

CECIL B. DE MILLE has started shooting the opening scenes on "The Volga Boatman," eight of the series of twelve pictures he is making for release through Producers Distributing Corporation. The editorial department is now busy preparing the last four units of production.

"The Volga Boatman" company is now on location along the Sacramento River. William Boyd, Julia Faye, Elinor Fair and Theodore Kosloff are the featured players.

Finishing touches are being applied to "Braveheart" by Alan Hale, who is directing this picture, with Rod La Rocque starring. La Rocque's next vehicle, "Red Dice" is to go into production next week.

Rupert Julian started shooting this week on "Silence," with a cast headed by H. B. Warner. Leatrice Joy will start work in "Eve's Leaves" on January 4th.

Cast Completed for Arrow's "Self Defense"

The cast of "Self Defense," which Major Maurice Campbell is producing at the Whitman Bennett Glendale studio, has been completed and now includes Eileen Percy, Moy Bennett, Jane Jennings, Jimmy Ward, Edna Murphy, George O'Hara, Wilfred Lucas, Jean Lebedes, Jack Raymond and Ray Allen.

This picture version of Elizabeth Yorke Miller's magazine story, will be released as one of the twenty-four Golden Arrow productions the latter part of January.

Col. Wyman Manager of Free Casting Office

The Executive Committee of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, Los Angeles, announces the appointment of Col. O. C. Wyman as the General Manager of the free casting office for extra talent, which it is expected will be in operation before the first of the year. Col. Wyman has been with the Traffic Commission of Los Angeles for the past two years.

Leads Signed for Arthur F. Beck Production

Phyllis Haver, Wallace McDonald and Stuart Holmes have been signed for leading roles in "Don't Lie to Your Wife," the first of four productions which Arthur F. Beck is producing as part of the twenty-four Golden Arrow first run features for 1925-26. Filming will be begun next Monday under the direction of Frank O'Connor.

Test Showing for "Girl from Montmarte"

A test showing of "The Girl From Montmartre" has been arranged for the Playhouse Theatre at Mamaroneck, Saturday evening, December 5th. It will be attended by a party of First National executives to test the reaction of a typical audience to the picture. Barbara Le Marr and Lewis Stone are featured in the production.

Alice Calhoun Signed as Langdon Lead

After a two months' search through Hollywood Harry Langdon has selected Alice Calhoun as his leading lady for his first feature length comedy for First National. Edwards Davis, Carlton Griffin and Tom Murray will have important parts in this production which will be directed by Harry Edwards who has directed Langdon in many of his short length pictures. Langdon expects to spend several months on the production of the feature for which a title will be selected soon.

Don Meany Given First National Post

John McCormick, production head for First National on the west coast has engaged Don Meany as business manager for Colleen Moore and her film activities. Meany, who has had wide experience in the film industry assumed his new post last week. His initial work with Miss Moore is the business end of "Irene," the production the star is now making.

"King of Turf" Goes Into Production

"The King of the Turf" goes into production this week at the F.B.O. studios with Kenneth Harlan and Patsy Ruth Miller in the leading roles. It is described as a dramatic comedy of the racing world. The story is an original by Louis Joseph Vance and John C. Brownell and the adaptation was by J. Grubb Alexander.

Hattons Writing "Fifth Avenue" Titles

A. H. Sebastian has engaged Frederic and Fanny Hatton to write titles for "Fifth Avenue," which has just been completed at the Metropolitan Studios in Hollywood. The picture is being edited by J. C. Bruggy and will be released by Producers Distributing Corporation.

Myton Working On "Isle of Retribution" Script

F.B.O. has assigned Fred Kennedy Myton to do the script on "The Isle of Retribution," last of the Gold Bond specials on the current program. It is an adaptation from the story by Edeson Marshall. Casting will begin in the immediate future.

Mary Pickford's 'Scraps' Is Completed

"SCRAPS," Mary Pickford's second feature picture of the year, has been completed. It is the story of a baby farm in the swamp country and Miss Pickford again appears in the type of role in which she won her greatest fame. The picture gets its title from the "scraps of humanity" with which it has to deal.

Miss Pickford intends to spend several weeks in supervising the cutting and titling of "Scraps," after which she will start work on a third picture before leaving for Europe with her husband, Douglas Fairbanks.

Associated Exhibitors' Line-Up

"PICTURE men with their feet on the ground have set out to present a program for the exhibitor with his eye on the box office," said Oscar Price, president of Associated Exhibitors, Inc., this week in connection with the extensive announcement of that company's product appearing exclusively in this week's MOTION PICTURE NEWS. To which E. J. Smith, in complete charge of sales work for Associated, added this:

" The new sales force of Associated Exhibitors is being built up of go-getters known throughout this industry. They are the highest type of sales executives and possess the one hundred per cent confidence of the theatre owner. In return for this faith on the exhibitor they have to offer product in which they, too, have trust. And it is in that way that the productions making up the Triumphant Thirty have been assembled. There is a definite money-making box-office reason for every picture on the list."

Oscar Price, president of Associated Exhibitors.

The announcement of the Triumphant Thirty group by Associated Exhibitors marks the first gun in the sales campaign of that organization since the recent reorganization that brought in a personnel headed by P. A. Powers and Oscar Price. Or, rather, it is barrage of fire following the news that Associated had acquired the much sought after Peggy Hopkins Joyce vehicle "The Skyrocket." This production, however, is a special, to be handled in a special way, backed by one of the most elaborate advertising and exploitation campaigns ever placed behind a big picture.

"Star Value—Story Value—Production Value—form the keystone upon which the Triumphant Thirty group has been built"; declares an official statement from the Associated organization issued in connection with this week's announcement. "All three are essential, none can be slighted, but naturally Star Value comes first—for you have to get them to the theatre before you can even start to please them.

"The exhibitor recognizes this fact and has little patience with the picture that does not offer him a definite box office pull in the form of star names and strong casts. The exhibitor glancing over the titles and casts of the Triumphant Thirty will quickly realize that the essential 'get 'em' in element has been in the minds of Associated's executives from the start in planning their current schedule.

"Star Value is obviously present in any list of current pictures that presents, in addition to consistently strong supporting casts, such stellar names as:

"Betty Compson, House Peters, Jay Hunt, Alice Joyce, Glenn Hunter, Constance Bennett, Monty Banks, Jack Dempsey, Estelle Taylor, Tom Moore, Eileen Percy, Strongheart, Stuart Holmes, Hope Hampton, Lionel Barrymore, Mae Busch, James Kirkwood, Owen Moore, Marguerite de la Motte, John Bowers, Harold Lloyd, Clara Bow, Blanche Sweet, Jacqueline Logan, Lillian Rich, Bert Lytell, Mildred Ryan, Wallace MacDonald, Percy Marmont, Nita Naldi, Eugene O'Brien, Virginia Valli, Jean Hersholt, Rockliffe Fellows, Robert Edeson, and many others.

"As for Story Value, it is a significant fact that with few exceptions, every story on the Associated list is an adaptation of a published novel. There is no better proof of story strength than the fact that a plot has stood the acid test of publication and popular success in printed form. The few exceptions to the list of published works in the Associated story list are the product of some of the best known screen creators in the industry—Allan Dwan and C. Gardner Sullivan, for example, being seen on the roster.

"Production value may be guaranteed by two essentials—capable direction, and the expenditure of sufficient money to properly stage the particular story. No question of money will be raised by any one viewing the pictures in the Triumphant Thirty, while the matter of direction can be indicated by the presence of such names as Edward H. Griffith, Hugh Dierker, Joseph Henabery, Diamant Berger, Tom Terriss, Paul Powell, Lloyd Ingraham, Stuart Paton, S. E. V. Taylor, and the producer-director Lewis Moomaw.

"Variety of appeal has been assured by laying out a program that, as one Associated official puts it, could be played thirty days in succession without too closely repeating on any type of production or star name. Rapid action on Western, fast-moving comedy, society drama, and colorful romance sprinkle the list."

Stars of the Triumphant Thirty

DETAILS of the group of Triumphant Thirty features which Associated Exhibitors have announced are included in the following sketches which give the names of the stars and type of stories.

"Keep Smiling," Monte Banks. Fast action comedy—motor boats—speed races—and a whirlwind finish. "Manhattan Madness," Jack Dempsey, Estelle Taylor. Dempsey goes into the underworld to save the girl—Fights—shooting and laughs. "Headlines," Alice Joyce. The newspaper woman tries to keep her sister from the mire of scandal—finds herself in the headlines.

"Under the Rouge," Tom Moore, Eileen Percy. She wanted to go straight yet had to live by her wits—From the underworld to the upper world. "Fifty-Fifty," Hope Hampton, Lionel Barrymore. Is marriage a fifty-fifty proposition?—A society drama in beautiful setting. "Camille of the Barbary Coast," Mae Busch, Owen Moore. Even his father turned against him when he did his bit in jail—But a girl of the Barbary Coast brought him back.

"His Buddy's Wife," Glenn Hunter, Edna Murphy. An after the war story out of the tense situation suggested by the title. "Never Weaken," Harold Lloyd. Popular Demand Edition of the famous Lloyd that saw him hanging in mid-air on a steel girder. "Counsel For the Defense," Betty Compson, House Peters, Jay Hunt. A melodrama of high finance and stern justice—Betty in a great role.

"The Pinch Hitter," Glenn Hunter, Constance Bennett. He was the college boob but he stepped to the bat in the pinch because of the girl. "North Star," Strongheart, Stuart Holmes. The greatest dog star in a story that starts in society and ends in Northwest woods. "Lover's Island," Hope Hampton, James Kirkwood. A romance of the sea coast with an all star cast.

E. J. Smith, general sales manager, Associated Exhibitors.

"Hearts and Fists," Marguerite de la Motte, John Bowers. Melodrama of the big timber country made in the Washington woods. "I Do," Harold Lloyd. Remember Harold Lloyd and Mildred Davis as bride and groom? "The Lady From Hell," Blanche Sweet. The Scotch Kilties earned that name in the war and this hero proves his on a Wyoming ranch.

"The Shadow of the Law," Clara Bow, Stuart Holmes. Crook melodrama with Clara Bow the center of Stuart Holmes' intrigue. "White Mice," Jacqueline Logan. Richard Harding Davis story of an American soldier of fortune and a pretty senorita amid South American revolutions. "Ship of Souls," Lillian Rich, Bert Lyttell. Story of the Far North by Emerson Hough, who wrote "The Covered Wagon."

"The Broadway Boob," Glenn Hunter, Mildred Ryan. He left home a rube and returned to save the day for Dad. "Two Can Play," Clara Bow, Wallace MacDonald. A Saturday Evening Post story becomes tense society drama. "The Miracle of Life," Mae Busch, Percy Marmont, Nita Naldi. Mother Love—and the age-old problem: Fear of the sublime mystery, Birth.

"How to Train a Wife," Eugene O'Brien, Virginia Valli, Jean Hersholt. Outdoor melodrama, a thrilling forest fire, and a wife who is trained through suffering. "Play Safe," Monty Banks. Monty races with a railroad train and finishes on the headlight.

"Haunting Hands," (tentative title), Marjorie Daw, Ben Alexander, William Tilden. World's champion tennis player in a crook melodrama that ranges from society to the underworld. "The Nutcracker," Edward Everett Horton, Mae Busch. S. S. Hutchinson's production of the well known comedy a drama success. "Shotgun Jones," Western drama with a quick-on-the-trigger hew. "Among Those Present," starring Harold Lloyd. A popular demand edition of one of Lloyd's most successful comedies.

In Production—tentative titles—"Homeless Husbands," Society Drama of complex present day married life set in rich society atmosphere. "The Deadwood Coach," Semi-historic drama of the glorious page in Western history that made a path for "The Iron Horse." "Friendly Wives," "Who's your friend?" "That's no friend—that's my wife." Snappy society drama.

Scenes from Triumphant 30 Group

The scenes on this page are from pictures in the Associated Exhibitors Triumphant Thirty, and are indicative of the nature and action of these releases.

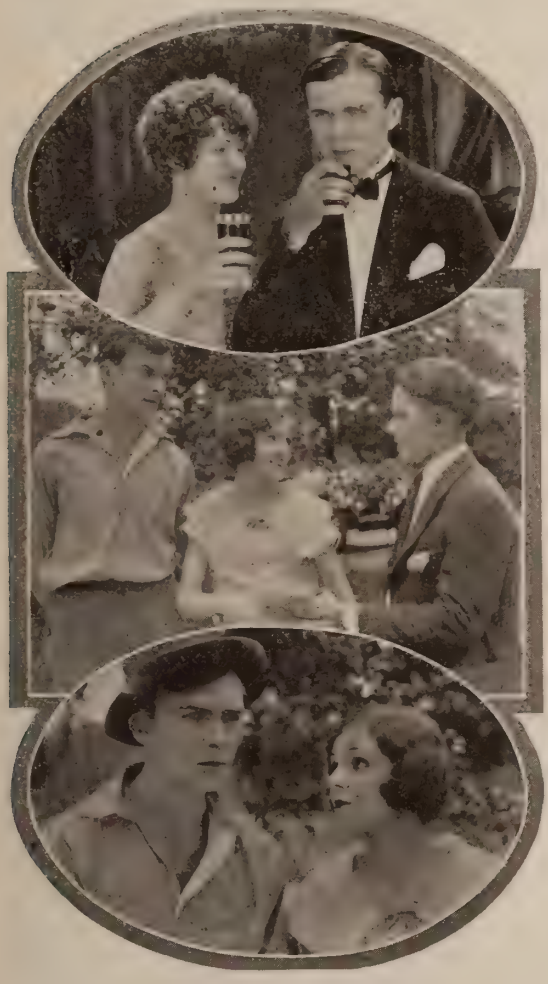
"The Miracle of Life," Associated Exhibitors' problem society drama by Olga Printzlau, directed by S. E. V. Taylor. Mae Busch, Percy Marmont, and Nita Naldi hold the principal roles.

"Lovers' Island," Associated Exhibitors' romantic drama, featuring Hope Hampton, James Kirkwood, and Louis Wolheim. Directed by Diamant-Berger from T. Howard Kelly's popular story.

"How To Train a Wife," stirring melodrama starring Virginia Valli, Jean Hersholt, and Eugene O'Brien. A Lewis Moonmaw production for Associated Exhibitors.

Above—"The Pinch Hitter," an uproarious baseball comedy starring Glenn Hunter, with Constance Bennett. From the story by C. Gardner Sullivan, directed by Joseph Henabery for Associated Exhibitors.

Left—Marguerite de la Motte and John Bowers star in Associated Exhibitors picture, "Hearts and Fists," a smashing drama of love and battle in the big tree country of the northwest, directed by Lloyd Ingram.



Right—"Ship of Souls," melodrama of the great north country with Lillian Rich and Bert Lytell in the leading roles. Directed by Charles Miller from Emerson Hough's famous novel, for Associated Exhibitors.

Pictorial Glimpses of Triumphant 30

New Associated Exhibitors release, "Play Safe," hilarious comedy featuring Monty Banks and made by his own company. A picture full of giggles, gags and hilarity—not to mention thrills.

"Two Can Play," flapper melodrama starring Clara Bow, with Wallace MacDonald, Allan Forrest, and George Fawcett. Picturized by Associated Exhibitors from the Saturday Evening Post story by Gerald Mygatt.

A breath-taking comedy starring Harold Lloyd, and titled "I Do!" A two reeler containing all of the best Lloyd gags concerning marriage, spoiled children, and burglars. Mildred Davis ploys opposite. Directed by Fred Newmeyer for Associated Exhibitors.

"The Shadow of the Law," thrilling crook melodrama in which Clara Bow and Stuart Holmes share the stellar honors, released by Associated Exhibitors. Ralph Lewis and Forrest Stanley are important members of the cast.

Dramatic and humorous moments from some of the Associated Exhibitors Triumphant Thirty releases are pictured on this page, conveying some idea of the romance, comedy and drama contained in the productions of this group.

Keith and Loew to Build in White Plains

A LONG term lease on the theatre being erected by H. & S. Sonn at White Plains, New York, has been taken by the Keith interests. The new theatre, occupying a site where the old Reynolds block formerly stood on Main street almost opposite Mamaroneck Avenue, has been leased for a period of 21 years at a total rental of $2,000,000 with a renewal for a similar period. It will have a seating capacity of 3000 and will be fashioned after the Albee Theatre in Brooklyn, New York. It will be ready at the beginning of the 1927 season. This marks the return to White Plains of the Keith interests after an absence of about two years.

A large sized house will also be built in White Plains by the Loew interests.

No Production Slump For Metropolitan Studios

Metropolitan Studios is not looking for the usual production slump at this time of the year. In fact top speed is being maintained in production at the present time.

Filming on "Rocking Moon" under the direction of George Melford is nearing completion, with interior scenes being shot at the studio. Director Scott Sidney is in the midst of "The Million Dollar Handicap," a race track story in which Vera Reynolds, Edmund Burns, Ralph Lewis, Clarence Burton, Ward Crane and Tom Wilson have the leading parts.

"The Danger Girl," Priscilla Dean's initial Metropolitan picture is well under way with Edward Dillon directing. The supporting cast includes John Bowers, Cissy Fitzgerald, Arthur Hoy, Gustave Von Seyffertitz and Clarence Burton.

Scenes from "The Midnight Flyer," an F. B. O. production.

Scenes from the Fox production "Wages for Wives."

Creates Service Department

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Southern Manager Launches New Successful Plan

THE Southern Division of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has originated a new sales service department, which it is claimed has proven tremendously successful though it has been in existence less than a month. It was inaugurated by Charles E. Kessnich, district manager, and is known as the District Sales Department. It is designed especially to reach exhibitors in very remote towns, who do not find it convenient to go frequently to Atlanta.

The system is a direct-by-mail one, such as is used successfully by large commercial houses. Through direct correspondence the District Sales Department will not only circularize and solicit new accounts, but it will promote the sale of pictures to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's regular accounts by the service it will render.

Letters to exhibitors telling about a certain picture will be accompanied by criticisms on that picture compiled from the daily and trade press, and data on exploitation stunts that have already been tried out on the particular feature and have brought good results. The department goes still farther, and furnishes helpful suggestions along every line possible to aid the exhibitor in putting the picture over.

Heading the new department is Jack Elwell, who has been with Metro-Goldwyn for seven years, and whose business ability is meeting the test in his new work. Three stenographers, Miss Nellie Sharkey, Miss Helen Murphy and Mrs. N. Barrett, aided by a complete addressograph system, new dictaphones and other added modern office conveniences recently installed are taking care of the District Sales Department's fast growing volume of work.

When Mr. Kessnich developed this new department several weeks ago, one of his first steps to ascertain if there was any foundation for his plans was to send a sort of questionnaire to every small town where there was known to be an exhibitor, and to a score of other points where the subsequent discovery that there were theatres in some of them came as a surprise to the exchange.

: : : : "THE CHECK-UP" : : : :

"The Check-Up" is a presentation in the briefest and most convenient form of reports received from exhibitors in every part of the country on current features, which makes it possible for the exhibitor to see what the picture has done for other theatre managers.

The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third, the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage figure giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage ratings of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage — a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

No picture is included in the list which has not received at least ten reports.

5 For Warners in Production

Present Schedule Near Completion With Specials Shaping Up For Future

WARNER BROTHERS have made splendid progress with their current production schedule, with the result that preparations are now under way for several specials on the 1926-27 schedule. Five on the current program have recently gone into production and others are in the process of editing and cutting.

The pictures now in production are "The Night Cry," "Nightie Night Nurse," "Don Juan," "Other Women's Husbands" and "The Bride and the Storm." "The Night Cry" company will leave in the immediate future for location on a sheep ranch in California where all of the exteriors will be made. The cast so far includes Rin-Tin-Tin, June Marlowe, John Harron, Gayne Whitman, "Heinie" Conklin, Don Alvarado and Mary Louise Miller. Herman Raymaker is directing.

Work has been resumed on interiors in Syd Chaplin's next, temporarily titled "Nightie Night Nurse." Patsy Ruth Miller has the leading feminine role, while in the supporting cast are Gayne Whitman, Matthew Betz, Edith Rorke, David Torrence, Raymond Wells, Ed Kennedy and Henry Barrows. "Chuck" Reisner is directing.

Sheldon Lewis and Emily Fitzroy have been added to the cast of "Don Juan" in which John Barrymore is the star and Alan Crosland is directing. The company making "The Bride of the Storm" has returned from Laguna Beach, where it was on location. Dolores Costello and John Harron head the cast and J. Stuart Blackton is directing.

Huntly Gordon and Phyllis Haver have been added to the cast of "Other Women's Husbands," the forthcoming Monte Blue-Marie Prevost starring production. Erle C. Kenton is directing.

Special Audience Views "The Wedding Song"

A special private screening of "The Wedding Song," Cecil B. De Mille's production made under the direction of Alan Hale for release through Producers Distributing Corporation, was held last week at the request of Ethel Watts Mumford, author of the story. The audience consisted exclusively of celebrities from the literary, dramatic and art circles. The picture was projected 'cold' but, according to Producers, this hypercritical audience applauded and the authoress approved of the screen treatment given her story.

Among the notables who attended the screening were: Mrs. Inez Haynes, winner of the O. Henry award for 1924; Mr. and Mrs. Bainbridge Clark, Kathleen Norris, Mrs. Irving Cobb, Mr. Wallace Irwin, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Herford, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Coburn, Mr. and Mrs. Hewitt Howland, Marion Green and Ethel Watts Mumford.

Unity Gets "Evolution" For United Kingdom

Unity Films has purchased from Red Seal the United Kingdom rights to "Evolution," which has been shown with considerable success in America. It is said a number of prominent London and Manchester exhibitors have already requested the film.

Fox Institutes Many Tie-Ups for Short Subjects

FOR some time Fred Quimby, short subjects sales manager for Fox Films, and his associates have been working with radio broadcasting stations, book publishers, newspapers and national advertisers in an effort to so exploit Fox short subjects that it will be a practical impossibility to miss them.

Doubleday, Page and Company are getting out four volumes of O. Henry stories that will sell for ninety cents and will place these on sale in over 15,000 cities throughout the United States and Canada. This company will also furnish free material to book-sellers to aid the O. Henry comedies. These stories will also be broadcasted from radio stations throughout the country starting with W. G. B. S. (Gimbel Brothers) New York.

The Bell Syndicate, which syndicates the Helen and Warren stories to eighty-one newspapers throughout the United States and Canada will supply photographs of Kathryn Perry and Hallam Cooley together with scenes from the pictures along with copy advising this is furnished through Fox Films and also give specific bookings. Each one of these newspapers has started a Helen and Warren department asking if readers think Perry and Cooley is their idea of Helen and Warren, the most interesting letter received on this subject to be printed in a subsequent issue.

Small, Maynard who have just issued a book entitled "The Married Life of Helen and Warren" will supply booksellers handling this volume with window displays and advertising accessories, and Chas. Scribners Sons have made special bookstore tie-ups and window displays for all dealers handling the Van Bibber stories by Richard Harding Davis.

Paramount Names Two Production Assistants

W. L. GRIFFITH was appointed assistant to Hector Turnbull, associate producer for Paramount Hollywood studio, and Claude H. Mitchell was chosen to assist William Le Baron, associate producer at the Paramount Long Island studio, this week.

Griffith, who before entering the motion picture business was an engineer with the United States Steel Corporation, entered the Paramount studio in New York six years ago as a production superintendent under Victor H. Clarke. Four years ago he joined the Paramount West Coast organization.

Mitchell has been in the picture business for many years having directed for Realart and Paramount. Previous to his new appointment he was principal of the Paramount Picture School, Inc., which he directed for the first four months of the Junior stars training, coming to the East when Sam Wood started direction of the School picture "Glorious Youth" from Byron Morgan's original story.

Evelyn Brent Will Start Myton Story

Evelyn Brent starts work this week for F.B.O. on a Fred Kennedy Myton story as yet untitled. Chester Withey will direct and Theodore Von Eltz has been engaged to play the leading male role.

Slogan Spurs Fox Exploiters

"It Shall Be Done" Used In All Letters To Stimulate Action On Part Of Field Men

WHEN the Fox field exploitation force was organized, Ned Holmes, its head, decided to employ a "pep" slogan to stimulate action by the men out in the field on suggestions from the home office via circular letters, individual communications, etc., a scheme which has proved so successful in the sales departments of big organizations.

He was anxious to adopt some crisp motto that would keep his boys on their toes all the time and that would visualize Fox service as well as serving as a reminder that alibis and excuses do not solve exploitation problems. Looking about in all directions for the saying he thought would fit this bill, Holmes came across "It Shall Be Done" in Peter B. Kyne's story "The Go Getter," and was instantly struck with the apt manner in which it expressed the idea he wanted to convey in his slogan. "The Go Getter" recounts how a wounded ex-soldier, confronted with the most heartbreaking and discouraging circumstances that man could face, vows he will not be licked, and pitches into his problem with so fanatical a zeal, and such indomitable persistency that he eventually triumphs. The hero fights his successful campaign under the battle cry of "It Shall Be Done."

The saying was adopted and on every piece of correspondence emanating from head offices of Fox films to its exploitation agents in the field, and on every communication from the field operatives to the head office, there appears at the bottom of the letter, in "caps," the sentence "It Shall Be Done."

Three Super Pictures for "U"

Laemmle Announces Extensive Program Of Production for Next Year

MORE big features, better stories and more comedies.

That, was the program outlined for Universal Pictures Corporation by Carl Laemmle, president of the organization in an interview issued at the Coast studio, on the eve of his departure for New York and Berlin.

Universal will make its usual yearly output of 54 "White List" of pictures, in addition to serials, comedies and short western, Laemmle announced. The annual production plans will be altered, however, to provide space for three productions of "Super-Jewels" scale, instead of one, as before.

The complete program for 1926 will include three super-jewels, 14 all-star features, 30 regular Jewel Features, starring Reginald Denny, Laura La Plante, Virginia Valli, Mary Philbin, Pat O'Malley, Louise Dresser, Jean Hersholt, Norman Kerry and the other contract stars and seven special features starring Hoot Gibson.

Stories for two of the three spectacles already have been selected. They include a film version of Jonathan Swift's classic, Gulliver's Travels," and a picturization of Harriet Beacher Stowe's "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

The decision to make three big productions instead of one a year is due to the tremendous success of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" and "The Phantom of the Opera," Laemmle declares.

Universal will specialize in feature comedies even more than it has done in the past, he states. "Comedy, as a matter of fact, is much better told on the screen than drama, and it is a great deal more popular. Reginald Denny's feature comedies, have made him one of the most popular stars of the screen in little more than two years. Laura La Plante, with her keen sense of comedy, has become a star in about a half dozen productions. The tremendous success of the many comedy features which have been produced generally in the last year—and some of them have been mediocre ones at best—is proof enough that the public would rather laugh than weep."

Regarding this year's production, the Universal chief declares that 51 of the 54 pictures for 1925-1926 release have already been made. The other three are now in the course of production or preparation, and all will be finished before the first of the year to make way for the 1926 programs. The three 1925-1926 features are Svend Gade's "Wives For Rent," starring Virginia Valli and Pat O'Malley, "Chip of the Flying U" starring Hoot Gibson, and an untitled feature directed by Edward Sedgwick.

New F. B. O. Pictures Under Way

A NUMBER of F. B. O. pictures have gone into production in the past week or will be under way in the very near future. Among those just started are "The King of the Turf," a racing melodrama by Louis Joseph Vance and John C. Brownell, which James Hogan is directing, and an untitled melodrama of the New York show world by Fred Kennedy Myton, starring Evelyn Brent.

Fred Thomson will be starred in a Western which David Kirkland will direct and in which the star's horse, Silver King, will have a prominent role. Lefty Flynn will shortly start work in "The Kitten and the King," a Gerald Beaumont story.

Among others to go into production will be "A Poor Girl's Romance," by Laura Jean Libbey, with an all-star cast, and "The Isle of Retribution," by Edeson Marshall.

Howard Given Long Term Contract by De Mille

William K. Howard has been signed by Cecil B. De Mille to direct under a long term contract. Howard's first assignment will be "Red Dice," an adaptation by Jeanie Macpherson and Douglas Doty of Octavus Roy Cohen's story "The Iron Chalice." Doty will act as production editor for this picture in which Rod La Rocque is starred with Lillian Rich and Robert Edeson playing opposite. The supporting cast includes: Robert Ames, Snitz Edwards, Sally Rand, Clarence Burton, and Helene Sullivan.

Four From Associated in December

FOUR of Associated Exhibitors' "Triumph Thirty" are scheduled for release during the month of December. They are "Counsel for the Defense" on the 6th, "The Pinch Hitter" on the 13th, "North Star" on the 20th and "Lovers' Island" on the 27th.

Betty Compson is starred in "Counsel for the Defense," with House Peters playing opposite her, while others in the cast are Jay Hunt, Rockliffe Fellowes and Leroy Scott. Burton King directed.

"The Pinch Hitter" is a baseball story starring Glenn Hunter, with Constance Bennett and Antrim Short in the chief supporting roles. The story is by C. Gardner Sullivan.

Strongheart is starred in "North Star," in which he takes the title role. His supporting cast includes Virginia Lee Corbin, Ken Maynard and Stuart Holmes. Paul Powell directed.

Hope Hampton and James Kirkwood head the cast in "Lovers' Island." Chief in support are Louis Wolheim, Ivan Linow, Flora Le Breton, Flora Finch and Jack Raymond.

Columbia Pictures Signs Thomas Ricketts

Columbia Pictures has signed Tom Ricketts to a long term contract to play character roles, largely as a result of his work in "Steppin' Out" and "Fate of a Flirt." Ricketts has played comedy roles in many Columbia pictures, his latest being in "Fate of a Flirt," in which Dorothy Revier and Forrest Stanley are featured.

Century Lists Holiday Releases

Many Comedies Are Due In December And For Laugh Month Schedule

CENTURY Comedies has a number of comedies scheduled for release during the December Holiday period and for Laugh Month in January. The list is headed by a new Buster Brown comedy, "Buster's Nightmare," and includes two-reelers starring Wanda Wiley, Edna Marion, Al Alt and Eddie Gordon.

"Buster's Nightmare" is the fourth of the Buster Brown series and recently had its Broadway premiere at Warner's Theatre. It was directed by Gus Meins, with Arthur Trimble as Buster, Doreen Turner as Mary Jane, Pete, the dog comedian as Tige and Pinto Colvig as the Brown butler.

"Going Some," the Wanda Wiley Comedy slated for current release, is that star's latest two-reeler. It was made by Edward I. Ludy with Jack Singleton in the leading male role.

"Eighteen Carat," is Edna Marian's latest. In selecting it for holiday release, the Sterns were actuated by the exceptional reviews recently given this picture by the trade reviewers. The comedy was directed by William Watson.

"Scandal Hunters" is the Al Alt comedy included in the holiday schedule. It was directed by Jesse Robbins. Larry Richardson and Marie Torpie are in the cast.

The Eddie Gordon comedy for December is "Captain Suds." Eddie is supported by Beth Darlington, Larry Richardson and Lillian Worth. Noel Smith directed for Century.

The Century Comedies are being released through all Universal Exchanges.

Paramount Students Start First Picture

The first picture in which the sixteen students at the Paramount Picture School will appear went into production last week under the working title of "Glorious Youth." The story is by Byron Morgan and is being directed by Sam Wood. There are three important roles in the picture not played by students. These were assigned to Ralph Lewis, Joseph Burke and James Bradbury, Sr.

Blackton Completes "Bride of Storm" Cast

J. Stuart Blackton has completed the cast of "Bride of the Storm" for Warner Brothers. It was originally announced under the title of "Maryland, My Maryland," and has Dolores Costello and John Harron in the starring roles. The balance of the cast is made up of Tyrone Power, Sheldon Lewis, Otto Matiesen, Julia Swayne Gordon, Evon Pelletier, Ira McFadden, Tutor Owen, Fred Scott, Don Stewart, Walter Tennyson and Larry Steers.

Hope Hampton Appears In "Marionettes"

Hope Hampton in a technicolor picture titled "Marionettes" will again be seen under the Educational banner. It is said to be an exceptionally beautiful picture with elaborate costuming and magnificent settings. It was directed by Henry Diamant Berger.

"Marionettes" was produced by the Diamant Film Company of America. Prints have already been shipped to all Educational exchanges and the picture is being released immediately.

Columbia Pictures Buys De Maupassant Play

COLUMBIA PICTURES has purchased screen rights to "Poor Girl," a stage play written by Guy de Maupassant and produced in New York many years ago. It will be produced early next year and an elaborate production is promised.

De Maupassant is regarded as one of the best of the French short story writers of all time. His works are regarded among the classics of the land of his nativity, though his stage plays were few in number. Columbia will secure the best director available and will make the picture with a carefully selected cast.

Cast Completed for "Men of Steel"

With the signing of Evelyn Walsh Hall by First National the cast was completed for "Men of Steel." Miss Hall was sent to Birmingham, Alabama, where scenes are being filmed in and around the iron ore mines and steel mills of the United States Steel Corporation.

Mack Swain Signed For "The Torrent"

Cosmopolitan has engaged Mack Swain for an important role in Blasco Ibanez' "The Torrent," a Cosmopolitan production now being filmed at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio under the direction of Monta Bell. Ricardo Cortez and Greta Garbo, Swedish film star, head the cast. Others in important roles include Gertrude Olmstead, Edward Connolly, Tully Marshall, Maurice Kains, Lucien Littlefield, Lucille Beaumont, Arthur E. Carewe, Lillian Leighton and Martha Mattox.

De Mille in Conference on Next Production

After having completed "The Splendid Crime," his forty-first production for Paramount, William De Mille is in New York conferring with Paramount officials on his next picture. If room is available at the Long Island studio he will make the picture there.

Pierre Collings accompanied De Mille east. He will write the scenario for Adolphe Menjou's next starring vehicle, which has not yet been titled.

New Pathe Branch Manager at St. Louis

James A. Harris has been appointed branch manager of Pathe in St. Louis to succeed Ted Meyers, who has resigned to take up other Pathe duties. Harris was formerly a salesman for Pathe but more recently has been branch manager of Associated at Chicago, from which he resigned to accept the new post.

Title Change Necessary in "Thoroughbreds"

Metropolitan has found it necessary to deviate from its rule of keeping original titles of books and plays in the production of "Thoroughbreds," by William A. Fraser. This racing tale will reach the public as "The Million Dollar Handicap." The change was necessary because a number of pictures have been produced bearing Thoroughbreds as at least a part of the title.

Vera Reynolds, Edmund Burns and Ralph Lewis are the featured players in "The Million Dollar Handicap," with Ward Crane, Clarence Burton, Tom Wilson, and Eddie Lyons prominent in the cast.

William Beaudine Returns to Warners

After an absence of over six months, during which time he was loaned to the Mary Pickford Company to make "Little Annie Rooney" and "Scraps," William Beaudine is back again at the Warner studio where he will shortly start production on a new picture for that company. Just what the picture will be has not yet been determined, but several stories are now under consideration.

Mauritz Stiller Directs "The Temptress"

Mauritz Stiller, Swedish director, brought to this country by Louis B. Mayer, will direct the Cosmopolitan production of Blasco Ibanez' "The Temptress," to be made at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios. Stiller won a wide reputation in Europe for his productions.

George Irving in "King of Turf" Cast

Director James Hogan has cast George Irving for the role of Colonel Fairfax in the F.B.O. production of "King of the Turf," from the story by Louis Joseph Vance. Many of the scenes are to be made at the Tia Juana race track.

Two Chadwick Releases In December

CHADWICK PICTURES CORPORATION has two features scheduled for release during the month of December. They are the Larry Semon comedy, "The Perfect Clown," and the George Walsh starring vehicle, "Blue Blood."

"Blue Blood" was released December 1st. It is an original story written for the star by Frank Howard Clark and was directed by Scott Dunlap. The cast includes Cecille Evans, Joan Meredith, Philo McCullough, Eugene Borden, Harvey Clark, Robert Boulder and G. Howe Black.

"The Perfect Clown" is Larry Semon's second feature comedy of the season for Chadwick. It will be released December 15th. Fred Newmeyer directed, and in the supporting cast are Dorothy Dwan, Oliver Hardy, Stuart Holmes, Kate Price, Otis Harlan, Alice Fletcher and Sam Allen.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

A Model 'Good Will' Campaign

Collins Stresses New Theatre's Benefits to Paragould in Drive Preceding Capitol Opening

IN the campaign which preceded the opening of the Capitol Theatre in Paragould, Ark., John A. Collins, who is a brother of Eli Whitney Collins, president of the M. P. T. O. of Arkansas, emphasized the benefits which would accrue to the town through the activities of this new, modern and beautiful theatre. In other words, Collins was selling his theatre as an institution that would fill an important place in the community life of Paragould, an institution brought about with a view to enriching the town, rather than merely a place where the pictures of such and such stars or directors or authors would be on view. Though he had booked at the time several outstanding screen attractions, Collins mentioned them in his advertising in such a way as to derive the full benefits of their popularity but at the same time in a manner which affirmed his statements that the Capitol would cater to the wishes and tastes of the people it was built to serve.

The institutional copy he used in some of his ads is reproduced here, for it should be of interest to exhibitors generally and especially to exhibitors who are giving more attention to this phase of selling a theatre to the community.

Public relations has been a dominant factor in the operation.

In a three column advertisement, Mr. Collins brought the institutional phase of advertising to the fore. In a box in one corner of the ad was this message:

"Meet the Motion Picture Exhibitor, the Merchant who Makes Life Brighter and Business Better in Paragould."

Another message to the public in this same ad reads:

The best exhibitors everywhere not only want to show what their patrons want to see, but they want their theatres to assume their rightful place in town, namely, the entire community's meeting place for life as its most enjoyable.

Your exhibitor seeks nothing better than your criticism and comment on programs that he so carefully selects. Encourage him in his work by regular patronage and hints as to your taste. Don't leave him in the cold to guess at your opinons.

The message then continues:

Novel Contest for "Iron Horse" In Boston

A novel newspaper contest to exploit "The Iron Horse" was successfully used in Boston, where the Telegram printed a series of short articles under the heading "Their Hero Son." A supplementary line explained that the three words in the title comprised a contest in which boys and girls were invited to participate for passes to see a big motion picture, the title of which could be spelled out by transposition of the letters in the line "Their Hero Son."

There was a condition providing that each boy or girl receiving a pass for correct solution of the puzzle would have to be accompanied to the theatre by a parent or guardian.

College Colors On Tags For "The Unholy Three"

How to utilize a big college football game effectively for motion picture theatrical exploitation was demonstrated by Manager Russell A. Bovim, of Loew's Regent theatre, Harrisburg, on November 7, when the Gettysburg and Dickinson college elevens clashed and attracted a crowd of close to 10,000 spectators to Island Park, in that city.

Bovim had thousands of placards printed, —half in the red and white colors of Dickinson and half in the orange and blue of Gettysburg,—and distributed them to the crowds assembled prior to the game. On one side of each card was an attractive announcement of the fact that Lon Chaney and "The Unholy Three" were to be the attraction at Loew's Regent. To each card was attached a string to fit through the coat lapel, so that when the spectators lined up in the stands at the football field both sides of the gridiron were a seething mass of advertisements for the theatre.

Typists Compete In This Stunt For "Lightnin'"

A speed contest for typists introduced some new angles of exploitation when it was put on in Boston by the Underwood Typewriter company in conjunction with the Tremont Temple presentation of "Lightnin'." The stunt attracted widespread notice. Prizes of passes were awarded typists who completed in five minutes or less, with a minimum allowance of errors, a 240 word treatise on how "Lightnin'" was filmed.

The Underwood company set up several machines at its offices, but the response was so general that twelve more typewriters were pressed into service for use by candidates for the "Lightnin'" prizes. The contest was announced by a broadside distributed through office buildings.

A flashy display made by mounting a retouched cut-out from 24-sheet in lobby, used at the Strand, Knoxville, by Manager W. F. Brock for Warner Bros. "The Limited Mail." An added touch of realism was given by a device made of sand-paper blocks and a bell, which was motor driven and simulated the noise of a locomotive starting. The bell was sounded at the start of each performance.

Horseback Riders Parade For "Black Cyclone"

Though "Black Cyclone" has been exploited with many novel and highly effective stunts, including a contest in which ponies were the prizes for children, there have been few single stunts which surpassed in publicity value the parade of horseback riders staged in Omaha by the management of the Sun Theatre.

The parade was organized through cooperation with three riding academies in the city and rapidly grew to include many individuals who participated as volunteers.

In effect the parade was a small-sized circus procession. Mayor Dahlman and a police escort headed the line and were followed by ladies and gentlemen, many of them prominent in Omaha social circles, who pride themselves on their mounts and horsemanship.

The parade of fine specimens of horseflesh attracted the attention and brought onlookers into a good frame of mind to appreciate the "Black Cyclone" float which drew up in the rear. Large cut-outs of the Pathe posters on the horse feature were the dominent note on the float. The parade stunt drew newspapers news space in addition to the word-of-mouth comment it started in all parts of the city.

Test to Identify "Phantom" Voices Over Radio

A radio contest was introduced with the "Phantom of the Opera" broadcasting stunt at Fort Worth in connection with the presentation of the picture at the Rialto Theatre. Local music clubs were interested in the contest and named members to represent their organizations.

The broadcaster announced that on such and such a night Phantom voices would sing selections from the operas, and that radio fans were to vote on the one having the most pleasing voice. The winner of the contest was engaged to sing at the theatre for two nights. This contest aroused interest in a very large area aside from the town from which it was broadcast.

Johnny Hines says Bon Voyage to M. A. Lafayette, driver of the "Driverless Car" which C. C. Burr is sending across the continent to exploit the Hines features released by First National.

Hines Car On Way To Coast

"Driverless Car" Will Ballyhoo Star's Features From New York To Los Angeles

"THE DRIVERLESS CAR," originating as a ballyhoo for Johnny Hines in "The Speed Spook" and which proved an exploitation sensation in several cities in the east, has started on a trans-continental tour to publicize the star's new features for First National.

Wherever this unique automobile has gone, it has caused comment of a most unusual box-office nature, since the car wends its way in and out of the heaviest traffic with no driver visible at the wheel. This car has been so constructed as to have the entire steering mechanism and driver's seat hidden beneath the cowl.

The car is under the guidance of M. A. Lafayette, who has driven it for upwards of 100,000 miles during the past year. He left for Wilmington, Delaware, last Monday as the first leg on its journey. The cities in which the "driverless car" will appear and remain for a period of from three to six days are as follows: Wilmington, Del.; Fredericksburg, Richmond, Newport News, Norfolk, Va.; Henderson, Durham, Raleigh, Winston-Salem, Charlotte, Asheville, N. C.; Spartanburg, Columbia, Charleston, S. C.; Augusta, Savannah, Macon, Atlanta, Ga.; Knoxville, Chattanooga, Nashville, Tenn.; Florence, Birmingham, Montgomery, Mobile, Ala.; New Orleans, Monroe, Shreveport, La.; Natchez, Jackson, Vicksburg, Miss.; Beaumont, Houston, San Antonio, Austin, Waco, Ft. Worth, Dallas, Wichita Falls, Texas; Chicasha, Oklahoma City, Tulsa, Bartlesville, Okla.; Wichita, Hutchinson, Dodge City, Kan.; La Junta, Pueblo, Colorado Springs, Denver, Loveland, Colo.; Cheyenne, Wyo.; Salt Lake City, Ogden, Utah; Pocatello, Idaho Falls, Boise, Nampa, Lewiston, Idaho; Baker, Pendleton, Portland, Salem, Corvallis, Eugene, Marshfield, Grants Pass, Ore.; Walla Walla, Spokane, Wanatchee, Seattle, Tacoma, Olympia, Wash.; Redding, Chico, Marysville, Sacramento, Stockton, Oakland, San Francisco, San Jose, Santa Cruz, Madera, Fresno, Visalia, Porterville, Bakersfield, Los Angeles, Santa Ana, San Diego, Calif.

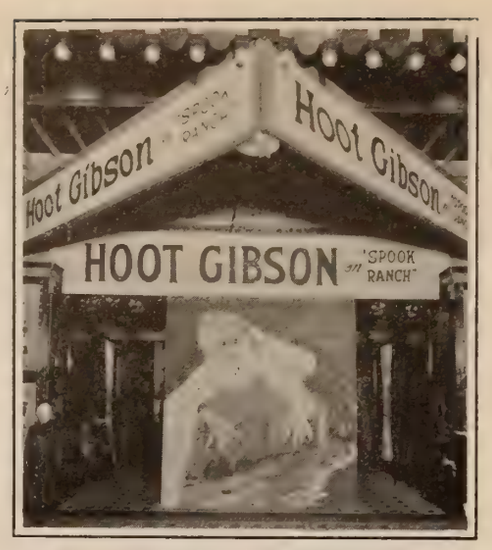
Arrangements have been made whereby advance and current stories concerning the car and its mission are being sent daily by Dave Weshner of C. C. Burr's office to both newspapers and exhibitors in each key city visited by the car. According to the route planned and the comprehensive tie-ups effected, it is expected that the "driverless car" will spend a complete year on its itinerary.

Models Show Latest Bobs at Warner Theatre, N.Y.

Fifth Avenue beauty specialists tied up with the Warner theatre in New York in a novel exploitation stunt for "Bobbed Hair." The arrangement resulted in a demonstration on the stage of the latest fashions in bobs, displayed by six living models furnished by the beauty shops.

On Monday of "Bobbed Hair" week the Warners gave a matinee for "Bobbees." Thirty thousand throwaways, distributed about the city, announced to every possessor of a bob that "Your Hair Is Your Ticket," and girls with abbreviated locks presented themselves in numbers sufficient to pack the house.

The next morning there was a matinee for the unbobbed. Despite a widespread impression that the New York girl who is not bobbed is almost non-existent, the theatre was again crowded.



Not only at the two special matinees but at two regular performances daily this exhibition of living models, with an accompanying "lecture," was given as a prologue.

Gets Radio Tie In Drive For "The Midshipman"

Radio figured importantly in the campaign which was conducted in Augusta, Ga., by Manager F. J. Miller of the Modjeska Theatre for "The Midshipman." Miller obtained the co-operation of the Atlanta Journal and became the announcer at the latter's broadcasting station in Atlanta. The stunt was localized through the assistance of the Augusta Herald, which ran a story featuring the fact that Miller would be the announcer of the program to be received at the Modjeska Theatre, where a receiving set was rigged up in the lobby. The lobby display featured a shadow-box extending across the front depicting a marine scene with a cut-out of Ramon Novarro in the foreground. Another feature of Miller's "Midshipman" campaign was the distribution of 1,000 heralds, 500 through the mail and the balance by hand.

In Oklahoma City, Manager Pat McGee of the Criterion, exploited "The Midshipman" with a "want word" puzzle tying up with the classified ads in the Oklahoma News, which printed front page announcements which included dashes to which certain "wanted words" could be found in the classified section. Officers of the Navy recruiting station in the city were guests of the house—a stunt on which the News also co-operated.

Crossword puzzle contests are still proving effective in exploiting pictures. A contest held recently in Annapolis, Md., in connection with the showing of "The Midshipman," at the Republic Theatre, drew replies in such quantities that the number of tickets offered as prizes was increased from ten pairs to twenty-five. A special window display of the new song hit by Ted Barron, "The Midshipman," popularized both song and picture. The song was sung and played both at the leading music store and at the theatre accompanying the pictures throughout the week.

Combination display for Universal's "Spook Ranch" and the Hallowe'en season, used by Manager Bert Jordan at the Majestic, Memphis.

Charleston Contests Score At St. Louis Theatres

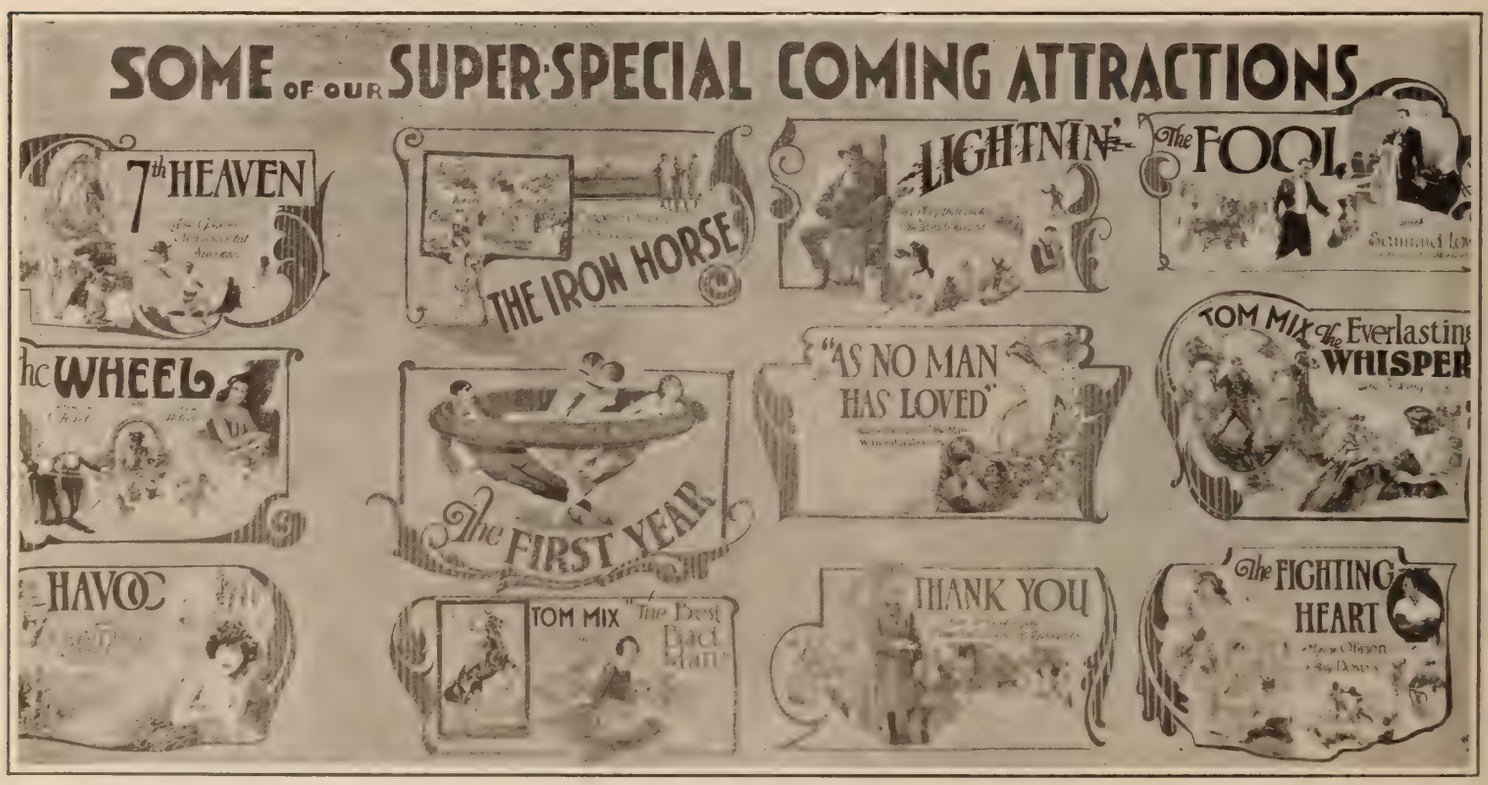
The Charleston craze has struck St. Louis and all of the leading local theatres with the exception of the dramatic houses have staged or announced Charleston contests.

The Missouri Theatre hooked up such a contest with the St. Louis Times, an afternoon newspaper, while the Grand Central also put on a city championship in co-operation with the St. Louis Star.

Loew's State Theatre staged its contest the week of November 9-13 and the Orpheum, leading vaudeville house, has also fallen into line.

In addition to a number of valuable prizes Loew's State has held out the inducement of an opportunity for the winning couple to land a contract to tour with Raymond Fagan's Symphonic Dance Orchestra.

Pates And Keys Lead In Stunts for "Baldpate"



Exploitation stunts which have been staged in the larger campaigns for "Seven Keys to Baldpate" have featured the obvious elements, keys and bald pates. Several good ideas have been brought forth from the bag of established showmen's tricks for the picture and they are reported to have gone very well in the instances which will be related below.

Manager H. L. Williamson of the Superba, Raleigh, N. C., distributed seven hundred keys. In accordance with the old plan he "lost" these, but put a new angle on the idea when he advertised that a chest on display in the window of a local hardware store could be opened by certain of the keys and that the chest would be on display in the lobby of the Superba during certain hours of the day. The hardware company furnished the keys and were credited with having done so on the tags attached to the lost articles.

The same idea in almost every particular, was used also by Manager D. Roscoe Faunce at the Strand in Birmingham. Faunce, however, had a special display representing a door equipped with a lock which could be opened by certain keys. The keys, in this case also, were supplied by a local store.

C. T. Perrin, manager of the Sterling theatre in Greely, used the baldheaded idea for his stunt. Perrin offered a complimentary ticket to any man who would step into the lobby and display a bald head on Thursday, the opening day of the engagement. The announcement, which was carried in newspaper ads, brought a response of twenty-five men who claimed passes by giving a public exhibition of their hairless skulls.

Aside from the stunts as related, these theatres used their standard advertising on the "Seven Keys to Baldpate" attraction.

George Powell's effective lobby billboard of coming attractions in which cut-outs from the Fox annual trade paper insert were used attractively. The board was mounted in the lobby of the Halsey, theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y., which is managed by Powell.

Policemen's Contest With "The Making of O'Malley"

With the showing of "The Making of O'Malley" at the Empire theatre, Montgomery, Ala., Manager H. C. Farley pulled an unusual stunt in the form of a popularity contest in favor of Montgomery's policemen.

Farley persuaded the City Commission to proclaim the week of the picture's run as "Courtesy To Cops Week." Then he had the Montgomery Journal sponsor a contest to find the most popular and courteous policeman in the city.

The contest proved equally advantageous to both theatre and newspaper, the latter going so far as to say it was the most successful contest ever staged, receiving more attention than any contest ever pulled off by the paper.

Color Lobby Cards Issued With DeMille Production

Produced by a new photographic color process, the lobby cards which Producers' Distributing Corporation are issuing in connection with "The Road To Yesterday" are especially attractive and strike a new note in richness for this type of exhibitor aid.

The photos are in brilliant, yet softly and delicately blended colors. The sets consist of eight 1 x 14 and two 22 x 28 scene reproductions on embossed mats with the captions in script type. When mounted in frames they form the most attractive and the richest looking lobby displayed yet devised for motion picture exploitation.

Man On Throne Ballyhoos For "He's A Prince"

Manager Hammerslough's ballyhoo for "He's a Prince" at the Broadway Theatre in Newburgh, N. Y., featured a man seated on a throne, which was erected on a motor truck. The "prince" wore royal robes and was distinguished by a mustache similar to Raymond Griffith's. At his side was a trumpeter, who blew calls now and then to attract additional attention to the float. The truck was bannered with billing for the picture and the theatre.

Window poster used in vacant store for exploitation of the showing of "Romola" (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer) at the Nemo theatre in Johnstown, Pa.

The police of Macon, Ga., co-operated with the Rialto theatre in that city in exploiting First National's "The Making of O'Malley." The cops gave demonstrations in front of the theatre to boost the show.

"Miss Paramount" Visits City

Chronology Of Two-Weeks' Activity Of "Exploitess" For Theatre In Reading

NOTABLE for the thoroughness of its execution more than the novelty of the idea (though even the conceit was entirely original in the town in which this stunt was staged) was the two weeks of advertising for the Capitol, at Reading, Pa., in the interest of Paramount pictures. The schedule of "Miss Paramount," the visitor whose presence in Reading was surrounded with every device to excite interest in her, may be of interest to showmen as an illustration of the number of stunts that can be used in conjunction with an exploitation idea of this kind, and for that reason is set forth here.

"Miss Paramount," who was brought to Reading by William Mendelssohn of the Paramount exploitation department in order to work up interest in the re-opening of the Capitol Theatre, formerly the Hippodrome, arrived in the city on September and remained until October 10, the opening date of the theatre, which presented "The Man Who Found Himself." From the date of her arrival, "Miss Paramount's" daily activities were as follows:

Monday — Miss Paramount arrived at Reading station 12:10 noon. Met by personnel of State theatre, newspaper men. Toured the city in a Marmon car beautifully decorated. Car and floral decorations furnished gratis by local dealers. Evening made talk at Capitol, Rajah and Orpheum theatres.

Tuesday — Visited hospitals and distributed flowers to the bed-ridden children. Attended dance for disabled war veterans at Moose hall. Guest Crystal restaurant for luncheon. Guest of the DeLuxe Beauty Parlor. Made two appearances at two theatres.

Wednesday — Made shopping tour. Distribution of 2,000 roses and announcements of opening of new State theatre: 5,000 announcement cards distributed. Made talk over radio station WRAW and sang "Susie," stating that it was dedicated to Bebe Daniels productions, "Wild, Wild, Susan."

Friday—Toured the city distributing announcement cards of opening. Made curtain talks at theatres.

Saturday — Made new announcement at theatres regarding change of opening date to October 10 instead of October 12.

Monday—Toured the city.

Tuesday — Visited industrial plants, the Berkshire Hosiery Mills, having 7,600 employes. Distribution of announcement cards and short talks on Paramount pictures in each important department particularly where women were employed. Guest of Sisterhood of Temple Sholem where short talk was given on Paramount pictures and sang several songs.

Wednesday — Arranged tie-up for shopping tour in connection with the Reading Tribune, securing front page stories daily. Resulting in a two page merchandise tie-up. Luncheon at Galen Hall hotel as guest of the Pennsylvania State convention of Kiwanis clubs. Guest at Grand Ball Kiwanis club.

Thursday—Shopping tour continued. Announcements distributed and broadcasting over station WRAW.

Saturday—Opening of theatre at 1 p. m. Miss Paramount escorted from hotel to theatre by motorcycle policemen leading her car. Miss Paramount's costumes, both afternoon and evening, for appearances at opening were furnished by local merchants. Diamonds valued at $20,000; furs at $2,500; afternoon frock, $175 and evening gown. $250.

Advertising campaign—Advertising campaign in Reading Times, Tribune and Eagle. Secured cooperative builders' and contractors' page in Times. Secured two page spread of Miss Paramount shopping with the Tribune.

Ad sales material—20 twenty-four sheets, 250 one sheets, 200 window cards and 3,000 herald

Pennsylvania Houses Score With Costume Contests

Picture theatres throughout Central Pennsylvania made good use of the Hallowe'en season for exploitation purposes, many of them arranging prize contests, among their patrons, for masquerade costumes. In Reading on Hallowe'en night, the State theatre held a masquerade party in which it offered six prizes, for the best fancy dress costume and best comic make-up, respectively; prizes were given for second honors in these two branches of competition, and there also were prizes for third places. The feature attraction was the Paramount film, "The Street of Forgotten Men."

In the Capitol, Reading, where "The Only Woman" was the film attraction, there were similar contests with similar prizes, and at the Arcadia, in the same city, a special Hallowe'en carnival for kiddies was held in the morning. This included a costume contest. Community singing was featured.

On Friday night of Hallowe'en week, in Altoona, at the Orpheum, a Mummer's contest was held after the first night show. There were cash prizes and theatre tickets for the best costumes at the Colonial, in the same city. On Saturday night Manager Ferenbaugh arranged a Charleston contest which was supervised by Miss Gladys Darling, a professional dancer.

In Harrisburg the Victoria theatre conducted a Charleston contest every night during Hallowe'en week, in which there were prizes, and on Friday night at the Majestic there were costume contests in which three prizes were awarded. There was a big amateur and Charleston contest in the Maryland theatre, Hagerstown, on Friday night.

McDonald Screens "Lost World" At Dallas Zoo

In addition to a good sized newspaper and billing campaign on "The Lost World," Manager McDonald and Publicity Director Jones of the Melba, Dallas, Tex., put over a stunt which netted the theatre and attraction an unusual amount of valuable publicity.

With the permission of Dallas' Mayor and Park Commis ioner, a special screening was held for the animals at the zoo. The stunt was pulled off on a night preceding picture's opening, with representatives of the press in the audience. Staff photographers of the newspapers took pictures of the animals and the moving picture lay-out, which were used by the papers in the printing of special stories.

The photoplay was announced a week in advance by special trailer on the screen, in theatre close-up, and through lay-outs and daily stories in the newspapers. Size of theatre ads was increased daily until Saturday and Sunday when they reached three tens. Five hundred window cards were placed in city windows and also in outlying districts. Fifteen thousand rotos were distributed from house to house, and in small towns near Dallas. One hundred three-sheets were posted a week and a half prior to opening, and 10 large exchange photos framed and placed in prominent locations. Large cut-outs of animals in the photoplay were grouped in lobby a week in advance.

Life-size statue of Hoot Gibson designed by O. L. Meister, manager of the Whitehouse theatre, Milwaukee, and used for Universal's "The Calgary Stampede." Meister intends using the statue as a display during all his future showings of Hoot Gibson pictures.

Man and Boy Ballyhoo "A Son of His Father"

Newburgh's interest in "A Son of His Father" at the Broadway theatre, was stirred by the sight of a man on horseback riding through town followed by a little boy mounted on a pony carrying a banner reading: "I Am A Son of My Father"—Now Playing at the Broadway theatre."

Worthy of special mention is the story prologue Manager Hammerslough presented in connection with the picture, called "At the End of the Road." In a western setting, attired in western costumes, a young man and woman accompanied by a child, told of their joyous return to Arizona in song.

The presentation was an emphatic hit, receiving as many as five curtain calls at each performance.

Distributed Apples Tagged For "Enticement"

Joel Levy, manager of the Capitol, Reading, Pa., selected the symbol of enticement for his main stunt on First National's "Enticement." Levy obtained a load of apples and packed them into individual pink boxes on which he had inscribed, in fancy type the following inscription: "Within this box is the apple Eve enticed Adam with. Eat it with Pleasure and our compliments and be enticed to 'Enticement,' which we play the entire week of October 5th, at Wilmer and Vincent's Capitol Theatre, the house of recognized preeminence." A herald of the show was also placed in each box.

"Lucky Horseshoe" Hidden In Theatre

The "treasure hunt" stunt was brought home to roost so to speak when the management of the Franklin Theatre at Oakland, Cal., advertised that each day of the run of "The Lucky Horseshoe," a gilded horseshoe would be hidden some place in the house. Each day before the theatre opened the horseshoe was hidden under seats or in some other part of the auditorium accessible to patrons.

An example of interior "advance billing" which harmonizes with the decorative scheme of the house. Used by E. R. Rogers, manager of the Tivoli, Chattanooga, Tenn., as advance exploitation for Paramount's "The Coast of Folly." The cut-out above the banner is from stock paper.

Exhibitor's Idea Exchange

According to Lowell Cash

Manager of the Kinsman theatre in Cleveland, the "revival week" is in his bag of tricks since his profitable experiences with the stunt last summer, when he tried it out for the first time at the Kinsman, and where it went over with astonishing results.

Not only was business good, but letters which Cash received after the engagement, showed that people came from all parts of the city to see their favorite picture revived. People came from the extreme suburbs, as the letters indicated. Many wrote to Cash asking for revivals of particular pictures.

He heralded the approach of the revival week for four weeks prior to its coming. Teaser ads in the newspaper, slides on the screens and such means were employed. His program of seven daily changes consisted of "Manslaughter," "The Miracle Man," "Way Down East," "Humoresque," "Orphans of the Storm," and "The Three Musketeers."

According to E. K. Shelton

Advertising manager of the Cockrill Theatrical Enterprises, New Castle, Indiana, a window display featuring a miniature boxing ring was a highly effective attractor for "The Knockout" when it played the Princess theatre. The display was in a cigar store window and contained a miniature boxing ring, painted white, with two miniature cut-outs, posed as if boxing, one of Dempsey and one of Tommy Gibbons. The other pictures are all of some of the famous and best known pugilists. In the background we had a stool, towel and bottle to represent articles used at a match and to add local color. The boxing gloves hanging from two corners of the ring complete the thought and centers it on the card in the background.

According to J. Glenn Caldwell

Manager of the Princess, Aurora, Missouri, you are likely to have a panic if you serve up any realistic noises as an accompaniment to the scene where the cathedral crumbles in "The Ten Commandments." Caldwell should know, for the falling of a patch of plaster from the ceiling of the lobby of the Princess during the progress of the scene mentioned started his audience in the direction of a real stampede, which was averted only by some quick action by several men who stood up on seats and assured the crowd that everything was alright and the flashing on of the auditorium lights by Manager Caldwell.

"This," he says "is something new in effects that hasn't been tried before and if you know of any exhibitors that would like to give their patrons a real thrill just tell them to duplicate the accident that happened to us."

According to Manager Partos

Of the Rialto Theatre, Erie, Pa., the song fest is a novelty which his patrons enjoy and applaud. Partos uses slides of popular melodies and with Mrs. Partos at the piano the audience joins in the songs. Among the songs which he used on a single program were: "My Old Kentucky Home," "Carry Me Back to Ol' Virginny," "Old Black Joe," "Dixie Land," "Follow the Swallow Back Home" and "Swanee River."

The fest, he says, permits the patrons of the house to try out their voices and promotes the intimate spirit which makes for success, especially in the case of a community theatre.

According to Harry Rosenthal

Of the Ohio theatre, Ravenna, O., one of the sure-fire ways of building good will is for the theatre man to take an active part in civic and social movements and one of the easiest ways to do that is to induce organizations to use the theatre for the promotion of their financial funds or membership lists.

When the "Y" was in financial stress, he turned his house over to the Y. M. C. A. The "Y" sold their own tickets and ran the performance. All Rosenthal did was to book the show for them. The results were way above expectations.

Several churches have availed themselves of Rosenthal's public spirit and have given benefit performances at his Ohio theatre. The Ravenna Chamber of Commerce staged a benefit show there. These benefits have created a bond between Rosenthal and almost every organization in his city. It has made his theatre the source of benefit to the entire community. And most of the folks that came for the special shows have kept coming as regular customers. Giving a series of benefits has been cheap advertising, considering the advantages gained.

According to A. C. Kadlowec

Of the Orpheum Theatre, Akron, O., his prize drawing contest used in connection with "The Freshman" was a good money-getter for the theatre and won the praise of the newspaper editor who tied in with the stunt as a good bet from the newspaper's standpoint. There were over 250 drawings of Harold Lloyd submitted in the contest, which was open to everybody in Akron. There were cash prizes for the first, second and third drawings and a pair of passes to "The Freshman" as awards for the next best 25. The newspaper artist and two editors acted as judges.

According to R. J. La Voise

Manager of the Strand, Huntington, West Virginia, the campaign which helped him set a new house record with "Don Q" was lined up as follows: For my street ballyhoo I had a young man in Spanish costume on horse dressed as Fairbanks, holding banner reading: Strand Theatre now playing Douglas Fairbanks in "Don Q."

Had my ushers dressed in Spanish costume, lobby decorated in Spanish colors of red and yellow; also had window display tie-up with four book stores on sale of book and three department stores.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"East Side, West Side"

(Fox—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

AS the first of a new series of Fox Comedies, "East Side, West Side" is most promising and should go over well—particularly so in the larger cities. The story is of the "Abie's Irish Rose" variety and Georgie Harris and Barbara Luddy, both who will be remembered for their work in the Fox Feature, "The Wheel," are the leads. Georgie was formerly an English musical hall comedian, and there's no doubt about his cleverness—and Barbara Luddy makes a mighty winsome Irish lass.

The Cast

Jewish Boy.....Georgie Harris
Irish Girl.....Barbara Luddy
Jewish Father.....George Williams
Irish Father.....Tom McGuire
Crook.....Red Thompson

The Story—Poor business and too many competitors prompt Georgie, an ambitious Jewish boy to persuade his father to move their store from the East Side to the West Side. His first venture in search of a new location is in an Irish neighborhood where members of his race are frowned upon. However, Georgie, with characteristic perseverance, finds a vacant store next to a lunch room conducted by a charming little Irish lass and her mother. The head of this family is a cop and Georgie becomes acquainted when Barbara brings her father's coat to the shop for repairs. Georgie falls heavily for the little Irish girl and becomes a most enthusiastic patron of the restaurant. The cop is very much interested in the capture of a notorious crook and feels that his future is assured if he can but effect the arrest. By the means of a clever subterfuge, after coming in contact with the crook, the Jewish boy presents the criminal to the policeman in the midst of a birthday party. Then, the romance which already has a good start, goes along at top speed.

Summary—Good entertainment, well acted and directed. Should go exceptionally well in the larger cities.

"Cheap Skates"

(Educational-Mermaid—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

LIGE CONLEY is the featured player in this beach comedy, which is chock full of a lot of fast action, whose speed has a more distinct appeal than its humor. There are some attractive bathing girls in it and many of the usual beach comedy gags are used. Conley is called upon to show considerable versatility, but his comedy strives too hard for laughs. A few humorous situations develop when the cast repairs to the skating rink, but for the most part it is rough knockabout stuff with the various members of the cast showing a keen aptness for some nasty falls on roller skates.

The Cast

The Boy.....Lige Conley
The Girl.....Estelle Bradley
Babe.....Babe Landon

A Jack White production written and directed by Norman Taurog; photographed by Leonard Smith.

The Story. Lige and his party are cavorting around the beach playing various games when they suddenly decide to visit the roller skating rink. There the announcement has just been made that the champion roller skater of the world will make his appearance that afternoon. Lige, an inexperienced skater is taken for the champion and the crowd howls when they think his awkward falls are taken purposely. He is compelled to go through a complete program of stunts before it is revealed that he is not the champion. He is then rushed from the rink with the crowd in pursuit when it is announced he has stolen some money. The girl catches up with them and announces she took the money to avoid trouble.

Summary. A comedy with plenty of action of a rough knockabout type. It may get a few laughs out of some of the situations and gags in the skating rink.

"Bachelors' Babies"

(Educational-Juvenile—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS juvenile comedy was made ostensibly for the holidays and so far as the kiddies are concerned it will probably hit the mark, particularly if the kiddies catered to are young enough. It is essentially a story for very young children, as the comedy is of a type that could scarcely amuse an older person. There might be a laugh at that, out of Big Boy, the youngster whose work dominates the action.

As might be expected in a picture of this type the whole thing is purely hokum, with the bachelors compelled to entertain the kids at a Christmas party and then all of them masquerading as Santa Claus and getting themselves into innumerable difficulties as the enthusiasm of their guests become fairly aroused.

The Story. The Bachelors' Club session is interrupted by a telephone call for one of the members, who to avert an engagement with one of the fair sex pleads that the club is staging a Christmas entertainment for the kiddies. The girl offers to bring her friends over to help entertain. It then becomes necessary for the bachelors to frame an immediate entertainment, which they do. They round up a gang of youngsters, who immediately upon arrival proceed to make life miserable for their hosts. Eventually the club quarters are literally wrecked with the antics carried out.

Summary. This is a comedy exclusively for younger children and for them it should prove a good attraction around the holidays. Its humor is of a type that would hardly appeal to the grown-ups.

"Wooden Shoes"

(Cranfield & Clark-Holland Scenic—One Reel)

Opens with a Dutch youth discarding his wooden shoes as he enters his sweetheart's home. Hours pass, the shoes grow weary waiting and are seen starting off on a walking tour. Follows a series of extremely pretty views, showing Haarlem, the world's nursery center, with bulbs in full bloom and men and women working in fields. A flight by aero takes in yet more fully the picturesque domain of floral richness underneath. We see the annual Flower Festival with a Beauty Show as a side issue. There is a wealth of beautiful wood and water shots, as well as glimpses of the Hollanders in their quaint native garb, all photographed with painstaking care and admirable technique. Finally the shoes are again shown, tramping back to the threshold of the house, the lover emerges, dons his footgear, waves a last farewell, and disappears down a rustic path in a fadeout of exquisite mist and foliage effects. A charming, artistic little film which should prove a credit to any program. Directed by Abe Meyer.—GEORGE T. PARDY.

"What's Up"

(Educational-Cameo—One Reel)

THE presence of a number of bathing beauties and the use of the various devices around a pleasure park are instrumental in making a fair one-reeler of this comedy which features Cliff Bowes and Rose Shirley. Cliff incurs the wrath of the girl's father before the two men have been introduced. When they do meet officially the father starts chasing Cliff and all of the devices in the pleasure park are utilized. There is plenty of fast action and perhaps some of it will be good for a laugh or two.—CHESTER J. SMITH

"One Wild Ride"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

Hal Roach and Director Robert McGowan's latest two reeler of "The Gang" contains the usual amount of fun-making. In the first part of the picture the youngsters rig up a strange contrivance and in the latter part, a goodly assortment of thrills are furnished in a wild down-hill ride.

THE CAST

Mickey Daniels, Joe Cobb, Mary Kornman, Farina, Husky Hanes, Jackie Condon.

The Story—Not having an automobile of their own, the "Gang" invent one and turn out a combination of an old "tin lizzie" and a broken down one stepper of a horse. There isn't any motor under the hood so the horse is hitched on in the rear of the car in order to push it along. All the "Gang" with the exception of Farina who toddles on behind, crying for a ride, start off on a tour. The joy ride is brought to a sudden ending with the appearance of the horse's owner. Shortly after this, Farina catches up and climbs in the vehicle, which is on the crest of a steep hill. It starts and Farina is treated to a wild ride down hill that finally ends by a collision with a watermelon wagon.

Summary—Up to the usual standard of the "Our Gang" two reel comedies.

"Hold Everything"

(Pathe—One Reel)

This Hal Roach one-reeler that features Eddie Borden, Katherine Grant and Martha Sleeper is fair comedy entertainment, but is not up to the standard that usually comes out of the Roach studios. To Eddie Borden goes most of the credit for the laughs and they are the old familiar theatre aisle stuff. Katherine Grant and Martha Sleeper, the work of both always standing out, are not given much of a chance to display their talent.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

Two "Gag" Writers Added to Hal Roach Staff

Krag Johnson, former newspaper man and lawyer, later connected with various film companies, as scenario writer and "gag" man, and Grover Jones, who began his screen career in the technical department of Universal and who later joined Vitagraph to write a series of comedies for Montgomery and Rock, have been signed for the Hal Roach writing staff by F. Richard Jones, director-general of the Roach studios.

Johnson and Jones will collaborate with others on stories for Charley Chase, Glenn Tryon, "Our Gang," Theda Bara, Lionel Barrymore, and other Roach comedians.

Mack Sennett and Hal Roach Two-Reelers Head List for December 13th

TWO two-reel Mack Sennett comedies and a Hal Roach two-reeler head the list of Pathe short subject releases for the week of December 13th. In addition there will be the second chapter of the serial "The Green Archer," a Grantland Rice "Sportlight," a Biblical film, Aesop's Film Fables," "Topics of the Day," Pathe Review No. 50 and two issues of Pathe News.

The Sennett offerings are "The Window Dummy," starring Ralph Graves, and "From Rags to Britches." Lloyd Bacon directed the former, which had in its cast Thelma Parr as the girl and Marvin Lobach.

"From Rags to Britches" was directed by Del Lord and has in the cast Billy Bevan, Madeline Hurlock, Kewpie Morgan, Leo Sulky and Sunshine Hart. "Starvation Blues" is a Hal Roach two-reeler with Clyde Cook in the leading role and Syd Crossley, Mildred June, Brooks Benedict, Cesare Gravina, Frederick Kovert, Fred Kelsey and Tiny Sanford in the supporting cast. Richard Wallace directed.

"The Midnight Warning" is the second chapter of "The Green Archer," in which Walter Miller and Allene Ray are starred. In the leading supporting roles are Burr McIntosh, Frank Lackteen, William Rendall, Stephen Crattan and Dorothy King.

"Via Dolorosa," one of the "A Pilgrimage to Palestine" series reveals scenes of Christ's Crucifixion, Burial and Ascension.

"Then and Now" is a novel Grantland Rice "Sportlight," contrasting today's sports with those of yesterday.

Pathe Review No. 50 features "Crossing Arctic America," Knud Rasmussen's Three-Year Pilgrimage Through the Land of the Eskimos. Other subjects in this issue are "Harvesting the Pie," showing the picking of blue-berries; and "Weavers of the Other World," scenes in Morocco.

"The Haunted House" is the "Aesop's Film Fable" of the week. Other releases are "Topics of the Day" and two issues of Pathe News, which is now celebrating its Fifteenth Anniversary.

Three Roach Units Working on New Comedies

Mildred June is playing one of the leading roles in an all-star comedy being directed by Richard Wallace. Other members of the cast include, Gertrude Astor, Charlotte Mineau, Jimmie Finlayson, Ivor McFadden, "Spec" O'Donnell, Tyler Brooks, Sue O'Neill and Jerry Mandi. James Mack and Shirley Palmer have been added to the cast of the current Clyde Cook starring comedy which is being directed by James W. Horne. Also prominent in this vehicle are Eileen Percy and Stuart Holmes. The Mojave Desert and surrounding points are being used as the location for a large part of the new Glenn Tryon comedy, as yet untitled, which Fred Guiol is directing.

New Talent Is Supporting Billy Dooley

Educational will present a number of new faces with Billy Dooley in "A Salty Sap." Among them will be Amber Norman, new leading lady, and Kalla Pasha, one of the "heavies." Billy Engle, a newcomer to the Christie studios, and Jack Duffy also have prominent parts.

"Laugh Month" Campaign Contest

Committee Announces Cash Prizes of $850 For Best Exploitation Tying Up With Drive—Preparing Wide Range Of Accessories

CASH prizes of $850.00 to exhibitors or theatre employees conducting the best exploitation tying up with the national drive during January, have been announced by the National Laugh Month Committee of the Short Features Advertising Association, sponsors of the campaign.

The awarding of the prizes will be in the hands of a Committee consisting of the editors-in-chief of six national motion picture trade publications—William A. Johnston, Editor Motion Picture News; Joseph Dannenberg, Editor The Film Daily; Martin Quigley, Editor Exhibitor's Herald; Arthur James, Editor Motion Pictures Today; William J. Reilly, Editor Moving Picture World, and Willard C. Howe, Editor Exhibitors Trade Review.

Prizes and Rules

Prizes are as follows for each of the four weeks of the Laugh Month Campaign:

First prize—$100.00; Second prize—$50.00; Third prize—$25.00; Fourth prize—$12.00; Fifth prize—$10.00; and three additional prizes of $5.00 each.

The awards will be distributed weekly. Following are the rules of the contest:

Contest open to all exhibitors or theatre employees responsible for exploitation campaigns. Campaign can include advertising, posters, publicity, tie-ups, ballyhoos and any form of exploitation. Description of campaign not over 200 words must be sent with entry. Proofs or clippings of ads and publicity stories and photographs of ballyhoos or other displays must be submitted. All campaigns to be eligible for prizes must tie-up with Laugh Month. If campaign is based on a particular comedy it must be in the Short Feature Class (not over three reels).

Entry Blanks

The first period for which prizes will be awarded will be from January 1 through the week ending January 9. The second period will be for the week ending January 16, the third period for week ending January 23, and the fourth period including the rest of the month with the extra Sunday, January 31. The entries for the first period will close at noon January 23, for the second week they will close at noon January 30. Entries for the third period will be received until noon February 6 and exhibitors will be given until noon February 15 to get in their entries for the final period.

Exhibitors can use the blanks to be printed by the trade papers to send in their entries in this contest or they can give the required information without using these blanks, but all entries must be mailed to the National Laugh Month Committee, 218 West 42nd street, New York City, so that they will be received by the Committee before the closing dates mentioned above.

Special Accessories

A broadside announcing the drive has been mailed to every exhibitor in the United States and Canada. On the back page of the broadside is given a list of all accessories available at present, additional aides which are to be ready shortly will be included in the press sheet which will be mailed during the coming week.

The Sweeney Lithograph Co. of Belleville, N. J., have made up banners, pennants and posters. The banners will be 3 x 10 feet, printed in blue and yellow on canvas with 5 eyelets for hanging and will be sold for $1.25 each. Pennants, 14 inches wide by 29 inches long, in assorted colors, hemmed at top with eyelets for hanging, will be sold for 12 cents each. One and three-sheet posters in 2 colors, blue and orange, featuring a sketch by Michelson, will cost 27 cents each for the three-sheets and 15 cents each for the one-sheets.

National Screen Service, Inc., with offices in New York, Chicago, Los Angeles and San Francisco, will prepare a special 25 foot trailer and will offer these free of charge to all of their regular subscribers. Exhibitors who are not Screen Service customers may obtain the trailer at a cost of one dollar, which price includes the cost of postage and packing.

Celluloid buttons are being made up by Bastian Brothers Co., Rochester, N. Y. These will be shipped C.O.D. plus postage or express charges at the rate of 500 for $4.50; 1,000 for $8.00; 2,500 for $18.50; and $7.00 per thousand for 5,000 or more. A special Laugh Month slide is being made by the Excelsior Illustrating Co., 219-6th Ave., New York City. These will be mailed direct to the exhibitor on receipt of stamps, cash or money order at the rate of 15 cents per slide. This includes postage.

Window cards in two colors on 5-ply post board, are being made by the Winton Printing Co., 405 Broome St., New York City and will be sold for five cents each. If exhibitors send cash with order these will be sent him prepaid, if he wants them C.O.D. he will have to pay delivery and collection charges in addition to the cost of the cards.

Announcement has not yet been made regarding the handling of the cuts because the committee is daily adding to the number of cuts which will be available. Cuts will range in size from one inch square to four column sizes. Reproductions of the banners, posters and pennants will be available in cut form so that exhibitors may use them in advertising or throw-aways.

All the companies participating on the National Laugh Month Committee are ordering samples of these accessories for their exchanges and within a week or so every exchange will be displaying National Laugh Month material.

In addition, the companies individually are preparing special material in connection with particular releases. Pathe, for example, is issuing special art posters on the short feature comedies. Such artists as Gustav Michelson, George Kerr and Merle Johnson are drawing an unusual line of posters which Pathe exhibitors will find ready-made for advertising their attractions during Laugh Month. Music cue sheets are another new exhibitor aid being issued.

Sees Victory in Laugh Month

Hammons Says Drive Will Convince Exhibitors It Pays To Exploit The Short Features

IN a statement in which he declared that the National Laugh Month Campaign will prove a boon to the public as well as the industry, E. W. Hammons, president of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., said that "Laugh Month is the logical climax to the concerted efforts that have been made by the motion picture trade papers, producers and distributors and leaders in the exhibition field, to show exhibitors generally the value to themselves of better exploitation on Short Features." Continuing, Mr. Hammons said:

"Laugh Month can, and will, do many things. It will encourage many people to look on the brighter side of life. It will contribute no mean influence toward making 1926 a better and brighter year for the whole country by getting a large part of its citizenry to start the year right—with merriment and laughter. But from the standpoint of the motion picture industry alone, if it induces one hundred exhibitors who have never exploited their Short Features to boost them in January—to prove to themselves the additional profit that can be made by this better exploitation of the whole program—it will be worth all the time, effort and money that are being spent on it.

"It becomes more and more apparent that the value of exploiting Short Features is the thing that an exhibitor has to prove for himself before he is 'sold.' He will read the many fine editorials that have been written about it; he will listen to the arguments in favor of it—but until he has tried it he is seldom convinced. But let him once give exploitation of the Short Features a fair trial and he will never return to the policy of advertising one picture only.

"Whenever you meet an exhibitor who is sure that exploitation on anything but the long feature is worthless, you may be sure that you have met a man who has never thoroughly tried out all-around exploitation of the Whole Show."

Woodhull Lauds Laugh Month

Declares Drive "Worthwhile Effort" In Letter To Committee—Hopes For Success

R. F. WOODHULL, president of the M. P. T. O. A. heartily endorses the National Laugh Month movement in a letter dated November 26th and written from his Baker theatre, Dover, N. J., to Nat. G. Rothstein, a member of the Committee of the Short Features Advertising Association, sponsor of the drive.

Following is the text of Mr. Woodhull's letter:

Nat. G. Rothstein, Esq.,
Short Feature Advertising Assn.,
Film Booking Offices of America,
723-7th Avenue,
New York City.

My Dear Nat:

Am writing this letter to you on Thanksgiving Day because the more I think of the idea of setting aside a month for the purpose of directing the attention of the public and ourselves to "laughter," the more it is apparent to me that I have one more blessing for which to be thankful. We are all inclined at times to underrate the physical and mental value of a good laugh. I have been present at many "serious at the moment" controversies in our industry when if both sides had endeavored to maintain a little sense of humor, the problem at hand would have disssolved into a mere nothing.

I presume this movement has for its purpose, the further directing of the attention of the exhibitor to the value of the short subject part of his program. If I am correct in this presumption, then I can honestly express the opinion that it is a worthwhile labor. We are all prone at times to think of new films, comedies and novelties as "fillers" instead of "featurettes." It will surely react in a splendid way if we theatre-owners, in our constant effort to please the public, will devote the month of January to a little less thought about the "headline features" and concentrate on the importance of divertisement. This latter ingredient is only supplied by screen entrees which materially assist in the problem of balancing the diet of a patronage sometimes fed-up on dramatic photoplays.

I sincerely hope that your January laugh-project will be a huge success and that countrywide merriment will "top" the tiresome noise of the high-salaried, crepehanging reformers who are permitted to run at liberty every month of the year.

Cordially yours,
(Signed) R. F. WOODHULL.

Suggests "All Short" Program

Quimby Says Special Bills During Laugh Month Will Pay Dividends To Exhibitors

FRED C. QUIMBY, short subjects sales manager of Fox Films, asserted that the National Laugh Month drive to be held in January will afford exhibitors an opportunity to test the actual box-office value of short features.

Pointing out that his company and others supporting the movement will issue specially selected programs for the month, Mr. Quimby urged exhibitors to arrange all-short-feature programs as a means of tying in with the national publicity which will be a big feature of the month.

"The National Laugh Month Committee believes," he said, "that every exhibitor should run at least one program each week during Laugh Month composed of all short subjects, and we feel sure that, with proper advertising and exploitation, the experiment will prove a real box-office success. For instance, let us say that the average picture theatre offers a seven-reel program. Ordinarily this would include a five-reel feature with perhaps a short comedy, one or two reels in length, and a news or pictorial reel.

"I suggest that, as a special program for Laugh Month, the exhibitor try the experiment of eliminating the regular feature and build his program entirely of short films. With the national publicity campaign which has been going on for weeks and which will continue all through the month of January, the public already knows that it is to be an all-comedy affair.

"The Committee feels sure that every exhibitor who tries the experiment of an all-short program will realize more than ever before the real box-office value of good short comedies. However, we suggest that every one take advantage of the laugh month publicity campaign by a tie-up in his own advertising."

Franklin Starts "Beverly Of Graustark"

"Beverly of Graustark," Marion Davies' newest starring vehicle for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has been started under the direction of Sydney Franklin. The supporting cast is a strong one with Antonio Moreno in the leading male role. Others in prominent parts are George K. Arthur, Roy D'Arcy, Albert Gran and Max Barwyn.

Scenes from "Rags to Britches," a Pathe release.

"Treasures of Vatican" Pathe Release

PATHE will release "Treasures of the Vatican," Dr. Vincent Fago's screen feature revealing the papal court and its priceless art treasures, on December 13th. His Holiness, the Pope and American Cardinals, Hayes, Mundelin and Dougherty appear in this personally conducted pilgrimage to the Holy Precincts at Rome.

Holy Year is being observed this year, a period of special religious and ceremonial significance observed every twenty-five years. The production is said to cover every phase of the Vatican's vast store of historical and artistic treasures and to visualize on the screen the same scenes that greet the eyes of thousand and thousands of pilgrims who have been thronging to Rome during the Holy Year period of celebration. Several of the scenes are said to show the immense throngs of pilgrims in the great piazza before St. Peter's Basilica.

Cecille Evans Has Lead With George Walsh

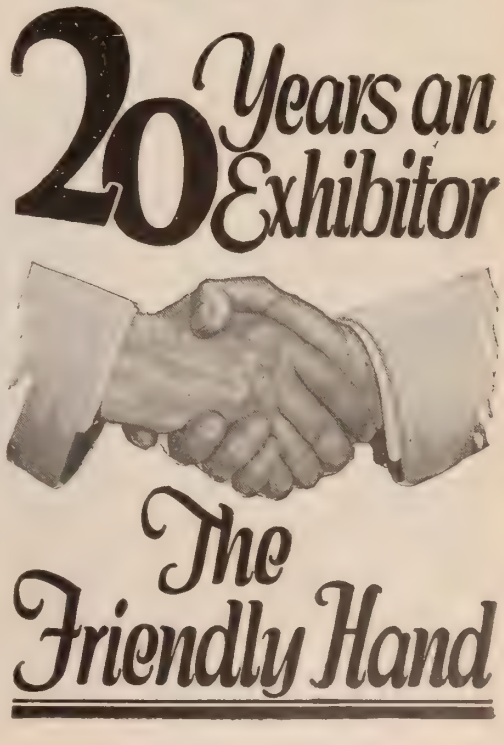
George Walsh will have Cecille Evans as leading lady in "Blue Blood," his latest release for Chadwick Pictures Corporation Miss Evans, a former Mack Sennett bathing beauty, has been playing in feature production for about a year, but this will mark her debut in a leading role. Other players in the cast are Joan Meredith, Philo McCollough, Eugene Borden, Harvey Clark, Robert Boulder and G. Howe Black.

Scenes from "The Midnight Warning," Episode 2, of "The Green Archer," a Pathe release.

Scenes from the Lloyd Hamilton starring comedy "Framed," released through Educational.

New Organization Perfected

Short Features Advertising Association Adopts Constitution, Elects Officers



ORGANIZATION of the Short Features Advertising Association was effected at a meeting at the Hofbrau House in New York November 25th when the constitution was ratified and adopted, and an election of officers held.

The officers elected were President, P. A. Parsons, Pathe; Vice-President, Gordon White, Educational; Secretary-Treasurer, Julian M. Solomon, Davis Distributing Division; Board of Directors, the foregoing and Fred McConnell, Universal; Nat Rothstein, F. B. O.; Fred Quimby, Fox, and Howard Turrill, Arrow; Budget and Finance Committee, Nat Rothstein, Chairman; Fred Quimby, Howard Turrill, the President and Secretary-Treasurer of the Association. Auditing Committee, S. Barrett McCormick, Pathe; Paul Perez, Universal; Bruce Gallup, Jr., Fox.

The constitution provides for four classes of membership. The first will be active members; men in the sales, advertising and executive staffs of distributing and/or producing companies which are company or associate members. The second class will provide for company membership which will include all companies nationally distributing short length product of any nature. The third class, associate or contributing members will be composed of producers who are in sympathy with the aims of the Short Features Advertising Association and who desire to further, with financial help, the work which the association is doing. The fourth class provides for honorary membership and will be conferred on such persons as perform signal services for the benefit of the association or the industry.

Immediate steps are being taken to have the association incorporated at Albany.

A report of the National Laugh Month Committee was rendered showing the progress made towards binding together the various elements of the drive. Information concerning the companies handling the banners, posters, slides, trailers, window cards and buttons was given to the members and proof sheet of the first broadcast to exhibitors was submitted for approval.

"The Torrent" Goes Into Production

"The Torrent," adapted from the Blasco Ibanez novel, has been put into production by Cosmopolitan for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer release, with Monta Bell directing. It will mark the film debut in America of Greta Garbo, noted European star, who is featured with Ricardo Cortez. In the principal supporting roles are Gertrude Olmstead, Edward Connelly, Maurice Kains and Lucien Littlefield.

Hallowe'en Pledge Cards Basis Of Tie Up

A clever civic movement was projected by Manager E. P. Briggs of the Rialto Theatre in Pueblo through a newspaper tie-up in which the Star-Journal of that city printed "Hallowe'en Pledge Cards" for children to sign their names to a promise that they would not damage any property on Hallowe'en. The reward for signing the pledge was a pass to a special performance at the Rialto, where the program included two comedies and a "Felix the Cat" reel so popular with the youngsters. The stunt enlisted the assistance of the police department and caught the enthusiasm of the entire population.

Here is the coupon or pledge featured gratis by the Star-Journal:

"To J. Arthur Grady, Chief of Police, Pueblo, Colorado: I hereby pledge my support in protecting our city on Hallowe'en. I will not move or damage any property in the city, and will use my influence toward keeping others from doing it."

In addition the newspaper published several three column publicity items.

The cost to Manager Briggs was only $10.00 which included the three reels, the comedy reels representing repeats. Over 2,000 youngsters signed this coupon and attended.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

The Phantom Express

(Henry Ginsberg Dis. Corp.—4614 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THERE'S no lack of sensational thrills in this picture, which is well photographed and spins out its five reels at a rapid gait. It will serve to entertain such members of the public as are not well acquainted with the intimate details of railroading, as they will no doubt be carried away by the romantic and melodramatic glamor of the tale. But we fear that railroad employees in general will be disposed to criticise unfavorably its utter lack of logic. The plot turns upon the action of a vindictive towerman who deliberately throws the wrong switch and wrecks the Phantom Express, later endeavoring to repeat, but failing to do so. That an investigation after the wreck would surely have pointed to the towerman's guilt is something which seems to have escaped the author. Instead, he is allowed to retain his job, and plan fresh villainy, which makes the whole yarn not merely improbable, but impossible. We'd hate to travel on a road where switch-tenders were encouraged to commit wholesale murder.

THEME. Railroad melodrama. Revengeful towerman wrecks Phantom Express by throwing wrong switch. Extra engineer takes the run and makes good. Second attempt to wreck train is foiled and villain exposed.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Wreck of the Phantom. Scene where heroine rides along track on speeder. Fight in the tower. Romantic interest and climax. Good photography.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Better not try for railroad trade, plot is too thin. Bill as thriller, play up wreck of passenger train. Feature Ethel Shannon.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for daily change houses.

SUMMARY. Has lots of fast action, abundant good photography, thrills, but plot is unconvincing.

THE CAST

The Phantom Express
(Henry Ginsberg Dis. Corp.)
PRESS NOTICE

A THRILLING melodrama of railroad life, "The Phantom Express" is billed at the ——— Theatre on ———. This deals with the revenge of a villainous towerman, who, because a girl rejected him, deliberately wrecks the train of which her father is engineer. Later, he tries the same trick when her lover replaces the father on the same run, but is frustrated. Crammed with exciting incident and offering romantic love interest, this film, with Ethel Shannon playing the lead, should win all admirers of sensational melodrama.

A brilliant supporting cast is in evidence, with David Butler as hero and George Siegmann, William Tooker, George Periolat playing important roles.

CATCH LINES

When the Limited met misfortune and other engineers refused to take out the hoodooed train, a young "extra" climbed into the engine cab and made good.

A Broadway Lady

(F. B. O.—5500 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THE heart interest is neatly developed in the early stages of this picture, the tension tightening as events progress and its melodramatic phases worked out cleverly. An excellent starring vehicle for Evelyn Brent, the leading lady is given better opportunities of displaying her emotional talent than have fallen to her in the past, when her roles were mostly of the underworld variety, and as Rosalie Ryan the "straight" chorus girl who marries into an aristocratic family that doesn't want her, she gives a sincere and appealing performance. The murder mystery angle is well handled, and the scene in which the heroine is given the third degree wins instant sympathy for that innocent lady. Additional love interest grows through the heart affair between Rosalie's sister-in-law and the seductive villain who causes all the trouble and is deservedly, though accidentally wiped out by a stray bullet.

THEME. Melodrama. Chorus girl weds man whose family despise her, intervenes to save sister-in-law from designing villain, is accused of murdering latter, but proves innocence and finds happiness with husband.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Romantic developments. Scene where Rosalie overhears elopement details. Killing of Edwards. The third degree episode.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Stress Evelyn Brent's good work, the love interest, murder mystery, heroine's ordeal with police, the happy ending.

DRAWING POWER. Good attraction for average house, has audience appeal.

SUMMARY. A melodrama with strong human interest, and sympathetic factors. Action rapid.

THE CAST

Rosalie Ryan	Evelyn Brent
Mary Andrews	Marjorie Bonner
Bob Westbrook	Theodore Von Eltz
Phyllis Westbrook	Joyce Compton
Mrs. Westbrook	Clarissa Selwyn
Martyn Edwards	Ernest Hilliard
Johnny	Johnny Gough

SYNOPSIS. Rosalie Ryan, chorus girl, loves Bob Westbrook. She visits his home, is snubbed, and marries him in retaliation, intending to leave him. He feigns blindness and Rosalie stays to nurse him. Bob' sister, Phillis is entangled with Edwards, who seduced Rosalie's room-mate, Mary Andrews. Latter arrives as Phyllis is about to elope with Edwards, who is found later shot to death. Rosalie is suspected, given third degree, but released when shooting is proved accidental. She finds happiness with Bob.

A Broadway Lady (F. B. O.)
PRESS NOTICE

EVELYN BRENT in her latest picture, "A Broadway Lady," will be seen on the screen of the ——— Theatre on ———. A fascinating melodrama, with unabated heart interest and a murder mystery which brings suspicion on the innocent heroine, this film runs the entire gamut of human emotions, piles suspense up sky-high and never slackens suspense until the climax is attained. Miss Brent gives one of the best performances of her career, with Theodore Van Eltz scoring a hit in the hero role.

The supporting cast includes such screen favorites as Marjorie Bonner, Joyce Compton, Clarissa Selwyn, Ernest Hilliard and Johnny Gough. There are many handsome settings and superb photography throughout.

CATCH LINES

Her newly-wed husband's family despised her. But when trouble came the ex-chorus girl proved her mettle, though falsely accused.

The Best Bad Man

(Fox—4983 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

FIVE reels of fast comedy and thrills, with Tom Mix disguised as a wandering musician, riding, fighting magnificently, making love, and with the aid of the never-to-be-forgotten equine hero, Tony, saving himself and the girl he loves from a watery grave. The story's continuity wriggles into some queer knots, owing to the manifold complications crammed into the action, but is entertaining for all that, and it's a safe bet that the Mix fans will welcome the production as another rip-snorting melo-romance in which their favorite "does himself proud." The comedy gags are mostly put over by Buster Gardner, as a hootch-soaked cowboy, and Tom Wilson, who gets a lot of fun out of the character of an ancient negro butler, while Clara Bow figures as a very attractive heroine. The dam-bursting scene, with the flood that sweeps all before it, is a whopper of realism and striking camera technique; in fact, the photography throughout is excellent and one of the feature's best assets.

THEME. Western comedy melodrama. Rich land-owner visits property in disguise, finds agent is cheating homesteaders and old man whose daughter he covets. Hero exposes villain and wins girl for himself.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Bright comedy values, snappy action, big thrills, love romance. Mix's riding stunts. Tony's work. Big punch scene when dam bursts.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Tom Mix and Tony. Tell 'em this is one of star's real hurricane action pictures and laughing hit as well. Stress flood episode.

DRAWING POWER. This will go over great in sections where Mix is a popular idol, or wherever the fans want plenty of action and unlimited fun for their money.

SUMMARY. Tom Mix and steed Tony score again in this one. A genuine whoop-'em-up-boys film, with melo thrills and broad comedy intermingled. Romance well developed, photography attractive, five reels of solid amusement.

THE CAST

Jim Nichols.....Tom Mix
Peggy Swain.....Clara Bow
Hank Smith.....Buster Gardner
Butler Sam.....Tom Wilson
Frank Dunlap.....Cyril Chadwick
Dan Ellis.....Tom Kennedy
Mr. Swain.....Frank Beal
Sheriff.....Paul Panzer

Author, Max Brand. Director, J. G. Blystone. Photographed by Dan Clark.

SYNOPSIS. Jim Nichols visits his Colorado properties in disguise. He finds his agent Dunlap cheating the homesteaders and trying to ruin old Swain, whose daughter Peggy he covets. Dunlap, supposed to be building a great dam, does his best to obstruct the work. When, after many adventures, Jim spoils his schemes, Dunlap blows up the dam. Jim saves Peggy's life in the flood and his horse Tony draws them both to safety. Peggy and Jim are united.

The Best Bad Man (Fox) PRESS NOTICE

A TREAT is in store for the Tom Mix fans when that screen favorite's new picture comes to the ——— Theatre on ———. Mix and his wonderful cow-pony, Tony, are seen in a series of the dazzling stunts which have made master and steed famous throughout the world. Tom appears as a land owner who visits his Colorado property in disguise, finds that his rascally agent is cheating homesteaders and trying to ruin an old man whose daughter, Peggy, he covets. Tom takes a hand in the game, exposes the villain, who blows up a giant dam. Tom saves Peggy's life and wins her.

Clara Bow is the heroine, supported by a notable cast.

CATCH LINES

A riot of laughter and wildly exciting situations, with Tom Mix and the unequalled horse Tony at their best. Thrills galore and high-speed comedy! The most spectacular dam-burst and flood scene ever filmed!

The Speed Demon

(Bud Barsky Prod.—5500 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

WHATEVER the shortcomings of its plot may be as regards originality, "The Speed Demon" makes good its title suggestion in point of sustained lively action and registers as a very acceptable card for the smaller houses. It's brisk melodrama, a bit far-fetched in spots, but entertaining for all that, with the low comedy man getting plenty of laughs, and a generous measure of thrills, the two big punches being contributed by a horse race and auto speeding contest, both of which are put across with praiseworthy snap and vim. Also, director Robert North Bradbury, has managed to get a lot of attractive backgrounds into view, the camera offering some really lovely shots of the Sunny Southland. Kenneth MacDonald, as the hero, does nifty driving in his racing car, is effective in his stunt work and classes as a very persuasive lover. Peggy Montgomery is a pretty and alluring heroine and Clark Comstock gives a properly dignified performance as the gentlemanly but too confiding old Colonel.

THEME. Melodrama. Race track touts scheme to defraud old Southern Colonel, but hero, famous auto-racer, arrives in time to spoil their game and weds Colonel's daughter.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The charming Southern atmosphere and settings. Thrilling automobile speeding contest and colorful horse race. Comedy relief. Good direction. Romantic interest and satisfactory climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You can bill this as a melodramatic romance with forceful thrills, fun seasoning and beautiful Southern scenery. Play up the auto speeding match and the big horse race. Feature Kenneth MacDonald's stunt work.

DRAWING POWER. A good attraction for the small houses.

SUMMARY. Lots of ginger to this melo, with attractive photography, effective thrill stuff, romantic lure and beautiful Southern backgrounds.

THE CAST

Speed Sherman.....Kenneth MacDonald
Blake.....B. Wayne Lamont
Blake's Confederate.....Art Manning
The Colonel.....Clark Comstock
Colonel's Daughter.....Peggy Montgomery

Author, Samuel Pyke. Director, Robert North Bradbury.

SYNOPSIS. Blake, a race track tout hailing from New York, wins the confidence of a Southern Colonel who lives with his daughter in the old family mansion. The Colonel, an enthusiast as regards horesflesh, finds his fad a bond of union between him and Blake. The latter and his confederates plot to obtain possession of a blooded filly belonging to the Colonel. They are succeeding, when the arrival of an auto-racer Speed Sherman changes the current of affairs. Speed falls in love with the girl, takes a hand in the swindler's game and spoils their proposed coup. Speed and the Colonel's daughter are united.

Peggy Montgomery who plays a part in the Barsky production titled "The Speed Demon."

The Speed Demon (Bud Barsky Prod.) PRESS NOTICE

LIVING up to its title, "The Speed Demon," billed as the chief screen attraction at the ——— Theatre on ———, provides thrills by the scores and a whirlwind of action from start to finish. The story narrates the attempts of race track touts to swindle an old Southern Colonel, their plot being foiled by Speed Sherman, famous auto-racer. A pretty sentimental romance is involved, and two big punch scenes an auto race and a horse race are put over in cyclonic style. Kenneth MacDonald does some remarkable stunt work in the leading role.

Peggy Montgomery figures as the pretty heroine, supported by Clark Comstock, B. Wayne Lamont, Art Manning, and several other noted favorites of filmland.

CATCH LINES

Romance, thrills, a furious auto speeding contest, a sensational horse race! Fast action, a tender love story, all filmed against the entrancing beautiful backgrounds of the Sunny South!

The Pinch Hitter

(Associated Exhibitors—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

THE country boy goes to college and ends up as its hero. Undoubtedly you have heard of that one before. Well, here it is again, with Glenn Hunter of "Merton of the Movies" fame, appearing in the role of the school boob, who after being the victim of innumerable embarrassments at the hands of the boys, puts them all to shame when he steps out of the role of the team mascot and slams the college nine to victory in the big game of the year. That is about all there is to the story. Of course, there is a girl. The picture uses decidedly too much footage to tell its tale and action is lacking conspicuously at times. The college pranks may bring laughter in some houses. The mounting is fair. Mr. Hunter does well in his role. Constance Bennett is attractive, but is not called upon for much acting. The game at the close is the highlight and carries a little kick, although the punch is discounted because everyone knows what is going to happen.

THEME. A comedy romance of college life in which the boob becomes the hero when he grabs victory for his Alma Mater in the big ball game of the year. He wins also a girl, of course.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The welcome given Joel at college. The tricks played on him. His love making. The scene at the dance. The big game, which Joel wins for his team.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the name of Glenn Hunter. Put over window displays in sports goods stores. Bill the feature in local schools and colleges.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for the smaller houses downtown, the community theatres and towns.

SUMMARY. There is nothing startlingly new in this one, which is devoid of action and carries little suspense. The characterization contributed by Glenn Hunter is the redeeming feature. There is a good ball game at the close.

THE CAST

Joel Martin	Glenn Hunter
Abbie Nettleton	Constance Bennett
Obadiah Parker	Jack Drumier
Jimmie Slater	Antrim Short
Hobart Thompson	Reginald Sheffield
Coach Nolan	George Cline
Aunt Martha	Mary Foy
The Dean	James E. Sullivan
Charlie	Joe Burke

By C. Gardner Sullivan. Directed by Joseph Henabery.

SYNOPSIS. Joel Martin, an awkward New England lad, is sent to college, where he is given an embarrassing welcome by the upper classmen. However he meets Abbie Nettleton, who takes pity upon him. Discouraged at the tricks played upon him, Joel is about to start for home, when he is called a "quitter" by Abbie. He determines to go back. He applies for a place on the ball team, but doesn't know he is supposed to be the mascot. However at the big game of the season, when he is put in as a pinch hitter when no one else is available, he makes a home run at the crucial moment and wins the game for his Alma Mater. He also wins Abbie.

PRESS NOTICE

LOVERS of pictures depicting college baseball life will find real entertainment in "The Pinch Hitter," which comes to the ——— theatre, commencing ———. Glenn Hunter, popular star of the stage and screen, is seen in the principal role, that of a small town youth who goes to college only to find that he is the boob of the place.

The picture is jammed with humorous situations, but the big ball game at which Joel suddenly jumps from mascot of the team to its star, is also worth the price of admission. Mr. Hunter is at his best in the role of Joel and he is given excellent support by Constance Bennett, Jack Drumier, Antrim Short, Reginald Sheffield, Mary Foy, James E. Sullivan and Joe Burke.

CATCH LINES

The college boob is elevated to the role of hero when he does a Babe Ruth and helps his Alma Mater turn defeat into victory.

The Splendid Road

(First National—Eight Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

HERE'S another one of those California gold rush pictures which is a bit different in that it features a woman pioneer as the heroine. To Anna Q. Nilsson must go much praise for her interpretation of the role of Sandra, who starts out alone from Boston in search of romance and adventure. The feature is also different in that it does not depict the ever present covered wagon rush across the plains, but shows us one of the clipper ships of the period bearing its human cargo to the land of promise. Frank Lloyd has succeeded in packing much heart appeal into the scenes aboard ship, in fact human interest is strong all through the tale. Much attention to detail is evident. There are several exciting fights and a climax in the form of a realistic flood sequence. The picture is a trifle long for the material at hand. The supporting cast is very good, Lionel Barrymore, Robert Frazer and Edward Earle especially doing excellent work. Snitz Edwards as a Chinese, however, strikes a discordant note.

THEME. A romantic drama of the Days of '49, in which a woman pioneer fights off unscrupulous foes and wins love and fortune after some stirring adventures.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Opening scenes aboard ship. Flood sequence. The fight during the attempt to evict Sandra. Miss Nilsson's characterization.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Title suggests highway stunts such as "This is THE SPLENDID ROAD to the Strand Theatre."

DRAWING POWER. The larger houses downtown should be able to do business with this one if properly exploited. Also O. K. for community theatres and towns.

SUMMARY. A better Western, with a fine cast and a good story. Correctly mounted, well acted and containing a wealth of heart appeal.

THE CAST

Sandra Dehault	Anna Q. Nilsson

SYNOPSIS. When the mother of three tots dies aboard ship bound from Boston for the California gold fields in 1849, Sandra DeHault, a young woman seeking adventure, adopts the trio. Arriving in California, Sandra is protected from a drunken man by Stanton Halliday and he is given a kiss in return. Sandra moves on with her charges to Reading's Flat, where a gambler, Clehollis, hoping to win her, lets her win huge sums. Later Halliday arrives. Angry at being repulsed, Clehollis gets an eviction order but when he seeks to carry it out, there is a fight in which Halliday is accidentally shot by Sandra. Eventually Halliday recovers and saves Sandra from the Sacramento flood. They wed and start for Oregon.

PRESS NOTICE

ANNA Q. NILSSON and a notable cast of players come to the ——— theatre, commencing ———, in "The Splendid Road," Vingie E. Roe's story of the California gold rush days which enjoyed much success as a novel and serial.

The story deals with Sandra DeHault, a fair "soldier of fortune," who starts out alone from Boston on the good ship "Colonial Dame," for the gold fields. Enroute she adopts three children, whose mother dies. Arriving at her destination she encounters all the adventure her heart desires—and then some. There are a number of big scenes, including a thrilling depiction of the Sacramento flood. Lionel Barrymore and Robert Frazer lend excellent support.

CATCH LINES

A drama of the gold rush days when men fought for gold, for love, for life itself, and the woman who played their game, THEIR way—and won.

The Masked Bride

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—5699 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

GOOD direction, superb photography, elaborate settings and alluring grace of its star combine to make "The Masked Bride" agreeable entertainment. These box office aids pull down the drawing-power scale in the picture's favor, making up to a large extent for lack of originality in the plot. For the story is just another of those Apache things, with a queen of the underworld denizens dancing her way into the heart of an American millionaire, planning to rob him, but suddenly weakening in her design and reforming under the influence of new-found love for the prospective victim. Familiar, improbable hokum, but so cleverly handled by director and players, that, while certainly not one of Miss Murray's best pictures, it never drags and ought to roll up a respectable treasury score wherever it is shown. The action all takes place in Paris, the star dances prettily, looks particularly charming in splendiferous bridal attire during the gorgeous wedding ceremony at the close, and shares dramatic honors with the old-time favorite, Francis X. Bushman. Support O. K.

THEME. Crook and society melodrama. Apache dancer plots with confederate to rob American millionaire, weds him, experiences remorse, reforms and is forgiven.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Excellent direction, fine settings and photography. Acting of principals. Cabaret interior. Parisian atmosphere. Wedding scene.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Mae Murray. Bill as Paris melo, with society and Apache trimmings. Stress exciting situations and love interest.

DRAWING POWER. Should do good business in all houses.

SUMMARY. Ancient plot, but melodramatic sequences are put over well, action fast, elaborately staged, work of star and support pleasing. Mae Murray's name will bring 'em in and her many admirers won't be disappointed.

THE CAST

Gaby	Mae Murray
Millionaire Grover	Francis X. Bushman
Police Prefect	Roy D'Arcy
Antoine	Basil Rathbone
Grover's Sister	Pauline Neff
Waiter	Chester Conklin

The Little Firebrand

(Arrow Pictures Corp.—5007 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THIS comedy drama is well produced, holds its interest throughout, gets the laughs continually and registers on the whole as very amusing entertainment. Edith Thornton, as Dorothy Jackson, madcap daughter of a worried millionaire who insists upon having her own way and raises hob with the conventions, has a winning personality and plays the role with plenty of snap and ginger. The audience can't help but like her, although the on-lookers' sympathies are largely enlisted in favor of the much-harried hero, appointed guardian of the frivolous little lady, when her father decides he needs a rest from the serious task of curbing Dorothy's activities. For Dorothy proceeds to lead her watch-dog a real dog's life in the accepted sense of the phrase. Yet in spite of his ward's impish tactics he falls in love with her, and Dorothy's final devil-may-care prank, which terminates in an auto smashup and nearly cripples the guardian results in a mutual love declaration. A lively feature, well acted and directed.

THEME. Comedy drama. Millionare appoints young lawyer guardian of madcap daughter during his supposed absence. She resents conditions, makes all the trouble she can, but finally yields to love for young overseer.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Brilliant society atmosphere, handsome settings. Scene where Dorothy hears Norcross declare he wouldn't marry her. The brisk comedy touches. The auto wreck.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Boost theme of modern daughter who goes her own way. Stress anxieties of young chap who undertakes her guardianship and romantic development, thrilling automobile accident and play up comedy situations.

DRAWING POWER. Will please fan majority. Should get money in average theatre.

SUMMARY. Bright comedy drama, puts over some snappy thrills, has romantic lure and real mirth-arousing values. Has decided mass appeal.

THE CAST

PRESS NOTICE

SCENES vibrating with rollicking mirth and pungent thrills are generously packed into the story of "The Little Firebrand" which comes to the screen of the ——— Theatre on ———. This is a comedy drama, with brilliant society atmosphere and handsome settings, relating the adventures of a madcap girl whose father leaves her in charge of a young lawyer. Resenting the guardianship, she devotes all her energies to leading him a dog's life. But her pranks terminate in an auto accident wherein she is uninjured but the luckless guardian hurt. At this juncture she realizes that she loves him.

Dorothy Thornton appears in the heroine role, with Lou Tellegen and a brilliant cast in support.

CATCH LINES

She made life miserable for her appointed guardian, but this wild girl learned to love him in the end.

Where the Worst Begins

(Truart Film Corp.—7168 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A SERIO-COMIC Western with due allowance of thrills, but comedy element predominating to such an extent that when it swings into melodrama there is even then a suggestion of subtle "kidding" about the action. Excepting for one scene just at the close, when heroine Ruth Roland is slung into a deep pit by her kidnappers, grabs an outlying timber half-way down while hurtling through the air, and hangs suspended until rescued by her lover. There's nothing funny about that particular situation, which is cleverly executed and a real nerve-rattler. The picture's title is a burlesque of the well-known poem—"That's Where the West Begins," and to a certain degree director John W. McDermott has permitted the burlesque spirit to govern the story. In so doing he has turned out a very amusing picture that is refreshingly different from the usual Western type and furnishes mighty good entertainment. It is well photographed and acted with Ruth Roland a pleasingly vivacious heroine and support O. K.

THEME. Western comedy-melodrama. Ranch girl pines for Eastern society, has adventures with son of visiting Eastern Mogul. Marries him in the end.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Jane's capture of Donald. Her gunplay in private car. Donald's escape from bandits. Jane's abduction by outlaws. Donald's rescue of Jane from the pit. The crisp comedy bits, fast action and thrills.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as extremely amusing Westerner, with lots of excitement, an original plot and humorous values played up to the limit. Feature Ruth Roland, as celebrated for her many dare-devil screen stunts in the past.

DRAWING POWER. Good attraction for neighborhood and smaller houses.

SUMMARY. Hits the funny-bone right on the joint. Has plenty of melodramatic punch as well as side-splitting comedy. Bully Western with new slant.

THE CAST

Jane Brower	Ruth Roland
August Van Dorn	Alec B. Francis
Donald Van Dorn	Matt Moore
Annice Van Dorn	Grace Darmond
Cliff Ranger	Roy Stewart
Annice's Chum	Derelys Perdue

Author, George F. Worts. Director, John W. McDermott.

SYNOPSIS. Jane Brower longs to get away from ranch life and go East. She sees capitalist Van Dorn's party in their private car on railroad siding, captures his son Donald, holds him prisoner and demands ransom. Van Dorn refuses. Meanwhile Donald is taken by two outlaws, but overcomes them and escapes. He has fallen in love with Jane, and when she in turn is abducted by the bandits Donald pursues, saves her life, and tells his father he will marry her and spend their honeymoon in New York.

PRESS NOTICE

A WESTERN that is partly a laughing riot, partly red-hot melodrama, comes to the ———— Theatre on ———— when, "Where The Worst Begins" registers as the leading screen attraction. The heroine, played by Ruth Roland, is Jane Brower, who wearies of ranch life and longs for Eastern society. So she captures Donald, son of visiting capitalist Van Dorn, holds him for ransom and ends by falling in love with him. The tables are turned when bandits abduct Jane and Donald rescues her. They agree to spend their honeymoon in New York.

Matt Moore is the hero, with Alec B. Francis, Grace Darmond, Roy Stewart, Derelys Perdue and other well known players filling important roles.

CATCH LINES

She found a husband in her prisoner. Her longing for Eastern society made her resort to desperate measures, which didn't turn out quite as she expected, but landed her in Gotham after all!

The Ridin' Streak

(F. B. O.—4540 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A GOOD average Westerner, with a couple of twists to its plot that lifts the story out of the familiar groove common to most pictures of this class. Like all of Bob Custer's vehicles, its chief appeal lies in fast action and physical activities of the star, who rides and fights in dashing style, has a pleasing personality and is never a moment idle throughout the entire five reels. The melodramatic punches are nicely balanced by bright comedy flashes and romance has its innings at the proper time. The Pony Express Race, gotten up by the bad man of the yarn for sinister purposes of his own, in imitation of the cross-desert riders of the forties, is a hotly contested affair alive with thrills and suspense and remarkably well filmed. The fans who like Westerners will have no fault to find with this feature, which runs smoothly and swiftly and provides an hour's amusing entertainment. Peggy Udell is O. K. in the heroine role, the support is satisfactory and photography attractive.

THEME. Western melodrama. Young sheriff, in love with girl whose goods he is forced to seize by law, wins big money prize in horse race, defeats schemes of swindler and wins her love and gratitude.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Bob Custer's riding and athletic stunts. The big Pony Express Race. Rescue of heroine. Local color, fast action.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Bob Custer. Bill as Westerner with alluring romantic and comedy situations, as well as melo punch.

DRAWING POWER. Suits any house where good Westerners are in demand.

SUMMARY. Bob Custer's energetic work keeps this Western melo going at a fast clip throughout. Love interest well developed, has satisfactory humorous relief. Swings into lively finish and should please average fan.

THE CAST

Bill Pendleton	Bob Custer
Ruth Howells	Peggy Udell
Judge Howells	Roy Laidlaw
J. S. Dokes	Frank Bromley
Gus Dokes	Newton Barber
Tim	Billy Lord
Leete Gleed	Paul Walters
Sheriff	Claude Payton

Author Not Credited. Director, Del Andrews.

SYNOPSIS. Bill Pendleton, newly elected Sheriff, is compelled to hold an auction over property of Ruth Howells, account of notes held by Dokes, whose son Gus she has refused to marry. Pendleton saves the life of Ruth's six year old cousin and pet. Dokes arranges a Pony Express Race, prize $5,000, with object of keeping other customers away from the sale, as he wants to bid in the property cheap. Bill rides and wins, despite treacherous tricks played by Doke's henchmen. Bill returns in time to trail Gus Dokes, who has abducted Ruth to a mountain cabin. Bill rescues and wins the girl.

PRESS NOTICE

BOB CUSTER, ex-Texas Ranger and stunt rider extraordinary, is starred on "The Ridin' Streak," which is scheduled as the chief screen attraction at the ———— Theatre on ————. This is a fast Westerner, crammed with melodramatic thrills, mingled with brisk comedy and romantic appeal. The hero, a young sheriff, is compelled to hold a sale of the heroine's effects, forced by notes held by a man who wants her to marry his son. The sheriff wins a $5000 prize in a Pony Express Race against tremendous odds, returns in time to save the girl from abductors and wins her.

Others in the cast are Peggy Udell, Roy Laidlaw, Frank Bromley, Newton Barber and Billy Lord.

CATCH LINES

Duty and love contended in the breast of the fighting sheriff. And then Fate enabled him to fulfill his pledge to both! Bob Custer at his best in this thrilling romance of the Wild West!

The Desperate Game

(Universal—4400 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THE most remarkable thing about this Westerner is that while everybody in the cast goes "heeled," as befits men and women of an "open-air-adventure-community," only a couple of shots are fired and then the bullets miss their targets. Not a single corpse graces the landscape: But though the gunplay doesn't furnish any fatalities, there are plenty of exciting rough-and-tumble scraps wherein flying fists thud solidly on exposed jaws, the best example of the latter being a lively free-for-all mix-up between the cowboy brigades of rival ranches. There's a pleasing romance, some timely comedy relief, smart action throughout, and taken on the whole the picture can be listed as affording an hour's amusing entertainment, although it isn't as savagely melodramatic as the title suggests. The scenic views are very attractive, offering some admirable shots of forest, hill and dale. Pete Morrison rides well and fights with joyous zeal, Dolores Gardner is O. K. in the heroine role and the support well balanced.

THEME. Western melo with comedy touches. Rival ranch owners have dispute over claims to water-rights which is finally settled satisfactorily by marriage between son and daughter of opposing bosses.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Excellent photography. Comedy sequences. "Ragging" of hero, fresh from college, by cowboy mates. Scene where he rescues girl from assailant and is injured. The fast action and big fistic scrap in windup.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as brisk Westerner, with comic interludes and plenty of rough-house scrapping. Stress romantic angle and feature Pete Morrison.

DRAWING POWER. Will suit average audience, where Westerners are popular.

SUMMARY. Has passable plot. Title leads one to expect "near-tragic" events which don't materialize. Action fast, lots of fistic combat stuff, romance pleasing, comedy relief adequate. An average attraction.

THE CAST

Jim Wesley	Pete Morrison
Marguerite Grayson	Dolores Gardner
Jim's Father	James Welsh
Mel Larrimer	Jere Austin
Adam Grayson	J. P. Lockney
Montana McGraw	Al Richmond
Belle Deane	Virginia Warwick

Author, George C. Jenks. Director, Joseph Franz.. Photographed by William Thornley.

SYNOPSIS. Jim Wesley, fresh from college, is "ragged" by punchers on his father's Bar O ranch, but battles his way to recognition as a regular fellow. Old Wesley and Grayson, a neighboring rancher, want to settle a dispute over water rights by marrying Jim to Marguerite, Grayson's daughter, but the young folks object. Jim saves Marguerite from attack by a rejected suitor, is injured and aided by her. A free-for-all fight between Bar O and Grayson men is stopped by Marguerite. She and Jim agree to wed.

Pete Morrison, star of "The Desperate Game," a Universal picture.

The Desperate Game (Universal)
PRESS NOTICE

AMAZING riding stunts, scrapping galore and a tender romance are the outstanding characteristics of "The Desperate Game," a Western melodrama, billed as the leading screen attraction at the ——— Theatre on ———. Pete Morrison is the star, playing the part of a young chap fresh from college, who becomes a cowboy on his father's ranch. Jim's father wants him to wed Marguerite Grayson, daughter of a neighboring rancher with whom he is disputing certain water-rights, Grayson is willing, but the young folks object at first, later get acquainted and fall in love. The film is alive with thrills and comedy and beautifully photographed.

Dolores Gardner is the heroine, supported by a talented cast.

CATCH LINES

Their fathers wanted them to marry but the young folks objected, having never met. But Fate brought them together in a whirl of adventure and Love

The Shadow on the Wall

(Gotham-Lumas Prod.—5900 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

IF your patrons like crook mystery stuff, with liberal suspense and thrill trimmings, you will make no mistake in booking "The Shadow On The Wall." The plot is altogether out of the ordinary. It may strain the probabilities a little here and there, but that is a matter of small account so long as the picture entertains, and it's a safe bet that this production will hold 'em, once it gets started. The characterizations are uniformly good, impressing you as real people, a vivid contrast is obtained between the underworld atmosphere and upper society strata, and a surprise twist is deftly manipulated at the close, when the hero, still thinking he is an impostor, turns out to be the actual chap whose identity he has assumed. Too much praise cannot be awarded Creighton Hale for his fine performance in the leading role. Eileen Percy is a winsome Lucia Warring, Jack Curtiss and William V. Mong are a convincing pair of villains and the support is excellent.

THEME. Crook mystery melodrama. Plot turns on assumption of wealthy heir's identity by supposed imposter, who it later developes is really the missing man.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Clever fashion in which identity complications are worked out. Good direction, photography and acting. Suspense and thrills.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Title has pulling power. Boost story as unique mystery thriller, with colorful crook and society atmosphere. Feature Eileen Percy and Creighton Hale. Mention other cast names, as they all have box office value.

DRAWING POWER. Ought to win wherever crook mystery melo is in demand.

SUMMARY. A likely card for the average house. Offers unique plot, big percentage of thrills, romance and tense action. Lots of melodramatic punch. Well acted directed and photographed.

THE CAST

Lucia Warring	Eileen Percy
George Walters	Creighton Hale
Robert Glaxton	William V. Mong
The Missus	Dale Fuller
Bleary	Jack Curtis
Hode	Hardee Kirkland
George Warring	Willis Marks

Adapted from J. Breckenbridge's Novel, "The Picture on the Wall." Director, Reeves Eason.

SYNOPSIS. Instigated by Bleary, a Crook, George Walters poses as the missing son of wealthy George Warring, the final test of his identity being his shadow's resemblance to one cast by a bust of Warring. Bleary presses him for money and George is about to quit, when he discovers that Glaxton, the family lawyer, is slowly poisoning old Warring. He remains, defeats the conspiracy, wins a lovely wife, is the means of sending Bleary and Glaxton to jail and finally stands revealed as the genuine young George Warring.

(Gotham-Lumas)
PRESS NOTICE

NOVELTY, fast action, mystery and sweeping melodrama predominate in "The Shadow on the Wall" which is listed for its initial local showing at the ——— theatre. A remarkable picture with a fantastic plot which grips and holds the spectator's attention from start to finish. It turns on a case of identity, the hero assuming another man's personality, and at the end finding that he is the missing chap in reality. Thrills galore, a pleasing romance, with Creighton Hale and Eileen Percy playing the leads.

The support includes a number of well known players, with William V. Mong, Willis Marks, Hardee Kirkland, Jack Curtis, Dale Fuller, and other favorites.

CATCH LINES

He was an honest crook. They called him the polite burglar. He was caught by his shadow and saved by his shadow.

New England

INVITATIONS have been issued requesting attendance at the formal opening of the new Coolidge Theatre, 650 Mount Aburn Street, Watertown, Mass., on Saturday evening, December 5th.

Ground has been broken in New Britain, Conn., for a new theatre for I. Hoffman. The site is in the very heart of the business center of the city. Work is to be pushed forward as rapidly as possible.

The Regent Theatre at Norwalk and the Palace at South Norwalk, Conn., are understood to have changed hands. They have been operated by Esterson Brothers and it is understood that the Hoffman interests have been negotiating for their purchase, as well as E. Collins, who owns the Empress Theatre in Danbury.

John Dineen, of the Modern Theatre, Lawrence, accompanied by his family, has returned from a vacation trip to Washington, D. C., and the southern Atlantic seaboard.

Ownership of the Liberty Theatre in the Dorchester district of Boston has passed to Jacob Laurie, who operates a string of Boston and suburban playhouses.

It is understood that the B. & B. Circuit of Boston has sold the realty of the Olympia Theatre, Bowdoin Square, Boston, to the New England Telephone & Telegraph Co.

The Henry Carleton Players at Gardiner, Me., who for some time past have been presenting dramas in the Coliseum at Gardiner, have now added motion pictures to the program on Monday and Tuesday evenings, as well as vaudeville.

Pictures In Motion, Inc., has leased for a term of years, part of the first and second floors of the building at 20 Winchester Street, Boston.

The Casco Amusement Corporation has petitioned the Maine Supreme Court to fix the rental of its theatre at 627 Congress Street, Portland, Me. The bill in equity which the amusement company has brought sets forth that it leased from Dudley C. Lunt, Paul C. Lunt, Storer B. Lunt and Mary E. Fox the playhouse for a term of three years at a rental of $75 per week, with the privilege of renewing the lease for two more years starting November 20, 1925. The company states that it is willing to pay a proper sum and asks that the court find that it has complied with the terms of the lease, that it is entitled to an extension of the lease and that it be not required to pay an unreasonable rent.

John E. Panora has had plans prepared by Architect Loomis J. Thompson of New Britain, Conn., for a new theatre in Winsted, Conn. The new playhouse will be located in the rear of the present Opera House block, with entrance from Main Street. The building will be of first class construction and will seat about a thousand. It is expected that contracts will be let before the first of the new year.

Extensive alterations are nearing completion in the Strand Theatre at Gardiner, Me., owned by the Gray interests, who also own and operate the Johnson Opera House in the same city. While no definite plans are announced, it is understood that the company has under consideration the showing of an exclusively motion picture bill at the Strand and may show pictures with vaudeville at the Johnson Opera House, instead of the present policy of straight pictures.

Independent Film, Inc., of Boston, has started a drive for a "Quality Counts" month during the four weeks in January and is making an intensive advertising campaign of the same.

John McHenry, formerly of Allen & Charette circuit of New Bedford, has been appointed publicity manager for the Producers Film Corporation in Connecticut.

Harry Goldman of the Producers Film Corporation has been appointed manager of the New Haven exchange of that company at 126 Meadow Street. He was formerly with the First National distributing headquarters in Boston.

Baltimore

A LARGE safe in the office of the Metropolitan Theatre had the combination knob of the lock broken off when four masked bandits attempted to loot it on Friday morning, November 27. The burglars entered the theatre shortly after 4 a. m. by a back door, the two locks on which had been broken. They came upon the night watchman, Henry A. Maltham, 74 years old, who was seated in the rear of the house, smoking his pipe.

They bound Maltham's hands and feet, asked him where the safe was located, and upon being told, three of them went into the office while one stood guard over him.

According to Bernard Depkin, Jr., manager of the playhouse, there was only about $300 in the safe, which belonged to him personally. He had taken $2,200 out of the theatre when it had closed for the night.

Mr. Faulkner has also established himself in an office at 25 West 45th street, New York City where he will provide buying service for the benefit of out of town exhibitors. The Liberty theatre at Plainfield, N. J., is a recent account that he has taken over.

By this time, Max Fellerman, Pathe salesman who covers Brooklyn territory, has probably managed to lose a lot of nervousness which he displayed the early part of last week. Max was married on Thanksgiving Day. Mrs. Fellerman was formerly with the New York Paramount exchange. One thing novel that Max did a few days preceding the ceremony, was to take two hundred pennies to the license clerk in exchange for the necessary permit. Just why he did this, no one seems to know. At any rate, the Pathe boys are arranging to give him a good send off.

It is reported that the Ritz theatre at Eastern Parkway and Fulton street, Brooklyn, will close its doors within the next month or so. The Ritz is operated by Harry Lightstone.

N. & R. Theatres, Inc., Brooklyn, N. Y., report the breaking of ground for a new 1,800-seat theatre at Utica avenue and Crown street, Brooklyn. Other theatres under the control of N. & R. Theatres, Inc., are the Metro on Grand street and the Tompkins on Gates avenue. All three are in Brooklyn.

The Park theatre, 180th street and Boston Road, has recently closed its doors and the reason advanced is that the Park has been playing to poor business.

Albany

TOM MURRAY of the Famous Players exchange accredited himself in fine shape as a public speaker last week at the opening of the Capitol theatre in Ilion. Although J. H. MacIntyre, manager of the exchange was on hand, he delegated Mr. Murray to make a speech from the stage. Many of the local exchange managers were on hand for the opening including Ted O'Shea of the Metro-Goldwyn office, Ray Smith and Fred Duffy from Universal, Lester Wolfe of Metro, Fenton Lawlor of Famous Players, H. C. Bissell, manager of the Universal exchange here and Amos Leonard of the Pathe forces. Following the final show of the evening there was an elaborate luncheon at the Elks' club, with more speeches and with Mr. Murray in the capacity of toastmaster. The theatre will maintain a seven piece orchestra.

Another change came along Film Row during the past week when J. N. Klein, who came here a few months ago from Boston to handle the Warner Brothers exchange, announced that he would go with Associated Exhibitors in New York City and that Austin Interrante, who has been traveling the Northern territory for Fox, would succeed him.

Barney Frank, well known in this part of the State, and now representing Pathe out of Buffalo, stopped over the other day for an hour or so calling on Albany friends. Accompanied by Mrs. Frank, he was on his way by auto to New York City where the couple spent the holidays.

With winter shutting in, thetres in some of the smaller places are now closing down to one night a week. The latest to report such action is in Broadalbin.

The majority of the exchange managers in this city remained in town for Thanksgiving, even including Alex Herman, manager for First National, who never loses an opportunity of getting to New York City whenever the occasion permits. George T. Ames, who came here a few weeks ago to handle the Pathe exchange, went home for the holiday, but by Christmas he may have located the sort of an apartment he desires and will eat his Christmas dinner in the Capital city.

Up to the present time leases have been taken in the new film building by the First National, Metro, Warner Brothers and Universal, with additional leases expected in the near future from F. B. O., Pro-Dis Co, Pathe and Fox. The new film exchange building is in course of construction and will be about a mile from the present Flm Row.

C. R. Halligan of the Universal exchange was the envy of all Flm Row on the day before Thanksgiving when he received a huge live rooster from John Mattice of Middleburg. Mr. Halligan fared well for the week, for in addition to the rooster from Mr. Mattice, there came a couple of broilers from Matthew Moran, an exhibitor in Coxsackie.

William Dillon of Ithaca may have opposition in the shape of a new house. According to all reports, Al Robbins of Syracuse, who is a brother of Nate Robbins of Utica, has been approached by several business men of Ithaca in the interest of a new motion picture theatre in which they are desirous of investing their thousands.

Edward Reynolds, a door tender at the Leland theatre in Albany, suffered a broken leg one day last week when he was struck by an automobile while crossing the street.

Everyone at the First National exchange in Albany is working tooth and nail these days in the hopes that the local exchange may finish within the money in the date contest that ends on January 30th. At the present time the local exchange is in fourth place but with plenty of business in sight for the weeks to come.

The Astor theatre in Troy, which has been closed for several months now, was opened for a few days last week in the showing of a feature picture. There was a report current to the effect that efforts will be made shortly to open the house and run it seven days a week.

A report to the effect that Nate Robbins of Utica was contemplating the taking over of the Town Hall in Clinton was denied last week by Mr. Robbins and others.

Atlanta

MRS. W. M. Kimbro, of the Greenland theatre, Greensboro, Ga., made her first visit to the offices of the Weekly Film Review this week. Mrs. Kimbro is one of the livest exhibitors in Georgia, and spent several days in Atlanta, and was accompanied by Mrs. Willingham Wood of the Strand Theatre, Washington, Ga.

J. R. McIlheran, manager of Theatre Supply and Equipment Company, left town Thursday to spend a week in Dallas and Wichita Falls, Texas, visiting his father.

W. F. Westmoreland, of the Wescon Company, Birmingham, was in the city for a few days this week on business for the new theatre his company is now engaged in building The new house will be called The Picadilly.

Jack Stapleton, Pathe's Harold Lloyd representative, returned to the city Tuesday from Florida. It is understood that Mr. Stapleton has resigned from the Pathe organization.

Tom Little, manager of Producers Distributing Corporation's local exchange, returned to the office early in the week after having undergone an operation in a local hospital last week.

The new manager of the Alamo No. 2 Theatre who took over the duties in the house on Monday, succeeding Raymond R. Miller, resigned, is Ed Wallace of Nashville, Tenn. Mr. Wallace was connected in Nashville with Tony Sudekum's interests and has managed the Fifth Avenue Theatre there for nearly two years.

Mrs. Anna Aiken Patterson, publisher of the Weekly Film Review, was a member of the large Atlanta delegation attending the Georgia-Alabama game in Birmingham Thursday. Mrs. Patterson was the guest of the Milton Sills First National unit at their Thanksgiving party at the Tutwiler.

E. J. Sparks of Jacksonville, head of the E. J. Sparks Enterprises, R. B. Wilby of Atlanta, W. S. Mudd of Birmingham, and Judge Henry T. Titus of Daytona, with a large party of fellow-townsmen, have been enjoying the hunting season around Waco, Texas, during this week.

It is reported this week that the city Theatre of LaFayette, Ala., burned to the ground last Tuesday. The house was operated by a Mr. Shellnut. No details of the extent of loss have been received.

The Liberty Theatre, Homerville, Ga., is reported to have burned several days ago. The house was managed by A. O. Holton.

Hank Hearn, manager of the Atlanta Liberty Film Distributing Corporation exchange, is another Film Row member who has been out on account of an operation.

L. S. Drum, booker for Producers in the local exchange, celebrated with a muchly-enjoyed party the first anniversary of his little daughter's birth, November 23, 1924.

Howard McCoy, division manager in this territory for Loew's. Inc., spent last week-end in Atlanta.

M. L. Curry, exhibitor of Vidalia, Ga., has taken over the Colonial Theatre, Millegeville, Ga., it is reported this week. The Colonial was formerly owned by P. L. Balafas, who is returning to Greece, his native country.

Dan Roberts. representative in this territory for the Ad-Vance Trailer Service Corporation, came in Saturday from the Georgia and Tennessee territory.

Mrs. Ida Black, member of Producers' office force in the local exchange, is receiving the sympathy of her fellow-workers in the loss of her father last week. The funeral was held in Manchester, S. C.

W. J. Freudenberger, supervising director of sales for the Ad-Vance Trailer Service Corporation in the South and West, left with Dan Roberts to travel the Florida territory.

Philadelphia

FRANKLIN JORDAN, who has been managing the Stanley Company's Logan theatre during the temporary absence of Lester Stallman, recenfly resigned from the Stanley Company force of house managers. He has not yet announced any new affiliations.

The Community theatre, Turbotville, Pa., owned by G. W. Mussley, is the first theatre to be closed in this territory as a direct result of the coal strike. Poor business made it impossible for Mr. Mussley to continue operation. The town is made up chiefly of the mining element.

Harry Weiner who has been a salesman in the Philadelphia office of Warner Brothers, has been transferred to Washington as branch manager and has been succeeded by George Thompson.

Joseph Hebrew, Philadelphia branch manager of Warner Brothers, has been elevated to division manager with supervision over the Washington Exchange.

After having been associated with the Twentieth Century Film Company (Gene Marcus, proprietor) for the past three years, Sam Phalan has resigned to accept a position as salesman with the Vital Exchange, of which Dave Segal is the head.

Joseph Leon, who for a time operated the Columbia theatre in Bristol, and who recently sold it to William Shock, has joined the sales force of the Independent Film Corporation,

THEATRE MANAGEMENT EQUIPMENT CONSTRUCTION OPERATION

Modern Picture Theatre Invades Boston

Metropolitan Brings The "Big House" Show To The Stronghold Of "Double Feature" Programs

By Thomas C. Kennedy

MODERN theatre construction, up-to-the-minute equipment and patron-conveniences such as have been developed by the experts in engineering and showmanship form the very foundation upon which the modern motion picture entertainment is being erected in New England, for years the stronghold of that bygone form of picture show, the "amusement bargain"—a long show for a small admission, double feature bills, etc.

There is no doubt that the Metropolitan Theatre in Boston—the latest achievement in construction and operation, and doubly interesting because it represents the first new venture of the recently combined Balaban & Katz-Famous Players-Lasky organizations—is pioneering in New England.

It would be a tremendous undertaking in any city—this enormous theatre, costing $4,500,000 to build and offering patrons the finest feature pictures along with presentations which have a production cost equal to that of many entire stage plays, with a 55-piece orchestra and service that is the last word in courtesy, convenience and comfort to the theatregoer. But added courage was necessary to undertake such a project in Boston—for while that city ranks seventh in the United States and is far advanced in commerce, industry, civil government, cultural and social standards, it is nevertheless very backward insofar as motion picture showmanship is concerned.

IN the belief that the time is opportune for a "stock taking" of what the motion picture theatre in actual operation is today—its construction, equipment, operation and presentation—MOTION PICTURE NEWS is presenting a series of articles written by a member of its staff concerning his observations after a thorough inspection of the Metropolitan Theatre in Boston; that theatre having been selected for the "check up" because it is the newest big picture theatre enterprise and because it is as well the first new venture of the combined Balaban & Katz-Famous Players-Lasky theatre forces.

FOR years the people of Boston have been "sold" long shows. No break from this precedent was possible before the Metropolitan Theatre came into being. Leadership instantly fell to the Metropolitan, not alone because it is the finest theatre in Boston, but as well because it is the very source from which will issue the modern form of picture entertainment in that territory.

The fact that Boston was not "picture minded" added to the problem of selling a picture theatre such as the Metropolitan to a population which has always regarded the cinema shows as something inexpensive, casual, and no doubt "low brow." But the Metropolitan has been sold, and was very efficiently sold long before it opened, by means of a skilful campaign executed by Jeff Lazarus, advertising and publicity director of this new theatre.

And how, we may ask, was it sold? And the answer is that the Metropolitan was brought home to the people of Boston as a "wonder theatre"—a wonder theatre in the sense that it was huge, that it was magnificent, that its construction embodied architectural and engineering features which were marvelous and amazing to everybody but particularly astonishing when considered in conjunction with a motion picture theatre.

IN publicity and advertising they were told that the Metropolitan had an elevating orchestra pit—a platform which enabled the orchestra to be lowered from sight of the audience when the organ was playing a solo; they were told that the theatre had the longest marquee of any theatre in the world, that fifteen cars could drive up at once and discharge passengers within the shelter of the canopy; that the ventilating system cost thousands and thousands of dollars and assured an even temperature within the theatre winter and summer; that several thousands of people could be accommodated in the corridors, foyer, grand lounge, smoking room, in addition to the 4,500 people who would be seated in the auditorium; that the "sight lines" were perfect in all parts of the theatre, so that no matter where one sat, that person was assured of seeing the picture and the stage numbers without the least distortion; that the acoustics were so perfect that orchestral music, the organ or a singer could be heard as clearly from the last row in the balcony as they could be from the first row center of the orchestra floor; that electrical sign boards were used to signal to the doorman the exact location of vacant seats in the theatre so that he might direct incoming people to the very aisle from which the seats might be entered, without confusion. All these "freak" things were told to Bostonians, and they were both amazed and "sold."

The Metropolitan would bring to the city a form of entertainment, an institution of the art of the theatre, of the finest type in the world. It would play the biggest features, present stage numbers devised and executed by John Murray Anderson, who produced the immensely successful and artistic "Greenwich Village Follies" and had contributed many novelties to the art of stagecraft, it would have an orchestra of fifty-five skilled musicians under the direction of Nathaniel W. Finston, former soloist of the Boston Opera company orchestra and conceded one of the foremost musicians who have made a study of music in connection with motion pictures; and in addition there would be "service" such as has been developed by the greatest theatre operators in this country, the Balaban & Katz organization.

BUT while these marvels of theatre presentation and operation were widely exploited, the structural and equipment marvels of the Metropolitan were ballyhooed.

The result of the advertising has been that the Metropolitan has played to capacity houses, and has "stood them out by the hundreds" at at least one performance each day, ever since its doors were flung wide to the public of Boston on October 16th.

The doors are opened for the first show each day at 10:45 a.m. The price scale is as follows: From 10:45 to 1, 35 cents; from 1 to 6, 50 cents; from 6 to 11, 65 cents, for any seat in the house.

Interior view showing stage and portions of the orchestra and balcony of the Metropolitan, the newest Famous Players theatre in Boston.

Before the opening of the new Famous Players-Lasky Metropolitan theatre in Boston, crowds stormed the doors seeking entrance to an institution which has been sold to them as the "wonder theatre."

The program for the first week contained the following units: Overture, "1812"; news reel; "The Melting Pot," a fantasy presented by John Murray Anderson and symbolizing the colonization of New England; a specialty act; and Paramount's "The King On Main Street." To illustrate that the standard of entertainment is being maintained at the Metropolitan, we point to the bill which was presented during the week of November 8th. On this we find an Overture; news reel; the Angelus, a John Murray Anderson presentation; Pathe Review; Organ novelty, in which the humorous features of "I Miss My Swiss" were exploited by clever organ music and picture slides; "Under Spanish Skies," an elaborate stage number blending arias and choral numbers from "Carmen" with some specialty dances; a cartoon reel; and Corinne Griffith in "Classified."

THAT, it must be admitted, is supreme picture entertainment. The beauty of the presentations, the smoothness of the program and excellence of the projection and music would meet the unqualified approval of the most exacting critic. The writer attended two full performances, and on comparison with what he has seen and heard in the cinema palaces of New York, Chicago and Los Angeles, is ready to affirm that Managing Director Earl L. Crabb; Musical Director Nathaniel W. Finston; Director of Presentations, John Murray Anderson, of the Metropolitan in Boston, know how to organize, orchestrate and devise presentations for a picture theatre entertainment of the highest type artistically and from the entertainment standpoint.

After submitting the facts above, it is needless to declare that the entertainment is well up to the high standard such a magnificent theatre as the Metropolitan would necessarily require.

But there is another feature which must be at least touched on here, and shall be dealt with at greater length in a subsequent article in this department. That feature is "service." Here is an element of showmanship of which we hear much—much, that is in an abstract way. Everybody knows that good service is vital to the success of the picture theatre. But what is this thing called "service"?

With all due credit and honor to the theatre managers of big houses in New York, Los Angeles and Chicago, the writer on his own experience and observation is of the belief that the best service he has encountered was in the Balaban & Katz theatres in Chicago. And, coming back to our subject, the Metropolitan in Boston, he thinks that the high efficiency of the Balaban & Katz service has been carried to Boston, whither it has been taken by men who served with Balaban & Katz in Chicago. Among these is Ralph E. Crabill, now house manager of the Metropolitan.

Service according to this system is no mere groveling, or obsequiousness before a "customer." It is the expression through highly trained and constantly supervised attendants—cashiers, doormen, ushers, maids—of graciousness and willingness to perform whatever service will contribute to the comfort and convenience of patrons. To give them tickets and change quickly and pleasantly; to direct them to the orchestra or the balcony aisles, to lead them up the aisles and show them into seats. Add to this the attractions of a scrupulously clean theatre, well ventilated and fresh, and the good-will winning advantages of an elaborately run "lost and found" department which facilitates the recording of claims of things lost and follows-up each claim, and you have an idea, a very sketchy idea of how "service" in the Metropolitan is being used to build steady patronage for that institution.

Morrison Named Manager Of Pantages In Memphis

A. B. Morrison, "one" of the deans in theatrical circles in Memphis, Tenn., has been appointed manager of Pantages theatre in that city. He succeeds J. Lloyd Dearth, who after four years regime as manager, goes to the West Coast as personal representative of Alex. Pantages. Before going with Pantages, Mr. Morrison was identified with Southern Enterprises, Inc., Loew and other interests.

Is Entertainment or Atmosphere Chief Aim of Presentations?

With the constant elaboration of stage numbers the question has arisen as to whether the presentation is not becoming more and more a "specialty act"—an entertainment that is individual and a separate unit of the program—distinct from and unrelated to the screen attraction in mood or setting.

According to the views of several leading showmen quoted in this article, there are adherents of both "specialties" and presentations definitely related in mood and designed to create an atmosphere for the feature picture which they accompany on the program.

IT is a far cry from the atmospheric prologues, with their scene reproductions and off stage effects, of the early days of picture theatre presentations, to the elaborate stage numbers which are put on week after week in an almost routine fashion at the leading photoplay palaces in the larger cities of the country today. And the condition is one that has started many theatre men toward reflections as to whether the presentation at its best is to be a specialty number, individually entertaining and in no way related to the feature on the program, or specifically designed to match the mood of the picture—to create an atmosphere for the photoplay.

Owing to the interest which has been stirred up in the organizations by their recent merger, the Famous Players-Lasky and Balaban & Katz theatres may claim especial interest in regard to the policy observed by them in the matter of presentations.

EXPRESSIVE of those policies, are the opinions of Earl L. Crabb, managing director of the Metropolitan theatre in Boston, who says: "If the picture is all that it should be, it will take care of itself and needs no support from the atmospheric or mood standpoint from the stage numbers. The public wants novelties, and the variety which can be achieved in a given program only by making each unit individually entertaining and distinct from every other unit."

It is a well known fact that the Balaban & Katz theatres have pursued this policy for some time. At the Chicago theatres, the presentations are staged as individual units. There is no special effort made to match the presentation up with the picture—beyond that which good showmanship would naturally dictate in achieving a "balance" for every bill. Operatic numbers have been shown on the stage on the same bill with a photoplay having a modern society theme, and modern acts have accompanied pictures which were cast in a costume period. As a matter of fact, the idea here is that the presentation is in the same position as the short subject, and showmen use the short subject for balance but seldom permit the feature to dictate the mood, locale or period dealt with in the short subject selected.

IN discussing the presentation some time ago, Major Edward Bowes, managing director of the Capitol in New York, is quoted as follows:

"Variety is necessary; novelty is also necessary, as well as imagination. And to each program we try to bring a freshness and spontaneity that will make each week's entertainment an adventure in the theatre.

"Every number must be built on a definite dramatic idea. It does not matter how slight the thread, but there must be a story behind everything. Take a chorus, bring them out on the stage and just have them sing, and it means nothing. But give them some definite idea, some atmosphere or story that they must carry out, and the presentation immediately takes life."

This statement gives the crux of the situation as it affects the smaller theatre, which, unequipped with the financial and stage resources which would enable it to put on individual acts, finds the solution in arranging a comparatively inexpensive singing, dancing or musical number around the mood or atmosphere of the picture. In such cases the prologue is certainly here to stay.

THE prologue side of the question is taken up by Jack Arthur, director of music and productions for the Famous Players Canadian Corporation, who says: "The idea of a prologue or prelude to a motion picture is to create atmosphere, to put the public in the right frame of mind to enjoy and appreciate the feature." And he makes two main classifications of these prologues as follows:

"The simplest prologue is the one that is national in character, that is an act which typifies Spanish, Italian, Russian or any one sort of people with their racial characteristics and their national music.

"To catch the basic idea of a photoplay is quite another matter; you must remember that what is quite clear to a producer is not always so evident to an audience; usually when I have a picture of that description I resort to an allegory to put over my idea."

REUBEN MAMOULIAN recently appointed stage director of the Eastman theatre, Rochester, N. Y., holds the opinion that the presentation should supply the element which the picture lacks—that being the actual presence on the stage of human beings and which he says "adds immensely to the fascination and artistic power of the theatre." In discussing his views Mr. Mamoulian said:

"The Eastman theatre has had presentations for the past three years and experience shows that motion picture houses require a special character of stage performance. It appears quite clear that in motion picture houses, especially those of the size of the Eastman, straight dramatic or operatic performances, as well as straight dances, are not entirely satisfactory and that the motion picture requires something else. During at least an hour and a half the audience is present at a silent film presentation—without the actual human body and voice—accompanied with music, orchestra or organ. This puts the audience into the frame of mind and mood that is ready to accept the form of art on the actual stage which would come closer to visible, expressive movement and music.

Stage setting for fashion review staged at the Carolina, Greenville, in conjunction with Paramount's "The Coast of Folly." Room seen through oval at center was furnished as reception hall and models entered main set from there.

Hyman's Prologue for "The Freshman" (Pathe)

Edward L. Hyman of the Mark Strand, Brooklyn, N. Y., captured the mood of "The Freshman" for the presentation he used with that picture, offering it under the title "Campus Frolics."

The number featured a college jazz band and six girl dancers. The setting was a balcony effect framed in black velvet draw curtains. Overhead was a striped awning to enhance the outdoor atmosphere which pervaded the scene. A plain drop was used as a background for the balcony railing. Scene opened with the jazz orchestra playing and the dancers seated on the steps.

Jazz Review Staged for "If I Marry Again" (First Nat'l)

Staged at the Palace Theatre, Dallas, Tex., the number illustrated here scored heavily. The set consisted of an elevated platform, blackened cloth eye as ground. Permanent gold cloth eye of regular set was drawn up on sides of opening and futuristic tab drops painted in vivid colors was used as a background.

Cabaret table with boy and girl seated was seen at right. Number opened with a fast jazz number by orchestra, in full lights. Lights dimmed to steel blue for solo dance to music of stringed quartette, seated on switchboard side.

Atmospheric Prologue for "Don Q" (United Artists)

Scene reproduction of ensemble presentation staged by Manager Charles R. Hammerslough at the Broadway Theatre, Newburgh, N. Y. The prologue was billed as "La Espagnol" and featured the song "Marcheta" and several excerpts from Carmen.

The setting was accomplished with drapes entirely, the stair and balcony effect being a skeleton wood frame with theatrical gauze drapings and painted compo board facings for the noel posts, which were surmounted by globes. Colorful Spanish costumes employing a wide range of vivid hues was relied upon to afford a striking picture.

Novelty Announces "The Pony Express" (Paramount)

Manager Pat McGee of the Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, used a novelty number as a combined entertainment unit and advance announcement for "The Pony Express," the week previous to the opening of that picture. Setting consisted of a wooden fence across stage, with a backdrop painted to represent the skyline of Oklahoma City at night. At rise of curtain two bill-posters were discovered posting the first part of a six sheet on "The Pony Express." When curtain reached top, men faced audience and sang "Blue Eyed Sally." After number, a date strip was posted reading "Criterion—Next Week."

Matinee For Night Shift Miners At Butte Theatre

The American Theatre, operated by the Silver Bow Amusement Company, is conducting a special matinee for miners of the night shift each Thursday afternoon from 2:30 to 4 p. m.

A de luxe performance will be given at these special shows, the first program including a half-hour program of music by Ted Rose's band. The picture attraction was "Lightnin'." The performances, to be known as Miners' afternoon, are the first that have been given in Butte for the special benefit of miners of the night shift.

Strand In Cincinnati Puts On "Bargain Matinees"

The Strand Theatre in Cincinnati, one of the string of Lisbon houses, has inaugurated a policy of morning shows which will be offered as "bargain matinees." The performances start at 10 a.m. Admissions from that time to 1 p.m. will be 25 cents for the entire house. After the 1 p.m. show the regular admission prices will prevail.

Filling the Balcony by Means of the All-One-Price System

NEXT to long lines at the box office the "seats in the balcony only" announcement ranks as a leading cause for countless lost admissions at shows that were sold to the point of bringing patrons to the front of the theatre, but no further—due to the very natural reluctance of people to stand in line and the apathy against taking balcony seats.

The balcony seat problem is a very serious one nearly everywhere, though it is one that some theatre managers claim to have solved by obviating the necessity of having a doorman announce the fatal words "seats in the balcony only."

The elimination of that announcement alone is sufficient to bring a large proportion of the patrons who come up to the box office at a performance which has attracted a capacity crowd. The announcement must be made in cases where there is a difference in price, but the tenet of good faith with the public may be observed— as it always should be—and at the same time the announcement obviated if the balcony seats sell for the same price as those in the orchestra.

The solution, therefore, according to the managers of several big theatres and the executive heads of many circuits is the all-one-price scale.

The mere act on the part of the management of asking as high a price for balcony seats as orchestra chairs, has the effect of convincing patrons that the balcony location is every bit as good as the orchestra.

It would of course be impossible to introduce the system if this were not the case, and in theatres where the construction is such that vision from the balcony is not as good as from the orchestra, that the music cannot be heard as well or that actual hardship is imposed upon patrons in getting to the balcony, owing to narrow, long flights of stairs.

However, if the balcony's only disadvantage lies in the fact that the management itself thinks so little of it as to have it equipped with chairs that are less comfortable than the orchestra, or that it is not so nicely decorated and is not as thoroughly cleaned and as fresh as the orchestra, it would appear that those managers are adding to a difficulty which not only costs them money but lowers the esteem of the public for balcony seats in general.

The experience of the majority of big theatres which have established the one-price scale is that the management is greatly relieved of its responsibility to the public when crowds attend the show. In practically all of these houses there are many patrons who prefer to wait in the lobby, after purchasing tickets, for seats in the orchestra. But they have paid their admission and the management is ready to seat them comfortably in the balcony, so in waiting they assume the responsibility themselves for having to stand "in the ropes" until there are vacant seats in the orchestra.

In all of the new theatres being constructed the plans call for balcony accommodations, equipment and accessibility from the foyer, as nearly equal to those of the orchestra as is possible. Just what proportion of the new theatres establish the all-one-price scale has not been determined by any reliable statistics at hand, but there is evidence that the practice is growing as theatre men observe the effect of the system in theatres where it is in force.

Directing the Passing Throng to the Theatre "Down the Street"

P. J. NOLAN, the man behind the Rex Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, has displayed considerable ingenuity in bringing the theatre closer to the passing throng by means of special signs, a show window on the main thoroughfare, corner poster stands and arrows pointing to the theatre building.

The Rex Theatre, which is an independent neighborhood house of the Canadian Capital, is situated on Lorne Avenue, a residential street, the structure being a 100 feet or more from Somerset Street, an important thoroughfare. The Rex is an attractive little house in itself but it is easy to pass along the main route without noticing it. To overcome this difficulty, Mr. Nolan made it impossible for any person, except a blind man, to miss the location of the Rex.

On the corner of Somerset and Lorne Avenue there is a wooden house which is occupied as a Chinese laundry. This helped, rather than hindered, the plan which Mr. Nolan had in mind. Almost in front of the corner house he erected a "show window" some 15 feet wide and eight feet deep, with an all-glass front, three curved glass sections being used. Indirect lighting system was installed with regulation footlights and masked overhead lights to illuminate the array of still photographs therein. On the windows are printed the name of the theatre along with the words "To-day" and "Now Showing" and there is a painted sign over the large window box which reads, "Rex Theatre. The Finest Photoplays on Earth." Still above this is one of a series of extended arrows in cutout form which point toward the theatre around the corner. The large arrows overhead reads, "Follow the Arrow to the Rex Theatre."

On either side of the show window there are billboards and there is also a billboard on the wall of the adjacent store building. Above the latter billboard there is a large painted sign on the actual wall which bears the following: "Rex Theatre, Motion Pictures, Admission 10 cents."

At the very corner there is a new and impressive electric sign which bears the name of the theatre while on the Lorne Avenue side of the corner site there are still more billboards with permanent theatre signs and arrows overhead, all leading to the Rex along the street.

Improve Your Projection at a Saving of $250 to $1,000

The outstanding advantage of incandescent lamp projection is its great economy. It reduces current costs from 25% to 75%.

But this new and better method of projection has many other advantages. It improves the appearance of pictures on the screen by supplying an intense light, that is free from flicker, glare and shadows.

It improves operating conditions by eliminating fumes, carbon dust and excessive heat. It is simple to operate and it costs little to install.

Edison MAZDA lamps for motion picture projection are made to the highest standards of quality. Each lamp is thoroughly tested before it leaves the factory and is guaranteed to give satisfactory results when properly operated.

Standardized Screen Brightness Part III

SOME time ago, as pointed out in a previous article, the Society of Motion Picture Engineers appointed a committee to investigate the possibilities of establishing a standard for screen brightness in motion picture theatres with a view toward bringing about a more sensible condition in the way of intensity of screen illumination.

This committee reported back in due time that it appeared very difficult, if not impossible, to secure the desired results in view of the varied local conditions confronted throughout the exhibiting field. It is indeed true that many complications beset the problem and the task is not altogether an easy one.

Still, it appears to us, after rather lengthy reflection, that in spite of the many complications involved and the seeming hopelessness of this problem of effecting such a standard—at least as far as establishing one and then pointing out to the exhibitor ways and means of attaining it—is really not as hopeless as it appears on the surface.

In these days of accomplishing what, in bygone years, was regarded as impossible, it behooves us to adapt a liberal attitude toward problems which appear to offer insuperable difficulties in the way of effecting a satisfactory solution. This particular little job of screen standardization may prove to be susceptible to the same powers of overrating as far as its difficulties are concerned.

A Mistaken Idea

All through the discussions relating to this subject, whenever it rises to a point of discussion, either written or verbal, a number of mistaken ideas are propounded to prove the futility of attempting to settle the matter in a satisfactory fashion.

According to one person, who, in his own mind at least, appears to be an authority on the subject, this entire matter of screen brightness standardization is impossible if for no other reason than that a high screen brightness is absolutely necessary when viewing a picture at long distances (150-250 ft). Whereas, at shorter viewing distances a lower screen brightness will suffice.

In discussing the visual effects resulting from a constant screen brightness for all viewing distances this person has the following to say:

"If the illumination were confined within the limits necessary to prevent what amounts to over-illumination, with consequent obliteration of a portion of the finer photographic shades, thus making the condition ideal from the viewpoint of those occupying the close-up and middle distance seats of the auditorium, then the eye strain from the rear seats would be nothing short of awful, and the view highly unsatisfactory, while the beauty of the picture would not be in any degree enhanced, except for those who were comparatively close-up, because of the fact that the eye cannot discern the finer shadings at any considerable distance."

Now, we believe that to be a very mistaken idea since it has no foundation in fact. We interpret the term "fine shadings" to mean the black and white tones, or a difference in brightness contrast between various areas of the picture. If he had used the words "fine detail," meaning the local detail within the picture area itself, we would have agreed with him since it is true that increased distances makes the discernment of fine detail increasingly difficult.

The only thing which will reveal fine detail at great distances is its magnification, either by the use of glasses, or by means of the more simple expedient of increasing the picture size. There is a limit to the latter, of course.

Brightness Independent of Distance

It was pointed out once before in this department that the brightness of an object is independent of the viewing distance, atmospheric absorption neglected. Every illuminating engineer who has made any pretense at studying the effects of glare is familiar with this law and understands its practical application.

In the light of this there is no reason why a person at a distance of say, 150 ft. from a motion picture screen, should not see a picture which is fully as bright as another person located 25 feet away from the screen.

As far as comfortable viewing is concerned the person located 150 feet away would have the advantage since a much smaller total amount of light flux would enter his eyes, thus reducing the likelihood of glare and he would still see a picture fully as bright as a person much nearer the screen.

The person nearer the screen would on the other hand, be most unfavorably located as regards comfortable continued vision since his closing angle of vision would, particularly in the case of an over-illuminated screen, include an uncomfortable amount of light.

Furthermore, it is recognized that when close to a picture screen, it is practically impossible for the human eye to encompass the entire screen action without letting the eye wander over the picture area continually.

This involves additional eye-strain since then the pupil of the eye is continually expanding and contracting as it leaves one local area of certain brightness to focus on another of a higher or lower brightness.

There can be no integrating effect of the entire picture as is possible at greater distances.

In this matter of screen over-illumination, the patrons nearest the screen are the ones whose visual welfare is more directly involved—certainly not those at the rear of theatres, who see, ordinarily, a very comfortable picture as far as its brightness is concerned. The interest of these persons (at the rear) lies in showing them a picture large enough to enable them to clearly discern all ordinary fine detail within the picture area. If this condition is met then the rear seat should, other conditions permitting, be the best in the house. Why are the front seats ordinarily vacant, except in crowded houses? The patrons themselves, unconsciously provide the answer.

The motion picture theatre is peculiarly well suited to secure the utmost from applying the law of brightness mentioned above since the conditions under which the screen is viewed can be closely regulated and controlled.

Many theatres do, in fact, take advantage of it and others attempt to do the same with varying degrees of success. Many of them, the small town houses in particular, apparently are unaware of the results which could be secured were they to follow the example set by some of the larger houses.

The success of the operation of this law depends primarily upon one thing, viz.: "No bright light sources or areas of brightness other than the screen and its border, should be visible from the seating area when the view is directed toward the screen." This seems like a simple precaution to take yet how often is its strict application found in practice. Yet, neglect of this fundamental rule will defeat the action of the Brightness Law and render it necessary to provide a higher screen brightness for the rear seats in order to overcome the bad effects of such glare spots.

As far as the front and middle seats are concerned, persons occupying them ordinarily have their entire visual angle filled by the screen area and its border, but those persons situated at the rear of theatre have only a part of their visual field so occupied, the remainder being taken up by the walls and ceiling of the theatre. Those areas usually contain the glare spots. As regards the exhibitor then, the first logical step toward securing a standard screen brightness is to eliminate such glare spots to permit the fullest operation of the brightness law explained above.

Four More Theatres for Boston; Other New England Zone Activities

THE New England Theatres Operating Co. is erecting a quartet of new playhouses in Metropolitan Boston which will rival any already in operation for the size of the communities served. Shapiro & Sons of New York are erecting the new Rivoli Theatre at Dudley street, Roxbury district of Boston, which will be ready for opening about March 15. Construction work has but recently started. The theatre will have 2,000 seats all on one floor with no balconies. The interior color scheme and decorations are of Pompeiian style with beautiful lounge rooms, foyer and a mezzanine floor. Another of this group is the Rialto in Roslindale which will be open for private inspection the last of the month. Its seating capacity is 1,500. On the same day the remodelled Jamaica Theatre at Hyde Square will open. It will seat 2,300. Construction work is also under way on the new Morton Theatre in Dorchester with palatial foyer opening from a beautiful entrance and a very artistic interior. It will seat 2,000.

Negotiations are under way between the Chamber of Commerce at Westfield, Mass., and two theatre operating companies in New York, whose identity is not revealed at this time, for a new theatre at the rear of Park's Block, Westfield, with a seating capacity of 1,400. It is proposed to use the rotunda of the block, which is the largest in the city, for a theatre entrance. The Chamber of Commerce plans to aid in the financing of the proposed theatre and will probably start work as soon as pending arrangements for the lease of the house are completed.

A theatre is to be erected on Merrimack street, Lowell, Mass., by Sam Katze to cost upwards of $100,000. Plans for the theatre are now being prepared by Architect James Tuck of 439 Park Square Building, Boston. The structure will be of brick and reinforced steel, four stories high and basement, 150 x 100 feet.

Edward W. Benson of Greenfield, Mass., is having plans drawn for a large undertaking in Brattleboro, Vt., which will include a motion picture theatre, hotel and several stores on the Main street. James Tuck of Boston is drawing the plans and it is expected that bids will be asked before the new year. The estimated cost of the work is in the vicinity of $250,000.

About February first the new Bradford Theatre in Quincy, Mass., being erected by ex-Mayor William A. Bradford, will be opened to the public. This will be one of the largest motion picture houses south of Boston and its stage is erected so that vaudeville acts may be staged. There are nine dressing rooms, each equipped with shower baths. An auxiliary lighting system has been installed so that if the city current should be shut off the auxiliary would carry the lode until the city power comes on again. There will be one balcony. The last of the structural ironwork is now in place.

Wilfred Duffy and Howard Duffy, who conduct motion picture theatres in Vinalhaven and Kennebunk, Me., are to lease and manage the new playhouse to be built in connection with the new pier at Old Orchard Beach, Maine. The town has just voted to rebuild the pier, badly damaged by fire last season, and the theatre will be located at the extreme end of the pier. It is expected that the work will be completed in time for the use of the new pier next summer.

It is understood that a new motion picture theatre is to be erected in Brockton, Mass., work on construction to start early in the new year.

New Neighborhood Theatres For West Coast

Definite and official announcement has been made by Oliver Kehrlein of the beginning of his project, in a $200,000 house to be erected on Telegraph Ave., near 48th street in the Claremont District, Oakland. Kehrlein plans to rush to early completion a chain of six community theatres of which the Telegraph Avenue house will be the first, and will be named the Claremont-Kinema. The same scheme of naming will be followed in the other theatres. The new theatre will have a seating capacity of 1,800 and will be surrounded by a group of business stores. Sites for the remaining theatres of the first link of the chain of six, have been obtained on Grand Avenue, the Piedmont District, Lake Shore Boulevard, Alameda, and Park Boulevard.

Plans have been drawn by J. A. Harvey for a 400-seat house on the main street of Santa Cruz, one-half block from the Unique and New Santa Cruz Theatres, which will open on the 15th of December. The house will be known as the Casino. The T. & D. Theatre at Hanford has also been leased by Mr. Harvey, operation of which he intends to assume this coming March.

Plans and specifications have been accepted by Sam Perlin from his architect for a new 1,250-seat theatre to be erected at Park Boulevard and Wellington street in Oakland. The new theatre will be operated in conjunction with the Claremont and Strand now under Perlin's management, and will represent an investment of nearly $150,000.

Atlanta Co. To Distribute For Lee-Lash

A deal has just been consummated whereby Southern Theatre Equipment Company becomes the representative and distributor for Lee Lash Studios in the eleven southern states. The agreement was concluded yesterday when Joe Shear, special representative of the Lee Lash Company, arrived here from the home office in Mount Vernon, N. Y.

Under the terms of the agreement the Lee Lash Studios guarantee their local representatives a full co-operation, even to the extent of putting the services of Mr. Shear at their disposal whenever their mutual interests require such service.

Walter Hayes to Lease New Buffalo Theatre

Sidney Wertheimer will begin at once to build his new theatre on Hertel avenue, Buffalo, a few doors from Shea's North Park. It is to be a 2,500 seat house, complete in every way and comparing with the larger downtown houses. Mr. Wertheimer encountered much trouble in getting his plans O.K"d by the council because of the objection of nearby church officials. However, taking the matter to court he won out. When completed the house will be leased by Walter Hays of Buffalo, former president of the M.P.T.O. of N. Y. The policy of the house has not as yet been decided upon.

Mead in Charge of Automatic Ticket Reg. Corp., Chicago

It has been announced by the Automatic Ticket Register Corporation that they have established their Chicago office at 226 West Adams Street under the personal charge of George Mead, one of the executives of that company. Complete facilities have been established at this office, it is said, covering both sales and service on Gold Seal ticket machines and tickets.

The Moorlyn Theatre at Ocean City, N. J. has added to the general attractiveness of its exterior by the installation of a fine new Marquise, built by The ProBert Sheet Metal Company, Covington, Kentucky.—(Adv.)

Sol Brill's new Inwood Theatre, Dyckman Heights, New York City. This house is exceedingly attractive both in appointments and design.

Precision, Powers and Acme Projector Companies Amalgamated

AN official announcement of the merger of Percision Machine Co., Nicholas Power Co. and Acme Motion Picture Projector Co. has been made. The announcement follows in part:

The International Projector Corporation, incorporated under the laws of Delaware, has been formed which has acquired the entire business and assets of the Nicholas Power Company, Inc., and the Precision Machine Company, Inc., both located in the city of New York, and the Acme Motion Picture Projector Company located in the city of Chicago, all manufacturers and distributors of motion picture projectors and accessories and other apparatus pertaining to the motion picture industry. These corporations have been active in the industry since 1907, 1913 and 1916, respectively. The Power, Simplex and Acme motion picture projectors, which are manufactured in the respective plants of the corporation, are widely known in this industry.

These machines which are sold in every country in the world will continue to be manufactured and the individual identity of each machine will be fully retained. The business formerly carried on by the Nicholas Power Company and the Precision Machine Company will hereafter be conducted in a ten-story fireproof building situated at No. 90 Gold Street, New York, N. Y. This building and the land on which it is located are owned by the Cinema Building Corporation, all of whose stock is owned by The International Projector Corporation.

The retailing of the manufactured product will be continued through the present channels of distribution.

The formation of the International Projector Corporation represents a new era in projection equipment since the Corporation will have under one roof what is claimed to be the most extensive manufacturing machinery for the economical production of projectors ever assembled. Much of this is new, modern, and up-to-date.

The personnel which has been responsible for the marked improvement in the manufacture and distribution of the respective projectors during the past two years will be continued with the new company.

New methods of manufacture have been instituted with resultant benefit to both the seller and the user, and the present sales policy will be continued.

Experience for a long period of years has proved the economic necessity of this move and it is anticipated that time will further prove the wisdom of it from the standpoint of both the user and the manufacturer of motion picture projectors.

The International Projector Corporation bespeaks the continuance of the good will and support for so many years accorded the Power, Simplex and Acme projectors.

The International Projector Corporation fully realizes the importance of good projection and recognizing its responsibility in furnishing the best that engineering ingenuity and sound financing can supply.

Contracts Let For Two New Northwest Theatres

Bids for the construction of the new $500,000 Broadway theatre in this city, to be built by the Jensen-VonHerberg company, were to be called for within the next few weeks, according to recent announcements. Plans drawn by B. Marcus Priteca, foremost theatre architect on the Pacific Coast, have already been approved, it is reported, and construction work on the new enterprise was expected to begin within a short time. The house has been planned for several months.

Contracts for the construction of the new $500,000 Hippodrome Theatre in Portland were let last week, according to information received in this city, and actual work on the building of the house was expected to be begun within the next few weeks. The Hanson-Hammond Construction Company of Portland, well-known as theatre builders of the Pacific Northwest, will construct the house.

Hennegan Co. Announces Holiday Program Covers

The Hennegan Company, of Cincinnati, lithographers and theatre printers, have announced an interesting and novel line of program covers for the Xmas holidays. These covers are of several different designs and, it is claimed, due to quantity production, are available at unusually low costs.

Tony Sudekum To Build In Nashville, Tenn.

Tony Sudekum's new theatre in Nashville, Tenn., at which point he practically controls every important house now operating, is said to be the most beautiful of the entire group.

The Belmont, which Mr. Sudekum opened recently, is Nashville's newest theatre. It seats approximately 1,250 people, has an excellent fifteen-piece orchestra, and a $20,000 organ. The attendants of the theatre, including the ushers, are uniformed, and occasionally vary their costumes to harmonize with the theme when a special production is playing.

The new Church Street theatre which Sudekum is now building in Nashville, will vie with the Belmont in beauty and appointments. It has not been named yet, but will probably be called The Capitol. The new house will seat about 1,500, and has been designed by a local architect. Construction is proceeding at a good pace, although plans for the opening have not yet been announced.

$175,000 M. P. Theatre for Redwood City

Redwood City, California, is to have a new motion picture theatre to cost approximately $175,000. Plans are being prepared by Architects Weeks and Day of San Francisco. The theatre will have a seating capacity of 2,000. The owner of the new structure is Ellis J. Arkush.

Pinellas Park, Florida to have New Theatre

Plans are being prepared for the erection of a film studio to be erected at Pinellas Park, Florida. The new theatre will be the most modern of its kind. William Towner, famous architect is drawing plans for the new structure.

Illinois has Modern Motion Picture Theatre

Lake Forest, Illinois, is to have a new theatre of modern type to be erected by the Anderson estate at the corner of Deerpath and Forest Avenues. The cost of the new building is estimated at $225,000. The building will include four store rooms on the first floor and twelve offices on the second. The theatre will have a seating capacity of 950 persons.

Plans Projected For Two Buffalo Theatres

Subject to the consent of neighboring churches, the Hager-Askey Building Company, 1325 Hertel avenue, received permission at the last meeting of the city council to build an 1,800-seat motion picture theatre at Main street and West Northrup place, Buffalo. The Ellsworth Amusement Company has been incorporated to build a $100,000 theatre at 822 Tonawanda street, Buffalo.

Stanley's Aldine To Open At Wilmington

The Aldine Theatre, Wilmington, Del., which was recently purchased by the Stanley Company of America from Marcus Loew, will be formally opened on November 21st. The theatre will be under the general management of Frank W. Buehler, who is supervising the Stanley Company's Wilmington houses. Approximately $50,000 has been spent on interior decorations and new equipment for the Aldine, which will rank as the finest in the city.

Two New Suburban Theatres For Chicago

The Northwestern Amusement Company, which now operates the Casimir, Elston and Maplewood Theatres, will erect a 2,200 seat theatre at the northeast corner of Irving Park Boulevard and Menard Avenue. The new theatre will be named the Menard and will contain, beside the movie house, six stores, six apartments and ten offices. Architect Sidney Minchin states that work will start within the next thirty days.

S. J. Gregory and Ben Bernasek announced that they will start construction at once on a motion picture theatre in Cicero, at the northeast corner of West 25th and South 53rd Avenue. E. P. Ruppert and R. Levine & Company are the architects and builders. The new theatre will be named the Mirador and will have a seating capacity of 2,500. In addition to the theatre, the building will have a three story business section which will contain seven stores, sixteen apartments, billiard rooms and bowling alleys.

Lynch And Miller To Open Chicago Theatre

General Manager Jack Miller plans to open the new 2,600 seat Lido Theatre at Fifth Avenue and Washington Blvd., Maywood, the latter part of November. Among the important items of equipment will be a splendid Kilgen Organ. The Lido is owned by the Lido Theatre Corporation, of which V. T. Lynch is president. The house is a high class structure throughout and is one of several fine motion picture theatres being erected by Messrs. Lynch and Miller.

Ventura, Cal., to Have Fifteen Hundred Seat Theatre

Ventura, California, is to have a new theatre which will cost approximately $150,000 and which will seat fifteen hundred persons. It is planned that the new house will include a large stage to take care of Fanchon and Marco prologues to the feature pictures. The owners of the new theatre will be C. A. Corcoran and the West Coast Theatres, Inc.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"The Big Parade"—M-G-M., Astor, New York

World: "'The Big Parade,' with its orchestration, is by all odds the most stirring of all motion pictures which I have seen. There has been nothing out of the World War acted either on stage or screen to approach it in reproducing the heart-breaking realities of the battlefields; the sacrifice; the glorious valor of muddy soldiers moving bravely on to death; little moments of happiness while the heavens burst in flames; the fine, stout thread of romance which wove itself into the pattern of the conflict as American soldiers hailed and said farewell to their Frenchies."

Herald-Tribune: "Such direction, such writing, such acting, such titles! It isn't possible to describe this perfect thing, for 'The Big Parade' is just a series of scenes so alluring in their reality that one feels inclined to break into cheers, and we may say that some of the people around us did so."

Telegram: "Something Gargantuan leaped into the Astor Theatre last evening when the war came alive again for the sake of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, 'The Big Parade,' and raked the screen fore and aft. It was such a formidable frontal attack on the feelings of the spectator that for once the applause of the usual hysterical first night audience was smothered at times as they sat silent, lost in honest enthrallment."

Evening World: "'The Big Parade' is splendid. It moves with the power and sweep of a tide and has a grip like the undertow. It is one of those rare achievements in picture making that is all good and grows progressively better with each reel. 'The Big Parade' is infinitely more than a war play. It deals with humanity in war, the bitter and the sweet, the fineness and the hellishness, the friendliness and the hate."

Post: "Following close upon hosts of carefully automatic, pleasantly decorative sham-battles of the films comes 'The Big Parade'—at last a real picture of the late war. One of those 'impressive gatherings of notables from every walk of life' attended the premiere last night at the Astor Theatre, and for once the hysterical offusiveness of a first night audience was actually stilled as the film unwound."

Journal: "The motion picture of the year. 'The Big Parade,' opened at the Astor Theatre last night. Wonderful, remarkable, extraordinary, thrilling—superlatives that have been used so often in connection with other pictures can hardly do justice to it. War scenes have been done before, but they were futile compared to these."

Graphic: "The huge crowd was fairly electric with enthusiasm and when the last of the twelve reels was run off they voiced their approval and appreciation with longer and louder applause than has greeted a cinema spectacle in many a movie moon. The story is so human that it hurts. It contains grim tragedy, sparkling comedy, deep pathos, and a realism that has never before been translated so successfully to the screen."

Telegraph: "'The Big Parade' passed before a notable audience at the Astor last night, and left laughter and tears and thrills in its wake. Laurence Stallings' chronicle of the war has been translated into terms of the screen by King Vidor and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and the result is such as to make the spectator forget virtually every war scene ever filmd before."

American: "A distinguished first night audience yesterday experienced what will doubtless prove to be one of the greatest evenings it will ever spend in a motion picture theatre. The Astor Theatre was plunged into the heart of the World War, and those watching the picture lived through war's every phase with an unforgettable tensity. There have been war films before, and good ones too. But none have tackled their subject with the realism of 'The Big Parade.'"

Times: "An eloquent pictorial epic of the World War was presented last night at the Astor Theatre, before a sophisticated gathering that was intermittently stirred to laughter and tears. This powerful photodrama is entitled 'The Big Parade.' It is a subject so compelling and realistic that one feels impelled to approach a review of it with all the respect it deserves, for as a motion picture it is something beyond the fondest dreams of most people."

Daily News: "Miracle of miracles—the perfect picture has arrived! 'The Big Parade' is the best picture that has ever been made. It is the justification of the moving picture industry. 'The Big Parade' gets you, hammers down your defenses and then, miraculously, leaves you with the glow of idealism."

Sun: "Of the many photoplays brewed from the moving, robust materials of the world war 'The Big Parade' is in all probability the worthiest. Its war scenes are assuredly the most thrilling since the days of 'Hearts of the World,' and I venture the opinion that they are far more accurate. The photography and the composition of the scenes are admirable. 'The Big Parade' is an excellent war movie."

'Road to Yesterday"—P. D. C., Stanley, Philadelphia

Public Ledger: "'The Road to Yesterday' certainly should be included among the 'ten best' of the season. It is a great pleasure to report, that for once the picture has all the honors on its side. It is elaborate, as all De Mille productions usually are, and every scene, every incident, is done in good taste. There is a richness of material and an almost embarrassing amount of fine action. Certainly, the five outstanding members of the cast deserve the highest praise."

Sun: "The picture is far superior to the stage version upon which it is based."

Evening Ledger: "Typical of the artistry of Cecil B. De Mille. Excellent acting which leaves a tremendous impression of a story quite different from the usual photoplay."

Inquirer: "It is a powerful picture and has a notable cast. Joseph Schildkraut, as Kenneth, gives a stimulating, vivid and forceful performance. Jetta Goudal, as Malena, and the gypsy is excellent. Vera Reynolds makes the role of Beth emotional and interesting. William Boyd, as Jack, gives to his part a clean-out gripping impression. Trixie Friganza adds to the comedy. Careful attention to details, and the fanciful environment makes this photoplay a splendid success."

Record: "Deserves to rank with the best by Cecil B. De Mille . . . De Mille did not write the play that he resurrected from the stage offerings of a score of years ago—but he did generously and lavishly and brilliantly put into the screen production many of the resources of his large photoplay 'plant' and the vast experience he has had in the making of screen successes."

Bulletin "The film presents a delightful fantasy through the medium of a cast of more than usual ability."

'Road to Yesterday"—P. D. C., Figueroa, Los Angeles

Examiner: "De Mille has introduced so much spell-binding melodrama and fast action that the presence of a theme may easily be forgotten unless you want to remember it. Jeanie Macpherson and Beulah Marie Dix have linked up the two periods with a sensational climax which has rarely been equalled on the screen."

Illustrated Daily News: "Cecil De Mille shows more stuff than he did when he was cutting stories out of whole cloth. This story receives careful and magnificent treatment at his hands and the train wreck sequence surpases anything of the sort we have ever seen on the screen."

Times: "The picture works up to pitch of excitement with the train wreck one of the most realist that has ever been filmed and evidences De Mille's technical skill at its best."

Herald: "De Mille has evolved a screen offering that will live long in the annals of art. It is gripping; convincing; thrilling and heartrending."

"Bright Lights"—M-G-M., Capitol, New York

Mirror: "Ray is his old time wistful self. He apears a bit older but none the less expert at humanizing a corn-fed, corn-growing lad of the open spaces. Pauline Starke infuses sparkle and personality into the role of Patsy, a wise-cracking, wise-up chorus girl who knows all the tricks of the game along the lane that's paved with gold."

Telegraph: "'Bright Lights' is a gay and entertaining offering that combines many of the elements that exhibitors love. Robert Z. Leonard has directed the picture with considerable skill, letting it skip along in a gay, irrepressible way. Unlike the motion pictures that deal with the mad, reckless ways of Signboard Center, Richard Connell's stories always tell of the more human side of Broadway habitues."

Daily News: "Charlie Ray, the screen's perfect country lout, is just that in the Capitol's movie. He fairly spells bumpkin all over the screen, and with Pauline Starke to lend him a hand. Charlie is delightful. All of his old clownishness is employed and lots of new tricks."

Sun: "'Bright Lights' is so skillfully done that it becomes rather entertaining. The photography is exceptional and the backgrounds are magnificent. The pictorial parts of 'Bright Lights' are cleverly worked out. The photoplay is far superior to the average run of motion pictures."

Post: "'Bright Lights' does well indeed as an excuse for the return of Charles Ray. His wistful charm and well-meaning awkwardness are as engaging as ever against a backgound of rustic simplicity. Not a few movie-goers will be pleasantly chirked up over the prospect of seeing him still practically incapable of entering a room without stumbling over something."

Journal: "'Bright Lights' is an enjoyable frothy film with Pauline Starke and Lilyan Tashman as entertainers in a Broadway cabaret. Ray returns to the screen in his well-known straw hat and overalls. He goes to a big Chicago hotel and learns the lobby patter, and the scene where he tries his Loop line on Pauline is a riot."

Telegram: "'For the votaries of the ultra-modern there are extravagant scenes of Broadway's night life. Charleston demonstrations galore, en masse and solo, and beautiful beings in staggering Paris robes. There is the vivacious Pauline Starke, who changes her attire every hundred feet or so."

"Under the Rouge"—Associated Ex., Rialto, Chicago

Herald-Examiner: "Nice chap, Tom Moore—so nice that his chief occupation these days is impersonating thieves for the movies. With that ingratiating grin of his and that easy, pleasant personality, Mr. Moore has for years been a favorite. He could get away with murder (which he does, in this crook career of his) and still remain a favorite. In fact, I think he is one of a few who could curse his mother in a movie and not go to the foot of the class."

You know in advance

Pictures printed on Eastman Positive Film carry the photographic quality of the negative through to the screen.

It takes but a moment to check up —a glance in the margin tells the story. When you see the black-lettered identification "Eastman" "Kodak" you know in advance that the picture will screen with the brilliancy your audiences expect.

The Usher says:

"What a mob we've got in here with 'The Merry Widow.' Matinees are packed and we've had standing room every night. Looks like they'll keep the picture another week or more. That's another one of those Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer films. They sure do the business."

SOMETHING DIFFERENT

THE pictures announced on the following pages mark a radical departure in production. It will be evident to all, on analysis, that these pictures are individual, each one of them big, each one of them a special in the highest sense of the term.

There is a situation in this business that every exhibitor has come to fear. Huge fall announcements, some great pictures and the general policy of flooding the market with all big material in the fall has come to mean that by spring the other big material promised is a matter of promise only. Most of it has vanished into thin air.

Paramount steps in at this point with an announcement of pictures that are bigger, better, more powerful than anything released in the fall. Nothing in the field can compare with the quality of these productions here set before you.

Paramount is putting more into this group of pictures than in all the fall and winter pictures ever released.

The slogan is "Make it bigger, make it better and forget the season of the year."

Exhibitors will do well to analyze this product, to study the box-office names in Paramount's stock company, to check up the history of actual delivery of promises that has always characterized Paramount above all others.

Such a check-up will bring one answer, and that is: The greatest exhibitor success of the new year will be in exact proportion to how closely he can tie in with Paramount and these Paramount showman's pictures.

EXCLUSIVE OF STARS

WHAT a tremendous treasure-trove of names is contained in that list of the Paramount Stock Company.

From that Golconda will be mined the names that go into the rich structure of each of the pictures listed in this book. The value of box-office names in big pictures was never more evident than today.

Paramount is in a better position than ever in the history of the screen, to capitalize on the need for public-pulling names that draw the crowds to the ticket window.

Paramount advertising, Paramount publicity, the true genius of the artists themselves have combined to make those names stand for the most popular men and women in all the world. They are the great personalities who will be called on to enrich the tremendous stories provided in the pictures listed in this group.

Exhibitors may rest assured that each and every one of these pictures will be recruited with names that really mean something to the public today.

A FEMINIZATION and elaboration of George Barr McCutcheon's world famous novel "Brewster's Millions" and the play by Winchell Smith.

The screen needs an outstanding film comedienne making big comedy specials—and Bebe is it! An elaborate comedy staff of gag men, special trick photographers, the director of "Paths of Paradise"—the same kind of the expert equipment that has been placed behind Raymond Griffith—has been engaged for Miss Daniels. She's all set to make the greatest pictures of her career.

"Miss Brewster's Millions" is the story of a girl with a Ritz soul and a Childs income. Then suddenly she inherits a million dollars, which she has to spend within a year!

My dear Mr. Botsford:
"Wild Geese" by Martha Ostenso is unquestionably the finest first novel that ever passed through our hands. As a serial in Pictorial Review it was tremendously popular and I am sure that as a motion picture it will have equal success. It has all the elements that make success. All this is more remarkable because in my twenty five years of editing magazines I have had all sorts of prize contests to handle and nearly always with unsatisfactory, disappointing results, so I was all the more delighted and surprised to get so great a first novel as "Wild Geese" out of our recent contest. It was picked from more than 1700 manuscripts and got the unanimous vote of the judges.
Very truly yours,

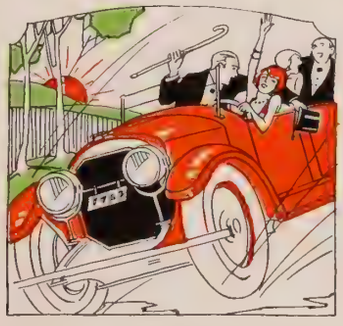
WHAT a box-office bet Bebe Daniels is proving in the fast, breezy, smart, de luxe type of comedy! Pictures like "Miss Bluebeard," "Wild, Wild Susan," and "Lovers in Quarantine" have put Bebe in a class by herself when it comes to whirlwind laugh-romances with a dash of pepper and tobasco in them. Audiences love this star in this kind of comedy. Exhibitors claim it's the easiest entertainment in the world to sell to the public and to satisfy with. Bebe Daniels in "The Palm Beach Girl" is this type of sure fire comedy at its best!

The swiftest, most exciting race story ever written by the speed-story writer, Byron Morgan...



For thrills it has:

A SENSATIONAL smash of a giant sea-plane! An amazing race between a speed boat and the Havana Express across the Florida Keys! A breath-taking race in fashionable Miami between the fastest speed boats in the world.

THERE is Tisha, the perfumed Babylonian enchantress. And there is Naomi, the pretty country maiden, pure and unspoiled. Both enacted on the screen in "The Wanderer" by beautiful women. Portraying Naomi with delightful charm and warming appeal is Kathryn Hill, famous model of Howard Chandler Christy and other distinguished artists. Proclaimed by them the loveliest lady in America. Naomi is the kind of a girl your mother must have been. Miss Hill, sweet and fresh as an April morning, is exactly the actress for the role.

Tola

GREATEST of all villains of the slumbrous East is Tola. Tola, the Evil One. Roaming the deserts and plains and the narrow streets of Babylon. With him the luring lady Tisha, the bait with which he snares the gold and honor of men. What match for this wily criminal is Jether, the Shepherd Boy?

What match indeed, with Ernest Torrence portraying the role of Tola, in "The Wanderer?" Torrence who can express more of villainy with a lift of the eyebrow than most heavies can in five reels.

Pharis

WALLACE BEERY as a swaggering sailorman. Fabulously wealthy and greedy for pleasure. That's Beery's role in "The Wanderer." And what a whale of a time he has playing it! No wonder roars of laughter and thunders of applause greet his first appearance on the screen. Skidding on the wine-soaked floor of Tisha's palace of a thousand delights. With what Rabelaisian unction, with what good-natured villainy Beery plays the part of Pharis, the big butter and egg man from the sea! It's sheer joy.

Huldah

THERE is yet another great woman role in "The Wanderer" — the Mother. The mother of the wandering son. The great-hearted woman who restrains her tears and hides her aching heart as the headstrong youth leaves home, who watches and waits for him, who grieves as he becomes sinner and wastrel, who clasps him to her breast and forgives him upon his return.

Kathryn Williams portrays an entirely new type of mother in "The Wanderer." Quiet, dignified, beautiful, she conceals within her rather austere exterior a great loving heart.

ONCE upon a time there was a jockey who was badly hurt in a fall. In the hospital his lovely nurse became to him a vision of beauty. The night she innocently remained in his room, she was discharged by the authorities and that was the last he ever saw of her—until—

Once out of the hospital, the jockey's sad face and the coincidence of rain whenever he appeared at the track, brought on him the title of The Rainmaker. The superstition persisted and soon owners of mud horses were hiring him to bring on rain. It was in a Mexican honky tonk that he again saw the girl, now known as "Mexican Nell." The whirl of evil in this gamblers' paradise swooped around them. A preacher warned of the plague to come. It came—a drought that brought death and destruction to the town. People died like flies. The girl, too, was about to die, no longer "Mexican Nell," but the vision of beauty that first appeared to him. Then it was that he prayed—really prayed—for the god of the thunderbolt. And as he prayed, the torrent came, and two lost souls were saved.

A story that is a sensation! A race-track spill, fights, and drunken revelers dancing in the light of a burning church—the plague and the prayer and the answering torrent. Truly a thunderbolt of dramatic power, this one, as exceptional a super-special as you'll find in ten years. To be produced on a gigantic scale.

WE have seen this picture. It is the smartest, most highly polished love comedy we have ever produced. As sophisticated as "A Woman of Paris", as down to earth and packed with gags as " A Regular Fellow." Menjou is his own perfect self in it. Florence Vidor, in breath-taking Parisians gowns and a new boyish bob, is amazingly beautiful. Malcolm St. Clair, producer of "Are Parents People?" and "The Trouble with Wives," has given us a comedy masterpiece.

Alfred Savoir, author of "Bluebeard's 8th Wife," wrote "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter." The stage play is turning them away on Broadway, New York. Everybody wants to enjoy the exploits of the rich Parisian boulevardier who masquerades as a waiter in order to make love to the outwardly haughty, inwardly warm-blooded Duchess who has caught his fancy. The whole production is made with panchromatic film, which makes characters and settings strikingly lifelike.

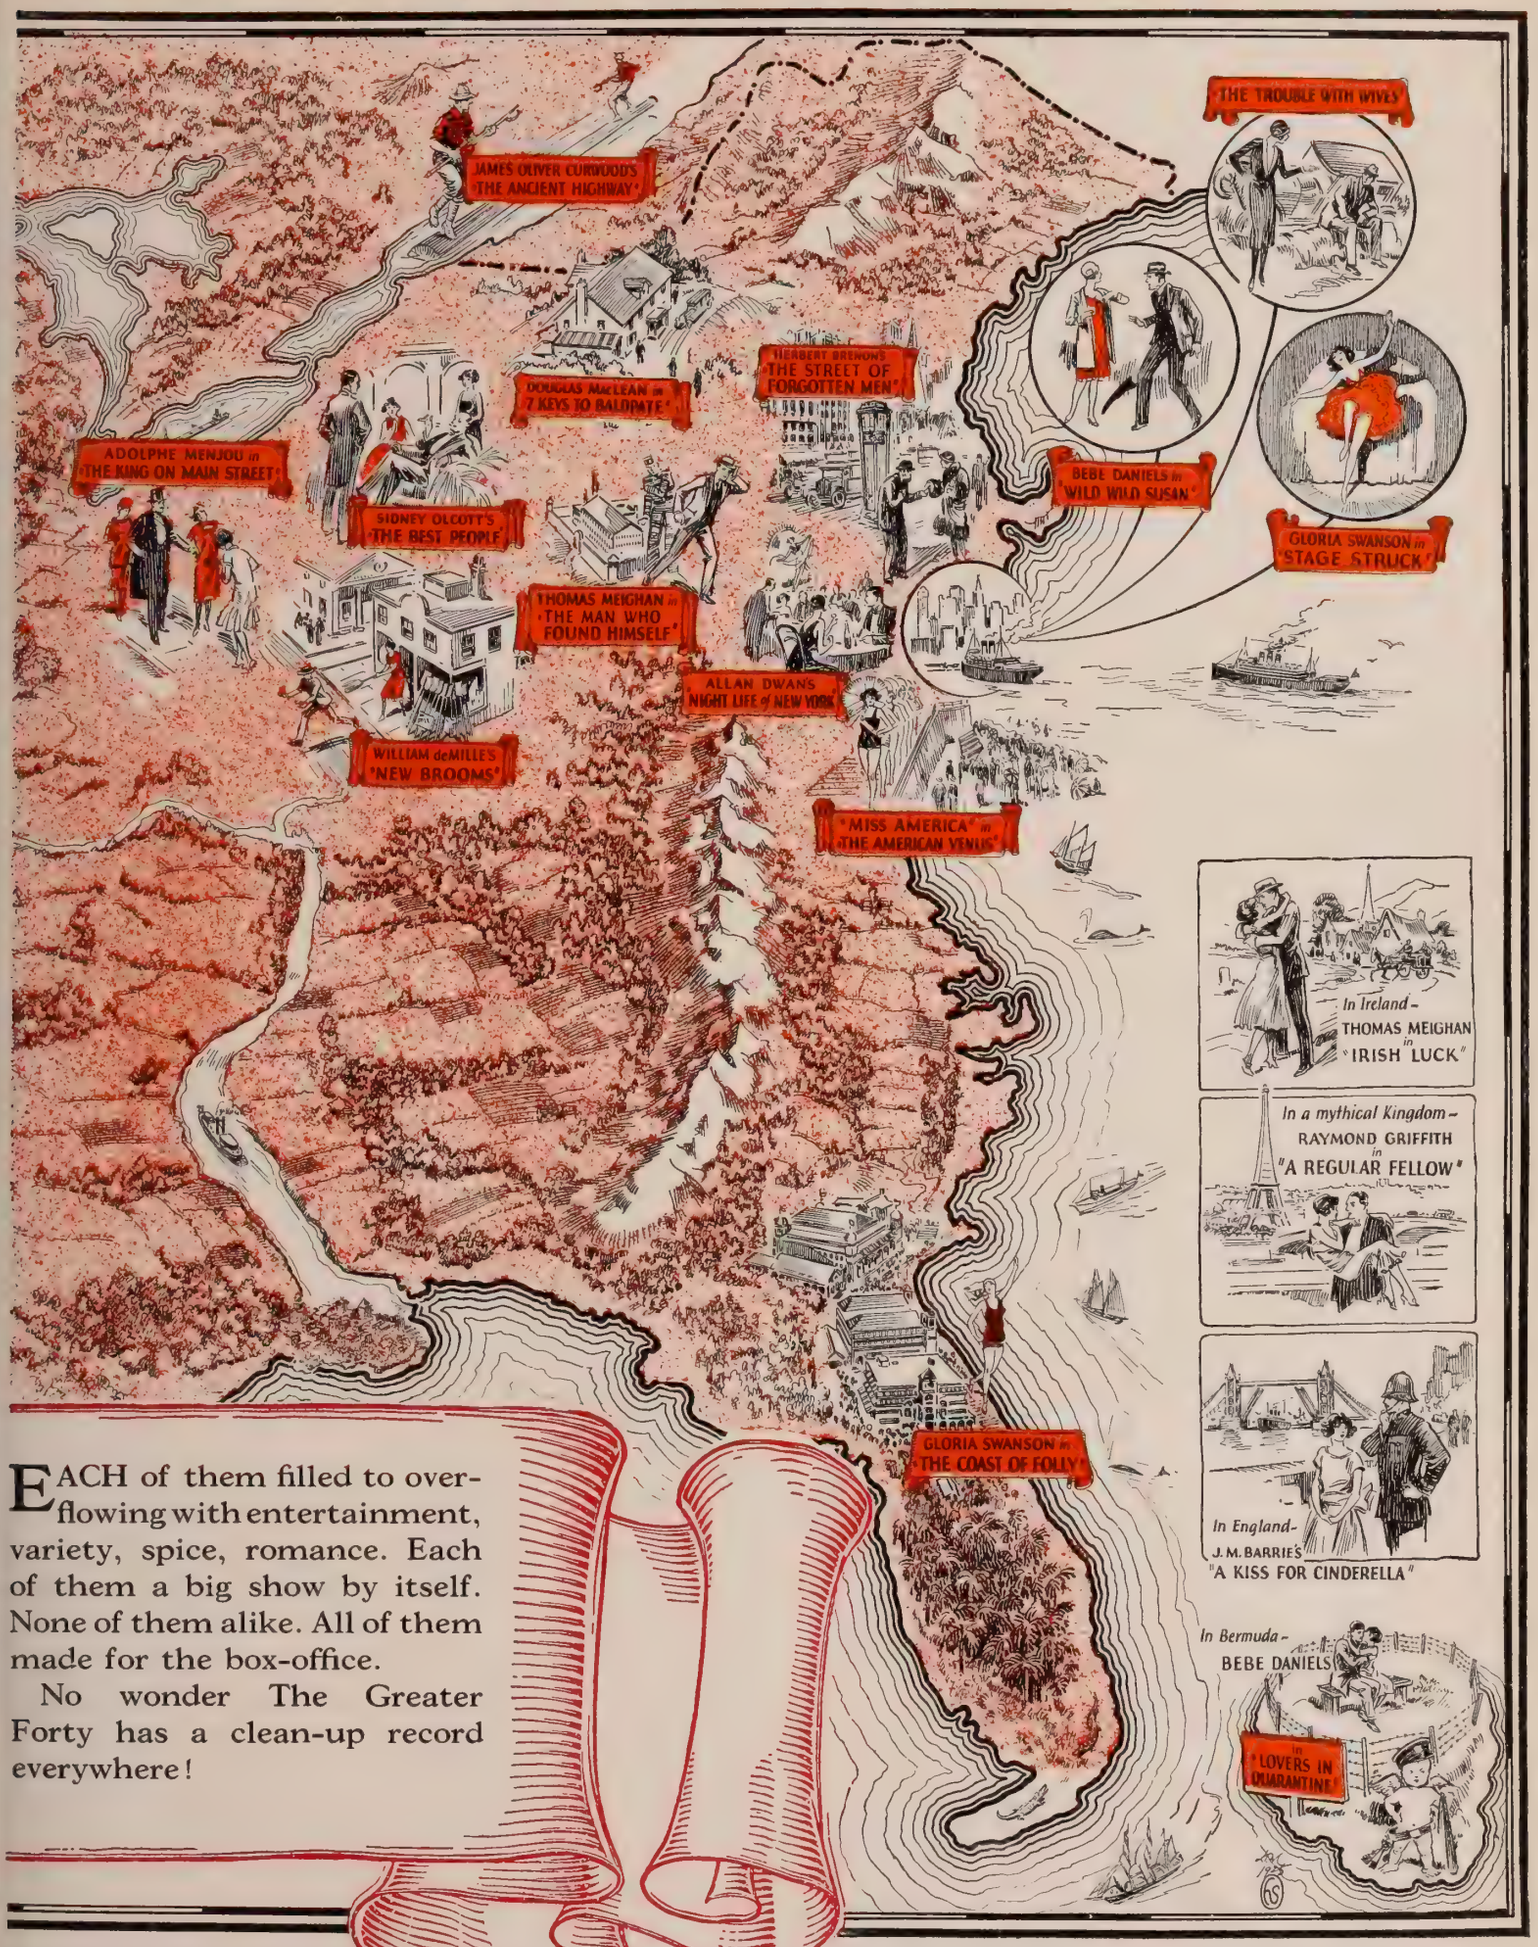
MOTHERS"

THE father is a wealthy idler. The daughter is a captivating flapper. So the pretty mother says, "Why don't I step out, too?" So she does. And she's some stepper! And some dresser! And some—but wait until you see the complications in this big, flashy, Rolls-Roycey comedy-drama of New York society. Made by the producer of "A Kiss for Cinderella." The man who wrote "Night Life of New York" is co-author.

From the play that ran a year at the Booth and Maxine Elliott Theatres, Broadway



THE WORLD OF ROMANCE IS COVERED IN

PARAMOUNT'S Greater Forty was announced to the trade six months ago.

The map pictured here gives some indication of the scope of the pictures. From Ireland to Calgary, from Bermuda to Arizona, from Palm Beach to Chicago, the stories troop by.

PARAMOUNT'S GREATER FORTY . . .

EACH of them filled to overflowing with entertainment, variety, spice, romance. Each of them a big show by itself. None of them alike. All of them made for the box-office.

No wonder The Greater Forty has a clean-up record everywhere!

Extra Added Attraction

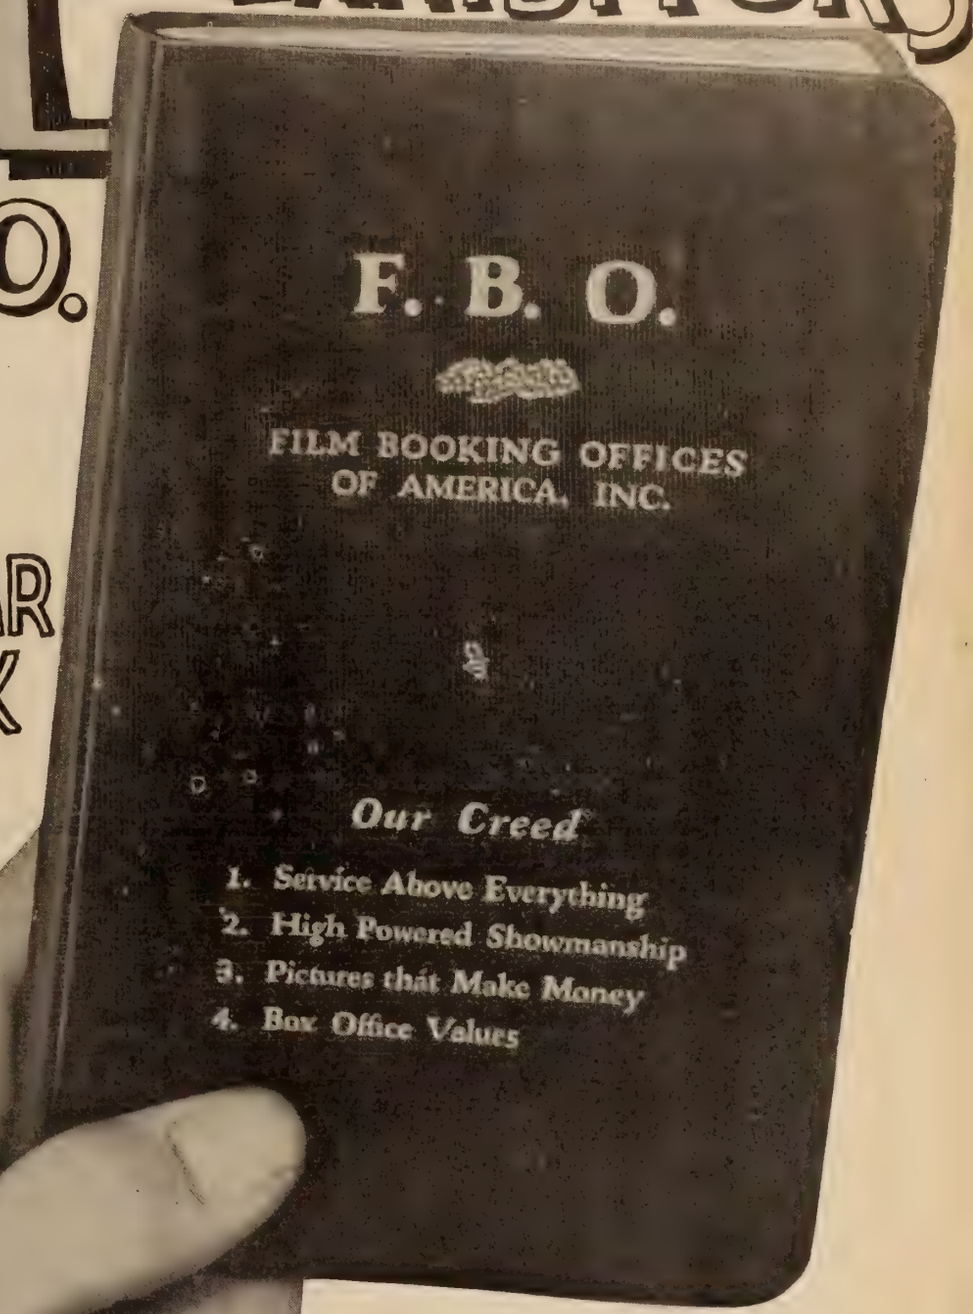
The spectacular Victor Fleming Production

"The Blind Goddess"

A big sensational long-run special. We could have held it till fall. Under our new policy of releasing a program of all-big pictures in the spring, we give it to you now!

"THE Blind Goddess" is the thrilling romance of a young lawyer, who, becoming a public prosecutor in New York City, is forced to choose between his ideal of duty and the girl he loves, under thrilling circumstances.

At the climax of the most sensational murder trial the metropolis has ever known, while he is prosecuting a beautiful woman for murder, honor compels him to abandon the case and resign from office, thus incurring the suspicion and jealousy of his betrothed. The ultimate disclosure of the extraordinary circumstances behind the case in time to save an innocent woman from the electric chair, win back for him both his political position and the love of the girl.



Throughout this marvelous story, the "blind goddess" typifies the blundering effort of the criminal law to achieve what is called "justice." It discloses the hidden motives which may animate those whose business it is to prosecute and to defend crime, the weakness and fallibility of judges, jurors and witnesses—the malevolent plotting of shyster lawyers—and is the most startling revelation of the unreliability of circumstantial evidence ever portrayed.

The preparation and trial of a great murder case, including the fatal inconsistency of the law and evidence, is pictured with the absolute accuracy of one who has spent a lifetime in the court. The mock pageantry of the law, the unequal struggle between right and wrong, the whole fierce gamut of human emotion, is spread mercilessly upon the screen through the medium of a poor boy's romance and his final achievement of success through self-sacrifice.

This is a greater picture than "Manslaughter" and one of the real specials of the year.

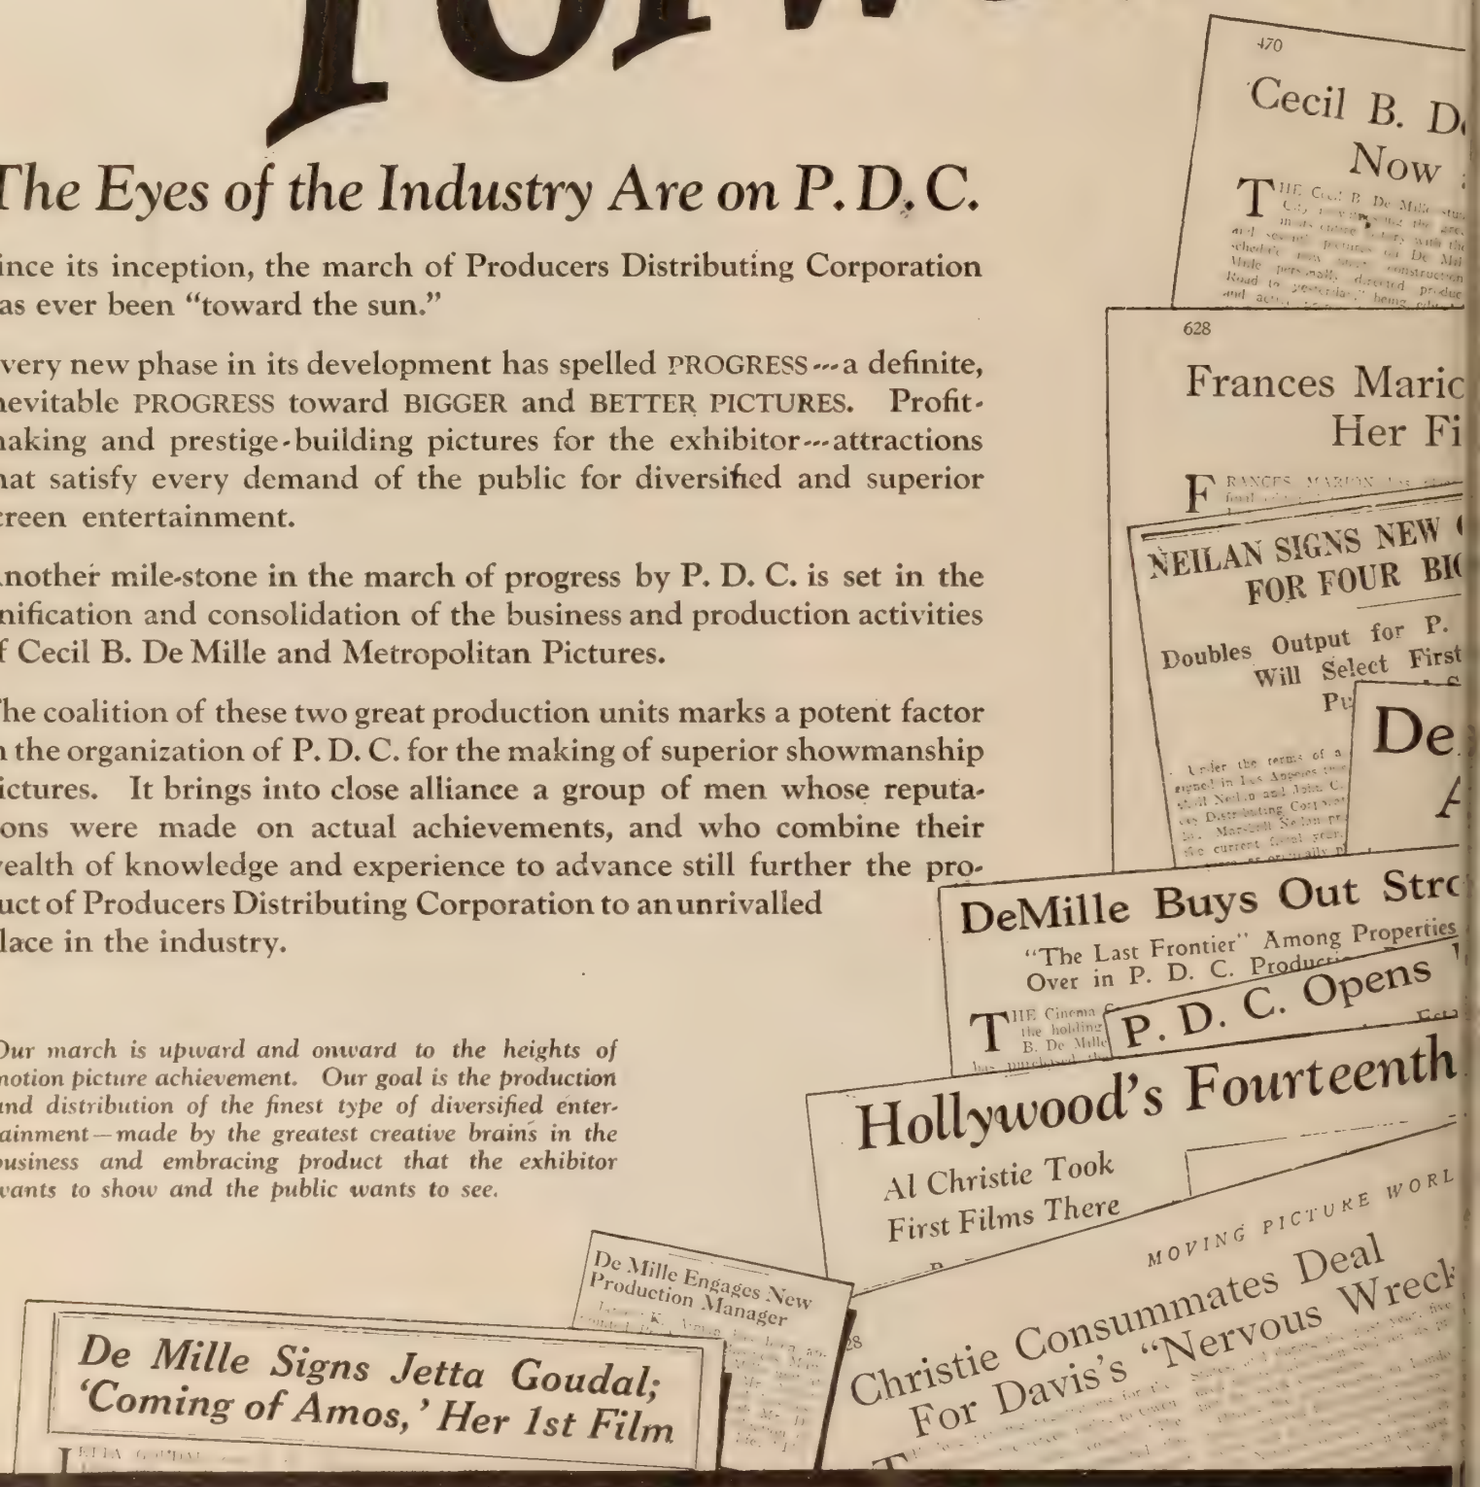
The Eyes of the Industry Are on P. D. C.



Since its inception, the march of Producers Distributing Corporation has ever been "toward the sun."

Every new phase in its development has spelled PROGRESS—a definite, inevitable PROGRESS toward BIGGER and BETTER PICTURES. Profit-making and prestige-building pictures for the exhibitor—attractions that satisfy every demand of the public for diversified and superior screen entertainment.

Another mile-stone in the march of progress by P. D. C. is set in the unification and consolidation of the business and production activities of Cecil B. De Mille and Metropolitan Pictures.

The coalition of these two great production units marks a potent factor in the organization of P. D. C. for the making of superior showmanship pictures. It brings into close alliance a group of men whose reputations were made on actual achievements, and who combine their wealth of knowledge and experience to advance still further the product of Producers Distributing Corporation to an unrivalled place in the industry.

Our march is upward and onward to the heights of motion picture achievement. Our goal is the production and distribution of the finest type of diversified entertainment—made by the greatest creative brains in the business and embracing product that the exhibitor wants to show and the public wants to see.

THE combination of a Showmanship Picture and a Live-Wire Showman is what spells Success at the box office.

"SIMON THE JESTER" is a Big Show for Big Showmen. It cleaned up on Broadway just as it will clean up in the "sticks," when exploited in the way which it deserves.

The "Big Showman" who is in charge of B. S. Moss' Broadway theatre, in the heart of The Great White Way, knows how to exploit and ballyhoo a sure-fire box office picture. He literally cleaned up with this great Frances Marion production, and packed 'em in every day in the week for every showing.

L. W. Stanion, Manager of B. S. Moss' Broadway, is a humdinger of a showman. Take a leaf from his book and you'll clean up with this humdinger of a picture!

in the stars—

Mr. X. Ibitor: My astral eye is now roaming the film firmament — and I see the Milky Way transformed into a golden trail for you. At the end of that trail I see the mystic letters "S-P". What do these cabalistic letters mean? Ah! The veil is lifted and I see! It is a room — the projection room of P. D. C. Men with hard-boiled physiognomies are looking at a silver-screen. Suddenly their cast-iron mugs break into ripples like the breakers at Coney Island beach. They laugh! They shriek! They pound each other on the back with unholy glee! What's the reason? I see! Charlie Murray and William V. Mong are pulling some side-splitting comedy! WOW! Pardon me Mr. X. Ibitor while I laugh myself. What's this? a fight! Shades of Dempsey and Firpo! It's William Boyd and Devil Daggy trying to tear each other's tonsils out! ZOWIE! What a man— what men! And now the onlookers' faces are blanched with horror. Ye gods! Hell's broke loose! A train of molten metal is wrecked and the flood of white-hot liquid is pouring down on the girl! It's Vera Reynolds. The gal's lost! No! Thank Heaven, no! Boyd has saved her! Pandemonium breaks loose in the projection room. The gang is yelling. "What a picture! What a knockout!" The scene fades. I see barrels of money-and you, Mr. X. Ibitor and others of your tribe wallowing in gold.— You're sinking in the golden flood— but there's a smile on your face and I hear you shouting: "WOW! WHAT A PICTURE! IT'S A GOLD MINE!" That's all Mr. X. Ibitor. Get busy and sign on the dotted line.

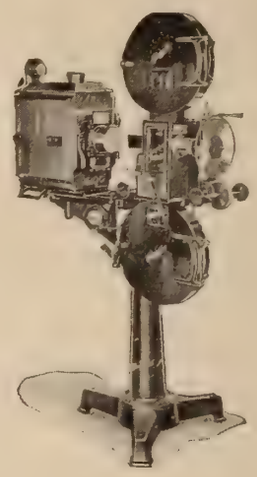
ONE OF UNIVERSAL'S "LUCKY 6" ADVENTURE SERIALS



This is Our Frank Opinion

Since we manufacture both incandescent and arc light equipment it is natural that many exhibitors come to us for an unbiased opinion of the relative merits of each method of projection.

The chief advantages of Incandescent Lamp Projection are:

1. Lower consumption of current.
2. Steadier pictures.
3. Better operating conditions.

The Incandescent Lamp can be operated efficiently on from 25% to 75% less current than is required for arc lights. But it does not generally give as good screen results as high-powered arc lights in theatres having a throw exceeding 120 ft. or picture width exceeding 16 ft.

The light source in Incandescent Lamp Projection is fixed and steady and screen flicker is thereby eliminated.

As there are no fumes, dust or excessive heat emitted from an Incandescent Lamp, operating conditions are much improved. But as the following letter points out, it is the type of equipment used that largely determines the success of Incandescent Lamp Projection.

DE LUXE THEATRE
HUTCHINSON, KANSAS

Mr. W. E. Green, June 20, 1925.
The Precision Machine Co.,
317 East 34th Street, New York, N. Y.

Dear Mr. Green:

I have now used your Simplex incandescent equipment almost a year and it is a pleasure to report that the results have been very satisfactory. The saving accomplished in lessened electric light bills is a Godsend to exhibitors and is available and applicable to over seventy-five per cent of the theatres. I displaced a 75 ampere arc on a throw of 118 feet and a picture 12 by 16 feet.

On four different occasions in the last five years we tried Mazda in this theatre without satisfactory results until at last we tried your improved type with a special Mazda screen. We were naturally dubious but the results were astounding. Let no one tell you that his house cannot use Mazda without a trial.

Yours very truly,

(Signed) W. D. FULTON.

For sometime I have been carefully watching the Kinograms and have been very much impressed with the super-news specials that have been appearing in the Kinograms, especially "The Sunning of the Buddha" shots of a few days ago.

I feel it is my duty to commend and congratulate you on the wonderful progress Kinograms is making. It is my opinion that from a point of news Kinograms stands out above other weeklies.

It may also be well to mention that we are showing Kinograms in our first-run houses, the Grand Central, West End Lyric and Capitol exclusively as well as in all of the other theatres controlled by Skouras Bros. SALLY, IREN

(Constance Bennett) (Joan Crawford)

Sally tells the new chorus girl to get herself a man. "Look at me," she says, "I've got everything in the world."

2 But Mary is in love with a handsome boy from her tenement block. Jim is a worker and poor. He comes to see Mary's first show.

5 Irene deplores the life of her chorus mates Sally and Mary. She has fallen in love with a painter, who promises to marry her.

6 Rodman comes to tell Sally that he wants to marry her chorus friend Mary and asks a release from her.

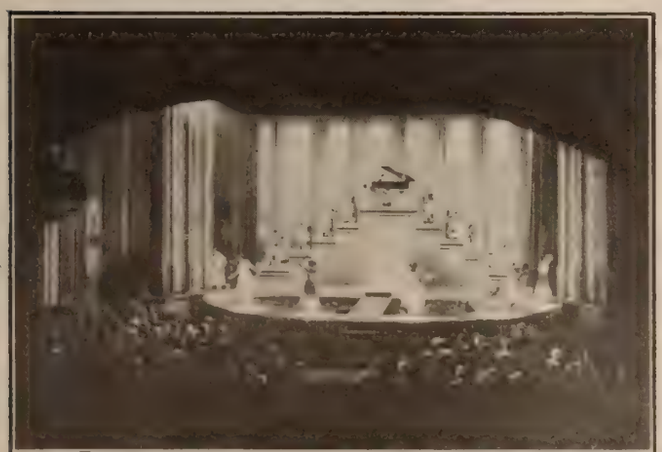
Produced by the Showmen of Metro Goldwyn Mayer

3 Jim cannot believe that the girl in a rope of pearls is his Mary. Another man in the audience, Rodman, notices Mary, too.



4 Rodman, who has given Sally "everything in the world" holds a champagne party to which unsuspecting Mary is invited.

7 Jim's illusions about his sweet Mary are shattered. But he cannot conquer his love and waits for her with boyish faith.

8 Behind the scenes one night the chorus learns that Irene, their Idol, has been killed in an automobile accident.

10 But the show must go on. Poor moths attracted by the flame. Behind beauty's mask are tears. Mary of the chorus longs for her Jim.

11 Mary can bear it no longer. She flies to her man. "Jim, take me back. Forgive me. I love you." And to them comes great happiness.

Ye Gay

5000 people were turned away the day "Clothes Make the Pirate" opened at New York Strand. Tremendous business prevailed all week. Absolutely tremendous! And that goes for more than Broadway. Indianapolis, Detroit, Atlanta—on through the hard-boiled towns where laughs and dollars are hard to earn—

"Clothes Make the Pirate" is proving a record-breaker and a record-maker.

Buccaneer took Broadway by Storm

Motion Picture News Christmas Issue Out Next Week

Will Contain These Important Editorial Features:

THE Fifty-Two Best Pictures of the Year as Told by "The Check-Up" from Exhibitors Box-Office Reports. This is now recognized as the standard authority in the industry.

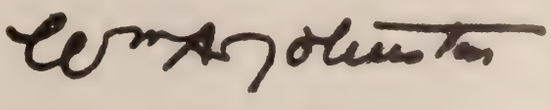
LAURENCE REID, of the Brewster Publications, keen observer and critic, will contribute a critical resumé of the outstanding pictures of 1925. Mr. Reid inaugurated this extensive review while he was a member of the staff of Motion Picture News.

* * *



THE leading photoplay editors and critics of the country have selected what, in their opinion, is the Best Picture of 1925. They are also acting as a Jury of Award on the best individual performance by an actor and actress, and the outstanding director for 1925. The results of this ballot are highly interesting. They will appear in next week's issue.

* * *

THE big story of the year in the industry has been the remarkable change in theatres and theatre circuits. It will be handled in an authoritative manner by J. S. Dickerson, Associate Editor of Motion Picture News, who for two years has been making an intensive study of the theatre situation.

* * *

"THE European Film Situation on the Eve of 1926" will be discussed by L. C. Moen, of the News Editorial Staff, who made a trip to Europe last Summer to investigate the situation first-hand and has since maintained close contact with the kaleidoscopic changes taking place in that all-important market.

Speaking Editorially

FAMOUS PLAYERS-LASKY announces this week its lineup of Spring product—an imposing array of pictures, filled with box-office names and subjects that at once command attention.

The announcement, in the form of a handsome seventy-two page insert, will be found elsewhere in this issue. There are many elements of interest in it—but this, we think, may be fairly taken as the keynote: every one of these thirty pictures is a special—in the care devoted to its production and its advertising.

It is our own belief, stated many times editorially, that the day of the "average" picture, so far as big receipts for both producer and exhibitor are concerned, is definitely over. Pictures now-a-days must be individual—and that extends all along the line—from studio to screen—in exploitation, in advertising and in selling.

ONE of our staff writers contributes to this issue an analysis of the Broadway play situation which has brought William Fox first-page stories in the New York newspapers within recent days. This article is, we believe, very much worth reading. It is only another commentary on the fact that the Fox organization is functioning at top speed and is going ahead most successfully with its ambitious plans.

Here is shown the manner in which some of the action close-ups of the chariot races were shot for "Ben Hur" (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer), the charioteer in this case being Francis X. Bushman.

A GROUP of trade paper editors sitting around a table with an exhibitor leader in the fraternity of open and frank discussion of the big problems of the industry is one of the important developments in this hectic season in the trade. That is what happened the other day at the call of Joseph M. Seider, the Business Manager of the M. P. T. O. A. This industry is noted for its "conferences." Well, here was a conference which really got somewhere. We hope to see the custom continued from time to time. It is very much worth-while.

THAT Jubilee Dinner of the M. P. T. O. of Connecticut emphasized anew the producer-exhibitor harmony that seems just over the horizon. It may have its temporary set-backs, because able, determined men cannot be expected always to agree. Nor should they. Disagreement, provided it is sincere and well-founded, is an index of healthy progress. The basis seems to have been laid for real cooperation on major problems.

* * *

THE proposed British quota—a soft word meaning a modified ban on American pictures—has apparently been rejected by British exhibitors themselves. This reminds us that it was Motion Picture News which pointed out in an editorial some weeks ago, "Our Films and Europe," that the British exhibitor was really the person to be consulted most in this matter. He was consulted, and turned thumbs down on the "contingent." There may be some kind of action by the British Government. But the fact remains just as it has always been: produce pictures that the world cannot do without and the world will receive them with open arms.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

Leon Errol is a good story-teller, but he apparently isn't getting away with this one on Fred Newmeyer, directing him in "The Lunatic at Large" for First National.

MRS. SAM WARNER ENTERTAINS

MRS. SAM L. WARNER (Lina Basquette, former premier danseuse of the Ziegfeld Follies) was hostess at Warner's theatre, New York, Friday afternoon of last week to well known stage stars and the entire personnel of four dramatic companies now playing on Broadway.

A de luxe showing of "Hogan's Alley" was given, with the loges occupied by the luminaries of the spoken drama and 150 members of the casts of these productions appearing at Charles Dillingham theatres:

"Sunny" (Marilyn Miller), New Amsterdam; "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney" (Ina Claire) Fulton; "The City Chap" (Richard "Skeets" Gallagher), Liberty, and "These Charming People" (Cyril Maude), Gaiety.

Mrs. Warner, who only recently returned from her honeymoon, had arranged the party to greet her old stage friends. The guests also made their contribution to the success of the entertainment, for as they entered the theatre lobby, where they were received by Mrs. Warner, motion pictures were made of them. These films, constituting an interesting Broadway glimpse in themselves, are to be used as trailers announcing future runs of "Hogan's Alley."

READY TO TOP "SKYROCKET"

PEGGY HOPKINS JOYCE, after a period of illness, has returned to Hollywood and shortly after the first of the year will commence work on her next vehicle for Associated Exhibitors, to follow "The Skyrocket."

She is determined to find a story of the utmost merit and suitability, for after the sensation which "The Skyrocket" has created among those persons who have seen it, the next one will have to be mighty good to top it.

Peggy Hopkins Joyce receives the congratulations of Oscar Price, president of Associated Exhibitors, and E. J. Smith, sales manager, on her work in "The Skyrocket."

Little Thomasina Mix, daughter of the Fox star, tames a bronco who, if not wild, is at least woolly.

Dolores del Rio, First National player, displaying one of the priceless Spanish shawls which she will wear in the forthcoming film "Joanna."

Lige Conley assists Estelle Bradley, his leading lady in Educational-Mermaid comedies, out of a difficult situation. She tried to climb into the loud speaker.

Lupino Lane waxes athletic in "The Fighting Dude," his latest Educational-Lupino Lane comedy showing that he'd row a mile for a laugh.

Claire Windsor, Metro-Goldwyn Mayer player, wears a straight bob in "Dance Madness," which displays her delicate beauty to the best of advantage.

THE BLOOMIN' BUMPER

AN entertaining contribution to the week's mail is the second issue of the newest of film periodicals, "The Bumpers," described as "being the official scandal sheet of the B. M. P. A.," otherwise the British Motion Picture Advertisers. This organization, the youthful cousin of the Wampas and the Ampas, is colloquially referred to along Wardour street, London, as the Bumpas. Hence the title of the official organ, the November issue of which is at hand.

A high good humor permeates the contents, and the writers manage to be amusing without being "fresh." The lead article is headed "The usual Junk that has to come first." One paragraph details the reception accorded the first issue as follows:

The company filming "A Desperate Moment," a Royal picture for Henry Ginsberg release, on location in the "wilds." Wanda Hawley and Theodore Von Eltz, featured, with Sheldon Lewis, the heavy, behind them.

"Compliments have showered upon us from all quarters, and everybody has been most eulogistic about our little effort, described by one man as 'A paper devoid of advertising influence and likely to remain so.' Perhaps the greatest compliment, however, was that of a brother editor, who wrote us on the day of publication, 'Let me be the first to congratulate you, even though I am the last.' "

Most of the other items are of purely local interest; otherwise they would be well worth quoting—especially Horace Judge's witty paraphrase of a chapter from the Book of Exodus, applying in this case to a change of restaurant on the part of the Bumpas.

Horace, who will be well remembered in New York film circles, deserves a lot of credit for the work he has done in England as First National's publicity director, not the least of which is the active part which he played in forming the B. M. P. A.

WHEN THEY BOBBED—AND LOST

WHEN a casting scout for one of the producing companies visited the Gowanda Indian reservation the other day, in upper New York State, he signed up some 125 Indians to go to Florida to work in a forthcoming production.

But the sad part of the story is that sixteen sorrowing redskin maidens were left behind, victims of a cruel joke played upon them by an unkind fate. For they had obeyed the dictate of Dame Fashion and bobbed their hair—and who ever heard of a Pocahontas with shorn tresses?

SAM APPEAR FOR "THE PIRATE"

SAM RORK'S latest and greatest, "Clothes Make the Pirate," received unusual co-operation last week from the two principal players during its engagement at the New York Mark Strand theatre.

Leon Errol, playing up the street in Mr. Ziegfeld's "Louie the 14th," made a personal appearance on the opening Sunday. This made such a hit with the audience that Joseph Plunkett, managing director, persuaded Errol to return on several other evenings during the week.

John Lowell and Evangeline Russell, on tour filming "On With the Show" with the Miller Bros. 101 Ranch troupe, try taming the bucking fliver as a change from the equine variety.

Then, on Thursday evening following a welcome home dinner at the St. Regis, Dorothy Gish also made her appearance on the Strand stage, and she, too, was acclaimed in a manner which showed how well the spectators liked her work in "Clothes Make the Pirate."

AN EARLY FAVORITE

HOARY veterans among the film fans, whose memory goes back to the days of the peep show, when Edison was still experimenting with the kinetoscope and before it had occurred to anyone that the leaping tintypes could be thrown onto the silver screen, will see an old favorite when "The Danger Girl," Priscilla Dean's next production, is released.

For Cissy Fitzgerald, whose "naughty wink" once excited as much national interest as does Babe Ruth or Colonel Mitchell today, will return to the screen in this picture after a comparative retirement of several years.

Way back in '96, when Edison was tinkering with the machine that was to make so many fortunes, he engaged a youthful actress to dance before the camera as a test. The girl was Cissy Fitzgerald and the film proved more than successful. Later on, she was starred in more than a hundred pictures of varying lengths.

One of the scenes from "The Treasures of the Vatican," portraying the rich art treasures of the papal palace, and released as part of Pathe News.

Moriac, Victoria, in far off Australia, lays claim to the smallest motion picture theatre in the world, and probably no one will dispute the assertion. Once every two weeks a Paramount picture is screened. The rest of the time the building is used as a school house.

The other night, in the course of a stroll through the Bouwerij (as Peter Stuyvesant called one of New York's most noted thoroughfares) we dropped into one of the old peep shows to see if they had changed. They hadn't—not even the films used, for side by side with "A Model's Dream" and "Lena's Bath" we found some of the old Biograph subjects, made before the days of film, still doing yeoman service at a penny a serve. And in those subjects we fancied that we detected the faces of some of the members of the old Biograph stock company who later were to rise to world-wide fame and fortune. How strange it would seem to them, today, to see themselves in the crude and jerky scenes cranked off in the far corner of a noisy penny arcade on the Bowery!

CINDERELLA, FELIX AND NO. 50

THE three merit asterisks handed out this week by the National Board of Review went to one feature and two short subjects. The feature was Paramount's "A Kiss for Cinderella," which is, in a sense, the successor to "Peter Pan." A cartoon subject took the second, Educational's "Felix the Cat at the Rainbow's End." The third went to Pathe Review No. 50—a subject which has been garnering the little golden asterisks with remarkable frequency.

Joseph M. Schenck, three times president of the Association of Motion Picture Producers of California, is presented with a silver plaque by way of a testimonial: Charles H. Christie, now head of the group, making the presentation speech.

LAUGH THIS OFF!

IN this age of mechanical wonders and scientific marvels, one never knows what to expect—except the unexpected, which always happens. Now comes Walter Hiers, the likeable and rotund comedian, with the announcement that he has acquired a machine for registering laughs. Called the Laughometer, he will use it to determine how well his different Laugh Month pictures go over. It consists of a radio microphone plus a recording cylinder attachment on which a pencil traces a jagged line, denoting graphically the volume of the applause or laughter at each point in his comedies for Educational release.

The Christie studios are mighty busy these days preparing for Laugh Month. Here are Al Christie, Kathleen Clifford and Gil Pratt, who is directing Miss Clifford in "Grandpa's Girl" for Educational release.

Hiers has the only model of the machine in existence and has bought the exclusive rights. D. W. Brownell, an official of a Los Angeles amusement pier firm, invented the machine, receiving his inspiration from the "applauseograph" now being used in dance halls to record the amount of applause given the various couples in dance contests.

Perhaps the day will come when theatres, instead of displaying three-sheet cut-outs, will have a Laughometer in the lobby to prove graphically to prospective patrons the big money's worth in applause and laughter going on inside. We can envision the producer of the future, after a pre-view, wiring the home office in New York as follows:

"Opening of 'Broadway' great success stop sending Laughometer record by air mail stop machine recorded 40 on first reel 50 on second 60 on third 70 on fourth 80 on fifth and on the sixth reel the darned machine broke proving that it's a wow stop it will break Laughometer records everywhere stop congratulations."

MOTOR MANIA

BYRON MORGAN, the popular author of so many automobile stories for Wallace Reid and other stars, thought for a few minutes the other night that his mind had dwelt on gasoline speed wagons too long. Morgan was returning to his hotel rather late one recent evening, and as he entered the hotel lobby he was astonished to see an enormous automobile bearing down on him. He leaped to one side, only to see one coming at him from the other direction—and another.

Just as he was about to cross his heart and swear never, never to write another automobile story, he discovered the explanation of the matter. An auto show was to open at the hotel the next day and the cars were being brought in during the night for the exposition.

Morgan, incidentally, is highly enthusiastic about the Paramount Junior Stars, for whom he is writing the story tentatively called "Glorious Youth," to be directed by Sam Wood. Morgan and

One of the most accomplished saxophonists in pictures is "Big Boy," in Educational Juvenile comedies, whose playing is said to be quite unlike that of anyone else.

This ornate mirror reflects the blonde loveliness of Esther Ralston as she appears in Paramount's "The American Venus," soon to be released.

Lillian Rich, working in "Braveheart" at the De Mille studio for Prod. Dist. Corp., is reunited with her mother and sister, Celia, after five years. They just arrived from England.

The Welcome Home Dinner given Dorothy Gish by Inspiration Pictures, Inc., at the St. Regis in New York City upon her return from England after completing "Nell Gwynne."

Wood were responsible for many of Wallace Reid's greatest successes, and since "Glorious Youth" is a story of sports and youth and pep the combination is likely to be a happy one. Morgan is convinced that the Paramount Picture school is going to do a great deal.

"When I came East to write the story for the students' picture," he says, "I was frankly skeptical. I didn't see how motion picture acting could be taught in a school, or how such a school could have any practical value. But no more. The students themselves have convinced me I was wrong. They're finished players, every one of them, and a lot of people are going to be astonished at what they have done."

WE TOLD YOU SO—MAYBE!

SOME time ago the editor of this department wondered (in print) why someone didn't sign Milt Gross, cartoonist and author of "Gross Exaggerations," to do titles and gags. And now, though there exists no connection between the two facts, Mr. Gross is established at the Charles Spencer Chaplin comedy emporium in Hollywood, busily working on the circus picture to come from that source.

While Chaplin was in New York he read the Gross review of "The Gold Rush," a masterpiece of comic writing. This led to a meeting, and the meeting led to an understanding that Gross was to come to the Coast when summoned—at a salary such as few newspaper writers hope to attain to.

An incident which may or may not be true, but which is good regardless of that, is related by The New Yorker, youngest of Manhattan's humorous weeklies. It seems that Charlie Moyer, publicity and advertising chief of United Artists, received a wire from Chaplin headquarters saying: "See Mark Cross at once stop tell him come to Hollywood first train stop."

It so happens that there is a Mark Cross establishment in New York, dealing in leather goods, and there Moyer learned that Mark Cross had founded the firm in England in 1845, but that his memory was lost in the company's archives. But finally, after further interchange of wires, it came out that "Mark Cross" was as near as someone or another had gotten to "Milt Gross." Such is fame!

WELCOMING DOROTHY HOME

THURSDAY evening of last week was the occasion for a Welcome Home Dinner to Dorothy Gish by Inspiration Pictures at the Hotel St. Regis, New York City. Miss Gish recently returned from England after appearing there in "Nell Gwynne."

Walter Camp, Jr., president of the company, in a speech predicted that within the next two years Miss Gish would come to be acknowledged as the most talented and popular screen actress of the day. A large order—but there is every reason to believe that the younger Gish, with no mean achievements behind her, has even greater triumphs before her. Her ability to do comedy especially well for many years obscured the fact that she is a real little trouper as well.

Charlot Bird displays one of the elaborate dresses worn in the fashion sequence of "Mannequin," the Fannie Hurst prize story which Paramount is producing.

Matt Moore portrays something strikingly new, for him, in "The Cave Man" (Warner Bros.), where, as you may guess, he plays the title role.

Colleen Moore spends her time between scenes of "Irene" (First National) playing on the cello melodies from the musical comedy of the same name.

Buffalo-Albany Exhibitor Zones Would Join Hays Body

Vigorous Protests Made By Seider And T. O. C. C.

THE Motion Picture Theatre Owners of the State of New York, Buffalo and Albany zones, through William A. Dillon, President, have applied for affiliated membership in the Hays organization, it was announced this week by Will H. Hays, who gave out to the trade press Mr. Dillon's letter of application for membership and his reply.

Mr. Hays announced there was no doubt that the application will be accepted by the directors of the M. P. P. D. A. at their December meeting. The statement continued: "The officers and board of directors of the exhibitor association will immediately begin working with Mr. Hays on problems of vital interest to exhibitors, producers and distributors.

"As soon as the application for affiliation has been formally accepted by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., Mr. Hays will confer with Mr. Dillon; Jules Michaels, chairman of the Buffalo zone; Louis Buettner, chairman of the Albany zone; Charles Hayman, and other officials of the organization, to work out plans so that the affiliation may be of the utmost benefit to all branches of the industry."

A vigorous protest against Mr. Dillon's action was made by Joseph M. Seider, Business Manager of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, in a statement issued to the trade papers. He declared that the up-state association had read "itself out of the ranks of true independent exhibitor organization."

Charles L. O'Reilly, President of the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce, announced that his organization was unalterably opposed to the affiliation plan. Telegrams have been sent both to Mr. Dillon and Mr. Hays by the T. O. C. C. seeking postponement for ten days on the application for membership in the Hays organization.

Following is the text of Mr. Dillon's letter to Mr. Hays:

"Dear Mr. Hays:—

"The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York State—Buffalo and Albany Zones are interested as an organization in promoting all things that are of benefit to the motion picture industry. We have studied from all angles and at great length various propositions submitted at different times, to the end that we might assist in building up an Organization strong enough to promote things that would advance the best interest ofall connected with the industry.

"We have concluded that this can be accomplished by yet closer co-operation of the Exhibitor Organizations with the Motion Picture Producers & Distributors of America, Inc., of which you are the President. Such closer co-operation with your Organization will tend to more satisfactorily adjust all problems that constantly arise affecting all branches of the business.

"No more forceful reason for our conclusion can be cited than the successful operation of the Arbitration Boards which have proved to be the means of determining the many disputes between exhibitors and distributors and effecting a saving of millions of dollars to the industry. In this connection we take pride in claiming that a very large part of the success of the system of arbitration in our industry was brought about by the earnest and unselfish efforts of our Exhibitor Organizations.

"We have carefully reviewed your communication to the exhibitors of Michigan at their convention in Grand Rapids. To us it is a masterful inspiration for guidance and we commit ourselves to its purposes and will fight for its successes.

"We admire your spirit of fairness and have confidence in your sincere endeavors. We believe the Industry has now reached a point where the closest co-operation of the producers, distributors and exhibitors is essential. Accordingly we herewith make formal application to the Motion Picture Producers & Distributors of America, Inc., to become affiliated with it, under classification (E) as provided in your Certificate of Incorporation and By-Laws, for purposes common to all those engaged in the motion picture industry, knowing of course that the identity of our Organization as such and its freedom of action as a body representative of exhibitors will not be affected.

"Awaiting your reply, we are

"Very truly yours,

"WILLIAM A. DILLON

"President,

"Motion Picture Theatre Owners State of New York Buffalo and Albany Zones."

Mr. Hays replied to Mr. Dillon as follows:

"My dear Mr. Dillon:

"I have read with interest and appreciation your letter of November 25th expressing the desire of your organization to become affiliated with this association. It is a definite and responsible evidence of the trend of present constructive exhibitor thought and activity.

"Your application will be presented to the Board of Directors at the next meeting, with my recommendation for its approval. Under our charter such an affiliation of such an organization is possible.

"We will welcome you and we shall further work together in the fullest harmony for the good of the entire industry. Much of our efforts are now devoted toward aiding exhibitors and it is gratifying to know that through your affiliation we shall be able to extend and intensify these efforts among the members of your organization. You may reassure them that if any member of your Association has a real grievance against any of the producers or distributors who are members of this Association and which you will call to my attention, that the good offices of this Association will be immediately and sympathetically used to bring about such conferences and consideration of such real grievance by the parties interested that a fair solution may be quickly sought.

"Your comments upon the work of our Association are noted and appreciated.

"With kindest personal regards and best wishes always, I am

"Sincerely yours,

WILL H. HAYS."

Following is the statement issued by Joseph M. Seider:—

"Mr. William A. Dillon, as the President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York, Buffalo and Albany zones, has applied to the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America for affiliation with them under Article 4 of the Constitution of

T. O. C. C. In Protest to Dillon and Hays

FOLLOWING is the statement issued by Charles L. O'Reilly, President of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce of New York City, with reference to the application for membership in the Hays organization by the Buffalo and Albany zones:

"We have sent telegrams to William A. Dillon, president of Buffalo and Albany zones of the M. P. T. O. of N. Y., asking him to send a request to Mr. Will H. Hays that consideration of their application to join the Hays organization be postponed by that body for ten days, in order to give the T. O. C. C. sufficient opportunity to confer with the up-state units on the matter.

"Telegram was also sent to Mr. Hays, protesting against his acceptance of the up-state proposal and requesting that they withhold action for about ten days for the purpose of allowing an opportunity for further conferences between the T. O. C. C., the Dillon organization and the M. P. P. D. A.

"We believe that Mr. Hays' reiterated protestations of real cooperation with exhibitors are sincere and that he will readily accede to our request for a postponement of action."

the Producers' organization, with which article we have just become familiar.

"The basic status of the Independent exhibitor is so remote from that of the producer and the producer-owned theatre that he cannot have a legitimate place in a producer controlled organization.

"The fact that two organizations are necessary is no reason however, why they should not work together in harmony and settle the differences of their members by conciliation.

"The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America is in favor of co-operation with Mr. Hays and his producer members. It however cannot affiliate itself with them. It cannot turn over to them its membership.

"Mr. Hays's response to Mr. Dillon is amazing, especially in view of his statements to our Administrative Committee, which statements he later confirmed in his letter to us.

"If it is the purpose of the producers and distributors who are enrolled in the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., to cause dissention within our ranks, and to prevent our organizing completely through the setting up of another organization, we pray that they continue to do so, as nothing will awaken the sleeping theatre owner to his danger as will this latest move. The only barrier that the producers have had and now have to complete control in the Motion Picture Industry, is the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. With the absorption of theatre owner organization, likewise will the individual theatre owner be absorbed by the very same producers.

"Mr. Dillon seems to be well acquainted with the Producers organization's constitution. He knows also the contents of the Certificate of Incorporation of that body. He states the specific classification under which he requests affiliation. He cites as one reason for the desirability of affiliation the successful operation of Arbitration Boards. Successful. Yes, for the Distributor. Theatre owners must not become acclimated to a false atmosphere of security. The contract now in use deprives them of the rights they are justly entitled to. Further, it is confiscatory. A fair contract has been promised. We are working toward that end. We believe it will materialize, but, it has not yet arrived.

"The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America has a vast direct membership in the State of New York. The Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce represents greater New York and a part of Westchester. Mr. Dillon's organization does not represent the theatre owners who are members of these organizations and who in numbers comprise substantially more than 50 per cent of the theatre owners in the State of New York, and yet he makes a request for affiliation in the name of the 'Motion Picture Theatre Owners of the State of New York', which infers that Buffalo and Albany zones are parts of the New York State organization.

"Perhaps after all, we are taking this matter too seriously. Perhaps it is but an effort to publicize a skeleton organization—that is, an organization without large membership.

"One thing is certain: Whether or not the so-called Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York—Buffalo and Albany zones formerly was a legitimate theatre owners association, by this request for affiliation, it has read itself out of the ranks of true Independent exhibitor organization. The theatre owners in the Buffalo and Albany zones who refuse to be delivered by Messrs. Dillon & Michaels can and will find protection in the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America."

New Theatre Deals Consummated

Gottesman and Kutinsky Interests Are Merged In Jersey City; Many Other Transactions Are Reported

FROM various parts of the United States comes announcement this week of the usual theatre expansions, the enlargement of circuits and the taking over of houses. Among the foremost of these announcements is the merger of the Alfred Gottesman and Morris Kutinsky holdings in Jersey City into one organization, which practically gives them control of the town.

Gottesman who owns the State at Washington, Pa., has thrown in four houses, one the Strand at Fairmount and Bergen now in operation, and three others to be built. The Kutinsky interests embrace four theatres, all of which are now functioning. The Gottesman houses will be the Cameo, a 2,000 seat house; a 1,000 seat house at Communipaw and West Side Avenues; the Downtown, to be built at 71 Newark to seat 1,500. The Kutinsky theatres will include the Tivoli at Four Corners, seating 1,400; the Monticello, seating 1,000; the Eureke, seating 1,400 and the Bound Brook, seating 800.

A. H. Blank, Des Moines magnate, visited Chicago last week for the purpose of discussing with architects there the building of a $1,200,000 house in Des Moines with which he evidently intends to eclipse the theatre which the Frank Amusement Company announced that they would immediately build. Mr. Blank stated, however, that it had been his plan for three years to erect this new theatre which will be one of the finest west of Chicago.

The theatre is to be built on the northeast corner of Ninth and Grand, a site owned by Mr. Blank. The place which the Frank Amusement Company discusses buying for the building of their house is on the southeast corner of Eighth and Locust, part of which is now occupied by the Royal theatre, one of the few Des Moines houses not owned by Mr. Blank.

Mr. Blank's plans for the new theatre include a recreation center and a dance hall above the theatre and facilities for the presentation of concerts.

Mr. Blank, who owns forty-one houses in Iowa, has already begun the building of a new million dollar theatre at Omaha, Nebr., at Twentieth and Farnam streets. It is expected that the theatre will be completed early in 1926.

A theatre syndicate, which will control a string of suburban motion picture houses in Kansas City, is in the process of organization, with Adolph Eisner, former president of the M. P. T. O. Kansas City, as the probable president. Plans at present merely are in the embryo and it is not known what theatres will be included in the string, which will be operated as chain houses. With the majority of down town first run houses in Kansas City producer-controlled, the suburban houses hapidly are becoming parts of chains.

"The day of the old fashioned exhibitor who used to point a menacing finger at syndicates and chain houses has passed," said Mr. Eisner. "Today most of the big exhibiting end of the industry is done in two types of theatres—those operated by a syndicate and producer-owned houses. I have devoted most of my life to operating privately owned theatres, but I am convinced that the strongest voice which can be heard in the wilderness today is that of the chain theatre. It's the only logical solution of many of our inter-industrial troubles and I predict that a few years hence will find the majority of the theatres of America either affiliated with a chain or producer-controlled."

The St. Louis Amusement Company has added the Lyric, Sixth street near Pine, and the Virginia, 5117 Virginia avenue, St. Louis, to the chain of motion picture second run houses owned or for which pictures are booked.

Three new theatres have been added to the Butterfield chain. They are the Orpheum and Wuerth theatres in Ann Arbor, Michigan, and the Wuerth theatre in Ypsilanti. Fred Wuerth owned the three houses. Edward C. Beatty, general manager of the Butterfield Enterprises, has placed H. G. Sweet in charge of the Ann Arbor theatres and F. J. Morthurst in charge of the Ypsilanti house. Morthurst for the last five years has managed the Butterfield house in Ypsi, the Martha Washington. Now he will have both theatres under his wing. No change in policy in any of the theatres is contemplated. Fred Wuerth is going to rest awhile and then devote all his time to his realty holdings. He has been a theatre man for 13 years, erecting the Orpheum in Ann Arbor in 1912.

A real estate deal involving close to $2,000,000 was closed between Peter F. Dunne, San Francisco attorney, and Louis R. Lurie, realtor. Lurie sold to Dunne the Coliseum theatre property in the Richmond district for the reported sum of $250,000. Samuel H. Levin has a 99-year lease on the property calling for a total rental of $1,470,150 net, the lessee paying all insurance and taxes and expense of the property.

Use Booking Guide File In Booking Pictures

"Without this service (The Booking Guide) we would be lost. I have a file of these since your first issue of December, 1921 (9 copies) and always keep them handy so when booking or playing a picture I turn to same for reference."

Probe is Asked Into Arrow's Reported Salary to Grange

Seider, Woodhull Protest $300,000 Stories

ON Monday of this week Arrow Pictures Corporation signed Harold "Red" Grange, football star, to a contract to appear in a picture. Monday night the newspapers announced that he would receive $300,000 for his services. On Tuesday, R. F. Woodhull, speaking before the Ohio Motion Picture Theatre Owners, denounced overzealous publicity which gave an exaggerated idea of the financial affairs of the industry, and the signing of star athletes to picture contracts. On Wednesday, Joseph M. Seider, business manager of the M. P. T. O. A., wrote to the Associated Press requesting the formation of a committee of newspapermen to investigate, in conjunction with the exhibitor body, the genuineness of the $300,000 phase of the story.

Dr. W. E. Shallenberger, president of Arrow, replied to all this as follows:

"I have signed contracts with Grange and Pyle under which they will receive a percentage on Grange's first picture, the minimum amount of which is guaranteed to be not less than $300,000.

"Pending completion of the first picture, however, a check for $300,000, made out to Grange, is to be held in escrow together with the original signed contract in a Chicago bank. As a guarantee of our good faith, Grange has been paid $10,000 in advance, but he will not get the entire amount until the contract is fulfilled."

Meanwhile, newspaper reports from Boston stated that Grange was on the verge of a breakdown after the strain of playing six professional games in eight days.

The text of the Joseph M. Seider letters is as follows, that to the Associated Press reading:

"For the protection of newspaper readers and the motion picture going public, we earnestly request, in furtherance of the statement issued by our National President, R. F. Woodhull, in Ohio yesterday, that you organize a committee of newspaper representatives to, in conjunction with this organization, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America (which is the National organization of motion picture theatre owners,) investigate the truth of the alleged payment of $300,000 in advance by certified check to Harold (Red) Grange for appearing in one picture reported to be made by the Arrow Pictures Corporation, which statement was given wide circulation.

"The public must be protected from exaggerated stories of supposedly stupendous salaries that are only paid in the imagination of a press agent.

"While we have no definite reason to doubt the genuiness of the statement that the sum of $300,000 by certified check has already been paid to Mr. Grange, we feel that the interests of all will be served by the definite establishment of this fact.

"We enclose a copy of the letter we have sent to the Arrow Pictures Corporation."

Seider's letter to Arrow read as follows:

"We read with alarm the newspaper reports of your statements that you have contracted with Harold (Red) Grange for his appearance in a single picture at a salary of $300,000.

"It creates an erroneous impression in the minds of officialdom throughout the nation. Legislators naturally conclude that since these unheard of payments are being made to people of no experience, still greater sums are paid to experienced artists engaged in the production of pictures.

"In this relation, the theatre owner, as well as the public, must be protected.

"While we have no definite reason to doubt the genuiness of your statement that you have already paid the sum of $300,000 by certified check to Mr. Grange, we feel that the interests of all will be served by the definite establishment of this fact.

"We therefore have written to the Associated Press asking for the organizing of a committee of newspaper representatives to investigate the report in which you are involved, a copy of which we enclose herewith.

"We will ask you to furnish to us evidence that you have paid to Mr. Grange, the sum of $300,000 in advance by a certified check."

Following newspaper reports that the Arrow Pictures Corporation was to pay "Red" Grange, football star, $300,000 salary for the picture which they will produce with him, and for which contracts were signed this week, R. F. Woodhull, president of the M. P. T. O. A., speaking before the assembled exhibitors at Columbus, Ohio, branded the story as ridiculous and harmful, characterizing it as "the absurd dream of an overzealous and unwelcome press agent."

It was announced that Woodhull would introduce a resolution condemning the type of publicity which "places dollars and cents before artistry," and that the Motion Picture Theatre Owners would unite with the Hays office in a campaign to eliminate this sort of material.

"Motion picture theatre owners," said Woodhull, "resent such wild tales of fabulous salaries to inexperienced actors, because it does more harm than good to the industry. W. E. Shallenberger, president of the Arrow Pictures Corporation of New York, who is reported to have given Grange a check for $300,000 for his first picture, is an independent producer and could not afford to pay such a fabulous salary to any single star."

Woodhull also stated the opinion that the signing of atheletes and the like for the screen should be done away with, as unfair to the public, remarking that "it would be just as logical to take Ben Turpin out of the movies and convert him into a star halfback at Yale." He explained that this was not an attack upon Grange, but simply a protest against the practice.

The contract was formally signed on Monday forenoon of this week in the East ballroom of the Hotel Astor, New York City, before a battery of cameras and a squad of newspapermen and trade paper representatives, the four parties taking part being Grange, Dr. W. E. Shallenberger, president of Arrow, Harry G. Kosch, his attorney, and C. C. Pyle, Grange's manager.

A check was signed at the same time for $300,000, which was also photographed as evidence of the consideration involved. Immediately after the contracts were signed, Grange and Pyle departed for Washington, D. C., where Grange was to play football this week. This is the first stop on a tour which will extend as far south as Miami and Tampa, and westward to Los Angeles, San Franciscof, Seattle and Portland, returning to New York in March.

Work on the "Red" Grange vehicle is scheduled to start some time in March, after the gridiron star returns East, the exact nature of the picture not yet having been arrived at. Arrow is now searching for a suitable story and leading sport story writers of the country will be invited to submit material which would display Grange's talents to the best advantage.

Laemmle Sails for Europe to Close Ufa Deal

CARL LAEMMLE, president of the Universal Pictures Corporation, sailed for Europe on the Leviathan last Saturday, December 5th. Accompanying him were Sigmund Moos, leading manager at Universal City, Califonria; Hans Winter, inventor; Henry Henigson, business manager at Universal City and formerly supervising manager of Universal's exchanges in Europe; J. H. Roos, Mr. Laemmle's secretary; Carl Laemmle, jr., Miss Rosabelle Laemmle and her friend, Miss Estelle Cohen.

Laemmle is going abroad to consummate an international deal whereby, through the loan of $3,600,000 to Ufa, the greatest of the German producing, releasing and exhibiting companies, he secures for Universal the entree to their six hundred theatres, not only for Universal pictures, but for nearly one hundred other American made productions. These are to be chosen by a committee composed of Ufa and Universal officials.

Hays Urges Golden Rule in Contracts

Message to Ohio M. P. T. O. Stresses Spirit of Co-operation; Resolution Condemns Overzealous Press Agentry

FEATURED by a stirring message from Will H. Hays declaring that the Golden Rule must find its place in film contracts, and a strong denunciation of harmful publicity methods by R. F. Woodhull, national president of the M. P. T. O. A., the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Ohio held a highly successful convention this week in Columbus, attended by 150 members.

The convention body completed its work by unanimously endorsing a resolution presented by Woodhull calling for immediate action to be taken to enlist the Hays organization in the fight against "overzealous press agentry," which he termed "the greatest menace in the industry today and one for which the death knell must be sounded by all forces in the motion picture field."

"The Golden Rule should be written in red at the top of every contract, and it would be the most valuable clause in it," said Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., in a message to the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Ohio, delivered by Jerome Beatty at the convention banquet. He said:

"There is one method for bringing about complete confidence and co-operation between all the branches of the motion picture industry that will not fail.

"It is called The Golden Rule.

"It is a straight, direct method that goes back to the beginning of things. The law was laid down when The Great Teachers brought order out of chaos and gave us rules for conducting our lives so that all of us should have the right to live and to work and to prosper according to our ability.

"Propaganda, speeches, publicity, meetings, committees, statements mean nothing unless every action is based upon fair play.

"But if you are playing fair, all the opposition in the world will do you no permanent harm.

"There is one way for exhibitor and distributor to get together and strive shoulder to shoulder for the common good. Each must play fair with the other.

"A satisfied exhibitor is a friend of the producer. An exhibitor who is buying pictures at fair prices, who is receiving product that makes his theatre an honorable and substantial institution in his community has no just complaint against the men upon whom he is dependent for his product.

"A distributor who is receiving fair treatment from exhibitors, who has a satisfactory outlet for his product, who is not suffering from unfair practices, has no quarrel with exhibitors.

"The motion picture business in all its branches prospers when there is fair play between buyer and seller. In this it is no different from any other business.

"It is just as much to the advantage of the distributor as it is to the advantage of the exhibitor to work for general satisfaction between buyer and seller. The only contract worth while is one that gives profit to both parties. Contracts must be equitable. Both sides have been offenders.

"Never, however, has there been such general friendliness in the industry between distributor and exhibitor as there is at this time. Distributors and exhibitors are natural friends. Influences which would make them otherwise are bad influences. We have not yet reached the maximum co-operation but we will. We can bring 100% Confidence and Co-operation between exhibitor and distributor by practicing continually the policy of 'Do unto others as you would have others do unto you.'

"That's all there is to our business—that is all there is to any successful business. The Golden Rule should be written in red at the top of every contract, and it would be the most valuable clause in it. It's a clause that must be obeyed. It is non-cancellable. It is the law of justice and humanity as well as the greatest of all economic laws. You can't evade it. You can't appeal it. You obey it, or you suffer. To live and let live is not enough—we must live and help live.

"You may say for me as you did in Michigan that the determination on our part to do everything possible for exhibitors and to promote to the fullest extent the plan of co-operation, goes to the extent of assuring them that if any exhibitor in Ohio or anywhere in the country has a real grievance against any of the producers or distributors who are members of this association and will call my attention to such grievance, that the good offices of the association will be immediately and sympathetically used to bring about such conferences and consideration of such real grievance by the parties interested that a fair solution may be quickly sought. It is our purpose to do everything possible to bring about an adjustment of every real grievance wherever and whenever any such exists. I know that the exhibitors of Ohio will appreciate the value both to exhibitors and to distributors of this possibility."

A high light of the national president's message to Ohio was his reiteration about a "square table" for the industry in the Hays office, as told by Business Manager Joseph M. Seider at the convention of Connecticut Theatre Owners in New Haven last week. The fact that negotiations between the two organizations are closer to a successful understanding than ever before was the point he made with the Ohioans. This was greeted by prolonged applause.

A. Julian Brylawski, chairman of the administrative committee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America was one of the leading speakers at the opening business session. He gave a meaty resume of the national organization, emphasizing "this organization has at times been referred to as a one-man organization. The M. P. T. O. A. is not and never was a one-man organization." So far as national organization progress is concerned, Mr. Brylawski stated that more has been accomplished during the past three months than in the past three years. With Joseph M. Seider as business manager the conferences have been conducted between the administrative committee and the Hays offices with a proximity to e cellent fruition, he stated.

That the new contract is practically being printed, so far has its status toward finality progressed, and that the smaller exhibitors especially should feel indebted to the administrative committee for this progress, was another point made by Mr. Brylawski.

Harmony was the final keynote also of the Ohio organization, whose members conceded that it had developed into one of the most satisfactory conventions, from the standpoint of business and pleasure ever held by the organization. At first parliamentary procedure took on a threatening aspect. There was evidenced a suggestion of a rift between local men from Cleveland and those from other parts of the state. It was contended that the by-laws of the organization had never been officially authorized by the unit as a whole. This developed when it came to electing a president, one side claiming the by-laws provided that this was the duty of the directorate, while the other contended the election of the chieftain should be made on the floor. Matters resolved themselves in a special committee going into caucus, taking with them the by-laws, which were amended in respect to the president. Thereafter, by unanimous endorsement, a nominating committee was appointed and the best of good will prevailed.

W. N. James of Columbus, president of the M. P. T. O. of Ohio, was first presented with a gold watch and the following day was unanimously re-elected to preside over Ohio for another year.

Before adjourning their two-day convention the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Ohio unanimously endorsed the following resolution presented by J. J. Harwood, a vice-president, of Cleveland: "Resolved: That the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Ohio in convention assembled at the Neill House, Columbus, Ohio, Dec. 8 and 9, 1925, go on record as being in sympathy with the national organization in its endeavors to seek harmony and cooperation with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association of America, and be it further resolved that the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Ohio await the result of these endeavors before considering any associate membership other than that set forth by the national organization. Pursuant to adjournment the 150 exhibitor conventionees assembled on the steps of the Ohio capitol where the governor of the state assured them that his "cards are on the table to give you theatre owners of Ohio a square deal." He declared this with a frankness which President R. F. Woodhull of the M. P. T. O. A. described as being "the most amazing pledge of unvarnished sincerity that I have ever heard from any high state official."

International Newsreel to Release Locarno Film

OFFICIALS of the International Newsreel Corporation announced this week that exclusive rights for the United States to the pictures of the signing of the Locarno Treaty had been obtained by International and would be released beginning December 12th.

Seider Hails Hays Letter As "Bill of Rights"

Important Document Read at Connecticut Dinner

A DOCUMENT signed by Will H. Hays, pledging the future co-operation of the M. P. P. D. A. to the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, was read by Joseph M. Seider, Business Manager of the M. P. T. O. A. at the Jubilee Dinner held by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Connecticut at the Hotel Taft, New Haven, December 2.

Mr. Seider described the letter as justification of his belief in the sincerity of the "square table" now maintained for the whole industry in the Hays offices.

The dinner was attended by some 500 exhibitors, their families and friends. At the speaker's table were Sydney S. Cohen, the toastmaster; C. C. Pettijohn, general counsel of the Hays organization; Mayor David Fitzgerald, of New Haven; National President R. F. Woodhull, of the M. P. T. O. A.; Treasurer Louis M. Sagal; Mr. Seider, and Joseph W. Walsh, President of the Connecticut organization.

Mayor Fitzgerald warmly declared that it was a most unique sight to gaze along the speakers' table and see there at an exhibitors' banquet representatives of all branches of the industry. "If you can satisfy one another sufficiently to assemble here then you should find no trouble in getting together for a common cause."

National President R. F. Woodhull was next to make an observation which to a certain extent was a substantiation of the Mayor's remark. "Producers, distributors and exhibitors are all here this evening," he declared. "There is a good hope that what the Mayor observes is now actually going to happen. We are moving along at a rate which indicates that such genuine harmony, resplendent with true sincerity, is very near. In fact it is so near that I can almost touch it."

Joseph M. Seider then gave a resume of the struggle of the independent theatre owner to maintain his independence and safeguard his investment. Then he described the administrative committee meetings and the efforts to find a solution of the major problems confronting the theatre owners at the present time, which problems he enumerated.

"We sat in the chairs around the square table that Mr. Hays provided at his offices on Fifth Avenue, with great confidence but a solution seemed almost impossible. Yesterday we held a session around this same square table and in addition to Mr. Hays, who represented Universal, Fox and Warner there sat Nicholas Schenck, representing Metro-Goldwyn, Sidney Kent, representing Famous Players-Lasky, and Mr. John C. Flinn, representing Producers Distributing Corporation.

"As a result of this session there was delivered by Mr. Hays to us a document which is the magna charta of the motion picture industry—a bill of rights. It has not been a bloodless revolution. The theatre paths are strewn with theatre owners who have been put out of business. These men, who as pioneers, have provided producers with capital that pictures could be produced, have been eliminated by those very same producers who, when their financial resources became stronger, entered into the exhibiting branch of this business and eliminated these very men who had made it possible for them to succeed.

"Yet, it has all not been in vain if this document spells the emancipation of the independent or small theatre owner."

Mr. Seider then read the following letter:

December 2, 1925.

"To the Administrative Committee, the Officers and the Board of Directors of Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

"Gentlemen:

"Following further the matter of cooperation and referring to discussions we have had recently in regard thereto:

"This letter is by way of reassurance of the continuing purpose of this association and my own pesonal determination to do everything possible to further that cooperation. I call your attention again to the fact that the purpose of this association is to promote the common interests 'of all those engaged in the motion picture business' and that our efforts are directed quite as much for the ultimate welfare of the exhibitor as for the interests of the producer and distributor.

"As a further declaration of purpose more definitely to this end, I assure you that if any member of your organization anywhere in the country has a real grievance against any of the producers or distributors who are members of this association and if you will call my attention to such grievance, the good offices of this association will be immediately and sympathetically used to bring about such conferences and consideration of such real grievance between the parties interested that a fair solution may be quickly sought.

"The principle of arbitration is being successfully applied to all arbitral matters in dispute which may arise covered by the exhibition contract. This proposal is by way of further offering to use the good offices of the association to develop conferences for the settlement of matters not naturally included in difficulties arbitral under the exhibition contract. The whole purpose is to aid in the providing for any possible means of adjustment of every kind of real grievance that may arise, that thereby there may be developed complete fulfillment of the formula of confidence and cooperation as originally suggested and which is today the solution of our problems as certainly as when the formula was originally indicated.

"With kindest regards, I am

"Sincerely yours,

(Signed) "WILL H. HAYS."

"This letter and its significance in major detail is the first actual coordinated movement for the elimination of the building of unnecessary theatres in localities already well seated and well served."

"It spells the beginning of the end for the wrongfully locking out of a producer's product by theatre combinations."

"It is a guillotine for the illegitimate transfer of theatres to avoid contractual responsibilities."

"It starts the dissembling of the purchase or acquisition of theatrical properties or interests therein by unfair or coercive methods."

"It provides for the allocation of product wrongfully and unfairly withheld by prorucer-exhibitor or chain theatre competitors.

Business Manager Seider then declared emphatically:

"Mr. Hays' square table is square. This is a statement signed by Will H. Hays which justifies the sincerity of the presence of the square table now prominently placed in the headquarters of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

"What does this statement mean? It means that the motion picture industry will face the future with a solid front. It means that the square table with its chairs has become an actuality; that producer, distributor and exhibitor may now pull up chairs around that square table and squarely discuss, adjust or arbitrate their problems to the satisfaction of all."

"It means that the life savings of a theatre owner invested in his chosen field of endeavor will not be taken from him. It is a manifestation of the sincerity, the foresightedness and the fairness of Mr. Hays."

Attorney Pettijohn, who preceded Mr. Seider and the reading of the Hays letter,

Publix Executives In Two Conferences

EXECUTIVES of the newly organized Publix Theatres Corporation left New York last Saturday to attend two conventions to be held during the week in the south. The first of these opened in Dallas Monday and lasted two days. The other was scheduled to start Thursday at Atlanta.

The purpose of the meetings was to acquaint the personnel of Publix Theatres with the aims and purposes of the organization. The conventions were attended by district and theatre managers and directors of publicity in the teritories. The home office party consisted of Sam Dembow, Jr., head of the buying and booking department; Harry Marx and J. E. Mansfield, of the department of theatre management; A. M. Botsford, director of advertising and publicity, and Nathaniel E. Finston, director of Music.

was warm in his praise for the Business Manager.

"I want to speak for Seider" he declared with such force of sincerity that the eyes of the audience reverted for a moment to the Business Manager. "Mr. Seider has undertaken a big job. He is deserving of your utmost cooperation and confidence. I, personally, will be at his command any time he may have need of my services."

Sydney S. Cohen, as the toastmaster of the evening, had lightly introduced Attorney Pettijohn as the representative of those "unpopular producers."

In reply to this Pettijohn made a statement which was one of the many deeply significant points recorded during the evening.

"On behalf of those 'unpopular producers and distributors'—I want to tell you all in real seriousness that they are just as alive to the public as you exhibitors. They are all realizing that there cannot be two roads in this respect. Now they are joining you and we are all sitting down at a table like men and arriving at a definite agreement. You may take my word for it that we producers and distributors may be counted on to do our part in anything in this state or in the industry as a whole."

An outstanding declaration in Mr. Pettijohn's speech for unanimous harmony was his declaration: "I think the lesson we have all profited by in Connecticut and its tax fight has done more to bring all branches of the industry together than anything else which has ever occurred in the history of the motion picture industry."

One of the most dramatic moments of the evening and an emphatic concurrence that a new era has dawned in filmdom was witnessed when Business Manager Seider, following the declaration of cooperation by the Hays' official, reached over and placed his hand on Attorney Pettijohn's shoulder, directing to him: Charlie Pettijohn—I want to pay my respects to you. Indiana should learn politics from Connecticut. They seated us together and while waiting to be called we have practically settled the contract and arbitration problem. Your manifestation of sincerity in your very actions this evening speaks even volumes more than your words."

Joseph Walsh, head of the Connecticut organization, stated that his organization had just emerged victorious from one of the darkest periods in its history. He lauded the work of the National organization and of the Hays offices, particularly Mr. Pettijohn in this respect, for their cooperation with the state organization in reducing to but ten per cent the seriousness of the tax measure. He emphasized the point that this victory was not the outcome of any "shady deal" but that of "honest adjustment."

Picture Houses Like Chain Stores

Wall Street Journal Says Same Economic Factors Are Contributing to Success of Movie Houses

MOTION picture theatres are rapidly being operated along the lines of the five and ten cent grocery and tobacco store chains, according to the Wall Street Journal, which sees a tremendous buying power in these theatre chains and a consequent minimized operating cost.

The Journal says:

"Economic factors which have contributed to the great prosperity of the five-and-ten cent, grocery and tobacco store chains obtain in the motion picture industry.

"Through its larger buying power a chain of picture theatres gets preference in the securing of new and popular films at advantageous costs. Risks of loss is minimized by the number of houses operated and their diversity of location, while material economics are effected by standardization in advertising and management. Again, with larger financial resources, the demand for bigger and more attractive theatres can be met."

The Journal adds that few industries during the past decade have shown the rapid and consistent growth of the motion picture business and says further:

"Demand for pictures and theatres has been insistent. New houses have sprung up throughout the country, until it is estimated there are now more than 20,000 theatres in the United States, with a seating capacity of 5,000,000. These theatres have a weekly attendance of about 55,000,000, with annual box office receipts of $700,000,000. It is figured that about $1,500,000,000 is invested in the motion picture industry in this country.

"Current year is expected to be by far the best the motion picture theatre chains have enjoyed. Three leading chains which have so far made reports during 1925, have shown considerably increased profits. Loew's, Inc., owning outright 33 theatres and an interest in a total of 105 theatres, for the fiscal year ended August 31, last, had net, after all charges and taxes, of $4,708,631, equal to $4.43 a share on the 1,060,780 no par shares outstanding. This compared with net of $2,949,052 or $2.78 a share in the previous year. While part of the gain was from increased returns from Goldwyn Pictures Corp. purchased about a year ago, most of the increase was from Metro, the producing subsidiary, and increased theatre revenues. Loew's is expanding rapidly."

At another point, this appears:

"Famous Players-Lasky Corp., with a controlling interest in 368 theatres, occupies an important position in the chain theatre industry.

"For the first eight months of the current year business of Famous was up to 28% over the same period of last year. Net for the first six months was $2,051,532, equal to $7.04 a share on the 243,431 common shares, against $1,350,801, or $4.32 a share, in the same period of 1924.

"Orpheum Circuit for the six months ended June 30, last, showed net of $1,091,368, equal after preferred dividends to $1.52 a share on outstanding 549,170 shares of common, comparing with net of $870,882, or $1.10 a share in the same period of 1924.

"Other chains, such as Stanley Co., Balaban & Katz, Olympia Theatres, West Coast Theatres and Saenger Theatres are all having exceptionally good years."

New Appointments in Paramount Theatres

A number of appointments are being made in the Paramount Theatres department. David Chatkin, for the past four years sales manager of Educational Pictures, has joined the new Famous Players- B & K organization. He will handle the buying and booking of short subjects and will work under the direction of Sam Dembow. James R. Cowan, who formerly handled this phase of the work has been promoted to the production department of the new theatre organization.

Herschel Stuart, former managing director of the Missouri in St. Louis comes to New York to fill his new position as head of the presentation department. He will be followed by Joseph Littaux musical conductor at the Missouri for the past two years, who is to conduct at one of the New York theatres.

Spring And Depinet Back From Exchange Tour

SAMUEL SPRING, chairman of the Sales Cabinet of First National Pictures, Inc., and Ned Depinet, sales manager of the Southern territory, completed their tour of key cities, this week and returned to the home office in New York, Wednesday, December 9th.

Mr. Spring and Mr. Depinet are enthusiastic over the results of the trip during which First National branches were visited and the sales executives conferred with leading exhibitors. At the meetings of branch managers and their salesmen plans were fully outlined for the handling of First National Month, January, 1926.

P. O. Will Handle Films Christmas Day

Motion picture films for delivery on Christmas Day will be handled by the postal service if sent special delivery, despite the fact that it is proposed to discontinue service to as great an extent as possible in order to give employees a holiday, it has been announced by the Post Office Department.

Exhibitors and exchanges sending films by parcel post, for delivery on December 25, should affix special delivery stamps to such shipments, according to instructions issued to postmasters, cautioning them to see that such parcels are handled promptly.

Thieves Blow Lawrence, Kas. House Safe

Thieves blew open the safe of the Bowersock Theatre, Lawrence, Kan., Sunday night and escaped with $1,300, Saturday night's receipts. The theatre is owned by Glenn Dickinson.

Fox Play Financing Plan is Centre of Controversy

Purpose of Activities Believed Misunderstood

By L. C. Moen

SOMETHING approaching a furore was created this week in New York theatrical circles by published reports to the effect that the Fox Film Corporation was about to finance several producers in return for the screen rights to the plays involved. A number of playwrights immediately met to take action in the matter, one plan put forward being the affiliation of the Dramatists' Guild with the Actors' Equity Association to fight this alleged threat of a "corner" on the screen rights to plays.

The objections of the dramatists, as set forth in the daily press, were mainly these:

1. That it would eliminate competitive bidding for the screen rights to stage successes, forcing the author to accept whatever figure might be offered.

2. That Fox would shorten the length of a play's run in order to buy the screen rights at a lower figure.

3. That Fox would pass on play manuscripts before their production and would select only such material as would make good motion picture material, lowering the standards of the New York stage.

4. That the banding of four or five stage producers into one group would tend to restrict the market for plays.

While no public announcement has been made by Fox, information gained from authentic sources, thoroughly familiar with the activities of the company, tends to refute the alleged claims of the playwrights almost entirely.

However, it has been impossible to learn from thoroughly authentic sources the precise nature of the dramtists' grievances. Various playwrights in the group when approached referred all inquiries to George Middleton, secretary of the Dramatists' Guild of the Authors League of America. Mr. Middleton was approached by a representative of Motion Picture News at The Players' Club, when he said:

"I deeply appreciate the opportunity extended by Motion Picture News to present the dramatists' position in this matter, but unfortunately we have bound ourselves to absolute secrecy and I cannot even comment on what has already been published. I can only say that the situation has brought together in close harmony practically every important playwright in New York—we are more 'collegiate' in this matter than ever before—and that we are taking steps to deal with the situation, which will come out in due time."

The group of men involved, and the steps being taken, give rise to the possibility that there are angles to the matter which have not appeared on the surface, and that the dramatists have been somewhat misquoted in the daily press, but for the reasons stated by Mr. Middleton, himself a playwright of note, it is impossible at this time to present their side of the situation.

It is, however, possible to present from authentic sources many angles to the situation as regards William Fox not published elsewhere.

To begin with, William Fox has engaged in the financing of legitimate plays for years, and the move is by no means a recent one. Fox is primarily a showman—his life is wrapped up in the theatre — and he is deeply interested in everything connected with the theatre, whether it be dramatic, vaudeville or motion picture entertainment. He is also a very wealthy man, with a great deal of money to invest. While he might invest this money in the automobile industry, the oil business or Florida real estate, he knows the wisdom of investing in an industry with which he is familiar—one in which he can gauge the safety of an investment from his own knowledge.

It is entirely natural, therefore, that Fox should turn to the theatre for at least a portion of his investments, and that he should place that money with reputable managers with a consistent record of successful seasons back of them.

While it has been alleged that his aim in financing plays was to obtain control of screen rights, it is interesting to note that in one instance recently he made this statement in regard to a play which he was financing:

"Understand that I am not interested in the motion picture rights. It could not conceivably be made into a picture, but it is a great play and I want to see it produced."

If past performances are any criterion, that should establish the fact that William Fox has an interest in the theatre aside from the screen rights to plays.

The first contention of the playwrights, that competitive bidding for screen rights would be eliminated, appears to be somewhat at variance with the terms of the Authors' Leauge contract, under which the author has a 50 per cent. equity in the screen rights and the producing manager 50 per cent.

If Fox financed one-half of the production cost of a play, he would then own one-half of the 50 per cent., or a 25 per cent. equity in the screen rights—by no means a controlling one. In case Fox and the producing manager were of one opinion, while the author was of another, either party could buy out the other. Ifthe author could obtain a better offer elsewhere than Fox was willing to make, he would have the right to buy out the other half.

The only possible advantage accruing to Fox in this connection would be that in one sense he would only have to pay 75 per cent. of the total price for the screen rights, the other 25 per cent. reverting to himself. This, however, would simply mean that the play would be a good investment by just that much less revenue. The share going to the dramatist, however, would be undiminished.

The allegation that Fox would shorten the runs of plays in order to buy them for a lower price will hardly be taken seriously by those within the motion picture industry. Stage plays are bought for the screen for two reasons: First, for reputation established through successful or long runs; and second, for the use of a story which it is believed will make a good motion picture, even though it achieved no especial success as a play.

If a play is being bought for the reputation earned through a long run, there would be no object in Fox suddenly terminating that run. If it is being bought because it is a meritorious story, he would have no apparent object in producing it and then bringing it to a close, when he might with just as much sagacity buy the unproduced manuscript and make the picture, saving the cost of financing a legitimate production.

Furthermore, an important feature of the Fox plan provides for additional financing of plays which have the essentials of success but are about to close for lack of funds to carry them until they reach a paying basis—which is somewhat contradictory to the assertion that he would shorten runs.

The claim that play standards would be lowered because the picture producer would pass on stage plays is also made. It is flatly stated, however, on good authority, that the Fox arrangement does not provide for his passing on play manuscripts before production. He is putting his money with managers of ability and reputation—and relying on their own commercial sagacity to select plays of merit and sound box-office appeal, entirely regardless of picture value.

For that matter, it has been repeatedly pointed out that legitimate managers and even playwrights themselves are working with one eye to the screen and the added revenue which it will bring.

The last contention is that the market for plays would be restricted, which leads up to the major point of the Fox operations.

William Fox, it is stated, has gone to certain legitimate producers and said, in effect:

"You produce each season a certain number of productions, such as your finances permit. When you have a poor season, you produce fewer plays the following year Line up your schedule for this year, set a certain number of productions—then add five productions to that and I will share in financing them."

In other words, his primary purpose, aside from the matter of business investment, is to increase the number of plays produced each year by twenty-five or fifty, on the theory that out of that will come a greater number of plays suitable for the screen, of which Fox may purchase its share. An increase of 10 or 20 per cent. in the number of plays produced, however, would hardly be considered a restriction of the market for plays, it is pointed out.

It may be said that the only producer with whom a written agreement now exists is Robert Milton. Others who are mentioned as likely to operate under some such scheme are Sam Harris, John Golden and perhaps Al Woods and the Selwyns.

There are produced on Broadway each year about 250 plays. During the past three and one-half years, 22 companies have announced 263 plays as purchased for production, or at the rate of 72 a year. Of these, Fox has bought a total of 34 plays. Only a portion of the 72 a year have been from current plays, many of them being successes of other years. Probably not more than 10 per cent. of the plays produced in any one year have been bought for the screen.

At the present time, with 63 or 64 plays running on Broadway, a bare half dozen have even received offers for screen rights, it is understood, indicating a scarcity of suitable stage material for screen purposes at the moment.

If the information gained from Fox sources is entirely correct, which there is every reason to believe, there is apparently some little misunderstanding as to the precise situation and purposes of William Fox, which will doubtless be cleared up in the near future.

100 Per Cent Increase In Construction

Middle West Leads Field In Theatre Building During Year; Total For Country Shows Big Increase Over Last Year

RAPID movement characterizes the developments in theatre construction, according to facts and figures presented by the Film Daily in an article based upon data supplied by the "Engineering News-Record." The figures for the year now drawing to a close show that 1924 has been outstripped by 100 per cent during the current year.

"Based on actual contracts awarded during the 11 months of 1925," says Film Daily, "Records show that this year has outstripped 1924 by over 100 per cent. The comparative figures for 1925 and 1923 are even more widely divergent.

"Authentic figures on building projects for the past three years follow:

Year	Contracts	No. of Theatres
1925 (11 months)	$55,542,355	119
1924	27,701,398	69
1923	18,085,568	54

"One hundred and nineteen theatres costing $150,000 and more became an actuality so far this year. This compilation is based on contracts actually awarded. "Paper" theatres do not enter into this consideration in any manner. These statistics and the observations drawn therefrom were prepared exclusively for The Film Daily by the "Engineering News-Record" through Samuel Tannenbaum.

The statistics reveal a fund of interesting data. They show that the Middle Western tier of states leads the country in the number of new theatres and money involved. Twenty houses costing $11,465,000 represent that section of the country. The Far West is second in geographical order with 35 houses costing $11,240,800. The South is third with six houses involving $10,210,000, and the Middle Atlantic group fourth with 23 houses involving $9,650,250.

"Another unusual indication of the manner in which construction has jumped this year can be gleaned by computing monthly averages for the last three years which show investments as follows:

1925 (11 months)	$5,049,305
1924	2,308,449
1923	1,507,130

"Computing on the basis of monthly averages, total construction for 1925 will be $60,591,660.

The average cost per theatre for three years past follows:

1925	$446,742
1924	2,308,449
1923	334,918

"Theatre construction by month for 1925, 1924 and 1923 appears in detail elsewhere on this page. The totals by geographical divisions follow:

1925—(Eleventh Month)

District	Total
New England (24)	$5,525,000
Middle Atlantic (23)	9,650,250
Southern (6)	10,310,000
Middle West (20)	11,465,000
West of Mississippi (11)	7,451,305
Far west (35)	11,240,800
Grand Total (119 Theatres)	$55,542,355

1924

District	Total
New England (9)	$2,390,000
Middle Atlantic (11)	4,850,000
Southern (1)	225,000
Middle West (15)	11,250,000
West of Mississippi (11)	3,735,000
Far West (22)	5,251,398
Grand Total (69 Theatres)	$27,701,398

1923

District	Total
New England (4)	$775,000
Middle Atlantic (12)	2,867,257
Southern (5)	1,386,311
Middle West (14)	6,900,000
West of Mississippi (7)	2,612,000

Kansas - Missouri May Lift Bars

THE M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri is confronted with a rather peculiar situation concerning the admission of managers of producer-owned theatres into the organization as active members—not honorary. The majority of the M. P. T. O. K. M. directors favor lifting the bars to managers of producer-owned houses, but the by-laws of the organization say no, as it takes more than a meeting of the directors to amend the constitution. At a regular convention only can the constitution be amended and the next convention will not be until spring, the usual semi-annual fall convention having been called off.

"All we can do is sit and wait," said R. R. Biechele, president of the exhibitors' body. "There can be no doubt about the sentiment towards such a move, but we cannot throw our by-laws to the winds."

Sidney S. Cohen Praises "Laugh Month" Drive

THE National Laugh Month campaign is ratified as a movement of the most wholesome order, in conception and execution, by Sidney S. Cohen, in a letter to Mr. Nat Rothstein, director of publicity and advertising of F. B. O., and one of the Committee in charge of the campaign, in a letter which is quoted below:

"It is with distinct pleasure that I attempt to accede to your request anent Laugh Month and what it holds for exhibitors throughout the Nation. I hasten to emphasize what has long been my constant claim, namely, that all too frequently short subjects have been considered solely in the light of so much additional footage needful to round out a two hour show. This is not as it should be, for the many splendid sparkling miniature features which abound today, and which we have been wont to term comedies or novelty reels, are in many instances worthy of the place of honor on any one's film program.

"'Laugh Month,' if its fundamental idea is carried out faithfully, will serve to present to the public as well as to those theatre owners who as yet are unenlightened to their worth, these miniature features in such a manner as to establish their real value and dignity. The fact that most of these subjects seek to induce mirth in the degree of giggles, chuckles or roars need in no wise detract from the place of real dignity they hold, for a laugh is the universal moulder of fellowship. 'Laugh, and the world laughs with you' might well be the Industry's slogan for Laugh Month'."

$2,000 In Prizes For First National Month Contest

Cash Awards To Exhibitors For Best Exploitation

AN exploitation contest in which cash awards of $2,000 will be distributed among winning exhibitors, is one of the special features which has been announced for "First National Month."

In addition to the cash prizes exhibitors whose work is of conspicuous merit will receive recognition through an Honor Roll on which their names will be inscribed. This honor roll will be given prominence in the national trade publications and every exhibitor who is included will receive a parchment testimonial carrying the name of the manager and his theatre and signed by the contest judges and officials of First National.

The contest is open to all. One essential purpose of the Contest is to give credit where credit is due and to reveal the leading showman in the country.

"Reputation counts for nothing," says the announcement. Accomplishment is all that will be considered. The exhibitor whose name has never been heard beyond the boundaries of his home town has just as good a chance as the managers of the largest theatres in the country. The most famous exhibitors in the United States gained their first experience in small towns.

In drawing up the rules governing the contest, which are printed in full on this page, the judges determined upon a classification of theatres that would give every exhibitor an equal opportunity. The classifications are based on seating capacity and take into consideration the variety in methods of exploitation needed for large city theatres, neighborhood houses and theatres in small towns. The prizes to be awarded exhibitors in the No. 3 classification (houses seating less than 1,000) are the same as those designated for the No. 1 class (houses seating over 1,500) and the No. 2 class (houses of from 1,000 to 1,499 capacity).

The complete campaign covers newspaper advertising, exploitation stunts, free publicity, lobby displays, everything, in fact, that contributes to the arousing of public interest in First National Month. The cumulative value of the campaign covering the weeks of January will be considered in reaching a decision.

While the three biggest prizes naturally go to the exhibitors in each class presenting the best complete campaigns, it is realized that some single feature of an exhibitor's exploitation, advertising or publicity may warrant special notice. In view of this, prizes of $50 are offered in each class for the best newspaper advertising, the most original exploitation stunt and the finest lobby display. Also, there is a prize of $50 open to all for the most effective newspaper publicity.

The advertising department of First National Pictures has prepared a complete line of special free accessories, including paper, banners, colored heralds, etc. to assist exhibitors in putting over First National Month in a big way. Also, an eight-page press sheet filled with original ideas, has been prepared on the campaign and will be mailed to exhibitors next week.

The contest is open throughout January. It is important that exhibits showing in as complete detail as possible just how exhibitors conducted their campaigns, shall be mailed to the Exploitation Contest Committee, First National Pictures, 383 Madison Avenue, New York City, as early as possible. In order to be eligible for the contest, all contributions must be received by the Committee not later than February 21, 1926.

Rules of Contest

The contest is open to all exhibitors. Cash prizes totalling $2,000 will be given for the best campaigns conducted on First National Month, January, 1926.

Theatres will be divided into three classifications:

1. Theatres of over 1,500 seating capacity.
2. Theatres of from 1,000 to 1,499 seating capacity.
3. Theatres of less than 1,000 seating capacity.

The following cash awards will be made:

For the best complete campaign in each classification	$250
For the second best campaign in each classification	150
For the third best campaign in each classification	100
For the best newspaper advertisement	50
For the best lobby display	50
For the most original stunt	50
In addition, one prize of $50 will be awarded for the most effective newspaper stunt used by any theatre in any classification	50
Total of prizes	$2,000

All exhibits must be received by the Contest Editor, First National Pictures, Inc., 383 Madison Avenue, New York City, not later than midnight February 21, 1926.

In the event of two or more contributions being deemed of equal merit by the judges, the prize tied for will be awarded to each entrant.

The complete campaigns will be judged

Mary and Doug Scheduled to Start World Tour Early in February

MARY PICKFORD and Douglas Fairbanks will head a European party of approximately fourteen persons leaving the United States about February 2nd. They expect to leave Hollywood late February. The present itinerary includes a tour of Europe only, but there is every possibility that they will encircle the globe, thus fulfilling a long-cherished ambition.

In the party will be included, Mrs. Charlotte Pickford, and Mary's little niece Mary Pickford, daughter of her sister, Lottie Pickford Forrest; also Doug's brother, Robert Fairbanks, and his wife and two children.

There is a possibility that the stars will make a picture while abroad, in which event a technical staff will be sent over later. Miss Pickford has in mind a story to be made in several cities, including Paris, London and Berlin. Mr. Fairbanks has worked out the idea for a picture in which both he and Miss Pickford are to appear this also has a European locale.

Instead of sailing to England or France, as had been the practice in the past, the stars will embark this time for Genoa, Italy. From there they will go to St. Moritz, Switzerland, for the winter sports, remaining at least two weeks. Their next stop will be Madrid or Seville, Spain, and they will remain in that country for the Easter season. After that they will go to Paris and will spend the spring in that city and in London.

In the event that they do not make a picture while away, the return home will probably be by way of the Orient, passing through Germany, Russia, Siberia and Japan, with a possible visit to India.

on the basis of the best newspaper advertising, publicity stories, stunts, program matter, lobby displays, ballyhoos, presentations and their contribution to the success of First National Month. Effectiveness of display, originality, attractiveness and ingenuity of design, and the showmanship revealed in each effort will be the chief considerations in determining the best. The judges should receive photos of stunts and other data properly captioned, together with a complete story of the exhibitor's exploitation efforts throughout First National Month.

Announcement of prize-winners will be made in the trade-papers March 12, 1926.

In addition to the cash awards there will be an Honor Roll on which the names of exhibitors whose work is of outstanding merit will be inscribed. This Honor Roll will be given a prominent place in the national trade publications.

Those whose names are included will receive a handsome parchment testimonial signed by the judges of the contest and officials of First National Pictures, Inc.

1,557 Charters Issued This Year

Active Capital of $450,798,841 Invested In Industry By Corporations Formed During 1925, According To Film Daily Survey

MORE than 1,500 companies have received charters in the industry during 1925, and an active capital in excess of four hundred and fifty millions invested in new motion picture enterprises during that time, according to a survey in The Film Daily.

"Since the first of January," the survey states, "1,557 companies have received incorporation papers in the industry, listing a total active capital of $450,798,841, with 468 not listing active capital, but capital stock instead. This means that only 1,089 companies listed $450,798,841, an exceedingly high figure, and, according to a survey by The Film Daily, a record both in point of capital and number.

November shows a slight increase over October, with 109 units chartered during the past month, and 102 in the previous month. The capital listed by November corporations amounting to $19,448,180, is $8,500,000 more than October, when $8,877,500 was authorized. A resume of corporate activity for the eleven months follows:

Month	No. of Cos.	Capital	Not Listing Capital
January	166	$66,809,000	53
February	86	21,241,000	23
March	222	36,946,440	63
April	115	42,582,500	35
May	232	29,010,721	74
June	135	103,640,900	30

September	98	62,656,000	32
October	102	8,877,500	35
November	109	19,448,180	30
Totals	1,557	$450,798,841	468

The November survey covers 14 states and three foreign countries, Germany, India and Italy. The company chartered in India, Topical & Educational Films Cooperative Society, Ltd., is the first film unit granted more over a charter in the Punjab.

Following is a list of the November charters, by states and countries:

State	No. of Cos. Chartered	Capital	Chartered Without Capital
California	7	$3,510,000	..

States Associated Exhibitors Policy

Oscar Price Declares For Independence; Says Company Is Devoted To "No Alliances, Prejudices or Favorites"

ABSOLUTE independence from outside organizations, other from those of the physical distributors through which the company operates, were declared this week for Associated Exhibitors, Inc., by Oscar Price, president of that company. Aside from the distributing arrangements which Associated holds with Pathe, Mr. Price said that Associated was entirely unrelated from any other organization in the industry.

"Since Mr. P. A. Powers and I acquired control of Associated Exhibitors," said Mr. Price, "we have been frequently asked to make statements as to our attitude in regard to the many internal problems affecting the industry in these hectic days.

"Associated Exhibitors, Inc., is standing on its own feet and carrying out its own future. We have no alliances, prejudices or favorites. We use and pay for the physical facilities of Pathe Exchanges, but barring that point we are an individual, distinct, independent organization. The following statement outlines the policy of Associated Exhibitors, Inc."

"Associated Exhibitors is truly independent, fully independent—serving this industry solely on a basis of independent inefficiency.

"Associated Exhibitors employs the admirable physical facilities of the Pathe Exchanges, Inc.

"But at that point its contact with any organization and group—any interest—in this indusry ceases.

"Associated Exhibitors is building a perfected organization for the careful selection, the efficient selling, the fullest exploitation of worthy motion picture entertainment.

"Associated Exhibitors controls its own policies, is willingly responsible for its own actions.

"Associated Exhibitors is a distinct, separate and individual organization; its sales directors, (managers, salesmen, are responsible solely to Associated Exhibitors.

"Associated Exhibitors, in turn, is responsible only—

"To independent producers seeking an efficient outlet for worthwhile product—and—

"To the exhibitor—whether his name be Sam Katz or his theatre the humblest of community centers—seeking pictures that sell seats.

"That's our platform.

Porter Heads Paramount Editorial Department

VERNE PORTER, for several years associated with William Randolph Hearst as magazine editor and as scenario editor of International, has joined Paramount as editor-in-chief of the editorial department, it has been announced by Walter Wanger, general manager of production.

No changes will be made in the personnel of the editorial department. Maude K. Miller, recently appointed by Jesse L. Lasky, will remain as managing editor.

The new editor-in-chief has assumed his duties at his headquarters in the home office.

Hugh Davis Is Rayart Vice-President

HUGH G. DAVIS, since 1914 associated in various enterprises with W. Ray Johnston, president of Rayart, this week became vice-president of Rayart Pictures Corporation. The company, organized only in July, has constantly expanded and again finds it necessary to take enlarged quarters in the Powers Building, in Seventh Avenue, New York.

W. Ray Johnston is president of Rayart, Hugh G. Davis, vice-president; Thomas A. Curran, special western representative; Milton Simon, special representative of the Central Western States and George B. West, special representative for the eastern territory. Dorothy V. Cleveland continues as director of advertising and publicity.

United Amusement Corp. Enjoys Good Year

The first annual general meeting of the shareholders of the United Amusement Corp., Limited, was held at the Strand Theatre, Montreal, on November 30, this marking the termination of the first year of the new organization under that name, although the numerous theatres of the company have been operated in Montreal for some years.

The annual financial report for the fiscal year was a most favorable one. After providing for all costs, a substantial amount was carried to the credit of profit and loss account. During the year, the regular dividend of eight per cent was paid on the preferred and two per cent on the common stock.

The retiring board of directors was re-elected without change. In this connection, it is interesting to note that the vice-president and managing director of Famous Players Canadian Corp., Limited, Toronto, J. P. Bickell and N. L. Nathanson respectively, are members of the United Amusement board. The others include Ernest A. Cousins, who was elected president for 1926; Isadore Crepeau, vice-president; George Ganetakos, who was re-elected managing director; D. A. Murray, comptroller; P. G. Demetre, Leon Payette, James E. Brooks and D. Zarafonites. The secretary-treasurer is E. F. McMahon and the auditors, P. A. Gagnon and C. G. M. Marrotte.

The leading moving picture houses controlled by United in Montreal include the Strand, Mount Royal, Rialto, Regent, Corona, Plaza, Belmont and Papineau.

Usher Pleads Guilty To Embezzlement

Walter Fritchie, 22-year-old usher, who disappeared with the acting manager at the same time $10,000 was stolen from the safe of the Grand Riviera Theatre, returned to Detroit this week and pleaded guilty to embezzlement. The manager, Oscar Davis, is still sought. The young usher returned to Detroit quietly, got in touch with his parents, who offered to make restitution to the theatre, and apparently thought that he would be freed. Authorities decided differently, however, and he was taken to court.

Fritchie and the manager had excellent records in their employment in various Detroit theatres, and when they disappeared, three weeks ago on a Sunday night, it was thought burglars had kidnapped them or made away with them.

Poland Joins MacLean's Scenario Staff

Joseph Poland, veteran scenarist and author of several originl screen plays, has joined the staff of writers of Douglas Mac Lean's producing unit. During the past year Poland has been associated with First National's scenario department.

Among his works for that company were the continuities on "The Perfect Flapper," "I Want My Man," "Too Much Money" and "The Knockout." While connected with the Thomas H. Ince organization he adapted several stories for MacLean. He is now collaborating on the development of "That's My Baby," an original play which the star will do for Paramount.

Paramount Will Film "Rough Riders," Story of Roosevelt and Troop

PARAMOUNT is to film "The Rough Riders," the story of Theodore Roosevelt and his famous regiment of volunteers during the Spanish-American war. The production will be personally supervised by Lucien Hubbard, who has just arrived from Europe. He and Hermann Hagedorn, the latter official biographer for Roosevelt, will leave shortly for Cuba, where locations will be selected and the cooperation of the Cuban governmen enlisted.

"The Rough Riders," like that other epic of American life, "The Covered Wagon," and like "The Ten Commandments," will be a roadshow special. The picture will be produced on a lavish and impressive scale. It will be filmed in Hollywood with locations in Cuba and New York. It is hoped to enlist the aid of thousands of Cubans in the war sequences of the picture. Whoever is chosen to play the role of Roosevelt will be surrounded by a cast of brilliant names. The director has not yet been selected, but the choice has narrowed down to three men who have outstanding directorial achievements to their credit.

Roxy Tells Plans to A. M. P. A.

Says New 6,200 Seat House Will Have Weekly Gross Receipts of $100,000

S. L. ROTHAFEL was the guest of honor at the weekly luncheon of the A. M. P. A. in New York last week and he addressed the capacity attendance at length regarding the new Roxy Theatre now in course of construction in New York City. He declared among other things that weekly gross receipts of $100,000 would be frequent in this 6,200 seat house at popular prices. Roxy exhibited a large drawing of the auditorium and explained the architectural features of the house.

Evening prices at the Roxy will be 60 cents for balcony, $1 for orchestra and $2 for divans. Of the latter 700 will be reserved. The divans can be taken on yearly subscription and Roxy declared they would be almost entirely sold out for the year before the doors of the new house open. Matinee prices will be 60 cents for the orchestra, 40 cents for balcony and $1 for divans.

"I will be absolute despot of the Roxy Theatre," said Mr. Rothafel. "For fifteen years I have dreamed of the time when I could present pictures in every detail just as I thought they should be presented, and now I am going to give the public the very best that money and experience can provide.

S. L. Rothafel

"The so-called prologue and the mixing of pictures with vaudeville are the biggest curses of picture exhibition today. There will be no place for them in the new theatre. My ambition to give the highest class of presentations is not a matter of money-making, but rather a sincere desire to please my public by giving the best that is in me in a wholehearted effort to raise our business to a plane which will rival the finest entertainment possible as in the case of grand opera.

"The Roxy — and I am prouder of the name than I am of my own — will have features of projection, acoustics, lighting and music never before attempted. It will lead the field of entertainment for the entire world."

Kansas Royal Bandits Are Apprehended

Two women and a man have been apprehended and are alleged to have confessed the hold-up of the Royal Theatre at Atchison, Kansas, a Universal house, on Thanksgiving night. They are Joseph Hatchell and wife, 29 and 21, respectively, and Mrs. Lucy Williams, 32, Mrs. Hatchell's aunt. The trio have been held on $5,000 bond each.

The holdup was one of the most daring in local annals. At 11:30 Thursday night, Hatchell and Mrs. Williams entered the Royal booth, and holding guns on both operators demanded that they open the safe in the office, thinking that Irl McClellen, one of the operators, was the manager. McClellen protested that the manager, A. R. Zimmer, was not in the theatre and refused to tell where he lived, as did Donald Klusman, the second operator. The bandits then marched the operators down the stairs to a car parked a block away, motor running, and a woman (Mrs. Hatchell) at the wheel.

They drove the men about two hours in a vain attempt to secure the address of the manager of the theatre, and finally drove toward Kansas City, crashing into a tree thirteen miles south, and injuring McClellan. The bandits then left the scene, stole a second car a short distance away, and made their escape.

New Canadian Copyright Bill

Measure To Come Up Before Parliament At Next Session—Affects Picture Houses

ANNOUNCEMENT was made December 3 that the Canadian Copyright Bill, which was approved in amended form by a special committee of the Canadian House of Commons shortly before Parliament prorogued at Ottawa last June, will come up again before Parliament at the session which opens January 7. This announcement is of grave importance to Canadian exhibitors because the amendments contained in the bill provide for the collecting of royalties on all copyrighted music used in moving picture houses in the Dominion. Of particular interest also is the fact that an organization known as the Canadian Performing Right Society, Limited, with headquarters at Toronto, has been established as a branch of the Performing Right Society of Great Britain to carry out the collecting of fees from all theatres using copyrighted music. This society has also been seeking an alliance with the Association of Authors and Composers in the United States to make the situation still more binding.

On the other hand, the Musical Amusement Association has been formed in Canada to oppose the activities of the Canadian Performing Right Society and, at a recent meeting of the M. P. T. O. of Canada at Toronto, a resolution was passed endorsing the stand of the Musical Amusement Association and asking all M. P. T. O. members to extend the greatest co-operation possible toward that association.

The executive of the Musical Association includes Col. John A. Cooper, president of the Motion Picture Distributors and Exhibitors of Canada; J. C. Brady, proprietor of the Madison Theatre, Toronto, and president of the Ontario Division of the M. P. T. O., John Arthur of Toronto, director of presentations for the Famous Players Canadian Corp., Lawrence Solman, proprietor of the Royal Alexandra Theatre, Toronto, and others.

The Canadian Copyright Bill received lengthy consideration of a special committee of the Canadian House of Commons last session, but the amended bill was not ready until the end of the 1925 session with the result that it was allowed to stand over. The amended bill has been placed on the order paper for the next session at the request of L. J. Ladner, Conservative member for Vancouver South, B. C.

Theatres Add to Ground Value

Chicago Realtors Estimate $75,000,000 Is Added Value Due To 27 Picture Houses

ACCORDING to estimates of Chicago realtors, land values in the vicinity of 27 of the larger picture houses in that city have been increased by $75,000,000. In each case of the 27 theatres cited, the property, they declare, for two blocks around these houses has risen sharply in value.

Three million dollars is the estimated increase in real estate effected by the building of the larger theatres. This is at the rate of over 150 per cent over the cost of construction and of $1,000,000 land value increase for every 1,000 seats.

A report of one of the larger theatres declares it draws from 60,000 to 65,000 persons a week, thus bringing to the neighborhood numbers equal to the population of a good sized town.

The total number of seats in Chicago picture houses is estimated at 350,000. There are 308 houses showing pictures only and 29 where pictures and vaudeville are presented.

Estimates by owners of chains of theatres fix increases in values at the following figures, according to the Chicago Herald-Examiner:

"Lubliner & Trinz, whose activities in all branches of the show business have caused nation-wide comment in the last three months, in association with Balaban & Katz, will build nine new theatres to be operated by the Lubliner & Trinz Theatres Inc., (the recently organized Lubliner & Trinz-Balaban & Katz organization). The value of the nine theatres is placed at $21,000,000; six Ascher Brothers theatres, $15,000,000; six Marx Brothers theatres, $20,000,000; three Coney Brothers theatres, $10,000,000, and three Fitzpatrick-McElroy projects, $9,000,000."

Admission Tax Is Unchanged

Last Minute Effort Fails to Include Exemptions Up To $1 Admissions

FAILURE of a last minute effort made in the House ways and means committee by Representatives Bacharach and Mills to have the exemption from admission taxes increased to $1 indicates that there is little probability of any change being made in the present wording of that provision of the new revenue bill, other than the incorporation of an exemption from all admission taxes for legitimate theatres.

This was the third attempt made by these two members to provide greater relief for the motion picture industry, but their proposal received no affirmative votes from the other members of the committee. It is not likely that a change will be made while the measure is before the House, as it is to be put through with the least possible delay. Members of the committee are precluded from introducing amendments from the floor.

As introduced in the House, the bill provides that 30 days following its enactment there shall be "levied, assessed, collected, and paid, in lieu of the taxes imposed by section 500 of the Revenue Act of 1924—

"(1) A tax of one cent for each ten cents or fraction thereof the amount paid for admission to any place on or after such date, including admission by season ticket or subscription, to be paid by the person paying for such admission; but where the amount paid for admission is 50 cents or less, no tax shall be imposed."

The existing provisions for taxes upon tickets sold at places other than box offices are continued, together with the existing exemptions to which is added the following:

"(3) Admissions to any place of amusement, if, during the time for which the charge for admission entitles the person admitted to remain in such place, there is produced in such place exclusively a legitimate spoken drama. As used in this subdivision the term 'legitimate spoken drama' means a spoken play, whether or not set to music or with musical parts or accompaniments, which is a consecutive narrative interpreted by a single set of characters all necessary to the development of the plot, in two or more acts, the performance consuming more than one hour and forty-five minutes of time; but such term does not include a revue, burlesque or extravaganza."

The report accompanying the bill shows that $4,000,000 is expected to be cut from the revenues from the admission tax by the exemption of legitimate shows, the collections for the calendar year 1926 being estimated at $29,000,000, against $33,000,000 under the present law.

Fox Sees Big Success For Laugh Month

LAUGH MONTH is destined to be a tremendous success, according to reports received at the Fox Home Office, where an unusually attractive program was announced for the occasion. Many of the exhibitors who have planned to show the Fox pictures are taking advantage of the National publicity campaign and will supplement that with special advertising campaigns of their own. Fox reports that it is likely 90 percent of the theatres in the country will offer all-comedy programs throughout the month of January.

The all-comedy program suggested by the Fox short subject department provides for a seven-reel entertainment, with four reels of comedy and the remainder made up of miscellaneous subjects, including an up-to-the-minute news reel.

Eyton to Leave Shortly For Europe

Charles Eyton, recently appointed general representative of Paramount production department abroad, after having been general manager of Famous Players-Lasky west coast studio, has returned to Los Angeles after having conferred with Paramount representatives in New York, and will leave shortly for Europe. He went back to Los Angeles to wind up his affairs there and to say good bye to his host of friends.

Eyton, with his wife, Kathlyn Williams, is scheduled to leave Los Angeles for New York January 1st and after further conferences at the home office will sail for London and Paris. Miss Williams will probably appear in several big European productions while she is abroad.

Mastbaum Organizes New Realty Company

A new $10,000,000 realty corporation has been formed in Jersey by Jules E. Mastbaum, which was chartered as the Elras Corporation, but which will operate in Atlantic City as the Stanley Atlantic Realty Company. The company is already reported to have purchased for investment over $3,000,000 worth of real estate in Atlantic City.

Booking Guide Helpful In Making News Copy

"We find the Motion Picture News Booking Guide a wonderful help to us in looking up criticisms, ads, etc., when we happen to be short on press sheets. Many times it has helped us to find something or a suggestion for a newspaper ad. The Booking Guide makes it very easy for us to find these ads and criticisms in our magazines, which we keep as far back as two years. We have become so accustomed to using them that we feel it would be impossible to do without them now."

Will Hays Congratulates Sponsors Of National Laugh Month Campaign

AMONG the leading figures of the industry who have ratified the National Laugh Month Campaign and unreservedly endorsed the drive to popularize the Short Features, is Will H. Hays, head of the organization of the Motion Pictures Producers And Distributors of America, Inc.

Mr. Hays gives his unqualified endorsement to the drive in the letter to Gordon White, chairman of the committee in charge, in the following letter:

"I want to congratulate your association upon its plans for National Laugh Month, to be held in January. One of the effective functions of the motion picture is to make people cheerful and you are doing a real service in promoting the showing of worthy comedies. I hope that every theatre in the United States will join in your plan and I know that the motion picture will help in a big way to make it a really Happy New Year.

."With kindest personal regards, and best wishes always, I am"

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) Will H. Hays.

German Production Falls Off

Complaint is Made That Contingent System Fails in Share of Market

THE following report received in the Department of Commerce from Douglas Miller, Assistant Commercial Attache in Berlin, gives the most recent facts and figures illustrating the workings of the German contingent system:

In spite of the dissatisfaction expressed abroad that the German film contingent system is limiting the market for foreign pictures, says the report, in German film production circles there is a growing complaint that the contingent system still fails to give German producers the share of the market that they expected. According to recent figures of films passing the censorship it is evident that German productions are steadily falling behind.

For example, the following are the figures for October: German 122, American 104, other foreign 43, making the total number of films 269. Of these 62 were dramas, 21 being German, 28 American and 13 other foreign. In length of film 100,836 meters were German, 83,394 meters were American and 37,789 other foreign, making a total of 222,021 meters. Of the German films passing the censorship in October, 29 were prohibited to be shown to children under eighteen; 42 of the American films and 13 of the other foreign pictures were so prohibited. Accordingly about three-quarters of the German pictures could be shown to children, while only three-fifths of the American pictures were allowed the same privileges.

Of the total number of educational films censored in October the German share was 45 per cent compared with 63 per cent the month before. In the number of meters shown the German share was 45 per cent compared with 54 per cent in September.

Of film dramas 21 German pictures were censored compared with 41 foreign. The respective figures in September were 30 German against 43 foreign, and in August 28 as compared with 20 foreign. Accordingly the German share in films dramas censored was 34 per cent in October as compared with 41 per cent in September and 58 per cent in August.

Protest Des Moines Censors

Women's Club Opposed to City Ordinance Providing Inspection Commission

THE ordinance passed by the Des Moines City Council providing for a commission to inspect all shows put on at theatres or motion picture houses in the city, has come into criticism by the drama section of the Des Moines Women's Club, which publicly voiced its protest through Mrs. Allan Friedlich, chairman of the drama section.

The resolution of protest placed by the club women did not mention the newly created theatre commission but, as the passing of the resolution followed a discussion of the censorship question and the theatre commission, appointed by Mayor Garver the move was directed against the theatre commission, apointed by Mayor Garver just last week.

Mrs. Friedlich, chairman of the drama section, stated that censorship was in the hands of the public themselves and that it was not necessary to have censorship of theatre productions except in extreme cases. Questionable productions would be eliminated, she said, if people would refuse to attend them. There is constructive patronage as well as destructive patronage and if the public will attend the higher type of shows they will be produced. The box office rules the theatres.

At the same time that the resolution of protest reached the council table, the first protest against a local theatre production since the creation of the city theatre commission was received. This protest was forwarded by Mayor Garver to Mrs. Max Mayer, who it is expected will be chairman of the new commission, since she is appointed for the longest, the six year term. Mrs. Mayer stated that she had not yet been officially notified by the city council of her appointment and that she was powerless to do anything herself or to call a meeting with the other two members of the commission for the discussion of the protest. The nature of the protest or the theatre at which the protest was directed was not divulged by Mrs. Mayer.

Schenck in Merger Statement

Full Text of Wire Tells Why Proposed Union of U. A. and M-G-M Was Dropped

JOSEPH M. SCHENCK, chairman of the board of directors of United Artists, in a wire to Beulah Livingstone, New York publicity director, sets forth in full the conditions attending the abandonment of plans for a merger of physical distribution by United Artists and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The text of his wire follows:

"We have definitely decided by mutual consent to permanently abandon the proposed affiliation of the United Artists and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Productions. It is with considerable regret that we make this announcement as United Artists had felt for some time that an affiliation with some other company, having a wide international distributing organization, would be beneficial to all concerned financially, as it would effect considerable saving.

"We settled on Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as suitable distribution partners because we considered the quality of their product to be of a continuously high standard. We were engaged in working out physical details when a storm of protest arose from exhibitors all over the world. These protests were based on a mistaken premise that there was to be something in the nature of trustification in the motion picture industry.

"Nothing could have been further from our minds, but realizing our inability to dispel this impression, we have decided that our standing of independence and integrity in the eyes of the exhibitors is far more important than any economy we might effect in the face of adverse, even if mistaken, criticism. Both companies are in complete accord in this decision.

"Speaking for United Artists, I cannot make it too plain or too emphatic that our aim from the very beginning of the formation of our organization has been mutual cooperation and complete independence. We shall not now or at any time in future abandon that aim. United Artists now and always will make its own pictures and sell its own pictures to best theatres available, at best prices obtainable."

Details of "U" Theatre Corp.

Stock Circular Sets Forth Financial Basis of Unit to Take Over Circuit

SUPPLEMENTING the announcement last week of the new corporation which will take over the theatres now owned or and expand the circuit as necessary, fur-controlled by Universal Pictures Co., Inc., ther details became known this week through a financial prospectus issued by Shields & Co., which will market the issue and has in the past handled the common stock of Universal.

The name will be Universal Chain Theatres Corp., according to present plans. Shields & Co. will float a $4,000,000 issue of 8 per cent preferred stock of the new company, each share to be sold at $100.

It is unusually interesting to note Universal Pictures Co., Inc., agrees to take $1,000,000 of the second preferred in the new company for its interest in the present 93 houses. Carl Laemmle also agrees to purchase for cash $1,000,000 of the second preferred. This stock is 8 per cent convertible.

The capitalization of the new company provides for $2,000,000 of this class of stock. The company's complete capitalization will include $,000,000 in 8 per cent preferred, and it is this block which Shields & Co. will float, $2,000,000 in second preferred which Laemmle personally and Universal Pictures Co. will take up, and 200,000 shares of common at no par value. This latter arrangement, according to the prospectus, will provide an equity of 150 per cent for the preferred in Universal Chain Theatres Corp.

Each share of the preferred will carry with it one share of the common. It is proposed to pay dividends quarterly.

The prospectus asserts net profits from theatre interests purchased from Universal Pictures Co., Inc., are at an annual rate substantially in excess of the annual dividend requirements on this issue. It is estimated that net earnings available for dividends from the first full year's operations, after investing the entire proceeds of the amount to $1,480,000, over 4½ times annual securities presently to be outstanding, will dividend requirements on the stock. After deducting annual dividend requirements on both the preferred and the second preferred to be outstanding, the balance would be equivalent to $5 per share on the common stock to be presently issued on the above basis.

The preferred will have preference over dividends at the rate of 8 per cent per an the other classes of stock as to cumulative num, and as to assets at $110 per share and accrued dividends in liquidation.

Buchowetzki to Direct Pola Negri's Next

B. P. SCHULBERG, associate Paramount producer has signed Dimitri Buchowetzki to direct Pola Negri in her next picture, an original by Ernest Vajda, Hungarian playwright. Two of the director's most recent productions were "Graustark" and "The Midnight Sun." The script for the Pola Negri picture is being prepared by Hope Loring and Louis Lighton.

Dimitri Buchowetzki

Ernest Vajda had four successful stage plays running simultaneously on Broadway last season, but this will be his first screen venture. Production is scheduled to start December 14th, with a carefully selected cast.

Associated to Release Tilden Picture

THROUGH an arrangement completed between Associated Exhibitors and Worthy Pictures, Inc., the former will distribute "The Highbinders" as one of the "Triumphant Thirty." Principally featured with Marjorie Daw in the picture is William Tilden, 2nd, world champion tennis player.

This not only marks the debut of Tilden on the screen but it also brings him into the limelight as an author, the tennis champion having written the story on which "The Highbinders" is based. The picture was directed by George Terwilliger and has in the supporting cast Ben Alexander, George Hackathorne, Walter Long and George Marion.

Lone Bandit Robs Liberty in Olympia

Waiting until 11 p. m. on a Sunday night, and then hurling a piece of lead pipe through the box office window to gain admission, a lone robber last week held up the Liberty Theatre in Olympia, Washington, and escaped with more than $350 in cash. The money was part of the day's receipts of the Liberty and Capitol Theatres, and was being counted and sorted by C. L. Gwinn, manager of the house, at the time of the robbery.

Gwinn was overpowered by the suddenness of the robber's entry, and before he could raise an outcry the intruder had snatched up two sacks from the table and had escaped. As he ran down the street, he was followed by Gwinn and a passing pedestrian, and after a half-block chase he dropped one bag containing a small amount of change.

May Stop Sunday Shows In Missouri Town

It may be that within the next few days the only persons in Montgomery City, Mo., who can purchase gasoline on Sundays will be ministers and physicians. The religious intolerants of that town are busy with the "poison arrows" and have just about convinced Glover E. Dowell, prosecuting attorney, that such "vice" as Sunday motion picture shows should be prohibited.

Butterfield Heads Capitol In Flint, Mich.

At a meeting of the Capitol Theatre Company held in Flint, Michigan, W. S. Butterfield was elected president and general manager to succeed J. P. Pengally, who recently resigned. The new board of directors announced that the company will build a new house to cost $1,000,000. Construction will start in February.

Laemmle Signs Lois Weber As Director

Carl Laemmle has signed Lois Weber to a long term Universal directorial contract and she has been assigned to make Mary Philbin's next starring vehicle. Miss Weber was one of Universal's earlier stars and directors.

Alberta Vaughn Signs F. B. O. Contract

F. B. O. has signed Alberta Vaughn to a new three-year contract under which she will star in one more series for F. B. O., possibly "Fighting Hearts," by Sam Hellmen, and then will be starred in feature productions with a comic angle.

Miss Vaughn, only nineteen years of age, has already scored heavily as a screen comedienne. She has appeared in such series for F. B. O. as "The Telephone Girl," "The Go-Getters," "The Pacemakers" and "The Adventures of Mazie." She went to F. B. O. from Mack Sennett, after having been with Lasky and Vitagraph.

"A String of Diamonds" Completed

"A String of Diamonds," first of a series of police dog specials starring "Fearless" has been completed by Van Pelt Production Company. The series is supervised by Joe Rock and will be distributed by Chesterfield Pictures Corporation of New York. In the cast are Kathryn McGuire, Jack Mower, Leonard Clapham, Max Asher, Al Alt, Dixie Lamont and Eddie Harris.

The Van Pelt Company is also making final scenes on "The Brothers," another feature in which "Sandow," another police dog is starred. Jack Richardson and Dixie Lamont have the chief supporting roles. "Sage King," the high school horse has been added to the Van Pelt Company and will appear in several features now in preparation.

Scenes from Universal's western production "Spook Ranch."

Scenes from "The Desert's Price," a Fox production.

Special "Laugh Month" Issue

News Reels To Contain Features Suited To National Campaign Are Announced

SPECIAL efforts will be made by news reel companies to incorporate in all issues for January, items of particular interest to the public as a means of giving exhibitors another angle of exploitation during the drive to popularize the short features of their programs, it was announced this week by the committee in charge of the drive being conducted by the Short Features Advertising Association.

Pathe News editorial department has made arrangements to shoot a group of well-known cartoonists doing their stuff on heads or other drawings suitable for Laugh Month. Among those who willbe filmed are: George McManus, creator of Jiggs and Maggie in "Bringing Up Father"; Billy DeBeck, of Barney Google and Spark Plug fame; Russ Westover who makes "Tillie" a toiler—sometimes; Cliff Sterrett, creator of "Polly and Her Pals," and Harry Hirschfield, Raconteur Par Excellence—also a cartoonist of note, who features Abie the Agent and Kabibble Kabaret.

Kinograms through its West Coast representative has arranged to take pictures of various comedians doing special stunts apropos of the season and of Laugh Month. So far the following have been lined up for the Kinogram reel. Bobby Vernon, Walter Hiers, Harry Langdon, Lloyd Hamilton, Lupino Lane, Lige Conley, Jimmie Adams, Al St. John and Johnny Arthur. By the time the reel is ready to be shot there will be additional names on the list.

From Fox comes the information that the Foxnewsreelis working on an idea, but they are not ready to tell about it yet. They promise that it will be a laugh provoker.

All of the newsreel companies are planning to make their releasing fall between Christmas and New Years so that they will prove most effective for the Laugh Month campaign.

Joan Meredith With Walsh in "Blue Blood"

Joan Meredith, recently signed to a long term contract by Chadwick Pictures Corporation, will have one of the main supporting roles to George Walsh in "Blue Blood," the star's second picture of the season. She will also be seen shortly in two other Chadwick productions, "The Perfect Clown," Larry Semon's latest picture, and "The Count of Luxembourg," in which Walsh plays the title role.

Booking Guide Takes Place of Missing Sheet

"I want to say right now, without the News Booking Guide there are lots of times I would be lost, as often I don't receive a press sheet on a feature—here is where the Guide serves its purpose. It gives you the star, theme, length—in fact everything to work with. So, don't leave me out on the next issue."

C. B. Craig, Universal Theatre,
Fitchburg, Mass.

Christie Sees Big Laugh Month

Will Provide Many Comedies Through The Educational Film Exchanges

AL CHRISTIE will be one of the most generous contributors to Laugh Month through Educational Film Exchange, as a large part of the educational progress comes through the Christie studios.

Regarding the coming campaign in January, Mr. Christie said:

"The screen is passing through the same phase as did the stage, only doing it more rapidly," says Mr. Christie. "The first plays of which we have any recollection were tragedies. Drama came later, and it was not until the last few years that comedy, musical shows, vaudeville (which is almost entirely comedy) and farces predominated the stage. There are few tragedies, and fewer dramas today than ever before.

"The screen programs of the future will be composed almost entirely of comedies. The tendency that way can be seen by the increased use of 'comedy relief' even now in the screen dramas. People crave laughter and they must have it if the screen is going to remain a permanent part of the amusement of the people.

"The campaign for Laugh Month was announced only a very short time ago. At best those who suggested Laugh Month probably did not realize the tremendo hold which the idea would take on the ima inations of everybody. The response has been a veritable flood of endorsements and pledges of co-operation. It has been generally conceded that this was a season of comedy more than any season in the past, but the tremendous growth of the Laugh Month movement illustrates in a most spectacular manner the rapid development of the comedy field and is a forecast of comedy predomination sooner than even those of us who are closest to comedy production had realized."

Distinctive Pictures Signs Sidney Olcott

Sidney Olcott has signed a contract with Distinctive Pictures Corporation whereby he will produce one picture for that company. The nature of the story has not yet been divulged. Olcott had obtained an absolute release of his contract from Famous Players-Lasky earlier in the week.

Production Of "Partners Again" Completed

"Partners Again," third of the annual "Potash & Perlmutter" screen comedies written by Montague Glass, has been completed under the direction of Henry King, who produced the film for Samuel Goldwyn. The picture will be distributed by United Artists.

George Sidney and Alexander Carr have the name roles and are supported by Betty Jewel, Allan Forrest, Earl Metcalfe, Robert N. Schable, Lillian Eliott and others.

Henley Signs New Contract With M-G-M

Hobart Henley has been signed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to direct a new series of productions. At the present time he is making his seventh M-G-M production and the new contract goes into effect upon its completion. It is an adaptation of the Rex Beach story, "The Auction Block," in which Charles Ray and Elinor Boardman are featured.

Complete Filming of New La Rocque Feature

Studio work has been completed on "Braveheart," the Cecil B. De Mille production starring Rod La Rocque. The picture was filmed under the direction of Alan Hale and is an adaptation of the stage play by William De Mille. Lillian Rich plays the leading feminine role and the supporting cast includes Jean Acker, Robert Edeson, Tyrone Power and Frank Hagney.

Hale Engaged for Marion Davies Film

Cosmopolitan has engaged Creighton Hale to play the role of Prince Oscar with Marion Davies in "Beverly of Graustark," from the George Barr McCutcheon story of the same name, which is now being filmed at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios. Hale replaces George K. Arthur who is at present engaged in the First National production of "Mlle. Modiste."

New Exhibitor Service for Chadwick

CHADWICK PICTURES CORPORATION has inaugurated a cooperative exploitation service for exhibitors, which is being developed under the direction of Charles Reed Jones, director of advertising and publicity for the company. Jones is offering exhibitors a complete exploitation campaign and special publicity stunts, in addition to the regular Chadwick press books.

As a theatre in any part of the country playing one of the Chadwick productions puts over any new exploitation stunt or any variation of those outlined in that press book, the Chadwick exchange in that territory reports the campaign in detail to the home office. These campaigns are immediately analyzed and developed to provide the maximum effectiveness in other theatres and are then passed on to all other Chadwick exchanges.

MacLean Will Start "That's My Baby"

DOUGLAS MAC LEAN will start production shortly on "That's My Baby," his next Paramount comedy from an original story by his own story staff. It is said the comedian will play the infatuated young man who is forced to win the girl against overwhelming odds. Comedy also figures largely in the story.

Mac Lean only recently completed a well earned vacation which took him to Panama, Cuba, New York and San Francisco.

Beauties for "Million Dollar Handicap"

A number of the Christie Comedy beauties have been loaned to Metropolitan Pictures for the latter's picturization of "The Million Dollar Handicap," adapted from the W. A. Frazer novel, "Thoroughbreds." Scott Sidney is directing the picture for release through Producers Distributing Corporation.

Ginsberg Signs Leads For "Taxi Mystery"

Edith Roberts and Robert Agnew have been signed by Henry Ginsberg for the leading roles in "Taxi Mystery," fifth Royal picture for Ginsberg release. Shooting on the story will start as soon as the supporting cast is selected.

DeMille Plans Elaborate Film

"Volga Boatman" To Have Stirring Settings Of Russia During Events Of Late Revolution

PAUL REVERE'S famous ride will be transferred to a Russian setting in the elaborate presentation of "The Volga Boatman" which Cecil B. DeMille will make for the Producers Distributing Corporation program. As announced by the company, the outstanding scenes which DeMille will present in this production include an interlude showing a rider who goes from point to point through the country telling the people that a new regime is in control.

An elaborate setting has been planned to represent the village. This setting occupies over one quarter of the big DeMille lot. Many of the houses are of the four wall type and so arranged that the walls can be lifted and scenes taken actually within the houses, without the necessity of building separate sets.

"The Volga Boatman" originally inspired by the song of that name, is an original story by Konrad Bercovici. It was adapted for the screen by Lenore Coffee. The featured players include William Boyd, Elinor Fair, Julia Faye, Theodore Kosloff, Victor Varconi and Robert Edeson.

The story opens at the time of the outbreak of strife between the Red army and the White army of the Aristocrats. The dramatic interest centers in Elinor Fair, a lovely aristocrat, and William Boyd, a sweat-stained, toil-laden boatman of the Volga. Theodore Kosloff plays the part of a mute blacksmith, Victor Varconi, an imperious prince and Julia Faye, an exotic Tartar character.

Columbia to Produce Abroad

Brandt And Cohn Returning From Europe With Complete Plans For Foreign Units

FOLLOWING a tour of Europe, Joe Brandt and Harry Cohn, heads of Columbia Pictures, are returning to America with plans completed for the production abroad of several feature photoplays to be released in this country by Columbia, according to an announcement made this week.

The announcement states that this move is made necessary to secure the interests of the company in Europe, where governments are subsidizing the production of motion pictures. "This move," the announcement declares, "makes it necessary in order for American producers to secure fair competition in the European market, to arrange for the production of pictures in these countries, which without question will seriously rival the U. S. A. as a centre of production in the future.

"The executives of Columbia Pictures were among the first to realize the importance now being attached to motion picture production by the many governments in Europe. It could but mean one thing only, i. e., that foreign countries were realizing the medium of the greatest value. England in particular has developed a plan whereby the production of English motion pictures will be materially increased by governmental support.

"Messrs. Brandt and Cohn conceived the plan of European production to assure the distribution of Columbia Pictures in these countries where local production will inevitably seriously oppose American product. By producing in these countries Columbia Pictures will assume a national aspect which will prevent any prejudice on the part of foreign distributors. The Columbia foreign units will be regarded as a national institution and will eliminate all national prejudice and its serious effort on American pictures."

"Soul Mates" New Elinor Glyn Story Title

"Soul Mates" is the new title of the Elinor Glyn story which went into production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as "The Reason Why." Carey Wilson adapted the story for the screen and Jack Conway directed. The cast includes Aileen Pringle, Gertrude Olmstead, Edmund Lowe, Phillips Smalley, Edythe Chapman, Mary Hawes, Katherine Bennett, Lucien Littlefield and Ned Sparks.

"Still Alarm" Due Early Next Year

"The Still Alarm" will likely be put forward on the Universal schedule of releases and will go to exhibitors as an early 1926 release instead of in June as originally announced. It is a screen adaptation of the famous old stage play of the same name and was directed by Edward Laemmle. Among the players are Helene Chadwick, William Russell, Richard C. Travers, John T. Murray, Edna Marian and Edward Hearn.

Harry Warner Off For Coast On Production

HARRY M. WARNER of Warner Brothers has left New York for Los Angeles to complete details of the production schedule for 1926-27. He expects to announce next year's complete program by the time of his return on January 8th.

Gloria Swanson Has Started "Untamed"

Gloria Swanson has started work at the Paramount Long Island studio in "Untamed," an original story by Fanny Hurst. She is being directed by Frank Tuttle, who is carrying on his operations from a wheel chair. Tuttle, injured some time ago in a friendly wrestling match with Richard Dix, suffered a further mishap to the injured leg while on location at Bear Mountain. Rather than postpone the start of the picture he is working under the handicap.

Fay Marbe Joins "Dance Madness" Cast

Paramount has added Fay Marbe, musical comedy star, and her brother, Gilbert, to the cast of "Dance Madness," now in production at the Long Island studio. Miss Marbe first gained attention as model for Howard Chandler Christy for his war posters. Since then she has appeared in a number of productions, including "Oh Boy," "The Velvet Lady," "The Hotel Mouse" and "Angel Face."

Krellberg Now Heads New Company

S. S. KRELLBERG, who for the past eighteen months has been serving as general manager for Chadwick Pictures Corporation, has resigned that post to assume his duties as president of his recently organized Excellent Pictures Corporation.

Krellberg's plans call for the production of ten feature pictures during the coming season. No announcement has yet been made regarding the distribution of the product. It is said two well known stars, one a man and one a woman have been placed under contract to the new company.

First National To Film "The Crystal Cup"

Gertrude Atherton's novel, "The Crystal Cup," is to be converted to the screen by First National. The work will be produced in the East under the supervision of Earl Hudson. Sada Cowan is writing the continuity. Neither director nor star has been selected as yet.

Smith Will Again Direct Richard Talmadge

Noel Smith, who directed Richard Talmadge in "The Blue Streak," now in the cutting room, will again direct that star in his next picture for F. B. O. release. Frank Howard Clark is preparing the continuity. Casting will start as soon as he has completed his work.

William Tilden, tennis star, is featured in "The High Binder," an Associated Exhibitor offering, scenes from which are shown above.

Big Expansion in Associated

Increased Sales and Office Force Makes Additional Home Office Space Necessary

SO rapid has been the expansion in the home office staff of Associated Exhibitors it has become necessary to increase the office space necessary for accommodation. The organization has taken over the entire fifth floor of the building at 35 West 45th street in New York City.

In the field, Sales Manager E. J. Smith has given some recent appointees additional duties and has added new members to his sales staff. Eddie Heiber, one of the best known exchange men in the East, and who was special representative for Warner Brothers, has been appointed manager of the Washington Branch of Associated Exhibitors.

Ben Ross, formerly special representative for Universal in the Minneapolis territory, has been appointed manager of the Minneapolis branch of Associated Exhibitors. Mr. Ross is well known to exhibitors in his territory and has gained a considerable reputation for himself with them and the sales managers for whom he has worked.

In the San Francisco branch R. S. Stackhouse succeeds as manager Ben F. Simpson. Mr. Stackhouse was given the appointment by Mr. Smith on the strength of the former's sales and good-will record in the territory.

Robert J. Murray, long known throughout New England and the South, has been made manager of the Dallas branch of Associated. Mr. Murray was with the Fox sales force for upwards of eight years, having been special representative in Boston for seven years and Charlotte branch manager for one year.

The new Albany manager for Associated is Jack Krause, who comes to the organization from the Bond Film Exchange, having been with the latter concern for four years.

Sales Manager Smith has added additional duties to Dan B. Lederman, recently appointed District Sales Director covering the Associated offices in Minneapolis, Omaha, Des Moines, Oklahoma City, Kansas City and Winnipeg. In addition to the foregoing offices, Mr. Lederman has been given supervision over the Chicago and Milwaukee Branches.

First National Busy On Coast

Production To Reach Peak At Yuletide With Nine Companies Working On Features

STUDIO activities of the First National west coast division will reach a peak for the year during the approaching holidays, when nine companies will be busy on features for this year's program.

Many new units will be engaged in actual camera work by that time according to John McCormick, head of the West Coast production for the company.

Colleen Moore will be putting the finishing touches on "Irene," under Alfred E. Green's direction, and announcement of her following story will be made within a few days time.

Corinne Griffith will be working in production on "Mlle. Modiste," under Robert Z. Leonard's direction.

Harry Langdon will be nearing the half way point in his first feature comedy for First National.

Edwin Carewe will have begun "Twentieth Century Unlimited," the story that will follow his recently completed "Joanna" film.

Lambert Hillyer will have started "The Second Chance" with Anna Q. Nilsson in the leading feminine role.

The Talmadges, Norma and Constance, will be well into production with Norma making "Kiki" under Clarence Brown's direction. Constance's story, although as yet not announced, will be ready for production at that time, according to Joseph M. Schenck.

Balboni will be well along with "The Far Cry" which brings out the combination of Blanche Sweet and Jack Mulhall in the leading roles.

June Mathis will be starting work on Rupert Hughes' "The Patent Leather Kid," which is to be one of First National's special attractions for the forthcoming season.

First National Has Acquired "Lunatic at Large"

First National has acquired from Cranfield and Clarke the latter's rights to "A Lunatic at Large" and are remaking the picture with Leon Errol in the leading part.

"Shenandoah" to Be Big Warner Picture

Among the outstanding productions on Warner Brothers' schedule for next year will be the famous old Civil War drama, "Shenandoah," which for many years has been a leading stage attraction. It will be produced on a gigantic scale by Warners.

The play is by Bronson Howard and had its premiere in the old Star Theatre in New York, September 9th, 1889. The original New York cast included such distinguished players as Wilton Lackaye, Henry Miller and Viola Allen. It has played continuously in stock ever since.

Alice Calhoun Loaned to Harry Langdon

Alice Calhoun has been loaned by Warner Brothers to the Harry Langdon Company to play the leading woman's role in "Nobody." She played her first comedy role for Warners with Syd Chaplin in "The Man on the Box." After the one Langdon picture Miss Calhoun will return immediately to the Warner lot.

"Paris At Midnight" Next for Frances Marion

Frances Marion's second picture as a producer for Producers Distributing Corporation will be the Balzac classic, "Pere Goriot." In its screen form it will be known as "Paris at Midnight." In addition to having prepared the adaptation, Miss Marion will supervise the entire production. The cast and director are now being selected.

Special Reel Issued For "First National Month"

A special reel, 800 feet in length, presenting views of First National stars, directors and personalities, as well as short excerpts from leading screen successes of the company, has been shipped to all First National exchanges from the home offices. The reel is designed as a special attraction in connection with "First National Month."

Irene Rich Will Tour As Hostess

WARNER BROTHERS have arranged an extensive tour for Irene Rich, star of "Lady Windermere's Fan," in which she will appear as hostess of the evening at the opening of runs in several Warner theatres. She recently was hostess at the world premiere of the picture at the Casa Lopez in New York City.

The engagements of Miss Rich will be unique in that she contemplates no addresses to audiences. Her only speech making will be over the radio on the first day of her visit to each city. In the theatres she will meet picture patrons in the lobby and greet her friends and admirers personally.

Miss Rich's itinerary at present includes the State Theatre at Pittsburgh December 10, 11 and 12; the Metropolitan, Baltimore, December 14, 15 and 16; Broadway, Charlotte, December 18 and 19; Warners' New York, December 26, 27 and 28; Cameo, Bridgeport, January 2; Dome, Youngstown, January 4, 5 and 6; Chicago, January 18, 19 and 20; Seattle, January 25.

M-G-M Plan Big Fire Picture

PLANS have been completed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for the making of a picture by Hunt Stromberg, temporarily called "Flames," in which Charles Ray will head the cast. The story by Kate Corberly and the screen adaptation by Al Cohn were approved at a meeting of the Board of Directors of the International Order of Fire Engineers held in Los Angeles recently. William Randolph Hearst also pledged the support of his publications to this project.

Louis B. Mayer exhibited the $2,000 silver trophy which will be awarded to the city or town which shows the greatest percentage of gain in the prevention of fire during the coming year. This is one of four cups that will be awarded. Mayer further suggested a contest in the fire departments of the United States and Canada for a new title for the picture, offering prizes from $1,000 down.

Metropolitan Scenario Staff Busy

The scenario staff of Metropolitan Pictures Corporation is one of the busiest in the industry at the present time. Frances Marion is putting the finishing touches on "Paris at Midnight," an adaptation from Balzac's "Pere Goriot." Elliott Clawson and Will M. Ritchey are adapting "Whispering Smith," while Finis Fox is applying his efforts to the continuity on "Shipwrecked." Charles Logue is preparing "Forbidden Waters" and Percy Heath is preparing "The Dice Woman." All will be released through Producers Distributing Corporation.

John Stahl Soon To Join Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

John Stahl will join the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer staff on the west coast as soon as he finishes directing "Memory Lane" for First National. His first picture will be "Toto", from the play by Achmed Abdullah, in which Leo Dietrichstein starred on the dramatic stage. Lew Cody will play the title role in the film vision. Benjamin Glazer is now working on the screen adaptation.

Wellman To Direct Betty Bronson's Next

William Wellman, one of the youngest of the Paramount directors, will direct Betty Bronson in her next picture, as yet untitled. Miss Bronson is scheduled to return to Hollywood in a few days. Wellman is the only director B. P. Schulberg took with him when he joined Famous Players-Lasky Corporation as associate producer.

Finish Final Scenes For "The Reckless Lady"

"The Reckless Lady," Robert T. Kane's third production for First National, has been completed at the Cosmopolitan Studio in New York. The picture is based on the novel of the same title by Sir Philip Gibbs. Belle Bennett, Lois Moran, Ben Lyon, James Kirkwood, Lowell Sherman, and others are seen in principal roles in the picture.

"Cupid a La Carte" has been transferred to the screen by William Fox. Scenes from this O. Henry story are shown above.

M-G-M Starts New Productions

Benjamin Christianson, Danish Director Is Making His First Picture Here

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER have started or are about to start a number of productions at the west coast studio, with several players assigned for important roles. Norma Shearer is to do another circus role under the direction of the Danish director, Benjamin Christianson, who is making his first American production.

Miss Shearer will be seen as a trapeze performer in "The Light Eternal," in which a European circus is depicted. The Christianson company in his first picture includes Carmel Myers, Charles Emmett Mack, Claire McDowell, Joyce Coad and the dog, Buddy.

Hobart Henley has started direction of "The Auction Block," which features Charles Ray and Eleanor Boardman. Frederic and Fanny Hatton adapted the picture from the story by Rex Beach. Ernest Gillen has been assigned the part of "Carter Lane" as his first role under his new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer contract. James Corrigan has also been assigned an important role, as has William Orlamond.

Agnes Christine Johnston, scenarist of the new Marion Davies production, "Beverly of Graustark," has been assigned to adapt "Lovely Mary," soon to be produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The novel is by Alice Hagan Rice, author of "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch."

Marshall Neilan has cast Zasu Pitts in the role of "Nancy" in his forthcoming production, "The Great Love." Among other cast additions are Edythe Yorke and Sally O'Neill in "The Auction Block" and Shannon Day in "The Barrier."

Four New Stage Plays for Fox

"Is Zat So?," "Whispering Wires," "The City" and "Holy Terror" on Schedule

FOX has added four successful stage plays to its list of productions for ne t season. They are "Is Zat So?", "Whispering Wires," "The City" and "The Holy Terror."

"Is Zat So?" is a Schubert production that has been a reigning Broadway sensation for the past two seasons. It is a comedy drama of a boxer and his manager who stray into the aristocratic environment of a Fifth Avenue home.

"Whispering Wires" is a mystery drama by Kate L. McLaurin which ran for ten months on Broadway during the 1922-23 season. It is based on a story of the same name by Henry Leverage, which originally appeared in the Saturday Evening Post.

"The City" is a Clyde Fitch play that was produced by the Shuberts in 1909 and won wide acclaim. "The Holy Terror" is another of the John Golden stage plays produced for the first time this season. It is a story of the West Virginia coal mines written by Winchell Smith and George Abbott.

These latest additions to the Fox schedule give that company a most imposing array of stage successes. Previously announced were such plays as "Cradle Snatchers," "What Price Glory," "The Family Upstairs," "Pigs" and "Going Crooked," from the current season, and six David Belasco plays, including "The Music Master" and "The Return of Peter Grimm." Then, too, there are ten of the old favorite Charles Hoyt plays.

F.B.O. Features Are Under Way

Production Activities Reach Home-stretch on Heavy Season's Program

MANY features have recently been placed in production at F. B. O.'s west coast studio, where the season's home stretch in production has taken on a new burst of speed. Others are in course of preparation and will go into work in the immediate future.

James Hogan has been engaged to direct, and has started work on "The King of the Turf," with Patsy Ruth Miller and Kenneth Harlan in the featured roles. It is a racing melodrama by John C. Brownell and Joseph Louis Vance.

Fred Thomson, with his horse, Silver King, has started work on "The Tough Guy," with Dave Kirkland directing, from an original story by Howard Clifton and a scenario by Buckleigh Fritz Oxford. Lola Todd is playing opposite the star.

"Queen of Diamonds," a melodrama of the New York show world, has gone into production with Evelyn Brent in the starring role under the direction of Chet Withey. Theodore Van Eltz is opposite. The story and continuity are by Fred Myton.

Tom Tyler, F. B. O.'s new western star, has started work on his fourth feature as yet untitled, with Bob De Lacey directing. Frankie Darro has been engaged for all eight of the Tyler pictures.

Bob Custer is at work on "Man Rustlin'," a western comedy melodrama which Del Andrews is directing. Dick Talmadge has completed "The Blue Streak" and is preparing a new script, while Lefty Flynn will start shooting soon on "The Kitten and the King," a Gerald Beaumount story, which Harry Garson will direct.

Emory Johnson started "Happiness," second of his big specials of the year, on December 1st. The story was written by his mother, Emilie Johnson. Within another two weeks "Fighting Hearts," another two-reel series, will get under way from stories by Sam Hellman. Alberta Vaughn, Larry Kent, Kit Guard and Al Cooke will have the leading roles. Ralph Cedar will start directing as soon as he has completed the "Maizie" series starring Alberta Vaughn.

20 Years an Exhibitor

The Friendly Hand

Syd Chaplin Starts "Oh What a Nurse"

Syd Chaplin's next for Warners will be "Oh What a Nurse," from a story by Robert E. Sherwood and Bertram Bloch. The picture, already in production, is being directed by Chuck Reisner, who directed Chaplin in "The Man on the Box."

Patsy Ruth Miller plays the leading feminine role opposite the star, while others in the cast include Matthew Betz, Edith Yorke, Dave Torrence, Ed Kennedy, Raymond Wells and Henry Barrowes.

Harlan, Patsy Ruth Miller Loaned to F. B. O.

Kenneth Harlan and Patsy Ruth Miller have been loaned by Warner Brothers to F. B. O. and will play the leads in "King of the Turf," from the story by Louis Joseph Vance and John Brownell.

Harlan and Miss Miller recently finished "The Fighting Edge," Warners' picturization of William McLeod Raine's novel. When they have finished with the F. B. O. picture they will return to the Warner lot to be co-starred.

Buchowetzki is Supervising Portraits

Having completed the direction of "The Midnight Sun" for Universal, Dimitri Buchowetzki, Russian director, is now busy personally supervising the taking of portraits of Laura La Plante, Pat O'Malley, Raymond Keane and George Seigmann, all members of the cast. These portraits are to be used for publicity and exploitation distribution.

F. B. O. has signed little Frankie Darro to an eight-picture contract to support Tom Tyler, western star. The contract calls for the exclusive services of the youngster. Frankie has appeared in all of Tyler's previous pictures.

Harold Lloyd Selects All-Star "Eleven"

HAROLD LLOYD has named an All-Pathe Exchange eleven as the result of a sales competition carried on in the Pathe exchanges in connection with "The Freshman." The comedian has awarded twelve handsome football trophies to the branch offices securing the largest number of bookings for the picture.

Each trophy is a regulation sized football of silver, mounted on a highly polished mahogany base, upon which is displayed a silver shield carrying the name of the winner and other inscriptions.

Exhibitors Box-Office Reports

Names of the theatre owners are omitted by agreement in accordance with the wishes of the average exhibitor and in the belief that reports published over the signature of the exhibitor reporting, is a dangerous practice.

Only reports received on specially prepared blanks furnished by us will be accepted for use in this department. Exhibitors who value this reporting service are urged to ask for these blanks.

The GREEN ARCHER

WITH Allene Ray AND Walter Miller

As great a mystery as any Sherlock Holmes ever had to solve.

A heartless, cruel, criminal millionaire brings a castle from England, stone by stone, and erects it on the Hudson.

Does he also import the ghost of the ancient archer who haunted the historic structure in England? How else can be explained the mysterious figure which stalks the corridors at night, a deadly menace to the oppressor?

Is the charming girl who lives near by, the Green Archer? Is it her father? Is it her father's friend? Is it the handsome captain of the state troopers who is in love with the girl?

As a feature it would be great. As a serial it is a sensational, surprising triumph.

Directed by Spencer Bennet

Scenario by Frank Leon Smith

TRADE MARK

Paramount's Attractions for 1926

BOX-OFFICE attractions, whether for fall and winter or for spring and summer, is the backbone of the Paramount policy for the pictures it will release during the spring and summer of 1926, according to an advance announcement by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

Company executives express their conviction that the pictures comprising the new season's schedules are greater by far than anything the company released during the fall and winter.

That the exhibitor may be assured pictures that will build spring and summer patronage, Paramount announced that in addition to these box office assets, more is being put into this group of attractions than has been put into "all the fall and winter pictures ever released."

Each picture will be released, says the announcement, under an extremely suitable box office title, a title lending itself to unlimited potential exploitation possibilities. Each title will suggest to the exhibitor an infinite number of tie-ups, stunts and other advertising, and promotional activities.

The spring and summer pictures, according to Paramount, have been made with the thought in mind that every group of attractions must contain every element essential to unanimous approval of the motion picture public, as well as the potential fans, thousands of whom yield each year to the influence of the screen through the presentation of outstanding successes which conform to their desires and demands for entertainment.

Adolph Zukor, president of Paramount.

In the spring and summer schedule, the motion picture public, and the potential patrons, will find the spectacular, melodrama, comedy, drama, romance, thrills, beauty, stories of the war, of society and many other elements which make a successful appeal to the public. Each picture will represent a combination of several of these elements of appeal.

Thirty attractions, "each cast with the drawing artists of the screen, each from a story by a famous author, each based on an idea saleable to the public, each worthy of a long run, comprise the new schedule, release of which begins on February 1," according to the Paramount announcement.

In this connection, the announcement says: "The selection of stories, of new ideas, of casts, of directors of this group is being followed up by the most elaborate and painstaking production work in the history of motion pictures. The slogan is: 'Make it bigger, make it better and forget the season of the year.'

"Exhibitors will do well to analyze this product, to study the box office names in Paramount's stock company, to check up the history of actual delivery of promises that characterizes Paramount above all others.

"These pictures will go to the exhibitor strengthened by a forceful advertising and publicity campaign reaching into every nook and corner of the United States. Already the country has heard 'The Vanishing American,' 'The Wanderer,' 'The Grand Duchess and the Waiter' and others of the next group praised in glowing terms. These are the type of showman's pictures and specials which the theatre owner will receive to assist him in maintaining a steady patronage through the months generally considered dull from the standpoint of in-door entertainment.

"It will be evident to all on analysis," continues the announcement, "that the pictures comprising the new group are individual, each one of them big, each one of them a special in the highest sense of the term. The releasing in the spring and summer of pictures that have less in them of box office power than those released in the fall and winter is a poor policy. It belongs to the past.

"In the motion picture business today there can be no seasonal division of production effort. Program pictures will not do the trick. The public wants big stuff and wants it all the time."

George W. Weeks, in charge of Distribution for Paramount

Jesse L. Lasky, vice-president in charge of Production of Paramount.

Sidney R. Kent, General Manager, Paramount.

Summary of the Paramount Thirty

IN the summary of the new season's program which follows, Paramount is offering exhibitors an innovation which makes it invaluable for them to file these pages for reference when play dates are set in. The exploitation ideas presented in this summary will be supplemented in the individual press sheets and in the Showman's Manual.

Seven great attractions, says the Paramount announcement, will be released in February. One is spectacle, one a melodrama and another an epic of the American Indian. In four of these subjects runs a vein of highly pleasing comedy—something different in screen humor.

"THE WANDERER"—February 1

Director Raoul Walsh's masterpiece. A production built in a background of beauty and sumptuousness. The cast is composed of such noted players as the following: Greta Nissen as Tisha, the temptress; William Collier, Jr., as Jether, the prodigal; Ernest Torrence as Tola, the evil one; Wallace Beery, Pharis, the roistering sea captain; Tyrone Power, Jesse, the patriarch; Kathlyn Hill, Naomi, the innocent; Kathlyn Williams, Huldah, the mother; and George Rigas, Gaal, the black heart.

THE STORY—Jether, a dreamer, pleads for and is given his inheritance from his rich father. He follows Tisha, the temptress to the city of Babylon, where through wastefulness, he loses his fortune. Tisha thereafter refuses him as her suitor and, broken in spirit, he wanders in the wilderness, feeding with swine. Finally he turns toward home where he is received by his loving mother and eventually his stern father who relents and orders that the fatted calf be killed.

"THE SONG AND DANCE MAN"—February 8

There are tears and laughs in this George M. Cohan comedy which had a successful run on Broadway last year. Direction was entrusted to Herbert Brenon, who made "Peter Pan," "A Kiss for Cinderella," "The Street of Forgotten Men," and other attractions. Tom Moore repeats on his excellent portrayal in "Manhandled." Bessie Love again struts the Charleston as she did in "The King on Main Street," Harrison Ford is another popular player who is featured. Then there are Norman Trevor, Josephine Drake, George Nash, William B. Nash and Helen Lindroth.

THE STORY—It sets forth the trials and tribulations of a song and dance man. "Hap" Farrell meets a girl friend of his boyhood days who is a trouper. Together they try to break into big time. They fail. "Hap," without funds and desperate, holds up two men. They give the two another chance. "Hap" proves to be the worst of hams and is persuaded to return home. After building up a successful business and practicing for three years his songs and dances he returns to Broadway, there to see his girl friend's great night of triumph. He finds, too, that the girl is in love with the man who had given both their chance three years previously. Disheartened, he gives up his business and returns to the tank towns as a ham song and dance man.

"THE GRAND DUCHESS AND THE "WAITER"—February 8

Another production directed by Malcolm St. Clair, who made "Are Parents People–" "The Trouble With Wives" and "A Woman of the World. It is an original comedy by Alfred Savior, who wrote "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife." The picture brings Adolphe Menjou and Florence Vidor to the screen in a combination of pleasing and humorous portrayals. Supporting them are Lawrence Grant, Andre de Beranger, Dot Farley, Barbara Pierce, Brandon Hurst and William Courtright.

THE STORY—A fast, frisky, gorgeously dressed comedy. A Paris millionaire becomes infatuated with a grand duchess. Ignored in his efforts to meet her, he becomes a floor-waiter in the suite which the royal guests occupy. He fails miserably in this job and the grand duchess, to punish him, makes him a member of her cortege, and assigns him to very menial labor. The duchess, however, finally falls in love with him but is forced to repulse him when others of the royal party find her in the waiter's arms after she has swooned. Months later while despondently searching for her the waiter finds her the proprietor of an humble inn and they are reunited.

"THE VANISHING AMERICAN"—February 15

This is an epic romance of the Indian. It's long-run calibre has placed George B. Seitz among the foremost directors of the screen. Scenically it is regarded as one of the most beautiful pictures ever made. Highest praise has been accorded it by New York, San Francisco and Charlotte newspapers. Zane Grey wrote this historical and modern story of the Indian, and for the principals of the cast Paramount chose Richard Dix, Lois Wilson, Noah Beery, and Malcolm MacGregor. Supporting them are George Magrill, Bert Woodruff, Guy Oliver, Shannon Day, Charles Crockett, Charles Stevens, Bruce Gordon, Richard Howard, John Webb Dillon, Bernard Siegel and Joe Ryan.

THE STORY—The early sequences, taken against a magnificent scenic background, have as their theme the survival of the fittest. In chronological order the rise and fall of the various tribes of Indians is depicted. First the aborigines, then the cliff dwellers down to the Redman of today. The modern story tells of the persecution of the Indian, his submission to what seems to be his fate, his patriotism for America, his enlistment to fight in the world war. He returns from the war to find his people still persecuted, there follows an uprising in which the last of the great Indian chiefs is shot. As he dies in the arms of the white girl whom he loves he speaks his last message to his people: "Through a cloud—I see—my people coming home."

"BEHIND THE FRONT"—February 22

Here is a new kind of comedy with New York society and the war for atmosphere. It is an adaptation of Hugh Wiley's Saturday Evening Post story, "Spoils of War." Edward Sutherland directed it. Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton are two members of the cast who will keep spectators in an uproar, and they will like Mary Brian.

Pola Negri, Paramount star.

THE STORY—The war with a comedy slant. No killing, blood or anything unpleasant. Many comedy gags injected into plot. It is the story of a millionaire and his valet, their hesitancy in enlisting in the army during the world war, their humorous experiences behind the lines and in Paris, their rivalry for a French manicure girl, their efforts to be heroes, their subsequent incarceration for being absent without leave, their decoration for gallantry and their meeting of the girl they both love who greets them with, "Meet my husband."

"THE BLIND GODDESS"—March 1

This story by Arthur Train ran in the Designer and cost that magazine $50,000. Scribners will publish it in book form this winter. James Cruze, a master in handling big situations, will direct. Only two important members of the cast have been chosen thus far. They are Dolores Costello, who has the leading role in "Mannequin," and Tully Marshall.

THE STORY—This is a strong drama of the "Manslaughter" type, but much bigger in scope and power. It tells of the thrilling romance of a young lawyer who becomes public prosecutor in New York and believes he is engaged in fighting for the right while all the time he is a tool in the hands of the most unscrupulous gang. There comes a time when he is forced to choose between his duty and the love of a girl under circumstances that seem to spell the end of his career.

"THE LUCKY LADY"—February 22

Robert E. Sherwood, editor of Life and famous motion picture critic, and Bertram Bloch collaborated in writing this story, a gay comedy of love and marriage with William Collier, Jr., and Greta Nissen, the combination whose love scenes in "The Wanderer" were a highlight of that attraction. With them in the cast are Lionel Barrymore, Marc MacDermott, Mme. Daumery and So Jin. Raoul Walsh, who made a great picture of "The Wanderer," is handling the megaphone on "The Lucky Lady."

THE STORY—A tale of a beauty who lavished her charms upon one man for revenge and upon another for love. It happens in a mythical kingdom where a lovely princess is chafing against the restraint of a convent. She sneaks away, meets a young American, flirts with him and falls in love. At the same time she poses as an alluring vampire and flirts with the wild-living nobleman whom she is supposed to marry but does not love. The prime minister, fearing for the marriage plans of the nobleman and the princess, banishes the young American and the vampire, who is really the princess. The two journey to America and live happily ever afterwards.

"FOR HEAVEN'S SAKE"—March 1

Harold Lloyd's first under his contract with Paramount. A typical Lloyd comedy which has been in production nearly four months. Reported to have as many laughs as in "The Freshman." Sam Taylor who has handled the megaphone on many Lloyd productions, is directing the star's latest leading woman.

THE STORY—Lloyd is returning to the carefree boy character which won him so many million friends in "A Sailor Made Man." The story will bring him into the slums of a great city, and eventually as a rescue worker in a famous mission.

"DANCING MOTHERS"—March 8

A successful stage play by Edgar Selwyn and Edmund Goulding, which is confidently expected by Paramount officials to make an even greater picture. In "Dancing Mothers," Herbert Brenon, the director, will have an opportunity to add another to his long list of box office attractions. The cast of the picture, which is filled with contrasting scenes of heart interest and colorful depiction of gay life, should receive the stamp of approval of all exhibitors. There are Conway Tearle, Alice Joyce, and William Collier, Jr.

THE STORY—A modern up-to-date analysis of family life. A dramatic offering. It is the story of a philandering husband, an insulting daughter and a faithful, tolerant mother who rebels and turns butterfly. A family squabble ensues when the mother falls in love with the daughter's suitor. Despite the protests of her family, and the willingness of the young bachelor to give her up, the mother refuses to return to a life of sacrifice and devotion, and leaves her husband and daughter.

"SEA HORSES"—March 15

A magazine serial and a best seller which Allan Dwan will direct. This adventure and love story by Francis Brett Young will have in its cast such popular players as Jack Holt, Florence Vidor, Noah Beery, George Bancroft, William Powell and Lawrence Gray. It is a story which critics everywhere have praised.

THE STORY—A young American captain aids a beautiful English girl to find her Italian husband, who has abandoned her and her child, in an evil African port. Her efforts at reconcilliation refused, she returns to the captain who loves her. The child is kidnapped by the father. There is a terrific fight. The captain and mother and child escape and the dissolute husband is wiped out in a tropical storm.

"THE PEACOCK PARADE"—March 15

Here is your style show for your pre-Easter season, with Pola Negri, a big supporting cast and 100 beautiful girls and gowns. In addition to the style show, this picture will offer theatre goers a story replete in romantic comedy and drama. Raoul Walsh will direct, and in a picture of this type, with its gorgeous settings, Walsh has no equal. "The Wanderer" was exemplary of this. The story will be written by a well known writer from an idea suggested by Monte M. Katterjohn.

THE STORY—There will be drama, but as a whole the picture will be a gay, sophisticated society comedy in which Pola Negri will dazzle you in beautiful gowns. She will be surrounded by gayety and mirth.

"MISS BREWSTER'S MILLIONS"—March 22

A George Barr McCutcheon comedy idea in reverse English. A society comedy with Bebe Daniels romping through the scenes. Ford Sterling, a fine comedian who has just signed a long term contract with Paramount, is in the cast. Clarence Badger, who made Raymond Griffith's "Paths to Paradise" and is now directing that star in "Hands Up:" will handle the megaphone.

THE STORY—A beautiful girl loves Paris gowns but wears hand-me-downs. She wants to associate with millionaires but she must be satisfied with the waitress' chatter at Childs. Then, a distant relative dies and leaves her a million. A second relative, estranged from the first, leaves the girl $7,000,000 providing she spends the million she inherited from the first relative in a year. The remainder of the picture is filled with gags with Bebe dressed to kill and out for a thrill. New York society, Fifth avenue, the Ritz, fashion shops, limousines, yachts, millionaires and Monte Carlo.

"A FLORIDA ROMANCE" (Tentative Title)—March 22

You've heard of the new Klondike—the real estate boom in Florida. Here it is with Thomas Meighan as the star. It is also the story of a baseball training camp. Ring Lardner, famed humorist who knows baseball forward and backward, wrote the story. Directing the picture will be Victor Heerman, who handled the megaphone on Meighan's newest attraction, "Irish Luck." Lila Lee has been chosen as the star's leading woman.

THE STORY—An old baseball player, released when he fails to get in condition at the Florida training camp, stumbles into a real estate deal, turns over several pieces of property and skyrockets it to prosperity. He invests for other players and their quick fortunes wreck the team. The tide turns, members of the team seek reinstatement and the old player is left holding the bag on a big venture. There are hectic moments before he succeeds. There is plenty of opportunity for comedy and action.

Directors Of Paramount Productions

"Untamed," a Gloria Swanson Vehicle

Betty Bronson, Paramount star.

"CROSS MY HEART"—March 29

Richard Dix as a virile, American athletic youth in a fast moving comedy of the type of "Too Many Kisses," "The Shock Punch" and "Womanhandled." Lois Wilson plays opposite him. Gregory La Cava, maker of "Womanhandled" and the man who handled the gag and stunt stuff in "The Lucky Devil," will direct. This picture will be an adaptation of the famous stage farce, "The Man from Mexico," by H. A. Du Souchet.

THE STORY—A New York man-about-town, who is not in the good graces of his wealthy fiancee's parents, pledges to travel the straight and narrow path. No sooner is the pledge made than he is sent to jail for 30 days. To keep his fiancee and her parents in ignorance, he tells them of a trip to Mexico. The amusing incidents which follow and which end in a wild chase over New York on his wedding morning combine in making a farce that will jar a grouch loose from any person.

"VOLCANO"—April 26

A melodrama adapted from Lawrence Eyre's stage play, "Martinique." Directed by William K. Howard, who made such pictures as "The Thundering Herd," "The Border Legion" and "Light of Western Stars." In the cast are such favorites as Bebe Daniels, Ricardo Cortez, Wallace Beery, Arthur Edmund Carew, Dale Fuller, Eulalie Jensen. With them in the cast are Brandon Hurst, Marjorie Gay, Robert Perry, Snitz Edwards, Emily Barrye, Bowditch "smoke" Turner, Edith Yorke, Evelyn Sherman and Madame Comont.

THE STORY—A love melodrama of the tropical West Indian island of Martinique. A Parisian girl, born with the blue blood running in her veins, goes to Martinique where she is disowned by a snobbish mother. She is cast into the underworld to fight a battle between true and false love. The elements of the tropics and the hand of fate, however, combine in vindicating the girl and bringing her true love.

"UNTAMED"—April 5

Fannie Hurst, author of "Humoresque" and Liberty's $50,000 prize story, "Mannequin," is writing this story for Gloria Swanson. The story will offer this popular star an opportunity to display her extraordinary gift for impersonation, comedy and emotion. Likely Lawrence Gray, her leading man in "Stage Struck," will assume that role in "Untamed." To direct her Miss Swanson has chosen Frank Tuttle, who is now completing "The American Venus." Townsend Martin will supervise production.

THE STORY—This will be a modern version of "The Taming of the Shrew," a story of an imperious, truculent, thoroughly spoiled, yet thoroughly lovable girl who becomes irrevocably "tamed."

"WILD GEESE"—April 5

The novel by Martha Ostenso which won the $13,500 prize awarded by Pictorial Review, Dodd, Mead & Company and Famous Players-Lasky Corporation for the best American novel of the year. It will be William De Mille's first spectacular special. No cast has been chosen. Martha Ostenso, yesterday an unknown Danish girl, today is acclaimed by critics and public the equal of the best contemporary fiction writers The story is running serially in Pictorial Review.

THE STORY—A beautiful, lovely girl—a school teacher—lives with a cruel, stingy and tricky farmer in Dakota who has a strange influence over his wife. The girl seeks the source of this influence and one day when a handsome youth comes to the farm the girl learns that the boy's mother is the farmer's wife. The father was a childhood sweetheart who died before their marriage. This fact has incensed the farmer. Despite conditions the girl falls in love with the boy and the farmer resorts to every means to break up the romance. In a sweeping fire the farmer dies and happiness dawns upon the family.

"I'LL SEE YOU TONIGHT"—April 12

An Adolphe Menjou vehicle. Arlette Marchal, the French actress who has just arrived in America, is the first member of the supporting cast chosen. This Parisian beauty supported Gloria Swanson in "Madame Sans-Gene." William Wellman has been assigned to direct this picture, the original play for which was written by Herman Bahr and adapted for American consumption by Leo Ditrichstein.

THE STORY—A master pianist, a host of admiring beauties, an understanding wife, an escapade in a mountain bungalow with a student, exposure by her husband and the wife of the pianist and the subsequent things that happen should provide an evening of hilarious entertainment for the public.

"THAT'S MY BABY"—April 12

This will be another Douglas McLean vehicle. More gags, more thrills, more speed, and therefore more laughs are promised. MacLean has made a long list of box office attractions and he will not disappoint with this picture. A big comedy cast will support the star in this story conceived by MacLean and his staff. Paramount's sales department selected the title.

THE STORY—A comedy of complications. Doug races by train for the hand of a pretty girl. A baby enters upon the scene and retards his progress. He is arrested on a charge of kidnapping. He locates a baby, but the wrong one. Then the right one is returned to him and with two babies to care for Doug faces many complications. Some of the funniest situations in pictures arises before Doug finally returns the right baby to its mother and wins the girl.

"DESERT GOLD"—April 19

George B. Seitz, the man who directed "The Vanishing American," has been assigned to direct this, another Zane Grey Western melodrama of thrills and excitement through which runs an appealing love theme. Lucien Hubbard will supervise the production. "Desert Gold" is one of Grey's most popular books. Grey is one of the widest read of contemporary authors with 1,000,000 copies of each of his novels being sold. Jack Holt and Billie Dove are first members of the cast chosen.

THE STORY—A young man disgraces his wealthy parents and a girl and flees to the desert where he finds gold. Years later this man's son flees from an Arizona gang of ruffians into the desert. There he finds a girl who is lost and who is the daughter of the girl with whom his father had become involved. Many exciting incidents ensue as they are pursued by the gang of ruffians. They, too, find the gold mine and eventually happiness.

"FRESH PAINT"—April 26

Another Raymond Griffith attraction. One of the best men in the field will be chosen to direct, although Griffith as usual will supervise, as he always does. His comedy unit is composed of expert writers and gag men. The star is now hard at work on "Hands Up!" and not until this is completed will full details of "Fresh Paint" be made known.

THE STORY—This will be a typical Griffith story and production—humor, gags, romance, de luxe production, fast action and original treatment.

"THE RAINMAKER"—May 3

A love drama with the race track, a Mexican cabaret as a background. It was written by Gerald Beaumont who is noted for his stories of the race track and the prize ring. Red Book Magazine published it as a serial under the title, "Heaven Bound," Allan Dwan has been chosen to direct and among the box office names in the cast are Bessie Love and William Collier, Jr.

THE STORY—A beautiful nurse at the bedside of a jockey with whom she is in love, falls asleep in his room and is driven from the hospital in disgrace. She drifts to Tia Juana where she dances in a Mexican cabaret. The jockey, recovered, starts in search of her. From one track to the other he goes until he finds her. A plague strikes the city. People die like flies. Rain will save them. At this point Beaumont has introduced one of the most unusual twists for his denouement.

"IT'S THE OLD ARMY GAME"—May 10

This will be a stellar vehicle for W. C. Fields, Paramount's newest star, whose comedy portrayals in "Sally of the Sawdust" and "That Royle Girl" have won for him a legion of fans throughout the country. On the stage Fields has been an outstanding comedian for several years. On the screen he is funnier than on the stage. When he entered pictures he made this comment: "I want to restore the old hokum, the old army game. My idea is to bring back slap stick two-dollared up." Tom Geraghty will supervise Fields' productions. Clara Bow will have the leading feminine role.

THE STORY—It will be written around his most famous characterizations, that of the genial, happy tramp of fortune, the medicine man who works the old shell game and makes them like it. This famous line of Fields gives an idea of the type of story: "Daughter, one word of advice as you enter into womanhood, the word that comes from long experience in the ups and downs of this gay, cruel world. Daughter, always remember, never give a sucker an even break."

Bebe Daniels, Ricardo Cortez and Wallace Beery in scenes from "Volcano," produced by William K. Howard, for Paramount and listed for release in March.

New Negri Feature a June Offering

"THE PALM BEACH GIRL"—May 17

Bebe Daniels appearing in a fast frisky motorboat comedy written by Byron Morgan, the man who wrote Wally Reid's great automobile stories. Edward Sutherland, one of the best comedy directors in the business, will handle the megaphone. He made "A Regular Fellow" and is now at work on "Behind the Front."

THE STORY—A beautiful bored society belle eager for excitement and a he-man. An international motorboat race in which she enters, much to the horror of her aristocratic family. A race across the viaduct spanning the Florida Keys with the Havana Express. This race saves her love and happiness.

"TAKE A CHANCE"—May 31

A comedy starring Richard Dix, a favorite with exhibitors and the public. Gregory La Cava, who is now directing the star in "Womanhandled" will handle the megaphone. The story for this new Dix comedy, the supporting for which has not been selected, was written by Townsend Martin.

THE STORY—Dix is to be born at the foot of the Statue of Liberty on Friday the 13th. Because of that incident he is named Liberty Jones. From then on things begin to happen to Dix in his own athletic, lighthearted way.

"CROSSROADS OF THE WORLD"—June 7

A gay, smart comedy of society written for Pola Negri by Michael Arlen, the man who wrote "The Green Hat," which sold a million copies and which is now having a successful run on the stage on Broadway. This author has taken the book, dramatic and social worlds of America and England by storm.

THE STORY—The girl, the hero, the villain and another girl come from the four corners of the earth and meet in amazing fashion at the Crossroads of the World, the gay center of music, girls and song. The tale is developed with true Arlen wit and charm, flashing color, luxury and entertainment appeal.

"THE DEER DRIVE"—June 14

This drama of fighting and adventure and the love of a forest ranger for a pretty New York society girl was written by Zane Grey. It will be produced on a scale as sweeping as "The Thundering Herd." The story ran in The Country Gentleman, which has a circulation of 1,000,000 or 4,000,000 readers.

THE STORY—A girl to save the good name of a friend goes to the Grand Canyon under an assumed name, falls into the hands of outlaws, is rescued by a forest ranger, is vindicated when the New York scandal is cleared, falls in love with the ranger, buys a ranch and they are married to live happily ever afterward.

"GRASS"—June 21

This is a story of human beings, their beasts, herds and flocks. It is a photographic record of real people in combat with nature. "Grass" is the picture of an exodus into a promised land. It affords a vicarious experience through the sun and wind of the desert, across a deep and swirling Asiatic river, up a deep and forbidding mountain side in bleak snow, and through a craggy pass into a valley of rest and plenty where the tents are unfolded and the portion of the flocks that has survived is turned loose in the dreamed-of grass.

"THE SECRET SPRING"—May 24

A picture produced on a magnificent scale which proved a sensation abroad where it played for six months in Berlin and corresponding periods in London and other cities. The cast is headed by Huguette Duflos, who is acclaimed the most beautiful woman in Paris. Pierre Benoit wrote the story and Leonce Perret, who made "Madame Sans Gene," directed.

THE STORY—A murder mystery melodrama tempered with a romance between a high-born society girl and a penniless man. A beautiful young woman is forced into a loveless marriage with a rich and powerful man. Unable to win her love he announces a journey to the Congo, but is murdered by a jealous brother and his body is hidden in the palace. The girl, after a visit with her father, returns to the palace and falls in love with a young Frenchman, who discovers the husband's body in a secret chamber. The murderer sets fire to the palace and the girl is rescued from the flames by the young Frenchman.

"MOANA"—February 22

Robert Flaherty, producer of "Nanook of the North," lived the life of the natives of the South Sea island for 20 months in making this production. It is a true romance of the real South Seas. It is a true story of the love and life of a native man of Savaii in British Samoa and his betrothed. It has in it all the glamour, the seductive charm of the South Seas. In the picture you see Moana, Tu'ungaita, Fa'angase and Pe'a. Test showings throughout the country have proved this a picture to which the public will respond.

Scenes from Paramount's "The Lucky Lady," in which Greta Nisson plays the title role and William Collier, Jr., Marc MacDermott, Lionel Barrymore and others have principal roles.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

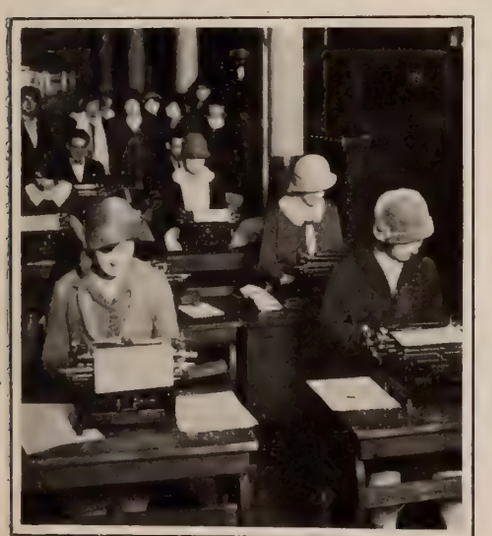
Hyman Exploits Errol Feature



"Clothes Make The Pirate" Exploited With Drive And Presentation At Brooklyn Strand

LEON ERROL'S first starring picture, "Clothes Make the Pirate," was given a big exploitation campaign at the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre, along with the first appearance on any stage of the International Novelty Orchestra of Victor Recording Artists. As this program had two premieres in it, that of Errol as a star and that of the orchestra before the public, Managing Director Edward L. Hyman planned in advance to "tell Brooklyn all about it" so that neither the new star or the orchestra would "go on cold."

All available accessories on "Clothes Make the Pirate" were secured from First National, including the pirate hat, window cards and posters. Every available board in Brooklyn was plastered with the one, three, six and twenty-four sheets, and additional car cards were taken not only inside the street cars but on the front and rear ends. All of this material carried billing and play dates for both the picture and the orchestra. The Brooklyn Mark Strand Bulletin was brought out (special four pages) and mailed to the complete mailing list of six thousand, and forty thousand extra ones were distributed one week before the opening date to patrons of the theatre and on the streets. Next, a reproduction was made of First National's trade paper insert, which carried on one side the headline: "Look What We Have For You," and twenty thousand of these were run off and folded so that the above line greeted the eye first. Some of the trade copy of the insert was changed to comply with the occasion. When the newspaper ads were made up an extra appropriation was allowed for larger space in the four Brooklyn dailies and some of the New York papers. Screen trailers were made up and run one week prior to the play date.

For the Victor Orchestra an equally ambitious campaign was worked. The phonograph company readily realized the opportunity for profitable results by cooperation to the fullest extent with the theatre.

The theatre supplied to Victor dealers at cut-rate quantities of tickets to pass on to their customers for cash or as premiums.

Miniature Train In Lobby Sells "Limited Mail"

As a lobby attractor for "The Limited Mail" at the Majestic, Memphis, Manager Jordan erected a miniature electric railway with signal towers and other properties, all of which were supplied without cost by a local electrical dealer. The train ran back and forth among the hills reproduced on small painted "flats" for 10 minutes at intervals of 15 minutes each, the operations being controlled by the cashier in the ticket booth. The display was mounted on a platform with a two-foot wire fence around it, and attracted great attention from grown-ups as well as children.

Stages Cabaret Night For "I'll Show You The Town"

Taking the cue for his exploitation from the big scene in the picture, "I'll Show You the Town," Milt Korach, manager of the New Broadway Theatre in Cleveland, Ohio, dressed his stage like a cabaret and held a three-day jazz carnival. He used three entertainers and trimmed his house with carnival decorations.

Souvenir hats were given to all ladies, and 5,000 balloons and 5,000 samples of Baby Ruth candy, furnished by the Baby Ruth Company, helped to create a festive air.

The marquee was decorated with banners and colored balloons.

Live Stock on Display in "Silent Pal" Lobby

For the showing of "The Silent Pal" at the Majestic, Memphis, Manager Bert Jordan conceived the idea of using animals in the lobby of the theatre during picture's run.

He borrowed a sheep from the local stock yards and placed it in a kennel on one side of the lobby. He also brought his Police dog from home and put him in a kennel on other side of lobby. The unusual display attracted a crowd constantly and was responsible for the splendid business done in spite of unusually bad weather.

The above was augmented by a standard newspaper and bill posting campaign.

Stelling's Ballyhoo Good for Rain or Sunshine

As part of his special campaign to exploit the opening of the vaudeville which is shown at the Plaza Theatre, Asheville, Manager T. L. Stelling used a street worker who carried a sign reading "Let's Go—Matinee 3 P. M. B. F. Keith Vaudeville—Plaza." The same man used the sign "Get Out of the Rain—B. F. Keith Vaudeville, Matinee, Plaza," on rainy days, at which time the "worker" donned a pancho.

YOUR IDEA

PUTTING IT OVER

THE case of exploitation as an applied science is stated by no less authorities on the subject than Edward Bonns and C. E. Carrier in "Putting It Over," published in New York by the Siebel Publishing Corp.

In this industry, the authors need no introduction, for their many accomplishments in picture exploitation are well known. Mr. Bonns as head of the Warner Bros. exploitation department and later with Goldwyn furnished many striking instances in testimony of a keen knowledge of mass psychology and a thorough grasp of a craft which addresses itself to the task of turning the spotlight of public interest on an idea, a personality, an institution, or a commodity. Mr. Carrier's most recent exploit, the conductorship of the "Trackless Train," which traveled across the country to publicize Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures, follows a notable list of exceptional achievements in this field.

The enthusiasm which these men have for their profession, their abounding belief in its power to accomplish its purpose finds expression in "Putting It Over." The work sets out to "sell" exploitation and the fervor with which the task has been approached makes the pages fairly crackle with argument in its behalf. The drum is beaten for exploitation, the "goods" are displayed, the "harker" drives home his points with punch and tumult. Its virtues as a means of promoting any good cause to which it is applied are declared and affirmed in a machine-gun fire of statements, references and examples. From Caesar to Mussolini, the list of famous men who applied the science of exploitation ranges; its success in combating the forces of suspicion and intolerance is declared—"It has opened new markets, encouraged productions, increased immeasurably the world's wealth, and strengthened the brotherhood of Man," the authors state in the opening chapter.

The term is used in the sense which indicates all forms of "public appeals, publicly made"—a blanket which covers advertising, publicity, propaganda and matters of a like nature, the authors explain.

There is a chapter on motion picture exploitation that will be read with great interest by all of the film fraternity to whose notice it may come, and for the business man as well as the showman, advertiser or press agent it holds many facts of interest and many surprising conclusions.

THRILLS vs. SHOCK

IT'S our idea that guaranteeing people thrills is one thing and assuring them of nervous shock is quite another. The death-defying stunts which have been ballyhooed by circuses and theatrical performances were appealing rather because there was an implied assurance that death actually would be defied—cheated entirely, thanks to the skill of the performer—than through any urge in the public breast to witness a public death. The public wants thrills, not shocks.

All this about an ad which we came across in a newspaper for a certain picture, which, according to the critics, and the Check-up in this journal, has real merit as entertainment and as a box office attraction. The ad to which we refer carried a box with the following lines in display type, "You're Insured." There followed a statement to the effect that a certain company had issued a blanket policy insuring patrons of the theatre against loss "resulting from Hysteria" while witnessing a performance of the picture.

Just why the calamity of hysteria should be suggested as a possible outcome of witnessing a picture when there were many angles of direct and certain appeal to be played up in favor of the production, we cannot readily understand. The idea of the insurance policy is good enough, for the tie up probably meant that the company issued printed forms which in themselves made good heralds. But Hysteria!—That seems to us a lamentable business of getting attention at any price—attention unfavorable to the very thing to which the public should be attracted in a way inviting enough to create a desire on their part to attend the performance. And a performance in a theatre is attractive because it furnishes entertainment, serious or amusing or both, but never for the reason that the witness to it might be driven to nervous collapse.

Pyrotechnical display at the Ufa Palast theatre in Berlin, to exploit "Charley's Aunt" (Producers Distributing Corp.).

THE CHARLESTON CRAZE

PICTURE theatres have not been backward about capitalizing the craze of the Charleston. A wide variety of stunts based on this popular dance have been presented at leading theatres throughout the country. Most of these numbers have featured the contest idea, with local steppers giving exhibitions for championship titles and prizes. In St. Louis the Charleston contest went over with a bang, the success of one theatre being duplicated in another as the idea spread.

Though the Charleston has been well done in picture theatres, apparently it is not "all done." From Kansas City, for example, we learn that the staging of Charleston dancing continues to be the best money-making novelty among the suburban houses, despite the fact that the practice has been in vogue several months. Recently Adolph Eisner, manager of the Circle theatre, and A. Wittman, manager of the Strand, "stood them up" with just another "contest."

A "BUSTER BROWN" TIE UP

A NATIONAL tie up with the manufacturers of "Buster Brown" shoes has been arranged by Universal for the series of Century comedies based on the "Buster Brown" comic supplement character. The arrangement has been used advantageously for window displays in several cities and was excellently exploited in Baltimore.

The Bernheimer-Leader Department store in Baltimore, in order to advertise the Buster Shoes rented the Garden Theatre in that city and gave a special picture performance, Saturday morning, October 31, at 10 o'clock, for all children who had obtained tickets from the store. Two reels of Buster Brown films were shown and the dwarf, with his dog, who played Buster Brown and Tige in the original production of "Buster Brown," appeared in person. About 1,000 children attended the show.

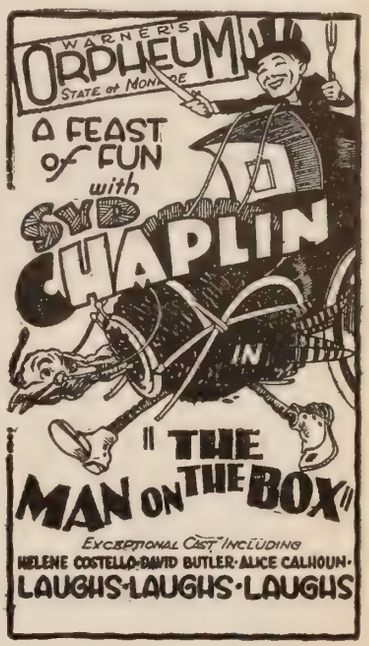
THE ILLUSTRATED PROGRAMS

THE small ad cuts, particularly those issued by Pathe and Educational as "corner block ads," have found a new and interesting use. The Garden Theatre, the Finkelstein and Rubin house in St. Paul is one of several theatres which are reproducing these small cuts as illustrations for their programs.

A small cut, usually of the cartoon type, is set up in conjunction with the billing of the various units which are shown in the leaflet programs at these theatres. The cuts enliven the pages of the program, and the basic idea, that of telling your story with illustrations—pictures—seems admirably in tune with everything the motion picture theatre stands for.

AND OURS

Ingenious and attractive float to ballyhoo First National's "Her Sister From Paris" at the Coliseum theatre, Seattle, Wash. The giant hat box was built of compo board around a Ford chassis. The color was green trimmed with white and cutouts from stock paper were used as decorations. At either side there was a shadow box, which were illuminated at night by baby spots.



ORGAN PRESENTATIONS

HUMOROUS interpretations of popular songs rendered by organists to the accompaniment of scene slides, have been scoring with the public in leading theatres for some time, and the practice of featuring the theatre organist is generally recognized as a wise bit of showmanship. One large theatre cirucit insists that the organist in each theatre be a personality and that efforts be made to popularize him with the patrons of the house.

A novelty in organ numbers comes to notice from the Howard Theatre, Atlanta, Ga., and was devised by Melvin O. Ogden, organist there. Ogden recently offered a specialty number on the Wurlitzer called "A Happy Little Convict in a First-Class Jail." The value of the rendition was enhanced by the fact that the organist wore convict's uniform, with temporary bars between him and the audience. Outside the cell which surrounded Ogden was an usher, dressed in constable's uniform and equipped with a rifle. This little number is reported to have scored a big hit with audiences at the Howard. It offers an idea which promises to be used widely as an occasional novelty.

SEASONAL APPEAL

BY THE simple expedient of substituting a turkey gobbler for the horse used in the press book layout, the Warner's Orpheum theatre, Chicago, accomplished the seasonal appeal in their newspaper displays for "The Man On the Box." The accompanying illustration shows the ad, in general outline a faithful reproduction of the layouts designed by the home office exploitation force and gotten up in mat and cut form and included in the press book material.

Thanksgiving ad on "Man on the Box" used by Warner's Orpheum, Chicago.

The seasonal appeal, so-called, is one which the majority of advertising specialists endorse as a general tenet of good layout, and employ on a scale which proves they have the courage of their own convictions. If the Thanksgiving holiday is recognized in lobby and other displays, why not tie it up with the newspaper displays—especially when this can be accomplished with such simple arrangement as the accompanying specimen illustrates is possible.

In a good proportion of the theatre advertising for the week of November 22, this Thanksgiving spirit was manifest. Many theatres used small sketches featuring Turkeys—on the "hoof" or temptingly prone on a platter—as corner decorations of the displays. The Orpheum ad we show here, however, strikes a greater note of novelty and invention than any others that have come to the notice of this department.

Atmosphere for "Sun-Up," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer feature, was exploited in a colorful frontal display at the American theatre, Evansville, Ind., during the engagement there of the Edmund Goulding production, as illustrated in the photo show above. Colored lights, thrown up behind the mountain effect, imparted an enlivening glow to the scene.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"A Parisian Knight"
(Fox—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

Lots of slapstick fun in this one, with irrepressible Van Bibber as hero, participating in a whirlwind of adventures, through which he bulls his way in his usual boob fashion, but managing to come out on top and win the admiration of the Paris populace. This time he is appointed detective by the police prefect, and has the honor of finding a kidnapped child thrust upon him. Earl Foxe plays the lead and works with plenty of dash and ginger, ably assisted by Florence Gilbert, as heroine, Frank Beale as Colonel Paddock, and receiving adequate support from the rest of the cast. The Apache den stuff, free-for-all fights and lightning getaways are there with the comic thrills, and taken on the whole the picture lines up with the best of the Van Bibber series.

The Cast

Van Bibber.....Earle Foxe
Sylvia.....Florence Gilbert
Colonel Paddock.....Frank Beale
Van Bibber's Chum.....Lynn Cowan
Marie.....Hazel Howell
Gaston.....Bob Klein
Apache Dancer.....Walter Wills

The Story—Van Bibber, arriving in Paris, is made a detective by the police prefect and started off on the trail of a kidnapped child. Van and his party visit a cafe, where he resents attentions of a tough gent to his fiancee. He retires during the all-around scrap which ensues, dons female attire, makes a getaway and accidentally plunges into an Apache den, where he finds the abducted infant, is appointed nurse to it by the Apaches, escapes and delivers up his quarry and receives congratulations of police, populace and fiancee.

Summary—Amusing go-as-you-please, wild action comedy. Lively pace set all the way through. Is full of laughable absurdities and should prove welcome addition to any program.

"The Magic Hour"
(Red Seal-Cranfield & Clarke—One Reel)

Another one for the Xmas season that the youngsters will enjoy. The story is based on the imaginative qualities displayed by all the little folks when they are at play with their toys. There is a lot of trick photography in this picture and the real object takes the place of the miniature in a number of instances. For example—a toy air-plane is sent spinning thru a room and the action is taken up with a real machine.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"The Window Dummy"
(Pathe—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

Ralph Graves is starred in this two reel Mack Sennett comedy directed by Lloyd Bacon and the result is first class entertainment. In this one Graves plays the role of a window dummy whose constant display of high class clothes tempt him to four-flush his way into society. Thelma Parr and Marvin Lobach are also in the cast and the combination of these three can usually be depended upon to furnish good comedy.

Once again, let us mention the excellence of A. H. Giebler's titles.

The Cast

The Window Dummy.....Ralph Graves
The Girl.....Thelma Parr
A Suitor.....Marvin Lobach

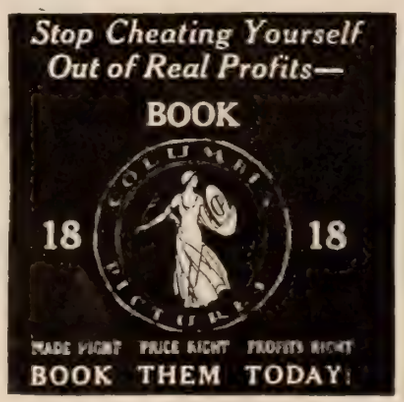
The Story—Ralph, an ambitious young man is making his way in the world by working as a window dummy in a down town store. He does his stuff in a big window in the front of the store where the passers-by stop to watch him display the various types of high grade wearing apparel. With the constant sporting of these fine clothes, Ralph develops a society complex, so when a charming little girl and her father drop in the store to make a purchase, he decides to four-flush his way into their home. On this occasion Ralph is togged up in formal attire and he passes himself off as a society man, thereby managing to receive an invitation to the home for a week-end. Soon after his arrival at the house, Ralph finds that his prospective father-in-law is fond of speculation and so he bluffs an intimate knowledge of the stock market and advises the old man to buy cotton, which results in the bottom falling out of this stock. Marvin, another week-end visitor recognizes Ralph as a "window dummy" and exposes him. However, the market turns, Ralph's tip becomes good and he wins a home.

Summary—Good cast, well directed and has snappy titles. Should certainly please.

"Weak But Willing"
(Educational—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

IT seems too bad a comedian of the ability of Walter Hiers cannot seem to find better vehicles for his talent along comedy lines than that provided by a story and action of this type. It is nothing but the veriest of slapstick and hokum of the type that has been used so much it is hardly suitable for laugh purposes.

It must be said for Hiers he does the best possible with the material at hand, but even that is hardly productive of the desired results under the circumstances. There is the inevitable darky who is scared out of his senses, the dog's kiss being mistaken for the kiss of the maiden by the rivals, and such other hokum as has become all too familiar in these comedies.



The Cast

Walter.....Walter Hiers
Nancy.....Duane Thompson
Nancy's Father.....Jack Duffy
Walter's Rival.....William Irving

A Christie comedy, by Frank Roland Conklin; directed by Archie Mayo; photographed by Gus Peterson and Alex Phillips.

The Story—Walter has a rival in love with Nancy. He can have the girl only by joining the Goats, of which the girl's father is the high exalted ruler. Walter decides to join the order that afternoon. The rival and his gang masquerade as goats and conduct the initiation, in which Walter is handled very roughly. Walter is rescued by the real Goats and after going through a second initiation is then initiated into the girl's family.

Summary—A comedy with an exceptionally good cast, but whose story is hardly up to the standard and whose humor has been too frequently used to be retained longer for laugh purposes.

"All Abroad"
(Fox—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

"All Abroad" is the second of a new series of Fox comedies and is based on "The Married Life of Helen and Warren," by Mabel Herbert Urner. The story has already achieved considerable publicity by being syndicated in a number of newspapers. All the big and little troubles of married life are brought out and the result is pleasing entertainment. Kathryn Perry and Hallam Cooley are the leads. Albert Ray directed and the picture was supervised by George Marshall.

The Cast

Helen.....Kathryn Perry
Warren.....Hallam Cooley
Gaby Renee.....Diana Miller
Elliot.....William Davidson
Maid.....Lucille Ward
Rum Runner.....Pat Harmon

The Story—While Warren is taking a pleasant morning sleep, the door bell rings and under Helen's orders, Warren reluctantly goes to see who it is. Clad in pajamas, he opens the door to receive a telegram and while signing the receipt, Helen's pet cat runs out and down the stairs. Warren follows, and to escape from an embarrassing situation which arises when he meets several inmates of the house, climbs in the dumb-waiter and Helen pulls him up. The telegram is a notice from his firm that he is to take a trip to Europe. Helen makes a scene when Warren informs her that she cannot accompany him. He goes to the office and she, in the meantime with the help of a companion, plans to sail on the same boat. A mix up of orders follow at the office with the result that another member of the firm is to sail instead of Warren. Warren reaches home to find that his wife is on the way to the steamer. He engages a rum-runner's speed boat to follow. Boarding the steamer, Helen finds the other man in Warren's stateroom. While all this is going on, Warren's rum-running pilot is being pursued by a revenue cutter. They finally reach the ship and complications are temporarily brought to a close.

Summary—Based on a story which brings out the many difficulties that pursue a newly married couple, a lot of amusing incidents are presented. Enough gags and thrills are also introduced to provide additional comedy.

"Starvation Blues"
(Pathe—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

Here is a particularly good Hal Roach two reel comedy with Clyde Cook in the leading role. There is considerable slapstick and yet it is of a different brand and any audience will find plenty of opportunities for a flock of laughs. In this one Cook and his partner are wandering musicians who are having a tough time in the matter of making a living. Richard Wallace directed.

The Cast

Clyde Cook, Syd Crossley, Mildred June, Brooks Benedict, Caesare Gravina, Frederick Covert, Fred Kelsey and Tiny Sanford.

The Story—It is Xmas eve and two wandering musicians, one with a big bass horn and the other with a small organ are out in the streets making an effort to pick up a living. They have no food, no home and the night is cold and stormy. In fact it is so cold that Clyde, the bass horn blower, has to play the instrument with a pair of big gloves on his hands. After many unsuccessful attempts to negotiate food and shelter, the pair finally land in a cabaret as entertainers. Everything looks fine but they are kicked out soon after they are taken

Summary—This one will get by anywhere. Clyde Cook is at his best and the supporting cast is excellent.

"Yes, Yes, Babette"

(Educational—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

BOBBY VERNON as the doughboy who goes back to Paris to find the little French Girl he has left on Armistice Day runs into many difficulties and a number of humorous situations, all of which serve to make a fairly interesting picture. It would not suffer any by eliminating some of the horseplay, but altogether it is up to the standard of these Bobby Vernon comedies.

Bobby has surrounded himself with a good cast and Earle Rodney's directorial efforts bring out all there is to the story.

The Cast

Bobby.....Bobby Vernon
His Sweetie.....Frances Lee
The Darling of Paris.....Yola D'Avril
A Near Sighted Apache.....William Irving

A Christie comedy, by Frank Roland Conklin; directed by Earle Rodney; photography by Gus Peterson and Jack Breamer.

The Story—Bobby, the doughboy has left his sweetheart behind in Paris. He returns for her and has the greatest difficulty locating her. In his hunt he runs into the tough White Rat Cafe, where the Darling of Paris becomes enamoured of him, thereby arousing the jealousy of her lover, who threatens Bobby with dire consequences. Bobby escapes, runs into his sweetheart and in the chase the villain at his heels is captured by the police as a badly wanted criminal.

Summary—This is an interesting comedy with a story better than the usual run. The cast is a good one and the picture should be appreciated.

"Capt. Suds"

(Universal-Century—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THERE is little to be recommended in this comedy in which Eddie Gordon is the featured player. It is of the rough slapstick variety in which every conceivable gag is injected in order to get laughs. The story is a mere thread into which the director has cast his alleged humor to piece out the two reels. There is the usual prize fight scene which is characterizing so many of these short comedies, but it is hardly as funny as some of those that have gone before. There is the aerial stuff, too, that in this instance is a little lacking in suspense.

The Story—Eddie is liked by the girl's stepmother, but disliked by her father, who is inclined toward the rival. In an effort to get rid of Eddie, the rival organizes a game of Blind Man's Buff and with Eddie blindfolded leads him to the dizzy heights of a cliff. When Eddie realizes his position he challenges his husky rival to a ring encounter, in which Eddie wins after being outclassed, when a spectator hurls a brick, which flattens the rival, and the girl goes to Eddie.

Summary—A rough slapstick comedy, whose situations and gags are none too humorous.

"Top Hand"

(Universal-Mustang—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

EDMUND COBB is the featured player in this Western, which bears a marked resemblance to those of the same series that have gone before. It is the usual ranch feud among the hands, in which Cobb comes out victorious and wins the girl. One thing can be said with consistency of these Cobb pictures, they are rarely lacking in action. There is an abundance of it in this one and it has all of the usual suspense as well.

The Story—Crab Henshaw and Charley Miller dispute the "top hand" of the outfit at the Sherill ranch since the death of the father, who has willed the holdings to Gerry Sherill. Gerry reprimands "Crab" and reminds him no one is in authority until she says so. The question is settled when Bill Ott a neighboring rancher announces his intention of getting rid of Eel Skin, an untamable horse. The two men agree that the one who can ride him is the top hand. Charley is the winner, but is injured when the animal eventually runs away. "Crab" captures the horse and sells him, accusing Charley, who in the end proves his innocence and wins the girl.

Scenes from the Educational comedy release, "Cheap Skates."

Summary—This is a fast action tale with plenty of suspense, a fairly logical story as these westerns go and well acted.

"Love My Dog"

(Universal-Blue Bird—One Reel)

THIS is another of those short one-reelers in which Arthur Lake is the featured player. Arthur and Eddie are devoted to Isobel, who in turn is more devoted to her dog. Her father orders the boys to get rid of the dog and they do so by placing it in a grip in the rear seat of a strange auto.

With the loss of the dog Isobel becomes hysterical and the boys are then ordered to recover the dog. They find a black dog which they whitewash, but which is revealed as the wrong one when it is given a bath. Isobel's illness takes an acute turn for the worse and she is only cured when the doctor opens his grip and finds not only the lost dog, but a litter of puppies as well. It is a pleasing little comedy.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"A Little Friend of All the World"

(Red Seal-Bray—One Reel)

This is the story of a benevolent youngster who sacrifices his Xmas gifts and turns them into suitable presents for a variety of woodland creatures. Attractive winter time scenes in the woods and close-ups of the big and little animals are shown. All of the creatures are on friendly terms with Little Santa Claus when he feeds them—even a "Wood pussy-cat."

The kids will like this one and in fact its a good all round subject for the holiday season. —EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"From Rags to Britches"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

This is one of Mack Sennett's latest offerings and it is quite up to the usual high standard of product that comes from the Sennett studios. Del Lord did the directing and Billy Bevan and Madeline Hurlock are the leads. The story concerns a gown shop that is left to two heirs—a man and a girl—with the proviso that they do not marry.

Along with the general excellency of Sennett product, there is another point about it that deserves a big mention—and that is A. H. Giebler's brand of titles. They are extremely good—and go a considerable way toward putting these comedies over.

The Cast

Billy Bevan, Madeline Hurlock, Kewpie Morgan, Leo Sulky and Sunshine Hart.

The Story—A gown shop is left to two heirs—a man and a girl—providing they do not marry. If they have married or do, the prosperous shop is to go to another. Billy and Madeline are the two heirs and unfortunately for Madeline, she has become married about the time that the will was made. Billy has been having a hard time making both ends meet and found it necessary to marry his landlady in order to make sure of three square meals a day. When the will is read they both become acquainted with the proviso and to avoid losing the gown shop, decide to keep both of their marriages a secret. However, their mates, both jealous, hover around the shop and do their best to ruin the scheme.

Summary—A good brisk comedy that will please the average audience.

"The Rainbow's End"

(Educational—One Reel)

THIS is perhaps the best of the Pat Sullivan Felix the Cat cartoon series to date. It is a timely effort, as in the progress of hunting the rainbows Felix encounters many of the Mother Goose characters. Some of them he helps while in the quest of his pot of gold, while others help him, it all being in the spirit of the times. There is some fair comedy mixed up with a good story.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

Central Penn. House Tries All-Short Program

Another Central Pennsylvania theatre has been trying the experiment of giving all-comedy short subject programs one-night tryouts periodically. It is the Majestic Theatre, Myerstown, Lebanon County, and the plan thus far has proved a big success.

One of these programs was given on the night of Friday, December 4. It consisted of five Pathe comedies and fables. According to a Lebanon newspaper, "these comedy nights are growing very popular at the Majestic and may be made a permanent feature."

A similar plan was begun as an experiment by the Broad Street Theatre, Harrisburg, and has been meeting with a great deal of success. The short subject programs at the Broad Street are given twice a month, and Manager Feldser is considering increasing them.

Rothstein Lauds Laugh Month

Declares Project Will Crash to Great Success Clear Across United States

NAT G. ROTHSTEIN, director of publicity, advertising and exploitation for Film Booking Offices is loud in his acclaim of the Laugh Month idea and its possibilities of success during the month of January.

Rothstein has the following to say of the project:

"Laugh Month is going to crash its way clear across the continent and back again, up and down, east and west, north and south because the boys behind the movement have their hearts and souls in the idea.

"Already more than 1700 of the leading newspapers throughout the Nation have been communicated with and hundreds have signified their intentions to get behind Laugh Month in every way they can to make it an event that won't soon be forgotten.

"Originally the idea was sort of 'pooh-pooh-ed' as being impossible, unfeasible, not practical—too many obstacles, too much red tape, too many angles and all that rot.

"That didn't make an iota of difference among the boys who started out to put it across, they reasoning that after all things are accomplished by human beings who have faith enough in their proposition, and the boys back of the big idea had faith and will continue to have it long after the doubting Thomases have ceased croaking because of the wonderful results they will be enabled to see and hear about if they have eyes and ears.

"In the New York Morning World of Dec. 4th the famous columnist, Frank Sullivan, used a double column space and about 125 lines deep on the front page of the second section of the World to comment humorously on Laugh Month.

"Hundreds of the leading newspapers throughout the nation will follow suit. The famous King Feature Syndicate has famous nationally known cartoonists and humorists interested in Laugh Month.

"Prominent editors, educators, men in high political stations, clergymen, publicists, and many of the best known men in other walks of life have O. K.'d Laugh Month as a great idea and one conducive to better mental state and better health for the nation in not just one laugh month but a continuity of laughter during all the months, thru the medium of films or whatever other agency these constant laughs can be produced.

"Magazines devoted exclusively to humor have accepted Laugh Month wholeheartedly and will boost it to the limit.

"Publications of all characters that use humorous columns or humorous pages have already accepted this great Laugh Month idea. Already hundreds of letters have been received by the National Laugh Month committee from exhibitors praising the big time showman's idea behind Laugh Month and promising their utmost co-operation.

Leading figures in the film industry have written to the committee and have complimented the idea and the plan. Several of the most prominent theatre circuits have showered praise on it.

"We can't begin to list the names of all who have already boosted the project, proof that not alone those directly interested in its financial success but others, big timers in other walks of life have set their stamp of approval on this big national week of hilarity."

Red Seal Has Many For Laugh Month

Red Seal Pictures Corporation will contribute a number of short features to the Laugh Month program. A large quota of diverse featurettes have been prepared for the period. There will be four issues of the Animated Marcus Hair Cartoons, numbers three, four, five and six. Characters in the third are Lady Astor, David Belasco, Clara K. Young, Billie Burke and Larry Semon. In the fourth are, W. H. Taft, General Joffre, Napoleon, Morgan, Hayakawa, Lenin, La Folette and Galli Curci. The fifth will be comprised of Shakespeare, Barrymore, Bebe Daniels, John Drew, Dorothy Dalton, and Thomas Meighan, while the sixth will contain Bryan, Briand, Josephus Daniels, Lloyd George, Roosevelt, Jr., Roosevelt, Sr., Clemanceau and Cardinal Mercier.

Two of the "Ko-Ko Song Car-Tune" releases will be "Dixie," and "Sailing." Three Out of the Inkwells will be "Ko-Ko Packs Up," "Ko-Ko Steps Out," and "Ko-Ko Eats."

Also, such specials as "Fish For Two" and "Soul of the Cypress," both Gems of the Screen. Two issues of the highly entertaining Marvels of Motion: "D," and "E," two issues of Film Facts: "H" and "I"; and the "A" and "B" issues of Reelviews and Searchlights are also included for release during this month.

"Laugh Month" Drive in Full Swing

Committee Says Publicists, Exhibitors And Industry As A Whole Support Movement To Popularize Short Features

THE committee in charge of the "Laugh Month" drive, sponsored by the Short Features Advertising Association, is in a position to report the most encouraging success of efforts to popularize nationally the movement in favor of the comedies, novelties, news reels and other pictures of three reels or less in length.

Every effort has been made to give a general appeal to the movement. A broadside to exhibitors to be followed by a press sheet containing ideas for "putting it over" were the main items of the budget. The aid of accessory manufacturers was to be sought in the preparation of posters, banners, pennants, slides, trailers, buttons and advertising cuts and mats.

At the end of three weeks the committee reports to the industry—"progress." The movement to make January an industry affair has broadened. It has been taken up all over the country by newspapers, magazines and prominent individuals. Exhibitors, individually and "en circuit" have responded wholeheartedly.

The New York daily newspapers—in which no amount of money could buy news space—have co-operated splendidly. The main editorial writers and columnists have co-operated to the limit. A suggestion of the scope and the possibilities of the idea was all they needed and they responded. Arthur Brisbane, probably the best known editorial writer in America if not in the world, in his column, "To-day" says, "Why wait for January? Every month is laugh month in the United States." Frank Sullivan, a feature writer of note, gave his entire space to the subject in one article. "F. P. A." whose "Conning Tower" has tremendous circulation devoted his whole column to elaborating the idea in the Sunday edition.

"The Fun Shop" with syndicate circulation in over one hundred large newspapers, says, through Maxson F. Judell, its editor, "A good laugh is Nature's care for many an ill."

The newspapers in Los Angeles heard of the idea from the local exchange managers and immediately set their advertising staffs to work on two two-page spreads. The first will be devoted to the theatres, featuring Laugh Month, and the second, to appear two weeks later, to featuring the comedy stars.

By no means the least of those co-operating in the King Features Syndicate. With 180 features, including many of the best known comic strips and cartoonists in the world, and with many of the best known feature writers, this organization is in thorough accord with the plan. It is preparing to join forces with the National Laugh Month Committee and the added impetus which this will give will be seen throughout the entire country.

The idea has spread to England. Already suggestions have been made to the trade press of the "tight little isle" for a similar campaign and in due time we shall hear the Laugh Month echo come rolling back from across the Atlantic.

Theatre men everywhere are forming special committees to push the plan vigorously. In Atlantic City the group that handled "Greater Movie Season" has been rebuilt and expect to put it over with a bang. In Waterloo, Iowa, Alexander Frank, president of the Frank Amusement Company, has called a meeting of all the interested people in Waterloo, Cedar Rapids and Clinton, Iowa. In his letter to New York headquarters he says, "This innovation should prove a great stimulant for the month of January. As a matter of fact, with proper exploitation, it should show still greater results than "Greater Movie Season!"

On the matter of accessories the Sweeney Lithograph Company, who made the posters, banners and pennants, report that practically half the first printing of these accessories have been ordered. The broadsides have all been mailed to exhibitors with the opening announcement and these will be followed within a week by the press sheet.

Adding to the already long list of theatres and circuits which have previously been reported as having joined the National Laugh Month movement, reports received by the National Laugh Month Committee indicate that by the new year every large and small house in the country will be in line.

Frank W. Buehler, managing director of the Stanley Company of America, writes from Philadelphia: "We are getting back of this Laugh Month thing and will do all that we can to put it across. We are with you one hundred per cent."

The exchange managers of Dallas, Texas, are meeting and formulating plans to line up the houses in their territory.

In Kansas City the following theatres have already promised to join the movement: Main Street, Liberty, Isis, and Newman-Royal Theatres.

From Atlanta, Ga., come reports that the local district managers of Famous, Loew's, Universal (Florida) and other circuits promise complete co-operation and are laying their plans accordingly.

Universal's home office report that the following theatres have wired in that they are going to "whoop 'er up" for Laugh Month and promise complete co-operation: Capital Theatre, Dallas, Texas; Alhambra, Milwaukee, Wis.; America, Denver, Colo.; Broadway Strand, Detroit, Mich.; Cameo, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Cameo, Los An-

Cite Liberal Rules of Contest

"Laugh Month" Committee Emphasize That All Exhibitors And Theatre Employees Are Eligible

THE National Laugh Month Committee, conducting the campaign to make January a four-week comedy carnival, is laying particular emphasis on the fact that all exhibitors or exhibitor employees handling exploitation work are eligible to enter the contest for the best exploitation campaign tying up with Laugh Month. Cash awards totaling $850.00 are to be given to the winners of the contest, $100.00 being awarded as the first prize for the best campaign each week in January. Awards will be made by a jury composed of the editors-in-chief of six national motion picture trade publications.

The rules for the contest are so liberal that any exhibitor from the largest to the smallest has an equal chance to win one of the weekly cash prizes, for the judges in considering the entries in the contest will take into account the size and class of theatre, population of the town and other conditions under which each exhibitor works. The smallest exhibitor, who is limited in his exploitation to a lobby display and such tie-ups and ballyhoos as he can conduct in his own neighborhood with little or no expense, will have just as good a chance at the cash prizes—if his exploitation work shows ingenuity and real showmanship—as the biggest metropolitan first-run theatre which has a large appropriation for billboards, newspaper advertising and all other forms of publicity.

The periods for which the prizes will be offered are January 1 to January 9, January 9 to January 16, January 16 to January 23, January 23 to January 31. All entries for each prize award period must be delivered to the Laugh Month Committee, 218 West 42nd St., New York City, within two weeks of the closing date for that period.

Comedies Share Pathe Honors

Hal Roach, Mack Sennett Productions Head Releases for December 20th

HAL ROACH and Mack Sennett two-reel comedies divide the honors at the top of the Pathe short subject release schedule for the week of December 20th. Alice Day appears in "Hotsy Totsy," produced by Sennett, and Charley Chase will be seen in the Roach production, "His Wooden Wedding."

Other subjects on the week's program include "Tol'able Romeo," a Roach single reeler, chapter three of the serial, "The Green Archer;" "The English Channel Swim," one of "Aesop's Film Fables;" Pathe Review No. 51 and two issues of Pathe News and "Topics of the Day."

Katherine Grant has the leading feminine role opposite Chase in "His Wooden Wedding," with Gale Henry, Fred De Silva and John Cossar in the supporting cast. Leo McCarey directed.

Eugenia Gilbert, Danny O'Shea, Barney Helleum and Kalla Pasha support Alice Day in "Hotsy Totsy," which was directed by Alf Goulding. "Tol'able Romeo," the single reeler was directed by Jess Robbins.

"In the Enemy's Stronghold" is the third chapter of the new Pathe serial "The Green Archer," adapted by Frank Leon Smith from the Edgar Wallace novel. Allene Ray and Walter Miller are the leads.

Pathe Review No. 51 presents: "The Shrine of the Faithful," the ancient capitol of Japan; "American Wild Flowers," a distinctive Pathe-color series produced by the time-lapse camera by Arthur C. Pillsbury of Yosemite National Park: and "The Bee's Daily Bread," one of the L. H. Tolhurst "Magic Eye" series of microscopic studies.

"The English Channel Swim" is the Paul Terry creation of "Aesop's Film Fables."

Cleveland Exhibitors Are Supporting Laugh Month

CLEVELAND exhibitors are showing enthusiasm over Laugh Month and helping to put it over by booking two and three times as many comedies for January as they have been using. Many Cleveland neighborhood houses have been in the habit of offering double feature bills for certain days of the week. A great number of these exhibitors have substituted extra comedies for the double feature. Some of them have booked two, and others have booked three, as special feature attractions to show on the nights that have been previously devoted to two features.

Walter Hiers Laugh Month Comedy Set

"Weak But Willing" is the Walter Hiers comedy scheduled for release by Educational on their augh Month program. The release date is January 31st.

Special Drives for Laugh Month

In St. Louis, the managers of the companies associated with the committee's activities are formulating plans which will be announced on completion.

From Omaha come promises of a tie-up from the following theatres: Rialto, Strand, North Star, and Hamilton Theatres.

Louisville, Ky., is right in line with Keith's Rialto, Keith's Majestic, Kentucky, Louisville, Kentucky Thea. Lexington, taking up the movement.

Atlantic City, home of beauty pageants, is thoroughly organized. As we go to press, word is received that Eddie O'Keefe, managing director ofthe City Square Theatre, has been appointed general manager of the Laugh Month Committee in that city. This means that every theatre in the famous seashore resort will put on a drive to entertain visitors with flocks of laughs during Laugh Month. A complete list is not available, but it means one hundred per cent in that territory.

Laugh Month Approved by Joe Seider

JOSEPH M. SEIDER, business manager of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, has added his endorsement to National Laugh Month, in the following communication to Short Features Advertising Association.

"It is superfluous for me to add my endorsement to the National Laugh Month idea.

"The Short Subject has come into its own.

"The only problem in this relation, as I see it, is the method of bringing the realization of this fact to the theatre owner. Some distributors of Short Subjects have recently added a clause to their contracts in which the exhibitor agrees to give equal space to that given to the feature, for the Short Subject.

"It is my conviction that 'National Laugh Month' for the purpose of educating the motion picture forces, to the value of the Short Feature is the better plan, and which should and will bring the desired and merited result."

Pathe Issues Serial Handbook

E. O. Brooks, Serial Sales Manager, Author Of Work On Value Of Chapter Plays

"THE Serial Idea" is the title of a handbook just issued by E. Oswald Brooks, serial sales manager of Pathe. The work is concerned with presenting facts of interest to the industry at large and of particular value to exhibitors, as it includes a thorough discussion of methods by which a regular attendance can be built with serial attractions.

Citing the purely human trait of wishing to know what is going to happen next week, or in the future, Mr. Brooks points to the leading fiction magazines as proof of this universal desire to become acquainted with what is going to transpire next.

"The application of the serial idea to the motion picture screen," says Brooks, "must, in order to be fully successful, follow exactly along the lines of its application in the popular weekly and monthly magazines and newspapers. In other words it must be inaugurated and maintained as a steady policy."

Discussing the serial policy and its results, as proven by records, Brooks continues:

"Each successive serial will gradually build up a regular serial clientele for that theatre. The first serial played may not please all classes but it most surely will please a large following. The next serial may appeal to a different class of patrons plus the steady customers created with the first serial. The third serial will again attract even more patrons. And so on, with snowball-like growth, until by the time the first year of serials is completed the theatre will have a steady, regular and guaranteed weekly income on the day or days it presents its serial programs."

Report Short Product Is Gaining In Prestige

ACCORDING to reports of Pathe field men to their home office, the short features are receiving better advertising support from exhibitors generally. The report, which is concerned with the eastern cities, shows that the practice of giving the shorts the advantages of thorough exploitation is becoming more general. In commenting on the survey which Pathe has made, S. Barret McCormick, director of exploitation for the company says:

"The titles of the comedies as well as the name of the star are well displayed while the special "cornerblock" illustrated newspaper ads on Pathe comedies are finding their way into print in increasing numbers. Special displays of various kinds are found on a majority of theatre fronts of key houses, novelties are distributed to the public and the theatre programs contain interesting material dealing with the shorts."

Century Comedies Signs School Girl

Stern Brothers, producers of Century Comedies for Universal release have signed Viola Carleton, a New York school girl, for comedy roles in their two-reelers. A screen test was recently made of the young girl and it was found she was a perfect type. She is said to have a remarkable flare for comedy.

"Mummy Love" Will Have Elaborate Sets

Elaborate sets will feature "Mummy Love," a two-reel Blue Ribbon comedy with Neely Edwards and Alice Ardell, which Joe Rock is producing as a Standard Cinema release through F. B. O. Marcel Perez is directing. Among the larger sets are a magnificent palace and court yard, catacombs and mummy caves and a desert scene.

Rotund Comedians Start "In the Air"

Slim Summerville has started direction of "In the Air," a Joe Rock-Standard comedy for F. B. O., featuring "Fat" Carr," "Kewpie" Ross and "Fatty" Alexander. Lois Boyd is playing opposite the trio of rotund comedians.

Jimmie Adams Comedy Title Changed

Educational Film Exchanges has changed the title on the Jimmie Adams comedy scheduled for release during Laugh Month. Made under the title of "A Busy Bum," the picture has been changed to "For Sadie's Sake." The release date is January 1st.

Roach Stars Prominent in Laugh Month

HAL ROACH comedians will figure prominently during Laugh Month as the producer is keeping five units going at top speed in new productions. Clyde Cook, Charley Chase, Glenn Tryon, "Hal Roach" and "Our Gang" comedies will be released as a part of the Laugh Month program.

Chase has just completed a comedy in which he was supported by Mildred Harris, Vivian Oakland and Syd Crossley. With director Leo McCarey, the comedian is now preparing his next vehicle. Fred Guiol is completing a Glenn Tryon comedy with a cast that includes Katherine Grant, Sue O'Neil, Charlotte Mineau, "Rube" Clifford, Helen Gilmore, Bobby Young, Tiny Sandford and Al Hallett.

Seven Sinners

(Warner Brothers—6826 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A HILARIOUS crook yarn, with just enough melo punches to snap over a thrill now and then, but for the most part reveling in farcical situations that are wildly improbable and irresistibly funny. The main idea is the crowding together of a bunch of crooks, each intent on looting a mansion left unguarded by private watchmen; hunting in couples, and single-handed, and the complications which arise when they mistake each other for legitimate servants, guests and proprietor in turn. Their troubles increase when one of them goes to bed with scarlet fever and the house is quarantined. It's all beautifully absurd, but a sure laughing stimulant and warranted to put any audience in good humor. The action is speedy throughout, Lewis Milestone, making his debut as director, shows remarkable skill.

THEME. Crook farce-melodrama. Thieves decide to loot unguarded mansion, working in separate teams, mistake each other for servants, guests, etc., and have variety of weird experiences.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The swift action, good acting of cast, thrills and well developed and sustained farcical atmosphere. The romance lure.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Boost as crook story combining melodrama with farce comedy and a sure cure for the blues. Every member of the cast is worth mentioning.

DRAWING POWER. Has general audience appeal, should make good anywhere.

SUMMARY. This one will get the laughs and hand 'em some thrills besides. A cracking good farce-melo, with crook atmosphere and funny complications.

Seven Sinners (Warner Bros.)
PRESS NOTICE

"SEVEN SINNERS", one of the merriest crook farce melodramas ever screened, is scheduled for its premier local showing at the ———— Theatre on ————. A mixture of thrills, romance and laughter, this film records the tangled adventures of a bunch of thieves, working separately and in couples, who raid an unguarded Long Island mansion and get mixed up in all sorts of complications. An unusual picture, and one in which pretty Marie Prevost and Clive Brook won golden opinions from critics in general for their fine work in the leading roles.

John Patrick, Charles Conklin, Claude Gillingwater and Mathilde Brundage are seen in important parts.

CATCH LINES

They led crooked lives, but merry ones, with a laugh a minute! A whirlwind of mirth shut up in a strange household!

The Desert's Price

(Fox—5709 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THEY'E managed to give the old Western formula plot some lively twists and turns in this picture, with the result that there's a better story and more genuine human interest than is usually found in features of the sort. It's a dandy vehicle for Buck Jones and his numerous admirers will undoubtedly be pleased with their favorite's work. Even in localities where Buck may not be so well known, but fast-action Westerners are in demand, "The Desert's Price" should register A. 1. at the box office and create a new following for the star. Buck and his celebrated white hoss are ever in evidence, Mr. Jones rides, scraps and plays the fond lover with equal energy, Florence Gilbert and Edna Marion are effective in the main feminine roles, and Montagu Love a fine specimen of a hardy scowling villain. The thrills crackle across like machine-gun bullets, what with rough-and-tumble fisticuffs and a near-lynching incident, and a good climax is attained.

THEME. Western melodrama. Treats of two girls left alone on ranch, befriended by hero, whom they first view as foe, but learn to appreciate at his true worth.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Fine scenic effects. Lightning action. Buck Jones' athletic stunts, riding feats. Romantic development. Well maintained suspense. Good combat stuff.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Buck Jones. Bill as virile Westerner with unusually interesting story. Play up riding, fighting and attempted lynching scenes.

DRAWING POWER. Knockout wherever Buck is popular, good in any section where Westerners are favored.

SUMMARY. Smart action Westerner, lots of melo thrills, love interest, particularly strong in scenic values. Buck Jones at his best.

THE CAST

Wils McCann ..... Buck Jones

PRESS NOTICE

BUCK JONES in "The Desert's Price," a Western melodrama aglow with thrills, romantic interest and lightning action, is the big screen drawing-card at the ———— Theatre on ————. This is one of Buck's best pictures in which that dauntless rider and top-notch battler of filmland fills the role of Wils McCann, who befriends two lonely girls running a sheep-ranch against the schemes of Jim Martin and the latter's cowboys. A bully picture crammed with exciting situations.

A great cast in support, including Montague Love, Florence Gilbert, Edna Marion, Ernest Butterworth, Arthur Houseman, Carl Stockdale, and other popular screen lights.

CATCH LINES

He was secretly her best friend, but she blamed him for all the villain's misdeeds. When the clouds thickened he revealed himself as her champion and got his reward. A Buck Jones virile Western thriller!

Tonio, Son of the Sierras

(Davis Distributing Div.—5000 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

SHOULD give satisfaction as a program attraction. Like all of General Charles King's stories, the plot deals with pioneer days in the West, when the Indians frequently went on the warpath, made matters interesting for the widely scattered settler families and kept U. S. troops constantly on the jump attending to the "hostiles'" pernicious activities. These yarns all have a strong family resemblance, but never lack spirited action or fail to develop a certain amount of sentimental interest, and this film holds its own with the best of its type in these important respects. The love angle is complicated by the rivalry of two young lieutenants for the same girl, another favorite device of the author, with the tale partly hinging on the question of whether Tonio, an only Indian scout, is faithful to Uncle Sam, or aiding the redskins. Ben Wilson, as the hero, and Neva Gerber, as the girl in the case, give excellent performances, Chief Yowlache makes a good impression in the Tonio role and the support is adequate.

THEME. Melodrama of pioneer West and Indian days. Visualizes attacks by redskins and rivalry between two U. S. officers for love of Post Commandant's daughter.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Assaults of Indians on ranch and fort. Scene where hero is wounded. Tonio's return and death. Romantic issue, murder mystery. Climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber. Bill as stirring tale of pioneer days in West. Stress Indian battles and sentimental touches.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable program attraction for any house where action and thrill stuff holds patrons.

SUMMARY. A typical General Charles King story of bygone times in West when Indians were continually on warpath. Puts over some good melo punches and develops satisfactory love interest.

THE CAST

Lieutenant Richard Harris	Ben Wilson
Evelyn Archer	Neva Gerber
Tonio	Chief Yowlache
Colonel Archer	Jim Welch
Lieutenant Willett	Bob Walker

PRESS NOTICE

LIFE on the Western plains in the old days when the Indians ran wild and the white man's rifle was his best friend, is depicted in "Tonio, Son of the Sierras," a colorful, melodramatic romance starring Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber. This picture comes to the screen of the ——— Theatre on ———. The hero is a young U. S. officer who loves the daughter of the commandant of the fort where he is stationed, and has a brother-officer for his bitter rival. The film is intensely exciting, the Indian battles are wonders of realism and suspense, and a happy ending is attained.

Among those playing important roles in support are Jim Welch, Ruth Royce, Fay Adams.

CATCH LINES

Pioneer days, the lonely U. S. Army forts, the tribes of hostile Indians watching their opportunity to slay the hated white men!

Sally, Irene and Mary

(Metro-Goldwyn—5564 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

DESPITE the handicap of an obvious plot the finish of which any fan that is "movie-wise" can easily foretell, director Edmund Goulding has made a fairly entertaining picture out of the musical comedy by Edward Dowling, credited with a year's run on Broadway not so long ago. The feature leans more to the melodramatic side of things than the amusing, although comedy relief is not lacking, the fun mostly taking place in the Finnigan Flats, with Irish occupants thereof wrangling incessantly; and backstage views are shown which will no doubt interest the average patron, who is always attracted by peeps behind the scenes. Of the three principal characters, chorus girls engaged in gold-digging pursuits along the Great White Way and its environs, one meets death in an auto wreck, with the result that the heroine has a scare thrown into her and decides to settle down and marry humble Jimmy Dugan, her faithful swain. Sally O'Neill, Constance Bennett and Joan Crawford do very well as the fluttering moths around the candle of risky pleasures, and William Haines is O. K. as honest Jimmy.

THEME. Comedy-melodrama. Depicts lives of three chorus girls who sport gaily in the city's night life, heroine finally settling down with humble lover.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Tenement house scenes, backstage views, shot of stage performance and theatre audience. The grade-crossing accident. Sentimental and humorous touches.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Tell patrons play was big Broadway success. Bill as intimate tale of chorus girls' lives. Feature Constance Bennett, Joan Crawford, Sally O'Neill.

DRAWING POWER. Ought to do good business in the average house.

SUMMARY. Adequate entertainment. Offers a lot of attractive backstage stuff, mixes sentiment, melodrama and comedy. Chorus girl angle will please many fans.

THE CAST

Sally	Constance Bennett
Irene	Joan Crawford
Mary	Sally O'Neill
Jimmy Dugan	William Haines
Glen Nestor	Douglas Gilmore
Marcus Morton	Henry Kolker
Mrs. Dugan	Kate Price

Adapted from Musical Comedy by Edward Dowling. Director, Edmund Goulding.

SYNOPSIS. Sally, Irene and Mary graduate from New York's East Side to the stage as chorus girls. Mary's boy playmate, Jimmy Dugan, becomes a successful plumber. The three girl chums have a merry time leading the night life of Broadway and attract numerous admirers. Finally Irene, who has a millionaire lover, is killed in an automobile wreck. In the end, Mary refuses an enticing offer o marriage and goes back to her childhood sweetheart, Jimmy.

PRESS NOTICE

IF you enjoy a peep behind the scenes in stageland, don't miss "Sally, Irene and Mary," the lively comedy-melodrama which comes to the screen of the ——— Theatre on ———. This unusual picture depicts the lives of three chorus girls, born on New York's grimy East Side, who become Broadway butterflies and indulge in all the tinsel pleasures of the Great White Way. One, the heroine, finally wearies of the stage and its temptations, and weds her childhood sweetheart, Sally O'Neill, Joan Crawford and Constance Bennett play the three principal feminine roles, with William Haines as the loyal lover.

CATCH LINES

The Broadway night life of three chorus girls, all the glamor and perils of the Great White Way, romance, tragedy, comedy, thrills; a picture de luxe that will grip and hold you from beginning to end.

Steppin' Out

(Columbia Picture Corp.—5221 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A BRIGHT and breezy comedy, studded with whimsical situations in which the farcical element reigns supreme, "Steppin' Out" offers exceedingly good entertainment and should score satisfactory box office results wherever it is shown. It travels along at a merry clip from first to last, despite its manifold complications, smooth continuity renders the task of following the plot an easy one and it can safely be asserted that there isn't a dull moment in the entire five reels. Dorothy Revier, heretofore best known to the fans for her work in dramatic roles, makes a pronounced hit in the vivacious comedy part of pert Daisy Moran, Ford Sterling shines as the convivially inclined John Durant, Tom Rickett's impersonation of the middle-aged husband who gets in such a tangle when he goes jazzing around with his friends deserves unlimited praise and the support is excellent. The feature is skillfully directed and well photographed, the cabaret scenes and jazz stuff being especially colorful.

THEME. Farce comedy. Treats of domestic entanglements, when innocent hubby is drawn into night-about-town complications by jovial business associate.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The rapid action, ingeniously woven situations, farcical developments and romantic windup.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Dorothy Revier and Ford Sterling. Bill as amusing comedy, with jazz and cabaret atmosphere, domestic tangles and farcical hits.

DRAWING POWER. Should win wherever high-speed farce holds the patrons.

SUMMARY. Brisk comedy, well acted and directed, action fast, farce predominant, colorful cabaret episodes, prettily photographed, a good card for the average house.

THE CAST

Daisy Moran	Dorothy Revier
John Durant	Ford Sterling
Henry Brodman, Jr	Robert Agnew
Mrs. John Durant	Cissy Fitzgerald
Mrs. Henry Brodman	Ethel Wales
Henry Brodman	Tom Ricketts
Sergeant	Harry Lorraine

PRESS NOTICE

AN up-to-date, dizzily merry farce comedy, "Steppin' Out," starring Dorothy Revier and Ford Sterling, is the leading screen attraction offered by the ——— Theatre on ———. The story deals with the entanglement in which a middle-aged husband finds himself as a result of spending a "nightout" with a couple of acquaintances, who mistake his pretty secretary for his wife. A series of wild complications follow, including cabaret raid which lands some of the party in jail. In the end the winsome secretary turns out to be his son's wife, whom he has hitherto refused to meet or acknowledge and all ends well.

Tom Ricketts and Cissy Fitzgerald appear in important roles.

CATCH LINES

A riot of fun, jazz and merry action. This husband stepped out for a night about town, for purely business reasons, but the complications that followed were awful. Don't miss the laughing hit of the year!

Lady Windermere's Fan

(Warner Brothers—7816 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

ANOTHER addition to the list of Director Ernst Lubitschs' dazzlingly artistic screen triumphs. It is no small feat to transpose an Oscar Wilde drama, chiefly remarkable for the epigrammatic brilliancy of its dialogue, into a film of tremendous heart appeal and sympathetic lure. Yet this is just what Mr. Lubitsch, with the loyal co-operation of a talented cast, has accomplished. The unmistakable Lubitsch touch is in evidence in the building up of suspense, clever poising of his principals, sharp flashes of ironical humor and the perfect ease with which impending tragedy merges smoothly and naturally into a happy ending. Screen plays dealing with the elite of society frequently fail in mass-appeal because of artificial suggestion in their surroundings. There is no such handicap here. The characters that move against the deftly woven society backgrounds are intensely human and, interpreted by a splendid cast of players, hold a magical sway over the spectator's emotion. All are excellent, with outstanding performances contributed by Irene Rich and May McAvoy.

THEME. Society drama. Lady Windermere believes her mother to be dead. Latter returns, is banned by society for past indiscretions, attends daughter's party, later sacrifices herself to save Lady Windermere's reputation, but weds happily.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Excellent direction. Good acting of principals and support. Brilliant society atmosphere, heart interest appeal. Clever climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Irene Rich and May McAvoy. Tie up with stores on Wilde play published in book form. Bill as vivid society drama with heart appeal.

DRAWING POWER. Has general audience lure, good for any house.

SUMMARY. Director Lubitsch scores again, presenting a splendidly acted and beautifully photographed film version of Oscar Wilde's play. Has intense emotional appeal.

THE CAST

Mrs. Erlynne	Irene Rich
Lady Windermere	May McAvoy
Lord Darlington	Ronald Colman
Lord Windermere	Bert Lytell
Lord Augustus	Edward Martindel
Duchess	Helen Dunbar
Duchess	Billie Bennett

Author, Oscar Wilde. Director, Ernst Lubitsch. Photographed by Charles van Enger.

SYNOPSIS. Lady Windermere believes her mother is dead. Latter turns up as Mrs. Erlynne. Lady Windermere suspects intrigue. Her suspicions grow when Mrs. Erlynne comes uninvited to her reception. Piqued, Lady Windermere becomes involved with Lord Darlington and visits his apartment. Mrs. Erlynne begs her to return home. They hide when Lord Windermere arrives. He sees wife's fan and accuses Darlington. Mrs. Erlynne appears, claiming she borrowed the fan. The Windermeres are reconciled. Lord Augustus weds Mrs. Erlynne.

PRESS NOTICE

RONALD COLMAN, Irene Rich and May McAvoy are the featured players in "Lady Windermere's Fan," an adaptation of Oscar Wilde's famous society drama, which comes to the screen of the ——— Theatre on ———. This brilliant play, directed by Ernst Lubitsch, is a wonder of emotional appeal and tense heart interest. The plot hinges on the return of Lady Windermere's mother, whom her daughter believes to be dead, to London. Lady Windermere suspects her husband of fondness for the newcomer and in revenge receives the attentions of a former suitor. She is saved from ruin by her mother's self-sacrifice.

CATCH LINES

Feathery and light, colorful and flirtatious; sparkling with gorgeous gems of wit, an emotional masterpiece! The story of the most charming and sophisticated lady in London and the most dangerous to men!

The Outlaw's Daughter

(Universal—4423 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

JOSIE SEDGWICK makes her debut as a Western star in this picture and amply justifies her selection as a bold rider and daring stunt performer. She easily holds her own with the best of feminine performers in these respects and gives an appealing performance into the bargain. The plot is sheer melodrama, with the romantic interest looming larger than in most films of this type. There is no sign of padding, director Jack O'Brien having wisely kept the feature within the five reel limit, and there are thrill punches and fast action enough to please all lovers of wild adventure yarns. The climax is a stunner, with hero and villain fighting savagely in an aerial bucket suspended at a dizzy altitude, and Josie sliding down on top of the combatants, saving her lover and sending his opponent toppling downward to death. Edward Hearne does good work in the hero part of Jim King, the mining camp views are well photographed, the lighting is excellent and support O. K.

THEME. Western melo. Heroine, outlaw's daughter, finds protector in Jim King, when she gets into tangle trying to avenge father's death. She turns upon bandit confederates, fights against them, saves Jim's life and agrees to wed him.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Star's fine horsemanship and agile stunts. Romantic lure. Gun battles. Big punch scene where heroine intervenes in scrap between hero and villain.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Josie Sedgkick's rise to stardom. Fans already know her as widely featured player. Bill as exciting Western melo with great climax.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable wherever exciting Westerns hold the crowd.

SUMMARY. Offers Josie Sedgwick as new Western star. Is fast, thrilling melo, leading lady's sensational riding feats will make 'em sit up and take notice.

THE CAST

Flora Dale	Josie Sedgwick
Jim King	Edward Hearne
Slim Cole	Robert Walker
Steven Dale	Jack Gavin
Bookkeeper	Harry Todd
Bill	Ben Corbett
Sheriff	Bob Burns

Author, Harold Shumate. Director, Jack O'Brien. Photographed by Benny Kline.

SYNOPSIS. Flora Dale, outlaw's daughter, is wounded when bandit Cole fires at but misses Jim King, is taken care of by latter and works in his office. She tricks Cole out of stolen money and races to the King mine, where bandits and miners battle. Jim and Cole fight while suspended in an aerial bucket, Flora slides down a sheave on top of the combatants, saving Jim and toppling Cole over to his death. Jim and Flora are united.

PRESS NOTICE

JOSIE SEDGWICK, Universal's new Western star, makes her debut as a leading light of the screen in "The Outlaw's Daughter," which comes to the ——— Theatre on ———. She is seen as a girl whom fate has thrown in with bandits, rescued by hero Jim King, turning on her former confederates, and saving Jim's life at the finish. Miss Sedgwick's daring riding feats and wonderful athletic stunts are such as to keep an audience at high tension throughout the picture, which is also appealing from the sentimental angle and beautifully photographed.

Edward Hearne gives a fine performance as the hero, supported by Robert Walker, Jack Gavin, Harry Todd, Ben Corbett and other favorite players.

CATCH LINES

The Sea Wolf

(Ralph Ince Prod.—7500 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THIS screen version of Jack London's vivid yarn of life aboard a hell-ship with a human brute for skipper will surely catch the fancy of all who delight in starkly frank melodrama served up red-hot without any aesthetic trimmings. Some movie-goers, and among these a large percentage of feminine patrons, are likely to find the picture's savage realism nerve-racking and perhaps a trifle revolting. It's strong meat, all right, but wonderfully well produced and ranks first-grade from the artistic angle. Ralphe Ince's portrayal of Wolf Larsen is a masterly bit of work, in fact Mr. Ince wears a double laurel crown, for he has also directed the feature with consummate skill. There are thrills innumerable, unlimited suspense, with romance moulded into a happy finish. Theodore Von Eltz plays the hero well, although that much-kicked-about gent is too spineless a creature to win much sympathy. Claire Adams is an attractive and appealing heroine, and the support O. K. The photography is excellent throughout.

THEME. Marine melodrama. Hero aboard seal-poaching schooner, where fate has cast him, suffers manifold hardships under sway of brutal captain, Wolf Larsen, falls in love with Maud Brewster, a waif picked up at sea. Larsen finally dies and they escape.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Beautiful marine scenes. Vividly realistic atmosphere. Fights aboard hell-ship. Ralph Ince's fine acting and direction.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Tie up with book stores on London's novel, which still has large sale. Feature Ralph Ince. Bill as luridly exciting sea melodrama.

DRAWING POWER. If your patrons want the real, undiluted red-blood stuff, this will suit them. May prove too savagely realistic for some folks.

SUMMARY. Has certain appeal for lovers of melodrama "in the raw," with its unhampered brutalities and ferocious thrills. Splendidly acted and directed.

THE CAST

Wolf Larsen	Ralph Ince
Maud Brewster	Claire Adams
Humphrey Van Weyden	Theodore Von Eltz
Johansen	Mitchell Lewis
Cook	Snitz Edwards

Author, Jack London. Director, Ralph Ince. Photographed by J. C. Taylor.

SYNOPSIS. Humphrey Van Weyden is picked up at sea by the Ghost, seal-poaching schooner. Her captain is Wolf Larsen, an intellectual monstrosity of great strength and brutal tendencies. Van Weyden is compelled to serve as cook's assistant and subjected to hideous hardships. Maud Brewster, a young girl, is brought aboard from a drifting boat, survivor of a wreck. She and Van Weyden fall in love. After a succession of terrible adventures on the hell-ship, Larsen meets his end when his vessel burns. The lovers are rescued and return home.

What Happened to Jones

(Universal Jewel—6700 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A RIP-ROARING farce and perfect riot of laughs from start to finish, this feature is fully entitled to rank in the select brotherhood of films listed under the Jewel brand. Any exhibitor booking it can rest assured box office receipts will pile up to gratifying figures and his patrons go home convinced they have had their money's worth and something over. What makes this picture loom superior to the average farce is its high quality of maintained suspense which keeps the spectator on the keen edge of expectation, and the smooth swiftly flowing action. As fast as Jones and his fat pal get out of one scrape another threat of perilous exposure menaces them, and we know of nothing funnier in filmland than the adventure of the couple dodging disaster in turkish baths reserved for feminine custom, to say nothing of the Bishop indentity mix-up. Reginald Denny's comedy work is great, Otis Harlan and Zasu Pitts give capital performances and in fact every member of the cast deserves unlimited praise.

THEME. Farce comedy. On wedding eve hero escapes from police raid on poker game, is hunted from pillar to post, nearly loses fiancee, but gets her in the end.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. High quality of suspense maintained as one comic thrill succeeds another. Turkish Baths episode. Wedding and unexpected climax. Fine acting of star and support.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Reginald Denny as appearing in the most amusing picture of his career. Mention Otis Harlan, Zasu Pitts. Boost story to limit.

DRAWING POWER. Sure-fire box office attraction, good for any house.

SUMMARY. One of Reginald Denny's best pictures. A lightning action farce and certain laugh-getter. Never slackens speed or loses interest from first to last.

THE CAST

Tom Jones.....Reginald Denny
Lucille Bigbee.....Marian Nixon
Ebenezer Goodly.....Otis Harlan
Mrs. Goodly.....Emily Fitzroy

"WHAT HAPPENED TO JONES," a wildly hilarious farce comedy starring Reginald Denny, will be the main attraction on the screen of the ——— Theatre on ———. Critics all over the country unite in the opinion that this is unquestionably the merriest and most laughable picture in which Mr. Denny has yet appeared. It concerns the adventures of Jones and his fat friend, on the former's wedding eve, when they escape from a poker game raid, and are hunted venomously by the police.

Otis Harlan, Marian Nixon, Emily Fitzroy, Ben Hendricks, Jr., Zasu Pitts, and other noted players appear in support.

CATCH LINES

Reginald Denny's greatest farce comedy, a laughing riot, crammed with suspense and fast action! The scene where Jones and his fat pal take refuge in the Ladies' Turkish Baths is alone worth the price of admission!

The True North

(Clifford C. Griffin Prod.—7000 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

COVERING a long, hard trail through Alaska and Siberia this travel feature offers a series of the most magnificent nature views ever filmed. As a scenic novelty it stands in a class by itself, for many of the shots are such as have never been achieved by the camera before, one of the instances being the photographing of the Midnight Sun in colors, a spectacle of rare, awe-inspiring beauty. It also differs from the usual scenic offering in that it abounds in thrills, and real ones at that. For it depicts the adventures of Arthur J. Young, the archery champion and Captain Jack Robertson, as those two intrepid souls risked their lives against the fury of the elements, wild beasts and all the dangers of the Great Unknown, enduring unlimited hardships and fighting grimly to the goal of their hopes. It was an expedition into the primitive, conducted with the aid of primitive weapons only, for guns were dispensed with, Young trusting for provisions to his bow and arrow, with which he slew caribou, moose, a gigantic bear and other game.

Space does not permit of a detailed description of the nature wonders this film presents. But one cannot forbear from dwelling upon the grandeur of the scenes where the glaciers tower in stately pride, the breaking-up of the 2,000 miles of ice in the Yukon River, the curious sight of millions of salmon en-route to their spawning grounds, with a huge bear fishing successfully for them with his expert claws.

THEME. Scenic and adventure feature, dangers of Alaskan and Siberian wilds.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The exquisite photography. Episode where Robertson and Young enter the crater of Mount Katumai, an active volcano, dodging quicksands and poison fumes. Eskimo on edge of precipice catching flying birds with net. Scenes showing vast herds of reindeer, wild goats, sheep, the seal rookery. Filming of the Midnight Sun. Young's marvelously expert shooting with bow and arrow.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You can promise patrons thrills innumerable, as realistic as true. Play up educational as well as entertaining values. Get in touch with school-boards, Boy Scout organizations, etc. Stress the scenic beauty.

DRAWING POWER. Properly exploited, should go well in certain communities.

SUMMARY. A unique, interesting travel film of rare scenic charm, vibrating with real adventure thrills. No plot, but a triumph of realism and great screen achievement.

Director, Captain Robertson. Photographed by W. W. Kelly.

C. C. Griffin, producer of "The True North."

The True North (Clifford C. Griffin Production) PRESS NOTICE

A TREAT is in store for all lovers of Nature and wild adventure, when "The True North" is shown on the screen of the ——— Theatre on ———. This film depicts the experiences of two hardy explorers, Captain Robertson and Arthur Young, the archery champion, during an expedition through the wilds of Alaska and Siberia. Besides being a marvel of scenic beauty the picture is alive with vivid thrills, all the more impressive because they are the product of fact, not fiction. No guns were used, Mr. Young killing big game with his steel arrows for food supply.

A feature absolutely different from anything you have seen on the screen.

CATCH LINES

Pictorial charm and wild adventure, a true human document that is the acme of realism. Unveils wild beauties of Nature until now unknown to civilized man. Genuine thrills and scenic views of hitherto unheard-of splendor!

Smilin' At Trouble

(F. B. O.—5175 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

MELODRAMA, comedy and romance are freely mingled in this latest Lefty Flynn vehicle which is alive with slapdash action all the way and registers as nifty program entertainment. Lefty is seen as a young civil engineer working on the construction of a huge dam, who discovers that tricks are being played with the quality of cement used in construction, interferes with the grafters' plans, thereby making a heap of trouble for himself, but battles and smiles his way to victory over the forces of evil. The inevitable love affair between hero and the wealthy contractor's daughter is neatly handled and works out to a happy finish. Not a picture for the highbrows, but possessing considerable human interest, clean, wholesome and likely to please a majority of fans. Lefty has one scrap with the villain in an aerial tram car that is a sensational peach, and the big thrill put over when the dam bursts will shake the spectators like an exploding shell. The acting is O. K., and photography extremely good.

THEME. Melodrama. Young civil engineer balks villains' plot to graft on dam-building by using inferior cement, beats up main conspirator, saves contractor's daughter from drowning and wins her.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Star's impressive athletic stunts, swift action, good photography, love interest, melodramatic punches. Mid-air fight and bursting of dam, hero's rescue of girl.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Tell 'em about Lefty's rattling scrap in the aerial tram car; play up the big flood scene. Boost as great thriller. Feature star.

DRAWING POWER. A likely card for the average house.

SUMMARY. Shows Lefty Flynn at his vigorous best. Has human interest and love appeal, comedy and thrills. A lively, well-directed melodrama.

THE CAST

Jerry Foster	Lefty Flynn
Alice Arnold	Helen Lynch
Lafayette Van Rensselaer	Ray Ripley
Swazey	Lee Shumway
Clancy O'Toole	Charlie McHugh
Kathleen O'Toole	Kathleen Myers
Michael Arnold	Hal Wilson

Author Not Credited. Director, Harry Garson.

SYNOPSIS. Jerry Foster, civil engineer, discovers dam he is working on is built with bad cement. He loves Alice Arnold, who is engaged to Van Rensselaer. Because Jerry befriends Kathleen O'Toole, little Irish girl, his enemies make Alice believe he is a trifler. Jerry brings the cement scandal to a show-down and beats up Swazey, the bullying foreman. The latter, in revenge lets the water out of a huge reservoir. The dam bursts, Van Rensselaer is drowned, but Jerry saves and wins Alice.

Maurice (Lefty) Flynn, star of "Smilin' at Trouble," an F. B. O. production.

Smilin' at Trouble (F. B. O.)
PRESS NOTICE

BIG, handsome Lefty Flynn, the great college athlete, is the star of "Smilin' At Trouble," a rattling melodrama which is scheduled for its first local showing at the ———— Theatre on ————. A pronounced favorite with all fans who admire nerve and physical strength, Mr. Flynn adds fresh lustre to his film laurels by the vigorous, virile performance he gives as a young civil engineer who foils grafters on a huge dam he is constructing, battles with the arch-villain in mid-air and rescues the girl he loves from drowning when the dam bursts. This big flood scene is a genuine thriller.

Alice Arnold, the heroine, is portrayed by Helen Lynch, with a brilliant supporting cast.

CATCH LINES

The dam had burst, the girl and her lover struggled in the raging flood, but his strength and courage brought them safe to land! Watch for this stupendous scene in Lefty Flynn's latest thriller!

The New Champion

(Columbia Picture Corp.—4470 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THERE seems to be quite a demand for puglistic screen heroes nowadays, else producers wouldn't be putting out so many features with leading men starred as knights of the squared circle. And here's another one, with William Fairbanks the fighting lad. The plot is plainly constructed to show off William's athletic ability and succeeds in this respect, although originality of conception and design isn't by any means its strong point. But it's fairly interesting, buzzes along at a slapping gait, has the usual girl romance, a laugh here and there, a bit of sentiment and swings into a happy climax. Exactly the sort of thing that will furnish an hour's satisfactory amusement for small-house patrons, and therefore to be listed as a good picture of its kind. Director Reeves Eason didn't make the mistake of stretching thin material out too far, by keeping inside the five reel compass there was no necessity for padding, and the film benefitted accordingly. Bill Fairbanks and Edith Roberts do well in the leads and are nicely supported.

THEME. Prizefight melodrama, with love shading. Hero substitutes for pugilist pal in match, beats champion and wins pretty girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Nippy action, development of love affair, ring fight, crucial moment where hero is nearly whipped, and bright ending.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature William Fairbanks. Advertise as brisk melo, with corking prize fight scene and appealing love romance. Go after sport trade.

DRAWING POWER. Entertaining. Good card for the smaller houses.

SUMMARY. Offers several exciting sequences, notably the big prize fight episode, moves rapidly, O. K for fans who like lively melodrama.

THE CAST

Bob Nichols	William Fairbanks
Polly Rand	Edith Roberts
Lucy Nichols	Lotus Thompson
Jack Melville	Lloyd Whitlock
Knockout Riley	Frank Hagney
Fight Promoter	Al Kaufman
Mrs. Nichols	Marion Court
Blacksmith	Bert Appling

Author, Dorothy Howell. Director, Reeves Eason. Photographed by George Meehan.

SYNOPSIS. Knockout Riley, matched with the champion, becomes pal of Bob Nichols who works for village blacksmith. Riley stays at Bob's home while training and employs him as sparring partner. Bob falls in love with Polly Rand. Riley sustains injury in an auto spill which prevents him from keeping his fighting date. Bob takes his place and fights under Riley's name. He is nearly licked by turning to look at Polly and getting knocked down for his carelessness. He recovers, however, and wins by a knockout. Bob marries Polly, while Riley weds him chum's sister.

The New Champion (Columbia Pictures)
PRESS NOTICE

A ROMANCE of the prize ring, starring William Fairbanks, is set forth in "The New Champion," billed as the big screen attraction at the ———— Theatre on ————. The fans who want lots of action and excitement plus, will go wild over this picture. It tells of the pugilistic ambitions of a young blacksmith's helper, who becomes friendly with a boxer matched with the heavyweight champion, takes his pal's place when the latter is accidentally injured and wins the title. Incidentally, his victory also wins him a pretty wife.

Bill Fairbanks is at his best in the leading role, with fascinating Edith Roberts as the heroine.

CATCH LINES

Two men loved the same girl and fought for her. He posed as a famous boxer and won the championship! Beautiful Edith Roberts in her most charming role, Bill Fairbanks as the dashing victor!

Business of Love

(Astor—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

A FAIRLY diverting comedy drama telling the story of a young go-getter who blasts the plans of an unscrupulous lawyer to get control of an old man's phonograph amplifier invention and then jumps in and makes the contraption the basis for a flourishing business, not, however, without meeting a flood of obstacles. Edward Horton is the star and does well as the youth who starts out to show an aged uncle that he really has some good in him.

The production is rather artificial in its mounting, the costumes give a hint that the picture was made some time ago and the comedy becomes rather boresome at times. A romance is dragged in. The cast is only fair.

THEME. A comedy drama setting forth the adventures of a young man in putting an old inventor on his feet and foiling the schemes of a lawyer to profit illegally from an amplifying unit for phonographs.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The characterization contributed by Edward Horton. The opening sequence in which the hero does a John Alden for a friend.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Boost the name of Edward Horton who was seen in "Ruggles of Red Gap." Tie-up with phonograph stores on window display of reproducers with photos of the star displaying the Repro-Vox in the picture.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for program houses, the smaller community theatres and the towns.

SUMMARY. Don't promise the folks too much when you book this one. It is just another picture with nothing new or startling in its plot or setting.

THE CAST

Edward Burgess	Edward Horton
Noah Briggs	Tom Ricketts
Miss Wright	Zasu Pitts
James J. Scarborough	Dorothy Wood
Barbara Richmond	Barbara Bedford
Martin Block	James Kelly
Willis Graves	Stanley Taylor
Bobby	Newton Hall

Adapted by Ford Beebee. Directed by Jesse Robbins. Photographed by Irving Ries.

SYNOPSIS. Being a failure as an attorney, Edward Burgess is bawled out by his uncle. Ed decides to start out to make a man of himself. He meets up with Martin Block and learns that Scarborough, an unscrupulous lawyer, has forced the inventor to sign a contract giving the former the exclusive rights to the Repro-Vox, at a price cheaper than it costs to make them. Burgess decides to help Block. He installs machinery and soon is doing a profitable business. However, the two run up against labor trouble and more schemes of Scarborough to wreck the business, but the old uncle comes to the rescue at the psychological moment. All ends well. Yes, there's a love story, too.

Barbara Bedford, who appears in "Business of Love," an Astor release.

Business of Love (Astor)
PRESS NOTICE

EDWARD HORTON, one of the best known funmakers of filmland, comes to the ——— theatre, commencing ——— in "Business of Love," a comedy drama with no dull moments. Mr. Horton is supported by Zasu Pitts, Barbara Bedford, Tom Ricketts and many other well known stars. Horton is seen in the role of a youth who suddenly decides to make a man of himself and succeeds when he foils the plans of a scheming lawyer to control the business of an old man who has invented an amplifier for the radio and talking machine. He not only puts the business on a paying basis but makes the lawyer agree to his own terms on the future product. There are many laughable situations as well as a goodly quota of moments dramatic.

CATCH LINES

An appealing story of love, drama and humor, with an excellent cast. Romance, deftly blended with joyous comedy. A powerful play of romance and laughter.

That Royle Girl

(D. W. Griffith Prod.—Paramount—Ten Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

ONCE again D. W. Griffith comes forward with something different! This time he has selected Chicago's jazz zone as his locale and developed a film tale vibrant with action, powerful in heart appeal, tingling with suspense, touching in its love theme and decidedly gripping in its climax. While this is not especially a picture for family consumption, being more appropriate for the sophisticates, it is entertaining every inch of its colorful way. As in all Griffith works much attention has been paid to detail and it is also evident that in this case much care was exercised in selecting types. The scenes in the underworld jazz joints are the last word in realism. So is the great storm sequence.

Carol Dempster as Daisy Royle is immense. The male leads are well taken care of by Harrison Ford and James W. Kirkwood, while W. C. Fields injects no end of fun as the bootlegger parent.

THEME. A melodrama of Chicago's underworld in which girl aids in rounding up gang of gunmen, saves a man from execution, marrying the district attorney who had been prosecuting her.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The murder of Ketlar's wife, arrest of her husband. Third degree scenes. The trial. Running down of gangsters by girl. Cyclone scenes. The characterizations.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up Griffith and his stars. Book store tie-up on the novel. The title. Put on Charleston contest as prologue. Have local beauty act as "That Royle Girl" week in advance on shopping tours, in driving big cars appropriately labelled, in acting as judge at contest, etc.

DRAWING POWER. Should crowd them in the biggest houses in the land.

SUMMARY. Something new under the film sun. A gripping story, excellently acted and masterfully directed. Packed with big moments and a climax that is a wow.

THE CAST

Daisy Royle	Carol Dempster
Dad	W. C. Fields
Calvin Clarke	James W. Kirkwood
Fred Ketlar	Harrison Ford
George Baretta	Paul Everton
Larose	Bobby Watson
Baretta's Henchman	George Rigas
Adele Ketlar	Marie Chambers

By Edwin Balmer. Directed by D. W. Griffith. Scenario by Paul Schofield. Photographed by Harry Fischbeck.

SYNOPSIS. Separated from wife, Adele, Fred Ketlar, jazz band leader, becomes acquainted with Daisy Royle, a product of the Chicago tenement district. Adele is murdered, Fred is arrested. Daisy disguises herself and aided by a newspaper man, they succeed in overhearing a woman accuse Baretta, gangster, of the crime. But the gang almost gets Daisy in turn, the coming of a cyclone saving her, but wiping out the gangsters. Ketlar is freed. Daisy weds Calvin Clarke, district attorney.

Carol Dempster, featured in "That Royle Girl," a Paramount release.

That Royle Girl (Paramount)
PRESS NOTICE

D. W. GRIFFITH'S newest contribution to better pictures, "That Royle Girl," comes to the ——— Theatre, commencing ———. This master filmplay is a picturization of the Cosmopolitan Magazine serial and novel by Edwin Balmer. It is a decidedly modern story of Chicago's jazz zone, of a beautiful girl of the tenements who grows up amid not too favorable surroundings. She becomes acquainted with the leader of a jazz band who later is arrested and found guilty of the murder of his wife. The girl then starts in to find the real murderer.

Carol Dempster plays the heroine. A wonderful cast, including W. C. Fields, James W. Kirkwood and Harrison Ford, furnish admirable support.

CATCH LINES

A colorful love-drama of Chicago's jazz zone made real by D. W. Griffith. D. W. Griffith scores again with a vibrant tale of jazz mad life in the underworld of a great American city.

Regional News from Correspondents

Central Pennsylvania

MANY leading picture theatres throughout Pennsylvania cities were leased for Sunday, December 6, to local lodges of the Elks for the holding of their annual memorial services. Among the theatres used for this purpose were the Colonial, Lebanon, where the Elks also celebrated their Silver Jubilee; Elks theatre, Milton; Alhambra, Canonsburg, and Elks theatre, Mahanoy City.

Al Gottesman, who for six years conducted the Strand theatre, Shenandoah, until it was acquired last summer by new interests, has decided to make his residence hereafter in New York City, on account of the requirements of his present business.

Albany

ANOTHER change came this week when Jack Krause, who has been handling the Bond exchange here for the past three or four years, announced that he would become manager of the exchange being maintained in this city by Associated Exhibitors and which is quartered in the Pathe building. Mr. Krause succeeds Abe Eskin who was named when Fred Boyd resigned. No successor has yet been named to Mr. Krause at the Bond offices. Mr. Boyd left for New York the past week and will go to Memphis, Tenn., where he will assume the management of the Pathe branch there. At Warner Brothers exchange, Walter Vadney, who resigned a couple of weeks ago to manage a theatre in Watervliet, returned and is now covering the Southern tier, while Ben Smith has been transferred to the Northern tier, replacing Vic Bendell who has now become a bond salesman.

There will be a change at the Pastime theatre in Granville the last of the month as the theatre has been acquired by William Benton of Saratoga Springs. Mr. Benton did not succeed in acquiring the lease of the Opera House in Plattsburg as was first rumored Jack Matthews, who has been running the house, has the lease, having signed it the past week, and will continue with the house for another period of years.

In getting acquainted with the trade, Austin Interrante, just named as manager for Warner Brothers in this city, took a swing the past week through Northern New York calling on the trade.

Within the next ten days all of the larger theatres in this section will be resplendent in their holiday decorations. Uly S. Hill, managing director of the Strand group of houses in Albany and Troy outlined his plans for the holiday decorations which will be even more elaborate and beautiful than ever.

C. H. Buckley, head of the Leland and Clinton Square houses in Albany and the Empire in Glens Falls, returned the past week from a trip to New York. While in the Big Town Mr. Buckley was the guest of Johnny Hines for a day or so, visiting the studios as well as spending an hour or so at the Hines home.

Harry Kirchgessner, an auditor for the Producers Distributing Corporation, was in town during the past week. F. Ray Powers, connected with the Buffalo branch of First National, was also in town during the week. Leon Medem, former manager for Pathe here, was in town for a day or so.

William Benton's new theatre in Mechanicville is doing a splendid business and according to the city fathers, is rated as an asset to the city.

E. H. Arnold has been succeeded by E. Manheim as exploitation man for Universal in the Albany and Buffalo territory.

The past week brought a number of well known exhibitors to town, including William Smalley of Cooperstown, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Milligan of Schuylerville and others. Business was reported as having been good.

Edgar O. Brooks, serial sales manager for Pathe, was in town on Saturday and Sunday. The week also brought to town Charles Henschel, eastern district manager for Pathe.

Gardner Hall in Troy, which is one of the houses being operated these days by James Rose, is being extensively redecorated. The house has been painted throughout and new velvet draperies have been added. The King theatre in Troy, another Rose house, entertained the orphans of the city one day last week.

Following several weeks as manager of the Strand theatre in Schenectady, B. W. Harriman, who formerly owned a house in Massachusetts, has resigned. There is a report to the effect that Mr. Harriman will take over the Astor in Troy, a house that has now been closed for several months.

John J. Walker, one time owner of the Barcli theatre in Schenectady, is now engaged in selling Florida real estate for one of the large real estate concerns of his native city.

There will be a big party staged at the State theatre between Christmas and New Years for the employees of the Farash houses in that city. The party will be held in the lobby of the theatre following the second show of the evening. Dancing and refreshments will make up the program.

The orphans of Albany were the guests of the Mark Strand theatre on a morning of last week.

Edward Buskey of the State theatre was stricken with heart trouble while at work one day last week and died shortly after he was removed to his home.

Seattle

JACK SULLIVAN, manager of the Fox Film exchange and president of the Northwest Film Board of Trade of Seattle, returned this week from Marshfield, Oregon, where he attended the ceremonies coincident with the opening of the beautiful new Egyptian Theatre in that city, reported to be one of the finest moderate-size houses in the entire Pacific Northwest. The theatre was built by the Coos Bay Amusement Company, and will be managed by Robert Marsden in association with John C. Noble, vice-president and Dennis M. Hull, secretary-treasurer of this exhibitors' organization. One of the finest Wurlitzer Hope-Jones Unit organs on the Pacific Coast is a feature of the Egyptian.

A. H. McMillan, formerly associated with the Producers Distributing Corporation exchange in Portland, last week joined Manager Carl Stearn's local Warner Brothers office in a sales representation capacity. He will cover the Western Washington territory. Mr. Stearn also recently announced the appointment of J. N. Randolph as Warner representative in Eastern Washington.

Fire of undetermined origin completely destroyed the Endicott Theatre at Endicott, Washington, one night late in November. T. D. Logsdon, owner and manager of the house, is contemplating immediate rebuilding on a larger scale.

Contracts for the immediate construction of the $500,000 new Hippodrome Theatre in Portland were let last week to the Hanson-Hammond Construction Company, according to information received here, and actual work on the building of the theatre is already under way it is reported by film men of this city who have recently returned from sales trips into the Oregon territory.

According to advice from Montana last week, the Liberty Theatre in Helena will be reopened about the first of January under a new combined motion picture and vaudeville policy. Dr. Lovett, owner and manager of the house, plans an expenditure of approximately $50,000 in remodeling and redecorating prior to the opening, it is reported.

The Rialto Theatre at Red Lodge, Montana, a new 450 seat house being erected by Downard and Pride, is expected to be ready for opening in time for the December holidays, it was announced last week. The house will be managed by the owners.

Fred Mercy, representative of the Jensen-Von Herberg interests in Yakima, last week was reported to have purchased the American Theatre in Sunnyside from W. D. Farrell, operating the house at the present time. According to reports, Mr. Mercy will assume control and management of the American the first of January.

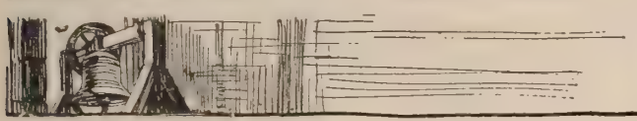
A. J. Kennedy, publicity and exploitation manager of L. O. Lukan's local Universal exchange, returned last week from Butte.

The Dryad Theatre, in Dryad, Washington, was opened the latter part of November by H. Crisman, it was announced last week. The Dryad is a small house, seating only about 350, yet it is a strictly modern theatre in every detail of construction, considering its size.

Kansas City

NO sooner did C. E. "Doc" Cook, business manager of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri, return from a 10-day trip in the territory in behalf of the organization's membership drive, than back again he went. However, he managed to "lift" Thursday out of the schedule and slip over to the home of his parents in Maryville, Mo., for a Thanksgiving dinner.

The Grand theatre, Moberly, Mo., which was totally destroyed by fire last week, will be rebuilt, according to Jack Truitt, owner. In the meantime Mr. Truitt has taken over the old Grand theatre in that city, which will be operated as the "Baby Grand," pending construction of the new house, which, according to Mr. Truitt, will be among the best houses in Central Missouri. The "Baby Grand" has been equipped with Mazda equipment and Simplex projectors and none of the steady patronage has been lost.



The new Baltis theatre, suburban house of Kansas City, will open its doors December 5, according to Potter Brothers, who will operate the house. The new theatre will seat 800 persons and has been equipped with Simplex projectors and Peerless reflector arc equipment.

The crystal theatre, Ottawa, Kas., has been sold by Bert Klock to Willard Frazier, well known Kansas exhibitor. E. L. Dyson, former owner of the Palace theatre, St. Joseph, Mo., disposed of his interest to accept a position as representative for the Kansas City Pathe exchange.

Between fifty and seventy-five theatres in the Kansas City territory have closed down until after the holidays, it has been estimated. Most of the closed houses are in the smaller towns and villages, while virtually no Kansas City theatres have been noticably affected.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market this week were: B. Hawkins, Main street Drexel, Mo.; Mrs. O. Winkler, Main street, Lexington, Mo.; H. Weaver and B. Lucy, Royal, Hoisington, Kas.; Hugh Gardner, Orpheum, Neosho, Mo.; William Parsons, Pershing, Joplin, Mo.; W. H. Weber, Echo, Great Bend, Kas.; M. G. Kirkman, Strand, Hays, Kas.; G. L. Rugg, Leland, Troy, Kas.; C. E. Montrey, Park, St. Joseph, Mo.; R. B. Christian, Byers, Excelsior Springs, Mo.; L. Brenninger, Cozy, Topeka, Kas.; Stanley Chambers and L. M. Miller, Miller theatres, Wichita, Kas.; Mr. and Mrs. Robinson, Royal, Svery, Kas.; L. A. Wagner, Princess, Eureka, Kas.; C. W. Goodell, Pastime, Ottawa, Kas.

Still another lively week along Kansas City's film row. Bob Gary, Universal exploiteer, spent a busy week at Ottawa, Kas., at Willard Frazier's Crystal theatre. Paul Gray, southern exploitation man for Pathe, was a Kansas City visitor. Sam Berger and Harry Wolfberg, special Metro-Goldwyn representatives, made a sales canvass of the Kansas City territory, while E. C. Rhoden, manager of the Midwest Film Distributors, Inc., made a business trip to Kirksville, Mo. Stanley Rolo, formerly connected with the old Mutual Film Company, has accepted a position as representative for the Kansas City P. D. C. branch. C. A. Schultz, P. D. C. branch manager, left on a hurried trip to Leavenworth, Kas., while Harry Taylor, Universal branch manager, was busy combing the Kansas towns, Louis Reichert, Warner Bros. branch manager, confining his efforts to Central Missouri.

Charles Brill, prominent in the motion picture and vaudeville business in Akron, has purchased the old Grand Theatre on North Main Street, opposite the Terminal Building, and will re-open it on December 12. Brill is now subjecting the theatre to a thorough course of repairs and remodeling, which will cost in excess of $50,000. When these changes are complete, the theatre will be a strictly fireproof structure, with plenty of emergency exits in case of accident. The seating capacity of the house has been reduced to 1,200 seats, due to the removal of a third balcony. Added exits have been made for the second balcony. The Grand Theatre will be operated by the Brill Amusement Company, which also owns and operates the Empress and Miles Royal Theatres, also of Akron.

J. A. McMahon, of the McTodd Theatre, Willoughby, has an abundance of talents, one of which is a golden voice. McMahon sings frequently in his theatre. Last week he came to Cleveland and broadcasted over the Cleveland radio station W. T. A. M. Mrs. McMahon accompanied him on the piano.

B. Schwartz has sold his Glenside Theatre, Woodland avenue and East 84th street, to A. Techon.

J. S. Mednikow, Chicago branch manager for Associated Exhibitors.

St. Louis

THE St. Louis film colony was shocked on Thursday, December 3rd when it learned of the tragic death the previous night of Leo Wyrobeck, 23 years old, salesman for Universal Film Corporation, who was fatally injured when his automobile crashed into a poultry truck near Windsor, Ill. It is believed that Wyrobeck was blinded by the bright headlights of an automobile approaching from the opposite direction and did not see the truck until too late to avoid the fatal accident.

Wyrobeck who on Thanksgiving Day at Brooklyn, New York, had claimed Miss Selma Hess as his bride, was making his first business trip since his return from the honeymoon.

The couple had returned to St. Louis on November 29 and the next day Wyrobeck started on his regular trip therough the Southern Illinois territory which he covered for Universal.

Scenes from three "Sheiks and Shebas" comedies, released by Davis Distributing Division through Vital Exchanges.

Buffalo

IT looks like the Strand, Cataract and Bellevue theatres in Niagara Falls have beaten the American Federation of Musicians. Several months ago the members of the Falls local presented claims for increases in pay. The managers of three theatres turned down the demand and imported non-union musicians to fill the places of the men who went on strike. These non-union men have been playing ever since. Now Manager Herman Lorence has signed up three of his old union men at the old rate of pay to play in the Bellevue theatre. The men will play with the non-union musicians, which, of course, will mean automatic suspension from the union.

The report that L. E. Akins had been killed in an auto accident seems to have been "greatly exaggerated." Mr. Akins was in Buffalo the other day, still very much alive, but recovering from injuries sustained in the accident in which Mrs. Akins lost her life. Mr. Akins operates the Gem theatre in Randolph, N. Y.

The Film Board of Trade of Buffalo has selected the evening of January 4 as the date for the Movie Ball to be held in the Hotel Statler ballroom. The event will be open to the public. Tickets are on sale in the exchanges. Henry W. Kahn, manager of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer office, is chairman of the arrangements committee. Mr. Kahn has held a similar position for the dances of the Film Board in recent years, all of which have been huge successes.

Scores of persons filed out of the Lovejoy theatre, 1202 Lovejoy street, in an orderly manner last Saturday night when a roll of film ignited in the operator's booth. Jake Rappaport, manager of the theatre, said the patrons did not become alarmed when they were told about the fire. No one was injured. The operator succeeded in putting out the flames.

Paul J. Swift has succeeded Harry Hollander as manager of the Buffalo Warner Brothers exchange. Hub Taylor is now covering Rochester for Pathe, while Paul Shaver has been assigned to the Buffalo territory.

A contract has been signed by Albert Robbins of Syracuse and the Ithaca Conservatory of Music and Affiliated Schools whereby Mr. Robbins will take a 10-week lease of the Little theatre, beginning January 4. Mr. Robbins will present high class photoplays and professional recitals. He will open the theatre with a feature picture. Announcement is also made that Mr. Robbins has engaged Patrick Conway to direct a ten-piece union orchestra. The theatre now is being redecorated and remodeled to conform with all provisions of the state law. With Mr. Robbins in Ithaca the other day to close the deal were his brother Nathan Robbins, also of Syracuse; John C. Jones of Utica and R. C. Merrick of Utica, architect. They looked over, Mr. Robbins said, the site on which an option has been obtained for their proposed new theatre in the Cornell town. The financing of this new project will be completed within two weeks, when a permanent office of the company will be established in Ithaca. Attorney Charles P. Coffey is Mr. Robbins' local representative. Inasmuch as the Robbins chain recently was taken over by the Mark-Strand interests, the Messrs. Robbins are probably acting for the merged interests in the Ithaca deal. Nate Robbins now is a vice president of the Mark-Strand organization and at the time of the merger it was announced he would devote his activities to acquiring new houses for the Mark interests.

King Vidor, director of "The Big Parade," (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer).

Lew Schine of the Schine Theatrical corporation was a Buffalo visitor the other day. After looking over local interests, he was taken to Lockport by Harry Dixon, F. B. O. manager where Mr. Schine conferred with the manager of the Rialto, also a link in the Schine chain.

The news is out. Eugene A. Pfeil, former manager of the old Mark-Strand and more recently of the Circle, soon is to be married.

G. K. Rudolph, publicity manager for the Fox Film company, stopped off in Buffalo to visit old friends, en route to New York from the West Coast studios.

Johnny Carr, manager of Shea's North Park theatre, Buffalo, is in receipt of hundreds of letters, praising the big improvement in the music programs, since the installation of the new Wurlitzer unit orchestra organ which set back the Shea Amusement company some 50,000 iron men. The organ is one of the finest in any theatre in the state. It is bringing a lot of new business for the house.

Ben Wallerstein, manager of the Broadway theatre, Buffalo, wishes to emphatically deny that he will give each exchange manager a handsome Christmas present. On the contrary, says Ben, he expects free film Christmas week in return for the business handed the exchanges all year.

Art Young has resigned as booker at the Buffalo Universal exchange to accept the assistant managership of the Philadelphia "U" office. Mr. Young is succeeded by O. T. Schroeppel, recently booker with Fox. Lou Beckerich has resigned as assistant booker at "U" to become booker at Renown. Jerry Spandau has been appointed Syracuse salesman, while George Moeser will cover the Buffalo city territory.

Milwaukee

THE largest crowds in the theatrical history of Fond du Lac, Wis., were attracted by the formal opening of Fischer-Paramount's new Fond du Lac Theatre last Wednesday. Many prominent faces in the film industry were to be seen between the floral tributes that packed the house. Among those who left their Milwaukee activities to be with Frank Fischer in his hour of triumph were George Smith and Frank Kane of Paramount; J. G. Frackman of Progress Pictures Company; Sam Abrams of F. B. O.; Max Stahl of Educational; "Doc" Hunnig representing Pathe; George Levine and Mat Lavin of Universal, and others. The opening of the house represents the winning of a building race with the Saxe Enterprises which will soon open their Retlaw theatre at Fond du Lac.

Eleanor Boardman, featured in "Exchange of Wives," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production.

H. D. Charness, who travels the Wisconsin territory for Progress Pictures Company, claims honors as an all-weather chauffeur, having just completed his initial trip in his new Chevrolet through the northern part of the state despite raging snow storms.

Frank Kane, formerly attached to the Los Angeles office of Paramount, has come to Milwaukee to join the sales staff of the local exchange. He is a brother of Robert Kane, the director, and is widely known in film circles.

Charlie Lundgren, go-getter manager of the Milwaukee branch of the Producers' Distributing Corporation, has returned from a business trip to Chicago.

Ed Vollendorf, heretofore office manager for the Milwaukee branch of First National, has been named to temporarily fill the managerial vacancy caused by the resignation of Harold Fitzgerald, who has been appointed general manager of the Saxe Amusement Enterprises.

Arthur Gray, one of the pioneer exchange men of Wisconsin, has been appointed booker of the recently established branch of Vital Exchanges. The branch is under the general management of Walter A. Baier, who also is one of the old-timers in the business.

Beaver Dam's new theatre, the Odeon, was opened Saturday under the management of Jack Yeo, who has been operating theatres in that city with considerable success for some time.

Dan Lederman, who at one time was assistant to Carl Laemmle, and more recently was in charge of the real estate and engineering ends of the Universal theatre operating activities, visited in Milwaukee in his new capacity of western sales manager for Associated Exhibitors.

Max Stahl, branch manager at Milwaukee for Educational, registers great pride in the high standing of the branch in the national Educational sales drive now in progress. Milwaukee has been consistently running second, according to the bulletins, and the boys are developing an ambition to soar to even greater heights.

George Levine, who has recently been appointed supervising director of Universal's theatre operating activities in the Central-Northwest in addition to his duties as manager of the Milwaukee distributing branch, has journeyed to Chicago last week to confer with Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, who stopped over en route to Germany. Announcements regarding the opening of several new Universal houses in this territory are expected soon.

Ned Marin, newly appointed western sales manager for First National, paid a visit to the local exchange during the past week.

New England

FRANK HOOKAILO, manager of Gordon's Washington Street Olympia, Boston, is managing the Brockton Theatre, Strand Theatre and Rialto Theatre, all in Brockton, Mass., during the vacation of Joseph Cahill. Mr. Cahill has gone to Florida for his vacation. He has spent several vacations in that state and friends say he is also interested in some property down there.

Boston was pretty well deserted about Film Row Thursday when the exchange managers and many of their staffs were guests of the Connecticut exhibitors at a banquet at the Hotel Taft in New Haven, in celebration of the reopening of the New Haven exchanges.

The new theatre of the United Theatres Corporation of New Jersey is receiving the finishing touches and will open the middle of the month at Westerly, R. I. Ed Lewin is to manage this theatre. The same ownership and management is in charge of the Palace and Majestic Theatres in Arctic, R. I. The new theatre will have a seating capacity of 1,100 and is one of the most completely equipped motion picture houses in that section.

Harry Eskin, who for some years has been an independent exchange manager in New England, has been appointed branch manager of the New Haven exchange of Associated Exhibitors succeeding H. C. Spratley. Mr. Eskin was at one time Boston salesman for Film Booking Office.

Harry I. Goldman has been selected for manager of the Connecticut exchange for Producers Distributing Corporation, Inc.

Ernest Sharaf has joined the Boston offices of Producers and is covering Greater Boston for that company.

The Film Board of Trade in New Haven is planning for a dinner at a little later date, having apparently caught the spirit of the occasion from the recent Exhibitors' dinner.

It is understood that three different parties have been in readiness to lease the new playhouse when it is completed next Summer.

Fred Shehay has resigned as manager of the new Capitol Theatre in Arlington, Mass.

J. E. Panora, 247 North Main street, Winsted, Conn. expects to award contracts for a motion picture theatre and business block before the first of the year. The new playhouse will be built from plans by L. J. Thompson of Corbin avenue, New Haven, Conn.

Charles W. Usen, proprietor and manager of amusement parks and theatres along the Maine seacoast which operate during the summer season, is planning to build a large Arcade at Old Orchard, Me. which will occupy the site of the present Seashore Theatre, an adjoining garage and stores. It will cover over 25,000 square feet of land. The ballroom will be a spacious one and Mr. Usen plans to show motion picture films there in connection with the dancing. It is to be completed in time for the 1926 summer season.

Detroit

THEATRES are springing up all over town, but far from danger of an oversupply. Detroit still faces an under supply of movie entertainment. The Kunsky interests recently opened their $2,000,000 State Theatre within a stone's throw of their other three downtown houses, and trade hasn't been decreased a bit. On the contrary, business has increased. Experience here seems to show, as perhaps is true elsewhere, that people are hungry for entertainment, and that when another theatre is built, it affords opportunity for additional amusement.

The stone work and interior work on the new Michigan Theatre, Balaban and Katz-Kunsky house, is rapidly nearing completion. This house will seat 5,000. It should be completed early next year. That the proprietors picked out a good location although on a little-used downtown street, is shown by the fact that millions of dollars of construction in the vicinity has been announced since the theatre was started. The latest is a huge hotel, a block away.

Educational is putting on a big sales campaign locally in anticipation of national Laugh Month, in January.

George Koppin, owner of several neighborhood theatres, apparently finds business good. He is spending several weeks in Miami.

Friends are showering congratulations on Mr. and Mrs. Alex Schreiber on the birth of their first baby, a son. Mr. Schreiber owns the Oakman Boulevard and the New Plaza Theatres.

W. S. Butterfield, proprietor of an extensive chain of Michigan theatres has headed for Florida for a short vacation together with his family.

Wm. Slocum, who formerly owned the Library theatre in Detroit has sold it to Al Ruttenberg & Lew Wisper who take possession Jan. 15th. They are also owners of the Gratiot theatre and from the looks of things are out to add more theatres to their present number which now consists of two.

The Quo Vadis theatre in Detroit has been sold to J. M. Black of Boston, Mass., who took possession Dec. 1. Mr. Black is an old timer in the show business and from all reports is doing a very nice business with the Detroit theatre.

J. Cochran, whose business is to book all pictures for the H. S. Koppen Theatrical enterprises, will have a little more work to do now since the Norwood theatre in Detroit has been added to their string.

Wm. Maclaren, who operates the Capitol theatre in Jackson, Mich., and Geo. Wilber, managing director for the Kleist circuit in Pontiac, Mich., were visitors at the Pathe Exchange last week.

F. C. Stubbs, owner of the New Home theatre in Detroit, purchased a brand new Ford four days ago.

George C. Johnston, formerly with Producers Distributing Corp. in Cleveland, Ohio, is now representing Associated Exhibitors covering the west side of Detroit.

Returning from a recent hunting trip, Jac Schrieber, owner of the Blackstone theatre in Detroit, had to prove to the boys in the film building that he told the truth about the deer he brought back with him. Last week Jac invited the bunch to a barbecue in the basement of his theatre and besides deer, beer was also served and a jolly good time was had by all.

Robert Shene, manager of the Martha Washington Theatre in Hamtramck, has taken over the Federal theatre in Detroit, a house that heretofore did very little business and with some magnetic attraction all his own has been turning crowds away. They are all wondering how he does it.

New York and New Jersey

JOSEPH STERN, of the Joseph Stern Theatrical Enterprises, has announced his eighth theatre under construction in the state of New Jersey. This latest one will be built on a recently purchased theatre site at South Orange Avenue and Halstead Street in Vailsburg section of Newark. The plans call for an expenditure of $500,000 and in addition to housing a theatre, the building will contain stores and offices. The theatre will seat 2,500 and will follow out a vaudeville and picture policy. Labor Day of 1926 has been set for the opening date.

From all accounts the Fifth Annual Dinner and Dance of the Motion Picture Salesman's Club, held at the Hotel Commodore on December 5th, was a great success. Johnnie Hines was Master of Ceremonies and a large number of guests were in attendance. Among the prominent exhibitors who were observed at the affair were Messrs. Rachmiel and Rinzler, Herman Yaffa, David Picker and Leon Rosenblatt. However, these are but a few of local exhibitors whose names were included in the program. Among these are A. H. Schwartz, Small and Straussberg, George B. Ten Eyck, Jacob Fabian, Joseph Stern, Mayer and Schneider, Harry Harris, Jack Ungerfeld, Goldreyer and Fleischman, Harlem Circuit of Theatres, Matthew Chrystmos, Rudy Saunders, William Salkin, Jolson and Grossman, Walter Reade, Suchman and Rosenthal and Rosensweig and Katz.

Ed Schnitzer, one of the well known members of the Club and a hustling salesman at the Fox Exchange, was one of the outstanding figures of the evening, spending a great deal of his time leading the orchestra. "Senator Sholtz" also of the Fox Exchange was observed in the midst of a bevy of Motion Picture Stars. A meeting of the Club will be held on Saturday, December 12th, and in view of the efficient handling of the organization during the past year, it is predicted that all the present executives will be renominated. This list includes Joseph Weinberg, Harry Furst, Gustave Solomon, Saul Trauner, Maurice Markowitz, Ben Rappaport, Lawrence Baren and Jules Jasper.

The Essbee Amusement Company, composed of A. W. Savage and Henry C. Berlin, have recently opened the New Rivoli Theatre at Hoboken, N. J. The seating capacity is 475 and the Rivoli is a strictly up-to-the-minute house, fireproof to the last word. The interior decorations are of the Coronite type, giving a tapestry effect. Latest type Simplex projection machines have been installed, Morelite lenses, Cutler-Hammer dimming devices and a Wurlitzer-Hope Jones organ. Ventilation is taken care of by a Typhoon System. The policy of the Rivoli will be straight pictures. Messrs. Savage and Berlin also operate the Palace Theatre in Hoboken.

William Salkin, owner and builder of the New Monroe Theatre at 76th Street and 1st Avenue, New York City, expects to open that house about January 15th. The Monroe is the last word in modern theatre design and the plans were prepared by Thomas W. Lamb, the famous architect. This matter was handled through the offices of Weinberger and Weissholf, 345 Madison Ave. The design is of a main floor and balcony and the seating capacity will be about 2,800. This theatre is unquestionably one of the finest neighborhood houses in the city and the reported cost is $750.000.

Edward Sacks, formerly of the Consolidated Amusement Company and other local circuits, is now manager of Schwartz's Rialto at Jamaica.

Another change of management has taken place at the Chelsea Theatre, 26th Street and 8th Avenue. Al Sterling, an old vaudeville man, is the new manager.

Bobby Binckoff has recently become associated with Joe Finger at the American Theatre, Fort Hamilton Parkway, Brooklyn.

Joseph Mann, who was at one time the manager of the Pastime Theatre, 2nd Avenue and 54th Street, has recently returned from the real estate boom towns of Florida. Joe states that he went down with the intention of making a million or so, but that he has become more or less reconciled with a nice collection of pretty sea shells from Miami Beach.

Harry Buxbaum is planning to make a visit to Miami Beach in the near future. "Bux" is undoubtedly feeling the effects of the strenuous sales drives made by the Fox organization

Milton Kronacher, Pathe salesman for a good sized section of New York City and who is always busy with a stack of contracts, has recently gotten out for his trade a nice little desk calender with a thermometer attached.

Dave Solomon has returned from a four day trip to Washington, D. C., where he went as the head of a delegation from the Syrian Society to protest the French Mandate. As a spoil of the late war, little Syria has been shuffled from bad hands to worse, according to Dave. The delegation interviewed sixty U. S. Senators in three days and also presented their case to President Coolidge.

Frank Keeney, of the Keeney Circuit has purchased a large theatre at Elmira, N. Y., according to reports and the house which is of 2500 seating capacity will be ready for opening about January 15th.

Joe Hornstein, of the Howell's Cine Equipment Company, left last Sunday for Chicago where he has gone to transact some important business. He will return the latter part of this week.

Theatre construction and the openings of new houses still continue in this zone. One of the big events of the year will be the premiere of the new Fabian Theatre in Patterson on the night of December 14th. This house is spoken of as the crowning achievement of the Fabian Circuit and the opening night will be a gala occasion for Patterson and the Fabian's. Sam Baker's Hollis-Long Island Theatre is scheduled for December 15th and the Palace at Bradley Beach, for the 26th of December. Brater and Pollack have set January 1st for the opening of the Ambassador Theatre at East Orange and Goldreyer and Fleischman's house of the same at Mount Vernon will swing open its doors on December 26th. The Plaza Theatre at Englewood and a 2000 seat house will be ready about January 1st and Walter Reade's new Asbury Park Theatre which seats 2500 is expected to be complete around the middle of February. Up in Mount Vernon, Harry Harris and George Morrow have decided to open their new 600 seat theatre on December 26th, and George Walsh's new Yonkers house is almost ready and January 1st has been set for the opening of this one.

With the exception of one or two of the above named theatres, Howell's Cine Equipment Company furnished all equipment and another big deal recently put over by Joe Hornstein was the landing of the Roxy Theatre contract. This one is indeed a feather in Joe's cap.

Minneapolis

CLYDE BOOTH, salesman for Educational Films, suffered the loss by death of his five-year-old daughter Patricia last week in Minneapolis.

Max Weisfeldt, F. B. O. district manager with headquarters in Minneapolis, has gone to Des Moines, Ia., for a short stay.

George Muller of Maple Lake, Minn., was among the exhibitors who visited in the Twin Cities this week.

Ed Buckley, Olivia, Minn., exhibitor, and his son, Don, who runs the Topic theatre at Fairfax, were in Minneapolis recently.

Frank Kohnen of Chippewa Falls and Herman Schwahn of Eau Claire, both of the Eau Claire Theatre company were in town last week reporting on their big opening at Eau Claire.

E. M. Sharratt has just opened the Community theatre at Seboit.

Phil Dunas, manager of the Universal office in Minneapolis, has gone south for a few weeks but only as far as southern Minnesota.

Otto Parlitz, of the Crystal theatre, Gleacoe, was in town the other day.

Ben Ross, the former Universal salesman who has become Minneapolis manager of Associated Exhibitors, is now on the new job and beginning to steam things up.

Ed Anderson was in from the Garrick theatre at Aberdeen last week.

Fred Finnegan of Universal is trying to make his vacation last all winter. He saved it up and is using it up a day at a time.

Joe Skirboll, of the Frank Lloyd Productions, now on tour of First National Exchanges, had a conference with Les Davis, Minneapolis manager, last week.

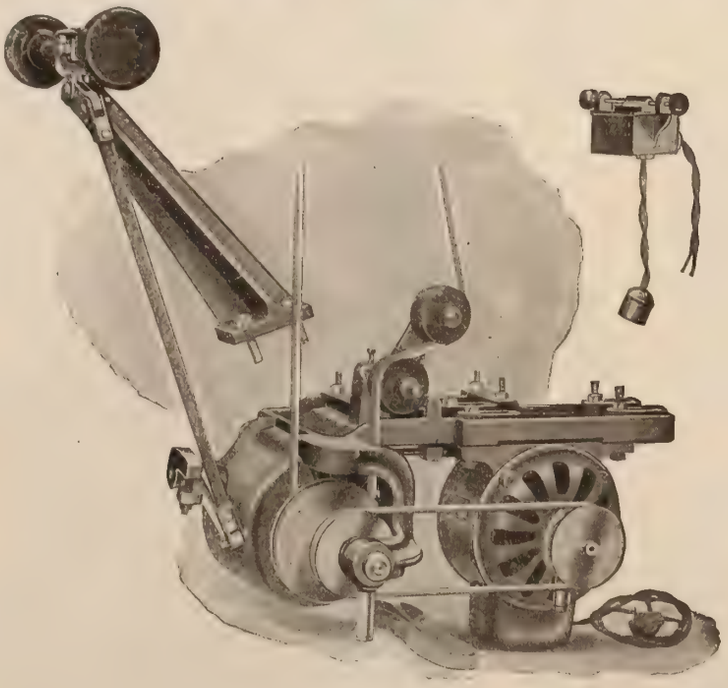
It isn't Miss Nettie Tinnesand any more. The smiling file clerk at Minneapolis First National branch was married the other day.

Utica, S. D., turned out for the reopening of the Royal theatre recently.

The second annual Minneapolis movie ball is set for Dec. 10. It is an affair of the operators and will be held at Calhoun Terrace through the courtesy of Finklestein & Ruben which offers the use of the building. C J. Hubbard, Ray R. Dailey, L. C. Junod, R. A. Peterson, H. Moore, Drew Roddy and Chauncey L. Greene are on the committee.

C. H. Bertch has sold the Grand theatre at Portal N. D., to J. E. Carter & Son.

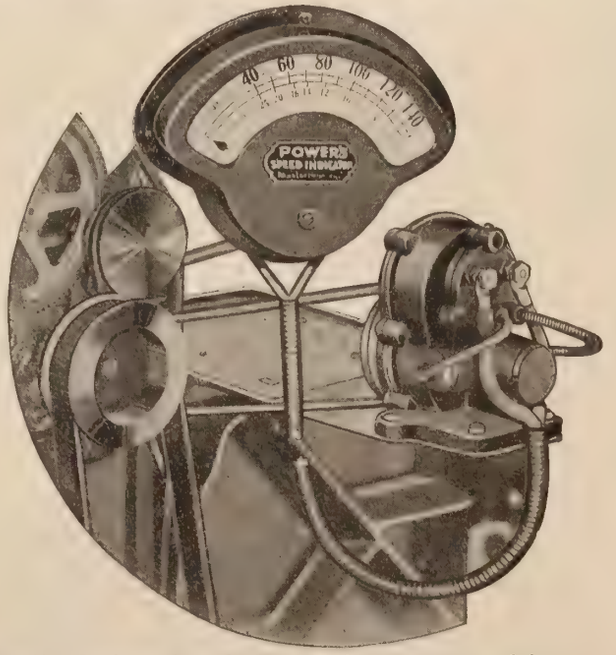
Harvey Lindell, Metro-Goldwyn shipping clerk, Minneapolis, is passing the cigars in honor of a baby girl.



A 400 seat theatre is planned for Maynard, Minn., H. M. Swam, owner of the Pavilion announced this week.

L. E. Davis, Minneapolis First National manager, is one of four men given honorable mention by a committee of Film Boards of Trade for co-operation with regard to fire prevention.

The Minneapois Film Board of Trade re-elected all of its officers at its meeting last week. They are J. E. O'Toole (Producers) president; A. B. Leak (Paramount) vice-president; E. T. Gomersall (Fox) executive secretary.



Following are members of the board of directors: A. H. Fischer (Metro-Goldwyn), Ben Friedman (Friedman), Phil Dunas (Universal). G. R. Bran-Dunas (Universal) and A. H. Fischer (Metro-Goldwyn) are named to the arbitration board. Alternaes are T. J. McEvoy (United Artists) and J. E. Rosen (F. B. O.).

How to Get Service That Sells 52 Times a Year Attendance

The Balaban & Katz System For Winning the Public

Reported by Thomas C. Kennedy

THAT "service" can be something more than a beautiful abstraction — called into action when an advertiser seeks to express in a word that intangible something which he thinks, as a result of natural pride or prejudice, distinguishes him and his organization above his competitor — becomes immediately evident to anyone who observes the service in Balaban & Katz theatres and then takes the trouble to ask questions as to how it is obtained.

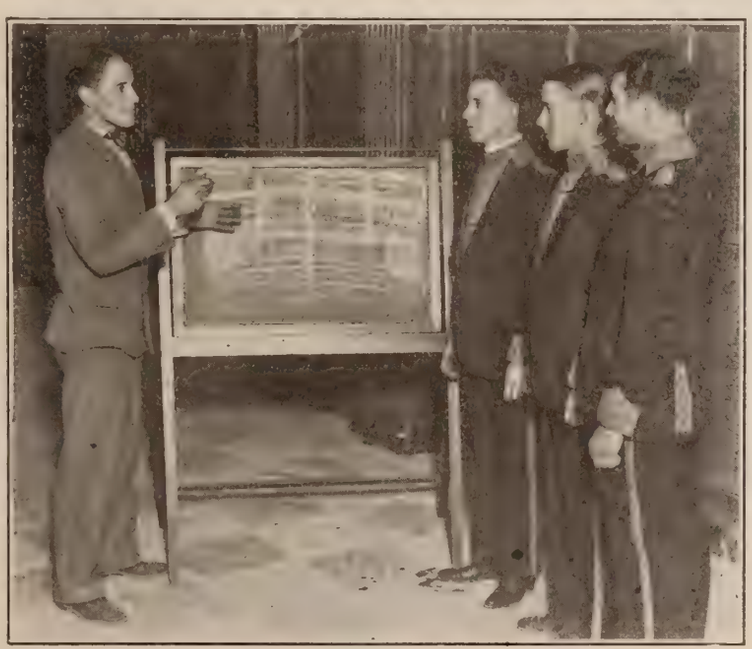
To summarize in advance of a complete presentation of the facts let us say that service of the kind that is now in force at the Metropolitan in Boston, newest of the big theatres devoted to motion picture presentation, can be installed in every theatre, regardless of location, size or the type of patronage. In making such a statement we are aware that there is no such thing as complete standardization and that the proverbial "grain of salt" must be added to standard formulae when prescribed for a person or thing that is individualistic and possesses traits not peculiar to those for which the formula was synthetized. In a word, the system must be adapted to peculiar conditions, but that it can be adapted and thus installed there is no doubt.

In the first place the aim, the ideal, behind the service that has distinguished the Balaban & Katz theatres — and which has been installed at the Metropolitan in Boston, that being the first new enterprise of the newly combined Famous Players-Lasky-B & K theatre organizations—is "fifty-two times a year attendance" for every person who enters the theatre. The principle here is one of absolutely sound merchandising. Nationally advertised articles are not restricted to one or two merchants in a town. Pictures that gain a national reputation may be had sooner or later by most any theatre. It is up to the merchant or the theatre man, therefore, to excell his competitor in some matter apart from the merchandise itself.

The solution of this merchandising problem, is service. The picture theatre sells entertainment. If it depends wholly upon the entertainment the picture producers make it is manifestly at the mercy of the picture producers. If it sells the principle of entertainment plus the comforts and convenience and courtesy which naturally go with the thing people attending a theatre enjoy, then that theatre makes a double appeal to that person for his or her continued patronage. Pictures cannot be depended upon entirely—we have the good and the bad, the fair and the mediocre and the poor, yet the theatre must be kept going, it must pay a return on the investment by continued and continuous operation.

All of this leads us to the point of accepting the fifty-two times a year attendance as a sound business principle. You cannot depend upon your pictures — because you don't make them — but you can depend upon your service, your courtesy and consideration of a patron's comfort and good will, because that is entirely up to you.

According to the Balaban & Katz System there are three main divisions of the house service. These are Courtesy expressed through the employes who come into direct contact with the public; the Lost and Found Department—which takes advantage of the opportunity to build good will by showing the greatest consideration for the person who has lost some article while at the theatre; and the janitor service—which is responsible for keeping the house immaculately clean; and the ventilation.



A TREMENDOUS amount of detail enters into the organization and maintainence of such a system and we daresay a complete work on the subject would occupy an entire volume, but the effort will be made to indicate the highlights as revealed in an interview which the writer had with Ralph E. Crabill, house manager of the Metropolitan and for three years or more associated with the B & K theatres in Chicago, where he served as assistant manager of the Tivoli and as manager of McVickers Theatre.

The personnel which comes into contact with the public is divided into two main divisions — the department of the front, which includes the cashiers and the doormen — and the house personnel, the directors and ushers.

Beginning with the cashiers, it is necessary that they be pleasant, responsive and speedy in making change, risking the mistake of over-changing, because it is essential that tickets be sold fast in order to keep the line at the box office down to a minimum, since many people will go along to some other house rather than wait in line to see a performance of first preference.

Doormen must be alert to answer questions regarding the program and the time of exhibition of each unit as well as act as representatives of the management to the man "on the street."

Ushers are expected to direct patrons to vacant seats, graciously and efficiently. Here there are two main considerations, the comfort of the patron and the efficient "filling" of the house. It is up to the directors

Blackboard lectures for ushers are a regular weekly feature of service maintenance at the Famous Players-Lasky-Balaban & Katz Metropolitan theatre in Boston.

Building Patronage With Service

to send people to that part of the house which has the greatest number of vacant seats. Herein lies a trick which involves applied psychology. It is difficult to get people to go to the balcony, yet the directors in a B & K house must assume the responsibility for getting them there. The method is this: If there are a greater number of seats in the balcony than the orchestra, the director announces "balcony seats up the stairs, orchestra seats are to your right" (or left). The director, in other words, announces first the location to which he wishes to direct patrons. He is instructed to look directly at a certain person, usually the leader of a group, in the blocs of people which enter the foyer at rush times. It has been found that if you can get the first few of a group to start toward the balcony, the majority of the others will follow.

There are "executive ushers" as well as ushers. The executives direct the filling of the house, an important matter indeed. Effort is made to fill the house to form a pyramid—the lines of the pyramid narrowing toward the front. This is done by having ushers announce "these seats are more nearly the centre" as they show patrons to chairs further distant from the screen. The aisles are filled from the center toward the ends, each empty row being started by having patrons go in to the center of the row.

Ushers are trained in the physical make-up of the theatre by means of blackboard lectures. No usher is allowed to go on the floor before he has received at least 12 hours instruction in blackboard drills, personal deportment, etc.

The efficiency is maintained by having meetings weekly for the entire house staff. In addition to this, each relief of ushers and doormen, is instructed by the assistant manager before it leaves the locker room and again upon its return from duty, at which time the suggestions for improvement in the work just done are pointed out.

"Next aisle for seats, please." One of the Metropolitan theatre ushers demonstrating the correct pose, gesture and facial expression in directing a patron.

The janitor service is equally important. The house manager makes a thorough inspection each day of the entire theatre. Specks of dust on a marble staircase, partially cleaned rugs, improperly polished glass—all these details are noted and instructions for their correction are listed in a book of instructions which is left for the chief janitor each evening.

The importance of good janitor service cannot be exaggerated. In the first place, a thoroughly cleaned theatre is more attractive to patrons, and in the second scrupulous upkeep of the draperies, decorations, floors, walls and ceilings of a theatre means that general redecoration and refurnishing will not be necessary as frequently as if things are permitted to run down.

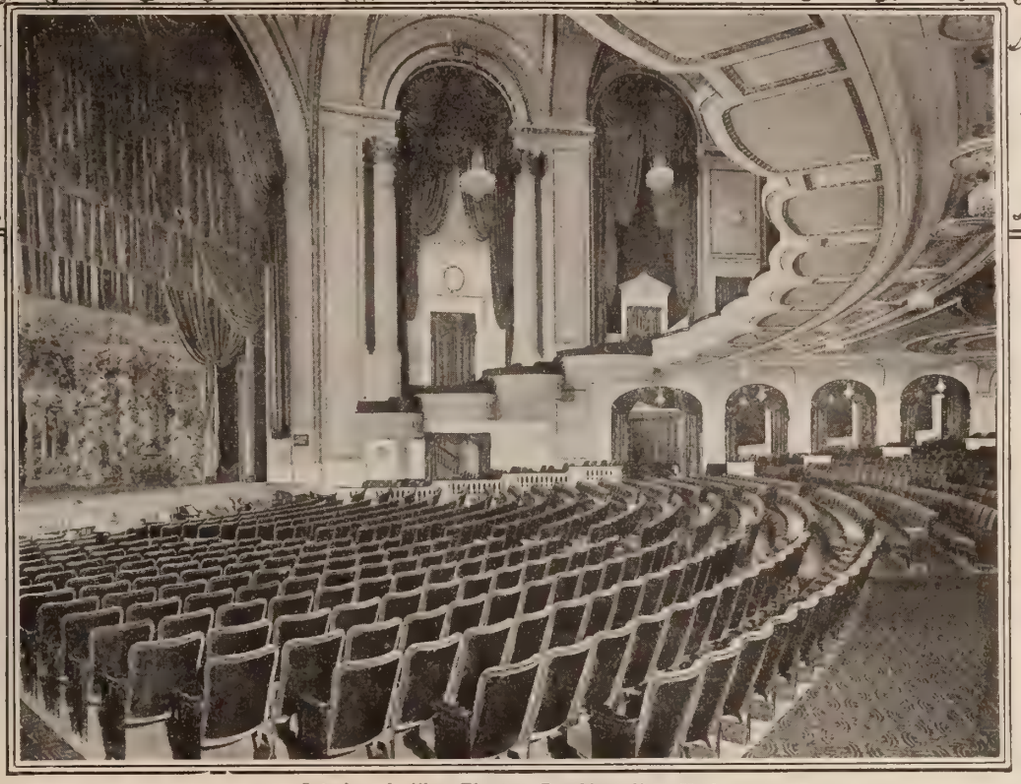
Ventilation is another important factor. Good air, once patrons become accustomed to it, is as important as good pictures. The comfort of a patron must be insured before you can insure satisfactory entertainment, for no matter how appealing the performance, if the air is stuffy the spectator cannot give that undivided attention to the performance which is essential to its success. The theatre must be warm in winter and cool in summer and at all times the air must be in circulation and fresh.

The lost and found department of a theatre is one of the most certain of good-will builders. The most insignificant article in point of intrinsic value may be of great sentimental value to the person who lost it. A ten-cent toy, just purchased for a youngster, has the greatest personal value to the child or the parent and the theatre manager who shows a disposition to do all in his power to return it to the loser will earn the lasting good will of that person.

In the Balaban & Katz houses there is an elaborate lost and found department. Printed cards are on hand to give to patrons reporting a loss in order that they might note down the time of the loss and a thorough description of the article, along with their home address and phone number. All reported losses are followed up with the greatest care. The moment an article is found it is reported to the loser by phone if possible. The claim cards are gone over regularly, and notes sent out saying that the search is being conducted. At the expiration of two weeks if an article reported lost is not found, there is a regular form letter sent out. This letter expresses the regret of the management that the article has not been located and states that if it is found in the future it will be immediately reported and returned to the loser.

These are the three fundamentals of first-rate house service. The elements represent the cardinal principles of good service. Their organization and maintenance has been reduced to a technic in the B & K theatres. This technic, with regard to the training and direction of ushers, doormen and cashiers, will be explained in greater detail in a future article in this department.

A New Face



LAST week we introduced this new department. Its function is the approach of problems that are today constantly confronting the up-to-date exhibitor from a totally different angle than has ever been done. The very name of this department, Theatre Management, Equipment, Construction and Operation immediately suggests its potentially unlimited scope of usefulness and general reader interest. We have tackled a big job in living up to the fulfillment of that head, but we intend to do it—with your cooperation.

Very logically the management and operation of a house is closely tied in with its up-to-dateness of equipment and construction. They all go hand in hand in modern showmanship. This was concretely demonstrated in articles presented in this department last week on the new Metropolitan Theatre that has just opened in Boston.

The manager who endeavors to remain proficient in all the angles of showmanship that are necessary to make the strongest appeal to critical audiences of to-day needs to be wide awake. He must review and digest every new idea that he learns about and a great many more were he able to lay hands on them. Right here is where this department will prove its greatest service. We intend to pry into remote corners of this business in our effort to bring to light that which is original and effective. Methods that are proving their worth as standards with large operating companies will also be presented. And by "presented" we are not speaking of abstract generalities but detailed analysis that can be used as workable skeletons.

These pages are for you to command. Management, Operation, Construction and Equipment—you yourself must have many valuable thoughts about them. We welcome your contributions and criticisms which will all go toward making this department the source of authentic information and practical initiative.

Catering to Fifth Avenue's Taste in Photoplay Entertainment

THE Plaza theatre, located at Madison Avenue and 59th St., New York City, claims a place among the most interesting picture houses in the world. Its location brings it into the sphere of neighborhood activities of the "elite" of New York and at the same time within reach of the "four million" which O. Henry discovered in a city noted for its "four hundred."

The Plaza is a neighborhood theatre just a short distance from the Broadway cinema palaces. It does a neighborhood business and draws its patrons from the ranks of the most discriminating people in Manhattan. Proportionately, a greater number of its patrons drive up to its doors in private motors, than any other picture theatre in New York and probably you will see more people in evening dress at a performance there than you will see—proportionately to its capacity of course—at any other photoplay theatre in the country.

Judged by such standards, the Plaza is the finest neighborhood theatre in the country—only these standards don't go far enough to give the theatre such classification without qualification. However, it must be admitted, that the theatre manager who can make a "go" of the Plaza, stands a good chance of being rated a king among neighborhood theatre managers.

The owner and operator of the Plaza is Leo Brecher. To begin with, an interview with Mr. Brecher cannot be productive of alleged standardized rules for the successful operation of a neighborhood house—for Brecher is not one to believe that a rule of thumb can be evolved for theatre management. In addition to the Plaza he operates the Olympia at Broadway and 107th St., the Boston Road, in the Bronx, and the Verona, at 2nd Ave. and 108th St.—in the heart of "Little Italy."

The policy of the Plaza is "pictures only." There are no "presentations," no specialty acts; no attempts at creating an atmosphere for a picture, for says Brecher "if a director is not successful in creating the right atmosphere for his story, we cannot do anything for him."

"Our patrons want to see pictures. In many instances they come here because they know the emphasis is on pictures and to get away from the elaborate bills which combine presentations with the photoplays.

"So far as making up a program is concerned, we try to give the patrons of the Plaza the best pictures obtainable. Booking arrangements interfere with the unrestricted application of this principle; however, we do the best we can, and a rigid adherence to the policy that the best obtainable pictures will be shown, has built up a confidence in the Plaza which expresses itself in the week-in and week-out attendance of a large number of people who live in the neighborhood.

"The booking problem—so far as chosing the pictures is concerned that is—has no great difficulties. Not every photoplay that succeeds at the Plaza will succeed at the Verona, for example. However, there are two general types of pictures which "go over" everywhere. These are the comedies and the melodramas—the plays which deal with clear-cut issues. Society plays concerned the finer adjustments of social relations have, comparatively, a limited appeal.

Interior view of the Plaza theatre, Madison avenue and 59th street, New York—known as "smart New York's Favorite Movie."

"I can say that the people who sit in the balcony of the Plaza (where the admission is 25 cents as against 65 cents in the first balcony and orchestra) appreciate the programs we stage as much as the others. Moreover, a thing which proves that there is not limited appeal to the performances is the fact that on Saturday and Sunday nights we have many people from the East Side, who come ready to pay the full 65 cents admission price.

"I cannot frame a formula for the arrangement of a program and conduct of a theatre which will succeed in every neighborhood. I know what is successful in the neighborhoods where I operate houses. In all of them there is the insistence upon courtesy toward the public, and the tenet is as rigidly observed in the Bronx as it is here at the Plaza.

"You must give the people the kind of entertainment they want, and beyond an estimate which can be formed by any trained theatre manager immediately upon studying his situation, the best way to find out what kind of a show to give your patrons is to make a few mistakes—you will soon find out your mistakes, if you are as closely in touch with your public as you should be.

"Here at the Plaza we tried presentations, elaborate musical renditions, stage numbers—and we were promptly informed that the majority of our patrons felt they would rather go to the Metropolitan Opera House if they wanted Opera; to the night clubs if they wanted to hear a jazz orchestra; to the musical comedy if they wanted dancing or singing acts. So we concentrated on pictures.

"We advertise in the newspapers, naturally, but great attention is given to the mail advertising. We issue a weekly bulletin, giving the program for the week and containing an editorial and brief notes of interest concerning pictures and the activities of the theatre.

"When the quality of the picture permits, we give our personal endorsement to the feature attraction and never fail to call to the attention of our patrons the merit of a picture when that merit is manifest, always using this angle to draw attention to the fact that the Plaza management is ever on the alert to obtain the best pictures possible.

"Frequently we are forced to play a picture which has been played to death all around us. If an outstanding production of this sort comes along, we play it, feeling that we must keep faith with our patrons by showing them the pictures which are of outstanding merit, even if it means a decrease in the business we will do for the engagement—a decrease due to the fact that the presentation has been seen by a certain proportion of the regular patrons of the Plaza."

Westinghouse makes every Film a "Feature"

THE theatre owner's sincere efforts to obtain the best productions for his patrons, often are unappreciated because of poor power for his projection machines.

With the installation of Westinghouse Motor Generator equipment you are protected against the usual generator troubles. A complete line of these sets is available—always one that will meet your particular needs. Each set comes complete with all accessories—no shopping around for starter, switches, control panel, and rheostats. A representative specialist is available in practically every city to aid you in solving particular problems. The service of a national organization accompanies each installation.

Theatre goers are quick to appreciate your efforts to make each film a feature by installing dependable generator equipment, and they show their appreciation by regular attendance.

Get in touch with a Westinghouse representative today. He is your friend and will help you get "BETTER PROJECTION."

Does the De Luxe Program Require Shorter Features?

Eric T. Clarke, General Manager of the Eastman Theatre, Says "Yes," and Tells the Reason Why

A two hour program or a two and one-half hour one—which is the ideal length? Mr. Clarke favors the two hour show and says he believes it is here to stay.

The ideal two-hour program according to the experience of the management of the Eastman Theatre in Rochester, N. Y., contains the following numbers, with the time allowed for each unit, as given by Mr. Clarke:

Overture—eight minutes; news reel—ten minutes; prologue or presentation number—ten minutes; comedy or novelty—ten minutes feature—one hour and twenty minutes.

And, he adds, every feature that runs over the hour and twenty minutes period "hurts its own chances of success by its length."

ONE thing that the program de luxe of the motion picture theatre means is shorter feature films, according to Eric T. Clarke, general manager of the Eastman theatre, Rochester, which in the past three years has attracted more than 6,000,000 persons.

Mr. Clarke declares that the past year has seen an improvement in the curtailment of unnecessary long films, but that this improvement can and will be carried further.

"They have been too long," says Mr. Clarke. "This season has brought us more features of right length, but there are still a lot of productions in eight reels that could well have been made in seven. And again suppose they had been made in seven.

"It is this way. The two hour show may not be the ideal length in theory; possibly a two and one-half hour show would be more satisfying. I doubt this. It is, however, a debatable question. The point against the longer program is the practical consideration of how to accommodate audiences. A two-hour-plus program would be likely to keep audiences waiting; it would mean cause of dissatisfaction to patrons and loss to the exhibitor.

"I believe the two-hour program has come to stay. Now we need variety in our programs. The greater the variety, the more satisfying the bill. In this respect the experience of the motion picture theatre parallels that of vaudeville.

"Every bill should contain an overture. We have found this an ideal number, if about eight minutes long. Every second more than nine minutes takes away from whatever success with the crowd you may have been achieving up to that point. Take note that this makes the selection of overtures something to engage attention, to get variety, appeal and proper length.

"Every bill should contain a weekly film news number. I consider the weekly, if good, next in importance to the feature. We have tried all sorts of lengths and have made up our minds to certain things. First, if less than six minutes in length the weekly leaves the audience dissatisfied. The average subject runs somewhere between one and one and one-half minutes. Five subjects are too little.

"Second, you can show news up to fourteen or fifteen minutes without tiring your audiences. Feature lengths, however, are such that we do not show news above ten minutes usually. We take all four news services and make for ourselves a composite Eastman Theatre Current Events.

"Every bill should have an act. This can vary all the way from a tableau shown for half a minute or so, which we have to arrange when we get a long feature, to a big act of 25 minutes. We rarely exceed ten minutes of an act, since, if we have time, we find it better to program two acts instead of one.

"Every bill should have comedy or novelty film of some kind. It diversifies the show and it is practical too, for if placed after the feature and before the overture, it permits the seating of crowds before the overture starts.

"Now to sum up, we have this time table: Overture, eight minutes; weekly, ten minutes; act, ten minutes; comedy or novelty, ten minutes.

"If we take these as our minimum, a feature film that runs longer than an hour and twenty minutes will hurt its own chances of success by its length.

"What can be done in the art of concise presentation has never been demonstrated to better purpose than in 'He Who Gets Slapped,' where a story of intricacy, full of details, was excellently presented in a 70 minute film. This was a great credit to Metro-Goldwyn and to Victor Seastrom, the director. Had this been a longer picture, I do not think it could have such a remarkable success as it did.

"Producers are realizing that the program de luxe has been taken into public favor; that such a program of necessity confines the length to which its feature may run. And we are getting shorter films, and better films as a result. But it is only just now that we are seeing how completely a picture can tell an intricate story without inclusion in it of a single unnecessary detail, line or picture episode. Before long we shall tell stories in pictures as de Maupassant told them in words; perhaps this may mean some day a masterpiece.

Eric Clarke, managing director of the Eastman theatre, Rochester, N. Y.

Howard Waugh Resigns As Manager Of Alhambra

Howard Waugh, manager of the Alhambra Theatre, Milwaukee, since it was taken over by Universal last August, has resigned. He is succeeded at the Alhambra by Harry E. Long.

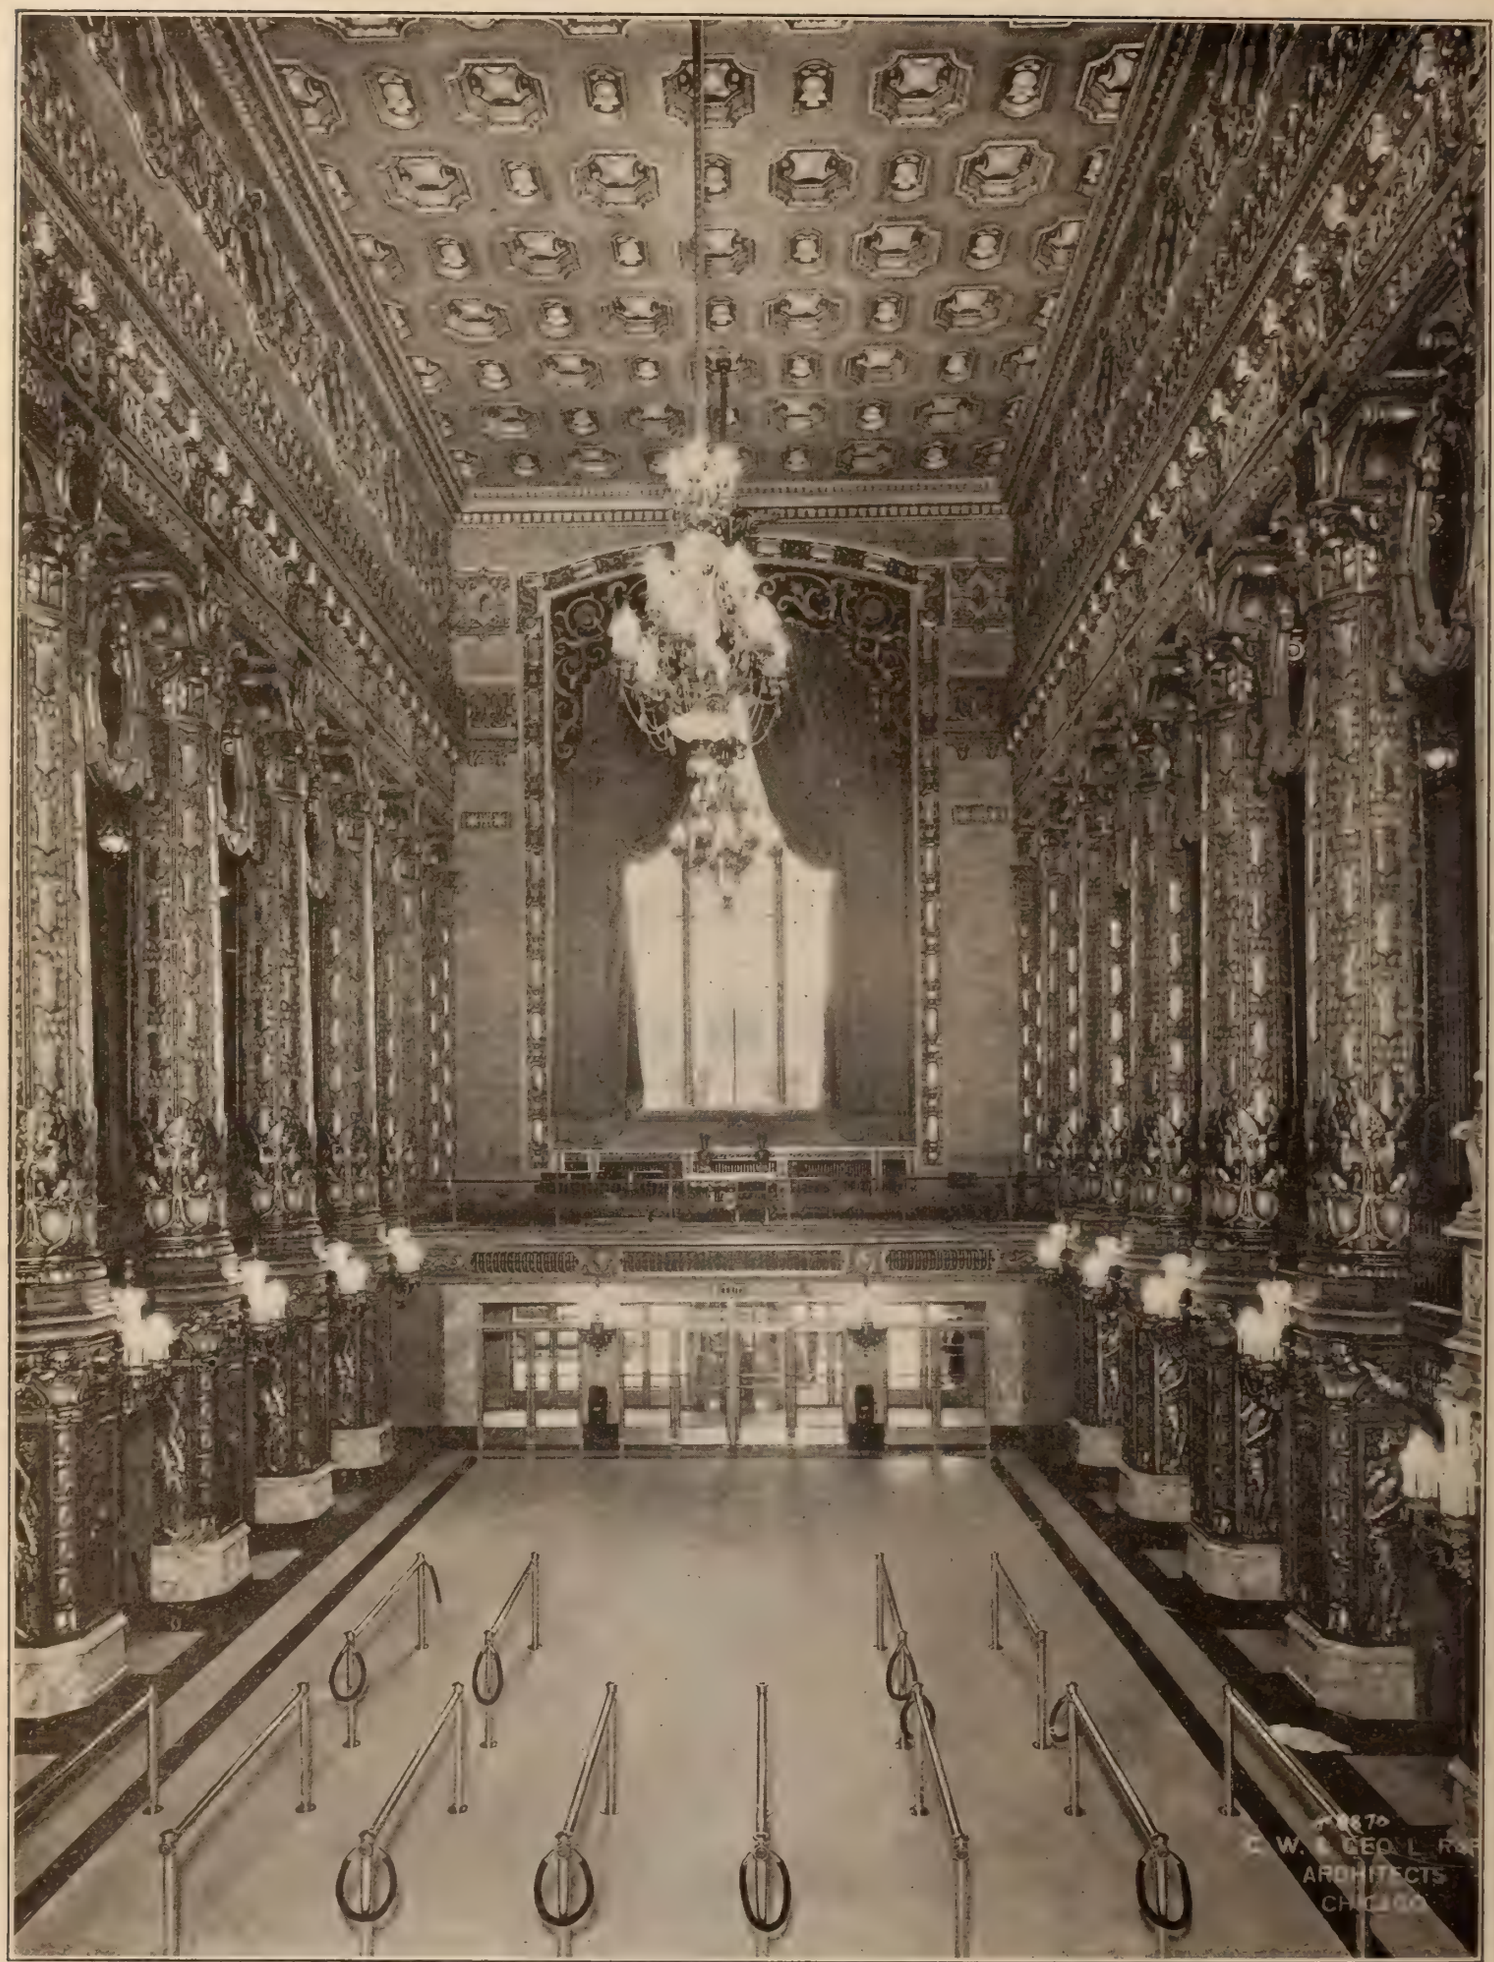
It is reported Waugh will join the Saxe circuit in an important capacity. Under his regime the Alhambra became the storm center of downtown theatre competition in Milwaukee, a great revival of popular patronage having been restored to the theatre in the past four months. The Alhambra was the first large theatre in Milwaukee to inaugurate a picture policy—which was instituted there fifteen years ago.

Kuebler Transferred To Majestic In Harrisburg

Announcement is made that Samuel A. Kuebler manager of the Colonial Theatre, Harrisburg, will be transferred to a similar post at the Majestic in February when the latter house, now devoted to vaudeville and pictures, will become a legitimate theatre. Clyde Gibble, present manager of the Majestic, and his staff will be transferred to the new State Theatre, which will be completed at that time and will be a vaudeville and picture house with seating capacity of 2,500. The State is being rebuilt on the site of the old Orpheum, formerly a legitimate theatre.

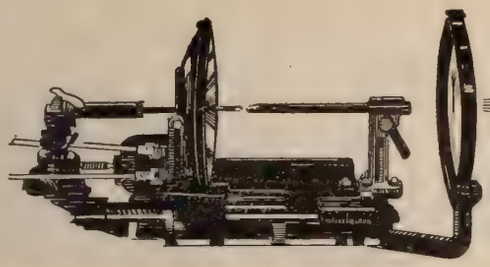
Will Circuit Presentations To Fond Du Lac Theatre

The stage presentations from the Capitol Theatre, Chicago, which are now being presented at the Alhambra Theatre, Milwaukee, will be taken in unit form to the new Fond du Lac Theatre at Fond du Lac, Wis., where they will establish a new standard in picture house operation for the city.



You know in advance

Pictures printed on Eastman Positive Film carry the photographic quality of the negative through to the screen.



It takes but a moment to check up —a glance in the margin tells the story. When you see the black-lettered identification "Eastman" "Kodak" you know in advance that the picture will screen with the brilliancy your audiences expect.

An Amazing Difference!

Pictures that on the average screen are dull, shadowy and tiresome, snap out clear, lively and bright on a Super-Lite Screen.

That is because practically all the light that falls on the silvery surface of a Super-Lite Screen is reflected.

Super-Lite Screens give the equivalent of higher intensity light sources at a fraction of their cost. They are made from fine, sturdy material and last for years.

Standardized Screen Brightness Part IV

STANDARDIZATION seems to be the order of the day. This is particularly true in connection with the manufacture of commodities where the annual loss resulting from the duplication and competitive effort entailed by a needless variety of articles, all intended to meet the same needs, runs up into figures so large that they no longer possess any significance to the average human being.

A gentleman by the name of Herbert E. Hoover, is authority for the statement, made not so long ago, that about forty percent of all the productive effort in the United States is wasted due to needless duplication involved in producing endless varieties of articles when a few would answer the purpose in a far better fashion.

It was further brought out that the money so wasted every year would pay for all the automobiles, houses and clothing purchased each year with a few sightseeing trips to Europe, the North Pole, Mars and the Moon thrown in on the side. And to think that we are losing all this each year just because the piano manufacturers insist on making 119 different sizes of piano stools when 12 are all that are needed; brick manufacturers are producing over a hundred different sizes and forms of bricks when eight would do just as well, etc.

But cheer up—we may yet live to participate in the free distribution of homes, automobiles, radios, coal and the other luxuries of life since Mr. Hoover, whose pet hobby is curtailing just such wastes as these, is actively engaged in convincing manufacturers of the necessity of standardizing their products and has already induced a number of them to do so.

And now we learn that the incandescent lamp manufacturers of their own volition are about to bring out a new standard line of five lamps which will replace no less than 45 types heretofore in common use. These lamps will be of 15, 25, 40, 60 and 100 watts size and all will be frosted inside the bulb. There will no longer be any excuse for the frightful lighting conditions observed in some theatres.

Elimination of Waste

It may seem like a far cry from the standardization of manufactured products to the standardization of screen brightness in theatres yet the two subjects have for a common goal the elimination of waste.

Such standardization in theatres may not have the far reaching effects as promised for it in other lines and may not even result in the free distribution of a single theatre ticket, yet proportionate benefits will inevitably result from its adoption.

Like in the manufacturing business, so in the picture industry, beneficial results will be obtained by all parties concerned. The producer will avoid much film waste in addition to acquiring prestige for making good pictures; the exhibitor will save appreciable sums on power and other operating items besides encouraging patronage by presenting better pictures and more favorable viewing conditions; and the theatre going public will realize the fullest enjoyment under comfortable conditions without risking the loss of an eye or two.

Surely such results are worth striving for.

Difference in Eyes

The interests of the producer and exhibitor have been sketched in preceding articles and it is now intended to devote a little space to the silent party in this triangular affair—the public.

This factor called "seeing" is a peculiar thing. It appears that the eyes of no two persons are the same and therein lies one of the difficult kinks in the proposed standardization of screen brightness.

The interior of a motion picture theatre, while a show is in progress, affords a most excellent opportunity for studying the visual characteristics of various persons as they proceed down the aisles to select seats.

Incidentally, the student of psychology would also find much food for thought were he to observe closely the process unconsciously followed by most patrons in selecting their places.

Couples, by far, are the most interesting since they provide the material for the mental clash which usually occurs. The variety is large and runs to old couples, young couples, middle-aged couples, and the very young things, married couples and single couples, those who are engaged and those who are not—the close observer can usually place them all.

And the easiest thing of all is the determination of which member of the couple possesses the dominating force.

To give a few hasty examples: A middle-aged couple, husband and wife, enter the aisle and proceed toward the screen, friend wife in the lead, each scrutinizing the seats as they pass. The husband hesitates before two vacant seats about three quarters the way from the screen while his spouse continues on down the aisle finally stopping about half-way to the screen. There follow a few moments of silent combat, each staring at the other after which Mr. husband sheepishly folds his tent and meekly places himself next to his wife who is comfortably settled for the evening's entertainment.

He, on the other hand, after gazing at the screen a few moments brings out his glasses, adjusts them, removes and wipes them, replaces them, pulls down his collar and stretches his neck, coughs, squirms, addresses his wife and, receiving a glare in return, settles down to an evening of fidgity silence.

A nice young couple follow, obviously too considerate of each other to be married. They proceed down the aisle together hesitating at possibly half a dozen places to make a decision, each trying not to force his or her preference upon the other. They finally occupy seats which neither of them would have chosen had each been alone. Happily for them, however, the show is but of secondary importance.

A young married couple enter. How do we know they are married? Easy. While not actually neglecting each other they are sufficiently detached to betray themselves. By this time the house is becoming filled and the husband spotting two vacant seats well toward the rear makes a move to occupy them. His partner objects and there follows a whispered one-sided argument during which it develops that he can see with equal ease from any part of the theatre whereas she must be near the screen. So, leading the way, she proceeds down the aisle and unerringly chooses those seats which require the greatest number of people to stand up to permit her to pass.

Only a Few

These cover only a very few of the number of such cases which have actually been observed. There are many varieties of them—almost as many as there are couples—but they all point to the same thing—that as far as movies are concerned every person's eyes are different and what may be correct in one case will be wrong in another.

We are often led to wonder with what hidden grace seats are accepted in a crowded house when no choice as to location is possible. The mad scramble by some to exchange seats during the brief interval between shows may throw some light on this.

Sit Apart

The stage manager of a large chain of theatres operating in the east one day confided to the writer that he had observed the same conflicting tendencies in couples entering his theatres and had become so interested in it that he had taken to advising couples among his acquaintances to sit apart rather than together in a motion picture theatre so that both members could then see the picture under conditions favorable to each. He claims that no less than twelve couples have followed his advice, and have now become enthusiastic supporters of the idea.

When we see such things as these occurring in the large houses we sometimes wonder if theatre builders are not overstepping themselves just a little in their efforts to build "the biggest yet."

If carried any further we may yet live to participate in the free distribution of binoculars to those of us compelled to occupy rear seats in the "super-house" of the future.

A maximum viewing distance of 175 feet, and a maximum projection distance of 125 feet are both sensible and practical.

Rowland and Clark to Erect 5000 Seat Theatre in Downtown Pittsburgh

WORK will be started May 1st, on one of the finest theatres and office building structures in the world, when Rowland and Clark, operators of an extensive chain of high grade theatres in Western Pennsylvania, will break ground for their new downtown theatre.

These progressive theatre owners have just acquired by purchase the entire block at Liberty Avenue, Seventh Street and Penn Avenue, a portion of which at Seventh and Penn will be used for a nine-story office building and theatre. The property takes in the Y. M. C. A. holdings 60 x 240 feet at Seventh and Penn, the Ross estate 30 x 120 feet, the Kaufman estate 50 x 120 ft., the Buhl property 40 x 120 ft., all on Liberty Avenue; the Penn Building 80 x 120 ft., and the Buhl property 40 x 120 ft.. on Penn Avenue. The site was acquired at a reported cost of $3,000,000.

The site is considered the most logical in the city for the purpose being within a block of practically every car line entering the downtown section, and being but a short distance from Fifth avenue.

The plans call for a theatre auditorium to seat appro imately 5,000 people. with entrance at the corner of Liberty and Seventh street. Work on the Penn avenue portion of the structure will be rushed to completion, so as to open the theatre next fall. Work on the Liberty avenue end of the building which will be devoted entirely to office space will not be started before May 1, 1929. The entire Liberty avenue frontage as well as both the Seventh street and Penn avenue frontage, will be occupied by stores with offices on the eight upper floors. The Penn avenue and Seventh street shops will be shallow depth and all offices will have outside exposure. The foyer to the theatre will be finished in genuine Italian marble with mural paintings interpaneled, all of which will be indirectly lighted with twenty different colors of lights. The auditorium itself, as designed by Victor A. Rigaumont, prominent local architect, will be the last word in theatre design. The balcony approach from the beautiful foyer will be by a grand staircase, the design of which is an improvement worked up from the most prominent similar stair-cases built throughout the entire country within the last four years. The proscenium arch when completed will equal the famous arch in Sid Grauman's Egyptian theatre in Hollywood. Over the arch will be an especially designed sounding board, never before used in this country. Abroad it has been used with decided success on a smaller scale, providing perfect acoustics.

The stage is reported the largest one between New York and Chicago and will be capable of housing the largest stage attractions that have ever been known to leave either of those cities. It will be equipped with a large tank for the accommodation of aquatic acts. The entire orchestra pit, which accommodates a sixty piece orchestra, and the two twin consoles of the $100,000 organ will be on an elevator, so that during the overtures and organlogues the entire orchestra will be raised six feet above the floor line. The organ will be one of the largest and most complete in the country. The construction of it combines enough wire and cables to fully equip a town of 10,000 people, with electric lights and telephone service. The organ lofts above the orchestra boxes will be worked out into miniatures of the stage and proscenium arch itself. The ceiling will be a marvelous dome effect, indirectly lighted by 10,000 bulbs. Special lighting effects have been designed in the proscenium arch to throw a direct light on the stage, providing a wonderful lighting effect upon the performers, heretofore unobtained. One of the most efficient cooling systems ever devised will be installed to provide a cool, delightful atmosphere, positively without drafts, even on the hottest summer day.

A plaster model of the interior of the theatre is being constructed at the present time for the study of the architect and engineers to provide against even minor faults in the construction. This model will be placed on display at an early date.

Shea's Buffalo Theatre to Have Special Organ

The Rudolph Wurlitzer company has started the preliminary work of installing the new organ in Shea's new Buffalo theatre. The organ is a four manual instrument of special specifications to represent a complete symphony orchestra. Two stops which display wonderful tone color are the Tuba Mirabils, and the 16 foot English horn, which are used for solo effects. Over 400 miles of electrical wiring, conecting with 54,000 silver contacts, brings the instantaneous control of every pipe and special effect in this mammoth instrument to the finger tips of the organist. The instrument contains over 3,600 electrical magnets. Tons of metal went into the manufacture of the metal pipes, and over 15,000 feet of the best grades of lumber was required. The smallest pipe is one-half inch long and of the diameter of a straw. The largest pipe is 32 feet in length and 30 inches square. It weighs half a ton.

Easton, Pa. Theatre To Open February 1st

Acording to present plans, Wilmer & Vincent's Colonial Theatre, Easton, Pa., which has been in course of construction for some time, will have a formal opening February 1st. The supervision of construction is in the hands of Edward P. Ruddin, assistant to Frederick Osterstock, general representative for Wilmer & Vincent in the Easton-Allentown territory.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Big Parade" — M-G-M., Astor, N. Y.

World: "Those who lived through the war but did not see it and those who knew the war but despaired of ever telling what they have known can turn to Laurence Stallings' moving picture, 'The Big Parade.' Here is the war told by a soldier who became an artist. Here is the whole of it—saying good-by and marching away, and shoveling manure and eating and brawling and making love, and being afraid and going on, the whole Calvary of the young men. We have heard before that their story could be told. But here at last it has been told."

Evening World: "'The Big Parade' is the sort of entertainment that grows on the spectator when he has time to think instead of to feel. John Gilbert and Renee Adoree divide first honors in the acting, and Gilbert's work, in particular, shines because it presents such a contrast to his part of the Prince in 'The Merry Widow,' which is showing just across the street. Few imagined that Renee could do such excellent work as appears in her Melisande. But Tom O'Brien, as Bull, and to even greater degree, Karl Dane, as Slim, give performances in supporting roles that would win honors in any company."

Post: "Adjectives, even those of the superlative variety, manage to convey very little meaning when applied to 'The Big Parade.' It is a real picture of the war, John Gilbert, a young man whose starring contract is still fairly new, is now playing on Broadway in two of the best pictures seen hereabout in a long, long time. In 'The Merry Widow,' at the Embassy, he appears as the gay and dashing Prince Danilo. At the Astor he is Jim Apperson, an American doughboy in France. Mr. Gilbert, apparently, has no intention of falling into that trap set for all popular screen stars—a type part."

Telegraph: "By all odds the best war picture. Remarkable in its humanness, honest and gripping appeal, it will rank with all the big pictures and exceed the success of many."

Telegram: "John Gilbert as the Amerian doughboy, and Renee Adoree as the French mamselle, win oft-repeated tributes of applause, cheers, laughter and tears, while the big scenes of the Argonne fighting and the lost battalion thrill even the most indifferent. The Astor theatre is the mecca of film fans at the present moment, judging by the hundreds who are turned away at every performance."

"Clash of the Wolves"—Warner, Warners, New York

Journal: "This dog is a great actor. He registers all the emotions in a perfectly delightful manner, jumps over cliffs and races through gorgeous western scenery. Charles Farrel is a good-looking youngster and June Marlowe makes an attractive heroine."

Morning Telegraph: "As usual Rin-Tin-Tin shows how acting on the screen should be done. When he expresses pathos he could make a sob sister overwork, and in this picture he has plenty of opportunity for his weeping willow look. There are many exciting moments and much fast action. Noel Smith in directing it has made the suspense gripping and furnished some delightful touches of humor."

Evening Graphic: "It doesn't matter much what the story is all about, Rinty may be counted upon to do his dog-gone best. Possessing a marvelous intelligence and a seemingly endless bag of tricks, this clever canine is bound to amaze and thrill you."

Sun: "When the camera catches Rin-Tin-Tin in action the result is what is called dynamic screen art. June Marlowe is an attractive heroine, and the photoplay is, all in all, worth seeing."

Evening Post: "That talented actor, Rin-Tin-Tin, is hard at work this week. His pictures are always entertaining as long as the dog actor himself is allowed to hold the center of the stage. He is worth seeing."

Daily Mirror: "What a dog! Rin-Tin-Tin, emotional canine extraordinaire, races about madly and performs miraculous feats."

Herald-Tribune: "Rin-Tin-Tin is superhuman."

American: "Rin-Tin-Tin never fails to live up to the name he has made for himself as a dog actor. He always does something worth looking at."

World: "Rin-Tin-Tin, a magnificent beast, whose every motion is poetry, brings to his role a beauty and an intelligence that cannot be matched."

Times: "Rin-Tin-Tin is an unusually efficient dog. He is very interesting in this picture."

Evening World: "Rin-Tin-Tin is a highly accomplished dog actor. In the current film his talent shines particularly."

"Keeper of Bees"—F. B. O., Capitol, Dallas

News: "The picture version of 'The Keeper of the Bees' is a thoroughly sincere piece of work in which the author's little granddaughter, Gene Stratton, contributes a surprisingly fine performance. . . . sequences refreshing because they have been produced in an unconventional fashion by a director with every detail of the novel at his fingertips and his entire being saturated with the sentimentality with which the author's name has been synonymous. Alyce Mills makes a perfect Gene Stratton-Porter heroine."

"Beautiful City"—First National, Strand, New York

Morning World: "A buttery drama of love among the push-carts is this opus with Richard Barthelmess and Dorothy Gish. With an original opening showing the skyline of New York, which turns out to be 'The Beautiful City,' the piece develops in fine photography the romance of Tony, a sloe-eyed flower-vendor, whom Mr. Barthelmess plays somewhat in the manner of the gentleman in 'The Passing of the Third Floor Back.'"

Morning Telegraph: "Not only the New Yorkers who love their town, but all the rest of the world as well, will be interested in 'The Beautiful City,' at the Strand this week. The director, Kenneth Webb, has done his best work in the tender and touching love scenes between Dick and Dorothy."

Herald-Tribune: "Mr. Barthelmess is fine. He always is, and such peerless players as Dorothy Gish and William Powell have been chosen to interpret the heroine and the villain."

Evening World: "Richard Barthelmess, supported by Dorothy Gish, gives a pleasing performance in 'The Beautiful City,' with New York in the title role."

Evening Graphic: "'The Beautiful City' starring Richard Barthelmess and featuring Dorothy Gish is a short but tense and gripping bit of life of New York's East Side, and tells of one Tony Gillardi and his struggle with a vicious Fate in the person of Nick di Silva (William Powell). As Tony, Barthelmess gives one of the best characterizations of his long career of successes."

"Drusilla With a Million"—F. B. O. St. Louis, St. Louis

Globe-Democrat: "Excellent entertainment. As Drusilla, Mary Carr has one of the triumphs of her career. Priscilla Bonner is a sweet and loving Sally May, and Kenneth Harlan is a satisfactory Collin. Claire du Brey admirably portrays the scheming Daphne."

Post Dispatch: "The photoplay feature 'Drusilla With a Million' is one no movie fan should miss. It grips the interest from first flash to fadeout and is replete with emotional situations."

"The Only Thing" — M-G-M., Capitol, N. Y.

Herald-Tribune: "If anyone would like to get away from the unpleasant realities of life let him betake himself to the Capitol Theatre. He will then spend an hour happily furthering the beautiful princess' courtship, overthrowing the ugly king and leading the revolution. 'The Only Thing' presents a Conrad Nagel new to every one. Elinor Glyn knows how to extract quality when necessary to the betterment of her screen plays. The picture is so charming because it is filled with subtle comedy."

Sun: "In the case of 'The Only Thing' as is in the case of most of the Glyn photoplays, the charm of skillful camera work, of sumptious, gorgeous settings and of pleasing actors raises the affair above the average motion picture. Mme. Glyn does—when all is said and done—know how to keep an audience awake."

American: "The Capitol this week has a gay, impossible picture of romance and royalty. 'The Only Thing' is one of those tales that never has happened; that never could happen, but that every one has a secret longing to see happen. 'The Only Thing' is thoroughly amusing."

Journal: "Eleanor Boardman is regally beautiful in her blonde wig, and the settings of the picture are very well done. Connelly and his two children are amusing."

World: "Miss Boardman and Mr. Nagel are both extremely decorative, and they managed to forget about their excessive good looks and act like human beings in a nebulous cream world. And this, combined with the skillful direction and glamorous photography, made for a thoroughly enjoyable afternoon."

Times: "Miss Boardman is fair and graceful, and Mr. Nagel is immaculate and prepossessing as the Duke. Arthur Edmund Carew has lost none of his talent in depicting villainy. Ned Sparks contributes an amusing performance in the role of the Duke's valet."

Telegraph: "Romance in high life holds sway at the Capitol this week. It is brought to us by means of 'The Only Thing,' written and produced under the supervision of the adept romancer. Elinor Glyn, whose knowledge of the high places where romance flowers—and sometimes flames—has given the screen much it only tried to know before. 'The Only Thing' is entertaining from start to finish."

"The Eagle" — United Artists, Loew's State, L. A.

Record: "Rudolph Valentino loves, fights, disguises and dances in 'The Eagle,' and he acts—acts divinely. Director and scenarist have invented many new ingredients for screen entertainment and have mixed them deftly into a rare and spicy film pudding."

News: "Clarence Brown does a Svengali with Rudolph Valentino, Vilma Banky, Louise Dresser and Albert Conti in 'The Eagle,' now doing a bootleger business at Loew's State. This picture certainly rings the bell and gives Rudolph a come-back as a pulse-bounder, and has placed the nation's leading heart palpitator back on the pedestal where 'The Four Horsemen' put him."

Examiner: "'The Eagle' shows Rudolph Valentino just as the way his public likes him. He is handsome, a bit languorous and always confident that he'll get the girl. He's a real matinee idol."

Herald: "The perfect lover of the screen sets countless hearts aquiver with admiration in 'The Eagle' and Rudolph Valentino evokes thrills and sighs from packed audiences, as he out-sheiks 'The Sheik.'"

Express: "Rudolph Valentino in 'The Eagle' is a thorough man's man, with a well-defined chivalry and code of personal honor."

Mr. Wm. H. Robson,
Exploitation Rep.,
Famous Players Lasky Corp.,
Pittsburgh, Pa.

My dear Bill:

I have your letter of Nov. 30th, and in reply would advise that I am very much enthused with the Spring and Summer line up of "Paramount's Showman's Pictures". The group looks far superior to me than the Spring and Summer group of last year, particularly pictures like Harold Lloyd's "For Heaven's Sake", "The Wanderer" "The Vanishing American" and numerous others. It gives a fellow pep to work with bigger pictures for the Spring and Summer, as after all the public is out picture shopping during these months as they do during the Fall and Winter months.

With very best wishes. I am,

Sincerely yours,

W. S. Walker

Mr. William H. Robson,
Famous Players-Lasky Corp.,
1018 Forbes Street,
Pittsburgh, Pa.

Dear Sir:

I have had the pleasure in going over the Titles, Casts, Stories, etc. of Paramount pictures for release during the coming Spring and Summer, with the line-up including the Harold Lloyds and the big productions like the "Wanderer", "Vanishing American" and "Blind Goddess".

I am sure I will be in position to satisfy the most critical patron and I am sure that I am more than enthusiastic over this line-up.

Yours truly,

Geo. R. Hartman

THE chief prognosticators of our industry said this was going to be a season of comedy. Probably none of them foresaw just how thoroughly their predictions would be fulfilled. Comedy, without doubt, will soon predominate all motion picture entertainment.

The advance of all Short Features has kept pace with the great strides made by Comedy this season. The tremendous momentum with which the Laugh Month movement is going forward is striking testimony to the bigger place that comedies and all Short Features occupy in the plans of exhibitors, both as to the building of programs and their exploitation.

Isn't it significant that in the same season when this trend in picture entertainment is so pronounced, theatre development and theatre building are setting new and staggering records?

Here is a thought that should fill us all with gratitude as the Old Year draws to a close, and inspire us to begin the New Year with renewed faith and increased confidence in the future of Motion Picture Entertainment.

Know how to use light profitably

The first purpose of light is to see by. But merely using light for seeing is not getting full value from it. Light should be used to attract, to beautify — to bring people into your theatre and to contribute to their comfort and pleasure. That is the way to use light profitably.

Light can be fitted to a theatre as music is fitted to a play—adding a little extra touch of beauty, color or decoration wherever needed; creating any desired "effect"—making the theatre more attractive in every way.

Of course it requires skill to use light profitably. Skill that comes only from years of study and experience. But you can have this lighting skill—and simply for the asking.

Our lighting engineers, who have planned the lighting for many of the finest theatres in the country, are at your service—free. If your lighting is not a business-getting feature of your theatre, you need the service of these engineers.

When you mail the attached coupon enclose a brief note asking for lighting service. Our representative will call and study your problem—then very soon you will get detailed recommendations.

To get profitable lighting you must use lamps correctly. To get maximum value from the current you buy, use

Our theatre lighting experts have prepared a Booklet that is a complete treatise on the subject of Theatre Lighting. A few topics covered in this Booklet are—

(1) The proper use of direct and indirect lighting.
(2) The correct intensity of illumination for each department of the theatre.
(3) Decorative and ornamental lighting.
(4) The psychology of light.
(5) Co-ordination of light and music.

Dear Mr. Abrams:

It will perhaps be pleasant news for you to hear that as you predicted, the production, "The Last Edition" was a big success.

It will also be gratifying to you to know that this picture grossed more business in the first two days than the production of Harold Lloyd's "The Freshman" which is saying considerable, as Lloyd has always been a big box office attraction for the exhibitors.

Please accept my thanks for the splendid co-operation extended by your office.

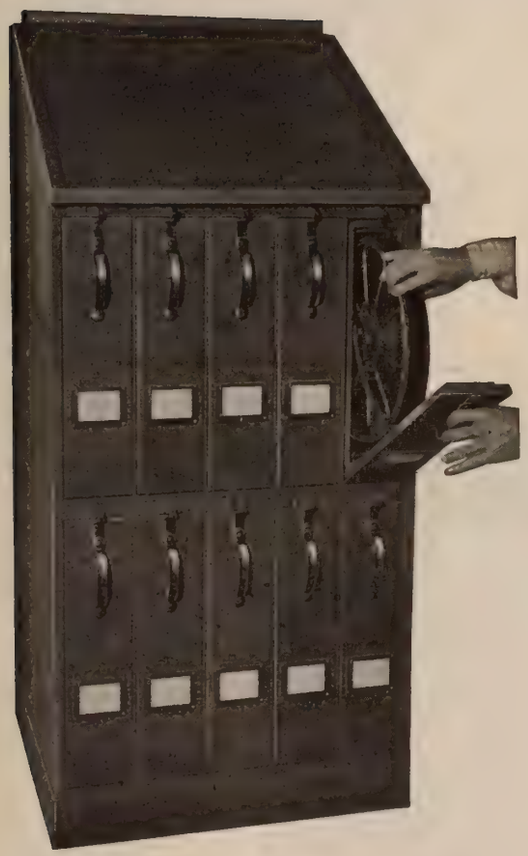
You need this Film-Safe

BECAUSE it protects your films and surrounding property against film storage fire hazards.



BECAUSE it provides a convenient filing cabinet for your films and keeps each film instantly available for use.

BECAUSE it is the only film-safe available that has been listed as standard and labeled by the Underwriters' Laboratories.

BECAUSE it pays for itself. Insurance rating companies make substantial reductions in rates for theatres, studios, exchanges, etc., equipped with American Film-Safes.

Now installed or specified for all Fox Theatres, all new Famous Players' Theatres, many other large and small theatres, Eastman Kodak Studios, Academy of Music, New York, and in many exchanges and laboratories.

There are two sizes of American Film-Safes. Style 1100 has five compartments for five 1,000 foot reels, designed principally for exchanges, studios, laboratories, etc., and style 1200 for five 2,000 foot reels, designed principally for theatre projection booths.

The American Film-Safe

The American Film-Safe is a neat, compact, fireproof filing cabinet for films.

It is made of full cold rolled sheet steel with all joints tenoned and pinned together and is practically indestructible.

The safe is of unit construction and may be added to or rearranged at will. Each film is housed in a separate fireproof compartment and is suspended on a film carriage which automatically moves forward when the door to the compartment is opened. Reels are always readily accessible for handling. Doors to compartments close and fasten automatically.

Each compartment has a bronze label holder on the door into which a card can be inserted so that films can be catalogued or indexed.

American Film-Safes absorb abnormal heat from films and maintain them at normal humidity, thereby increasing the life of the films.

Exterior surfaces are beautifully finished in baked enamel. Interior surfaces are thoroughly protected against rust. Standard colors are olive green with bronze hardware but they may be had in several other finishes.

No matter what size theatre you have it will pay you to install an American Film-Safe. You may purchase one on the deferred payment plan.

Send for full information.

Yes, everybody! January belongs to us!

January is Laugh Month, and First National's comedies top the bill.
January is First National Month—the Record Business month for live exhibitors.
And January is Announcement Month for First National's unprecedented line-up of Winners and Specials, January to June, 1926. All eyes are on First National!

Edwin Carewe presents

"Joanna"

revealing the Girl of To-day

yes, for millions

. . . . . for millions who are reading H. L. Gates' serial in almost two hundred newspapers.

. . . . . for millions who enjoy a human portrayal of the girl of today.

What set crowded houses throbbing at the New York Strand this week? Not the lavish clothes Joanna's million dollars bought; nor the whirl of life into which her money led her. They are striking scenes—but greater still is the drama that comes when Joanna counts up in the end. What's left? That reaches the heart.

Volume XXXII ALBANY, N. Y., AND NEW YORK CITY, December 26, 1925 No. 26

The New Year

IF we were to hazard an opinion on the New Year, we would say that its outstanding phase will be the building of theatres.

The past year, it is true, has also been marked by theatre activity: but largely as a strategic move in connection with the production and distribution of pictures.

The theatre, in fact, for the past several years has been considerably dominated by the other branches of the industry, made subservient to their competitive objectives.

It now would appear that the tail is going to wag the dog.

For years we have talked of fewer, bigger and better pictures, as if they alone counted. Today and from now on we will talk about fewer and bigger and better theatres.

And pictures will have to strain to fill the bill.

When, a few years ago, Balaban and Katz and Rapp & Rapp, architects, decided to reproduce for a theatre lobby the Chapel of Versailles, they started something. Today the big centres of population want the theatre beautiful, and they are going to have it, not merely in the United States but all over the world.

The theatre beautiful demands adequate entertainment, music of the highest order, stage presentations by the greatest of stage artists. So, already, we find workshops starting here and there over the country from which will come forth operettas, revues, ballets of a high order, for full playing time.

These, it is significant, constitute entertainment in themselves; they are not designed to introduce and create atmosphere for the picture.

So it is evident that the production resources of the whole amusement world will be reordered to fit the new exactions of this new kind of theatre.

One stops to wonder just what is going to happen to vaudeville, for one thing.

And one also wonders if the picture studios will be able to tear loose from past policies, as they will have to, and provide pictures that will do their share in filling these thousands of new and costly seats.

The theatre, itself, we repeat, is setting the amusement mark today.

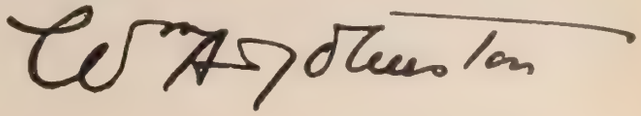
There will be talk, of course, of overbuilding, overseating.



But we also hear of oversaturation in the automobile industry. We have heard it, in fact, every year for the past ten years. This year production has broken all records, yet the public goes right along absorbing the newer and better makes of cars at popular prices. Just so they will fill the newer and better kinds of theatre seats.

It is interesting to recall in this connection that when the Strand Theatre opened in New York the wise ones said it would never go. When the Rialto and Rivoli followed suit, there were grave warnings issued. When the bricks went up in the Capitol the owners of the Rivoli and Rialto hurried to sell out. Yet, today with several more picture houses on Broadway, the foundations are being laid for two of the greatest theatres in the world.

* * *

We are, in fact, just beginning—and we have been somewhat slow—to build the bigger and better theatre.

Speaking Editorially

THE Famous Players-Lasky seventy-two page insert, carried in last week's issue, has attracted wide attention in the trade, not only for the imposing array of product advertised, but also for the excellence of its copy and pictorial layout.

Its message was direct and forceful. The main points with regard to each picture were stressed; there was plenty of display; and the color work added immensely to the total effect. Our congratulations to Russell Holman, the Paramount advertising manager; and the whole organization on so promising a group of pictures advertised in so splendid a way.

A FEW words on the four special articles we are running this week:

A representative group of newspaper critics has picked the "Best Picture of 1925"; and the outstanding actress, actor and director. This is an innovation which will, we believe, attract considerable interest in the industry. Our sincere thanks to the critics for their response to our request; and taking the time and thought necessary to comply with it. Many of their letters contain highly valuable material, to which we shall have occasion to refer in a later issue.

"Theatres." That one word sums up the biggest story of the year, for 1925 has seen a virtual revolution in the exhibition field. The subject is one of vast importance. It is treated in this issue by J. S. Dickerson, Associate Editor of THE NEWS. He has made the theatre situation his special study for two years.

Our old friend, Laurence Reid, for many years THE NEWS photoplay critic, and now in an important editorial post with the Brewster Publications, contributes his customary critical review of the picture year. This has been a feature of our Christmas issues so long that the mind of man runneth not to the contrary. And Mr. Reid's comment is, as always, sparkling and wise.

"Europe On the Eve of 1926" is the subject of an article by L. C. Moon, one of our staff writers, who is well-fitted to discuss this important topic, because of a special trip abroad for the purpose during the year and also close contact with the developments subsequently in that great market.

THEN there is a whole special section devoted to The Fifty-Two Best Pictures of the Year as told by the box-office. The selection of the Fifty-Two Best is, as heretofore, derived wholly from exhibitor reports. The trade looks each year to this feature as the authority in its field. It is a box-office barometer whose worth has been fully tested; and is a tabulation not only of the outstanding box-office films of the year, but also a guide for exhibitors who are still to play these subjects.

* * *

THE closing year has been filled with expansion in all branches of the industry. It has been the motion picture's most prosperous twelve months. 1926 will be even more fruitful, according to all signs and portents.

And so we say to all: A Very Merry Christmas and A Happy New Year.

One of the many beautiful and impressive pieces of religious sculpture shown for the first time in "Treasures of the Vatican," a Pathe feature.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

Allene Ray, Pathe serial star, arrives in Hollywood just in time to decorate the tree for the Yuletide festivities, prior to starting her next serial.

Lois Moran, Inspiration—First National player, who looks young and demure enough to still believe in Santa Claus, wishes you a very Merry Christmas.

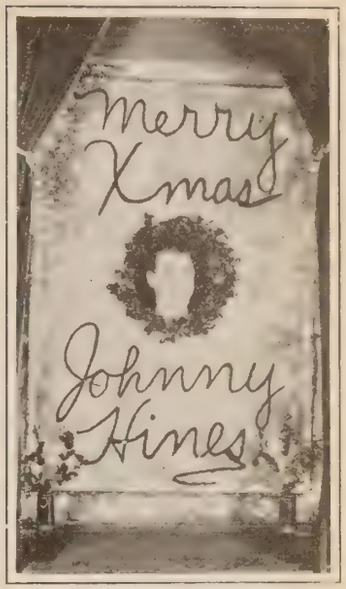
The Christmas message of Richard Barthelmess, Inspiration-First National star, takes the form of an appeal for the Christmas stamps of the National Tuberculosis Association.

RAISING THE DEVIL

MANY an old book on witchcraft and sorcery contains detailed instructions for "raising the devil," or any other desired evil spirit. But D. W. Griffith, aided and abetted by numerous executives, editors, directors and scenario writers of Famous Players, is finding it not so easy to "raise" a suitable Satan for picture purposes.

In opera this is comparatively simple. Red tights, long ears and tail, up-tilted eyebrows and mustache, sinister make-up and a red baby spot—and you have the approved operatic Devil.

But such a Satan simply won't do, for he must fit the description given by Marie Corelli in her "Sorrows of Satan," which D. W. is to picturize. He must be a tall man with stately presence, a courtly manner, a charming personality, an air of breeding and wealth, and he must give an impression of power held in reserve—in a word, a personality of the sort that would create an impression anywhere.



Several actors have been suggested, and tests made, but the search goes on. So if you have a little Satan in your home, you'd better trot him out.

A MOMENTOUS RULING

THE whole future of those who go to see pictures "by courtesy of the management" is at stake—and all because of a ruling in the Southwestern Police court in Baltimore the other

'Twas the night before Christmas, and all through the house, not a creature was stirring, not even a mouse; when all of a sudden, with many a thump, down the chimney came sprawling our friend, Andy Gump. (The dramatis personae includes Joe Murphy, Fay Tincher and Jackie Morgan, of Universal's Andy Gump comedies).

This message of Holiday cheer from Johnny Hines, starring in comedy features for First National release, scarcely needs any caption.

Mary Brian, Paramount player, celebrates the first anniversary of her triumph in "Peter Pan," which put her firmly in the film firmament.

You'll have to look very closely to realize that the gentleman hiding behind the Santa Claus whiskers is the Pathe comedian, Larry Semon.

The spirit of Christmas at Universal City; left to right: Laura La Plante, Universal star, reminisces on childhood Christmas day; Mary Philbin, "U" star, on Christmas morning beside the gaily decorated tree; Ena Gregory, another "U" player, shivers on the chimney top while waiting to see if there really is a Santa Claus.

day. The decision has been handed down and there appears to be no prospect of reversal in a higher court.

It seems that a private in the U. S. Army entered the New Aladdin theatre, Baltimore, and presumably found the photo-drama not to his liking, for he was soon fast asleep. His slumber was not of the still or gentle variety, but was accompanied by vocal or nasal disturbances which annoyed the other patrons, and a fight ensued.

He was arraigned in police court but was dismissed, as Magistrate Tormollan ruled that a man was under no obligation to watch the pictures in a theatre if he paid his admission to get in.

The next link in the chain of reasoning is obviously that the man who does not pay admission is under definite obligation to watch the picture, whether sensational or soporific. So perhaps it would not be amiss to warn critics that if they suspect a picture of possessing sedative qualities, they had better resolutely tear up their pass, step up to the box-office and pay for their privilege to sleep, like a man. It will be cheaper in the long run.

We defy anyone not to get a good laugh out of this picture of Big Boy and Pal, the dog (we have no name on the bear), appearing in Educational-Juvenile comedies. They seem to be lying in wait for Santa at at the moment.

SONNET TO A CINEMA

FROM the time of Petrarch and Shakespeare onward, poets have indited sonnets to nearly all things under heaven. From Herrick's "On a Dead Fly Enclosed in a Piece of Amber" to Sterling's "Shakespeare's Skull," the bards have sung in sonnet form to everything from tulips to toothbrushes. So it is not to be wondered at that at last the cinema palace has been made the subject of a sonnet in the approved 14-line form. The sonneteer is none other than Julius J. Hess of the Lubliner & Trinz publicity department in Chicago. The title is: "Sonnet to the Harding Theatre." It reads:

"Its lights are jewels upon the breast of night, Fair beacons on the stormy seas of life, Signalling refuge from this worldly strife, A happy halt in mankind's daily fight. For magic dances on a curtain white, To gladden happy sweethearts, man and wife, And souls where just before dark gloom was rife, Are joyous in a world of romance bright.

"Here men are heroes, women kind and fair, And life becomes adventure, filled with zest. So critic, scoffer who would kill all joy, Condemner of this cure for human care, Enter, before you make your bitter jest, And hear the laughter of this little boy!"

"BIG PARADE" BAGS STAR

ONLY one asterisk came from the mimeograph machine of the National Board of Review this week, the recommended feature being "The Big Parade," which continues to march along at the Astor theatre, New York City, in triumphant fashion. The Board characterizes it as follows:

"The outstanding picture of the war, seen through the eyes of three soldiers as they follow their company through a section of the front. A soldier's picture, not a general's or a professional patriot's."

HELP WANTED: MALE

WANTED, by leading motion picture concern, actor to play leading role in "Rough Riders." Must be unknown, with face unfamiliar to picture fans. Must look like Theodore Roosevelt in '98 at the time he took Rough Riders to Cuba. Prefer man with stage experience. Capable actor given preference. Desire man who has made study of Roosevelt's character and mannerisms. Good pay. Extended engagement. Wardrobe furnished. Transportation, yes. Send photos, state all first letter. Write: Famous Players-Lasky Studio, Hollywood, Calif.

CLOTHES MAKE THE CHARACTER

JACQUELINE LOGAN, one of the most sensible and efficient of our younger actresses, has some interesting ideas on the subject of "dressing the part," and the importance of wardrobe in creating a role.

"Take my present role, for example," she says. (She is now playing in "The Outsider" for Fox.) "Leontine is an artist, the daughter of a famous surgeon. She has had everything she wanted since childhood. She has a wilful and a dynamic personality—and her clothes would show it by their extreme line. She would have the widest skirts and the longest ones as soon as the whisper came from Paris as to the length and breadth of skirts. Where the average woman would go in for adaptations of the original model, Leontine would never be satisfied until she had the model itself.

"For this reason, all my costumes in 'The Outsider' are very extreme. But Leontine would never in the world be the person she is if I should walk across the scene in a sports costume of a rugged, woolly sweater and a pleated skirt, or if I should come into the cafe at Budapest in an airy chiffon frock of many godets."

Sound reasoning, this, and many an actress would be helped immeasurably in putting her characterizations across if she would analyze in the same way the sort of clothes which that particular character would inevitably wear.

Harry Langdon, Mack Sennett comedian in Pathe comedies, finds his leading lady, Peggy Montgomery, hiding in a forest of Christmas trees, quite in keeping with the season.

BEAHAN, JR.'S FIRST STORY

PRODUCER'S DISTRIBUTING CORP. is certainly active these days, no getting away from it. Not long ago Ye Editor chronicled the fact that George Harvey, the advertising manager, had enjoyed an addition to the family, and now comes word of the arrival of a son and heir at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Beahan, the former being head of the eastern story department of P. D. C.

The proud father predicts that, judging by the amount of noise which "Kid" Beahan is already capable of, another great press agent has come into the world. There may be some truth in the assertion, at that, for Beahan, Jr., has just gotten (by actual count) 135 words into MOTION PICTURE NEWS, which, any press agent will tell you, is no mean achievement.

"SKYROCKET" ZOOMS UP

FURTHER honors continue to come the way of "The Skyrocket," the Associated Exhibitors special starring Peggy Hopkins Joyce. Photoplay Magazine in its current issue rates the picture one of the six best of the month, the other five being "The Big Parade," "The King on Main Street," "The Eagle," "Classified" and "Lord Jim." In addition to this it puts Miss Joyce's work among the six best performances of the month, especially remarkable since this marks her screen deput.

Clara Bow, feminine lead in "The Ancient Mariner," the William Fox Christmas special, lends a hand to help Santa Claus in his mission around the studio.

A MUCH ROBBED BANK

WHEN the National Bank of Universal City was razed the other day to make room for new sets, an interesting bit of shadowland history came to light. This bank has been active since it was built, at the inception of Universal City. Statisticians estimate that the building has appeared in more than two thousand productions of the Western variety and has been robbed three hundred times, the malefactors including Jesse James et freres, the Jennings gang, the Lopez Boys, and others.

Our own statistician has compiled the following additional figures, from records in the M. P. NEWS office:

Bandits taking part in hold-ups, 927.

Bandits captured by sheriff's posses, 927.

Bandits strung up forwith to the nearest telegraph pole, 325.

Bandits redeemed by gazing soulfully into the heroine's blue eyes, 602.

Bandits who stole to save an invalid mother, 496.

Ditto, to save sick wife, 202.

Ditto, to save starving child, 329.

Total value of loot: See figures on the National Debt.

Actual value of loot: See current quotations on stage money and canvas bags filled with sand.

Rin-Tin-Tin, Warner Bros. dog star, helps the spirit of Christmas along by accepting contributions in a basket, keeping a weather eye, meanwhile, on an inquisitive pup who has designs of his own on the contents.

Mildred Davis, returning to the screen with Paramount, registers appropriate Christmas morning surprise and joy at seeing what Santa has brought.

Clyde Cook, starred in Hal Roach-Pathe comedies, and Syd Crossley, another of the Roach funsters, enjoy a little Christmas dinner amidst the snows of Hollywood Boulevard. (Hope that doesn't bring a libel suit from the L. A. Chamber of Commerce!)

Alberta Vaughn, whose Christmas should be brightened by her new F. B. O. starring contract, trims the tree betwixt scenes of "The Adventures of Mazie."

Virginia Vance, leading woman in Lupino Lane-Educational comedies, keeps a sharp outlook for Santa, after setting the stage for his arrival

TEA FOR TWO (HUNDRED)

BELLE BENNETT, whose portrayal of the title role in "Stella Dallas" has placed her in the ranks of the film immortals, was given a tea at the Ritz-Carlton hotel on Monday afternoon, the guests being the writers of the trade, fan and daily press. Miss Bennett had just finished her role in "The Reckless Lady," and departed for the coast on Tuesday.

Miss Bennett, who hails from a small town in Iowa famous for nothing save being her birthplace, has difficulty in keeping her press agents down to facts. She has been assigned to all foreign countries (including the Scandinavian) and on one occasion a theatrical press agent announced that she was of Irish birth—and immediately after she was engaged to join a troupe of thoroughly British actors! She was greeted with slight enthusiasm until she produced a birth certificate, affidavits and what not to prove that she was American.

Vera Gordon, whom Miss Bennett credits with having helped her no little along the road to success, and Lois Moran, whom Miss Bennett in turn has aided, were also centres of attraction at the tea.

A CHARMING LADY

THE other day, at the photographer's, we chanced to encounter Irene Rich, being photographed in some of the lovely gowns which she brought back from Europe with her. Unlike some of her contemporaries, she chose to talk, not about herself, but about Ernst Lubitsch, for whom she possessess the greatest admiration. She gave, incidentally, an interesting reason for Lubitsch's remarkable popularity with his players, and a great deal of the success of his pictures, as well.

"One of the most satisfying things about working with Mr. Lubitsch," she said, "is the fact that he always knows exactly what he wants and why he wants it. His insight into characters is remarkable. If he told you to go in the corner and stand on your head, in a scene, you might feel that it was a rather unladylike thing to do but you would be absolutely sure that he had a perfectly good reason for having that character stand on her head in the corner at that moment."

LLOYD ENDS FIRST LAP

FRANK LLOYD, the producer-director now globe trotting between First National productions, recently arrived in Kobe, Japan, ending the first leg of his oriental tour. Horace T. Clarke, exchange manager there, and his staff, welcomed Lloyd to the city.

A dinner of welcome by the Japan Motion Picture Association and a banquet under the auspices of Osaka Asahi, a leading newspaper, were planned, but his stay in Kobe was so brief that it was necessary to postpone these functions until he returns to Japan on his way back to America.

Lois Wilson, Paramount's "Covered Wagon" girl, has the reputation of giving and receiving more Christmas gifts than any screen player in Hollywood.

Al St. John, starring in Educational-Mermaid comedies, wraps up a real Christmas treat for film fans—his leading lady, Estelle Bradley.

Margaret Quimby, who has renewed her contract with Universal following "What Happened to Jones," tries to slip over a fast one by hanging up three stockings.

THEATRES
THE BIGGEST STORY OF 1925

By J. S. Dickerson

IN a year that has been notable for developments in the industry, some anticipated and others unexpected, even the casual observer will readily admit that the greatest changes have taken place in the theatre division.

The record of consolidations, change of ownership and management and of new theatres projected, completed and opened, is an amazing exhibit of the industry's progress. The best informed men in the trade have become dizzy trying to keep abreast of what has happened during the year.

Because of this fact, MOTION PICTURE NEWS has prepared this article.

Such figures as are quoted, can be accepted as authoritative, and such comment as may be made in connection with the statistics given is respectfully submitted as deduction made from unadulterated fact.

The theatre group developments listed as follows, may be properly divided into several parts:

Consolidation of sectional and regional circuits into national circuits.

The entry of additional producers and distributors in the theatre division and the increased activity of other producers and distributors already owning and operating theatres, in this field.

Greatly increased building activities especially in the neighborhood districts of the larger cities and the ambitious programs of this character that have been completed or planned.

The crisis that seems to exist in the small theatre field, and a condition that is commonly termed over-seating.

An attempt at analysis of the facts outlined in group one, consolidation of circuits, begins with the bald statement that one year ago there were 1500 circuits in the United States, figuring as chains all persons or firms owning two or more houses. At this writing this number has been reduced about two hundred, so far as actual management is concerned, by the process of large circuits taking over smaller chains.

A DETAILED report of what has happened in this connection would become a confusing jumble of theatre names and theatre firms, if an attempt was made to present figures in even the principal affiliations, so we will deal roughly only with the general results.

The Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has acquired or built approximately 56 theatres during the year and begins 1926 with a grand total of 290.

Reference only to houses owned outright, or in which the company has financial investment to the extent that the actual management of the properties is wholly invested in the theatre department of the concern, is made here. Properties where Famous Players-Lasky Corporation does not exercise actual management will be referred to as separate circuits.

The West Coast Theatres chain has been increased to 150 through houses constructed and acquired by lease.

The Mid West circuit (Balaban and Katz considered separately and not including A. H. Blank or other working agreement affiliations that are in actual operation), has 89 theatres at this time.

The Saenger Amusement Company, in partnership with various local units throughout the South, notably several in New Orleans and extending into Texas, has a chain numbering 88 houses.

The M. E. Comerford circuit with headquarters at Scranton, Pa., has continued to expand quietly and the chain now numbers 91, according to Mr. Comerford's statement, secured by MOTION PICTURE NEWS on November 1st.

The Universal Film Company's chain, counting the Schine Theatrical Enterprises string and the Hostettler circuit, both working agreement affiliations and not outright purchases, numbers 94 houses. Of these 45 are in the Schine group and 30 are Hostettler holdings.

THE William Fox circuit has not been materially augmented during the year, although elaborate plans are now being made for the expansion of the chain to all key cities not covered where large and thoroughly modern new houses will be built. Sites for these picture palaces have been secured in a large number of cases and actual work has begun in some instances. The Fox circuit is now represented in Philadelphia, St. Louis, Denver, Oakland and other cities removed from the home office territory where the bulk of the theatres have been located. Fox boasts a total of 31 houses.

Bijou Theatrical Enterprises, with new headquarters at Detroit, has continued to enlarge its holdings and now has 35 theatres all in the Michigan section.

Finkelstein and Ruben of Minneapolis and St. Paul have extended their operations and at the last compiled count lists a total of 70 houses for the circuit.

Two entirely new entries in the theatre operation field are Warner Brothers, who have 19 houses, and Producers Distributing Corporation which through affiliated companies under the titles of North American Theatre Corporation and Far West Theatre Corporation have direct access to 53 houses.

The Loew-Metro-Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan circuit has not materially added to the number of houses in its string during the year. Some new theatres have been added but others have been dropped, leaving the number at approximately 100.

OTHER large circuits are as follows:
Famous Players Canadian Corp., Ltd., 89; A. H. Blank, 45; Stanley Company of America, 53 (owned), 38 additional booked; Jensen & Von Herberg, 29; T. & D., Jr., Circuit, 37; Fitzpatrick and McElroy, 23; Capitol Theatrical Enterprises, 30; I. Libson, 17; Stanley-Crandall, 12; Mark Strand, 20.

Where this consolidation of theatres will end, even the best informed do not venture to predict. There is talk of a "battle of the giants," and one concern, Universal, announces an intention of securing 1000 theatres. The Famous Players-Lasky—Balaban and Katz group, while making no statements of the goal they would achieve, are generally believed to have similar aspirations. Former policies of acquiring only theatres in stragetic locations have apparently been discarded. Recent acquisitions have been made in extremely modest-sized towns.

Discussion of the theatre building boom of the year, and which by the way seems to be nowhere near abatement, should be considered first from the angle of the immense amount of money that has been collectively and individually invested and the large seating capacities of which, invariably, the new theatres may boast.

A new theatre in the Fabian string is being opened in Paterson, N. J., where another "million dollar" house threw open its doors not over a month ago, as this is written. It seats 4000 and has cost to construct $2,000,000.

This is the type of theatre that has made 1925 building so notable. Of course million dollar theatres are only built in localities where such immense investments can be expected to pay, and therefore, the bulk of the building, some two hundred houses, has been very largely in the big centers of population—neighborhood sites and suburbs.

Chicago has been the center of this sort of activity with the Middle West in general leading the race and the West Coast second. Newark, N. J. and suburbs, has maintained the lead in the East, with notable exceptions in Boston (Metropolitan Theatre) and New York (Warners and Colony Theatres). The South has had several large new houses opened and more are planned.

ALTHOUGH some observers, whose opinion should carry weight, profess to be alarmed at this era of building, careful study of the situation will disclose sound, if selfish reasons, for the large and up-to-date neighborhood theatre.

Motion picture attendance has ever been a family affair. The new type neighborhood house is just a matter of bringing the surroundings and show the fan has been educated to expect, to the fan rather than attempting to attract the patron to the downtown theatre. If in the process, theatres built to meet other conditions and now inadequate to compete, fail to hold their own, they must suffer the fortunes of business war.

Small admission prices will undoubtedly prove the salvation of some of the smaller theatres, but it seems certain that for every large neighborhood theatre built an equal number of seats represented in a number of nearby theatres to the new big house must ultimately be eliminated.

Frank Newman, formerly a leading exhibitor of Kansas City, predicts that ultimately 18 or 20 picture theatres located advantageously in various parts of Kansas City will take care of all the business now being done by the 64 houses now open and still, for the most part, prospering.

The pinch of large theatre competition has already reduced the number of theatres in Chicago to 337. New York (Manhattan) now has only 248 theatres playing motion pictures against twice that number ten years ago, and Brooklyn, the city of homes where the neighborhood house should thrive, is down to 214. The Eastman Theatre in Rochester gets credit for closing the doors of nine other Rochester theatres. This, however, is probably an exaggerated case.

THE theatre building epidemic, in unusual proportions, seems to jump from the larger cities, those with populations of 100,000 and over down to a quite different group of towns—these being the so-called 80 percenters with populations ranging from 2,000 to 10,000. Until very recently there have been a surprisingly large number of ancient opera houses, occasionally renovated to some extent, and "store shows" or their equivalent, rarely representing an investment of more than ten or fifteen thousand dollars, that have been functioning in a semi-prosperous way with modest priced service and a small overhead. But for the past year or two these towns have begun to feel the need of better facilities until we have today a record of several hundred towns that now boast modern up-to-date picture theatres, costing up to $200,000.

These theatres have been promoted very largely by local capital, in which the banker and merchant invested willingly, not because great dividends were expected, but because it has been proved that a good picture theatre was a business builder for the town and the lack of one a handicap so great that trade went elsewhere.

And perhaps the most surprising development of this group of towns is that wherever new and up-to-date theatres have been built and the management of the new houses has been correspondingly improved, the amount of business done and profits made have increased many fold.

Towns that five years ago paid $10.00 for film service, playing to gross business of perhaps twice the amount of film rental, now in a new theatre that has replaced the old one—or in many cases two—can afford $75.00 service and do a business ten times what they were once able to gross.

IN the United States alone, there are 1,404 towns (not counting villages actually a part of larger towns but maintaining a separate municipal identity) with populations ranging from 2,500 to 5,000 which have a total theatre count of 1,512 theatres. Without a doubt 80 per cent of these towns not already in possession of modern houses, will find the capital to build the sort of theatres described above, during the next few years. Either this must come about or the fan will spend his photoplay money elsewhere.

Below the group of villages with minimum population of 2,500, the theatres contained therein, depend largely on a matter of geography. A town of 1,500 or 2,000 population advantageously located, with good roads leading to it and plenty of smaller villages scattered about it and a metropolitan type of theatre should make money, the management of same being adequate. A town located in close proximity to a larger town possessing much better theatres or otherwise handicapped in the items mentioned above, has little chance of successfully holding its own.

In the group of theatres in towns of less than 1,500 population, and there are a surprising number of them, 294 in Nebraska, 154 in Indiana and 204 in New York, to specify briefly, there seems to have been little change in the building situation for the past ten years nor does there seem to be any indication that there will be in the next decade. The picture show of these villages is usually housed in a rented building that serves a multitude of other purposes, such as church fairs, high school entertainments, and other village functions. Invested in the "theatre" is anywhere from a few hundred to a few thousand dollars, paying the owner a modest return in rental paid by the exhibitor. No one will ever build a new house as long as the old one remains and the old one has in many cases been in existence since the skating rink days of 40 odd years ago.

IN the western and middle western states this condition is less prevalent than in the east, since a 1,000 population town in Nebraska is usually the equivalent of an eastern village twice as large. However east or west, operating a picture theatre in a town of less than 1,500 population is seldom anything but a side line where as in the group from 2,500 to 5,000 population 71 per cent of the theatre owners (these statistics obtained by actual canvass) are devoting their entire time to running their shows.

The middle west is solving the problem of providing better film entertainment by subsidizing the local exhibitor and utilizing the high school auditoriums, to quite an extent but other sections of the country, notably the east, have progressed in this direction very little if at all.

Radio competition is generally credited with being a larger factor in this group than elsewhere, the reason very obviously being that radio entertainment is more nearly equal that provided by the small town theatre showing old films, with indifferent equipment and where music rests largely on the ability of a local pianist, than in larger towns.

The Department of Agriculture is authority for the statement that there are 553,000 radio sets in service on American farms. Thirty-three thousand are in operation in Iowa alone. It does not need statistics to establish the fact that this number of radio outfits has cut into the small town picture theatre.

OVERSEATING which was stated as a development of the year, is a term that needs definition and analysis. Cleveland is pointed out as an example of overseating. A seat for every eight residents is claimed for this city and still new theatres are being built and others are being planned. Generally speaking a city may be said to be overseated when too many theatres of equal importance are so located as to equally split a certain class of business. In Cleveland there are too many large downtown houses. Redistribute two or three of these houses and the situation would be relieved. A like condition seems about to come into existence in St. Louis where two new picture palaces are about to open in a so-called downtown area, that has never been especially productive, owing to the general residential layout of the city.

Overseating in cities below 100,000 population may be termed very largely a matter of choice, since circuits invariably control all the theatres of a city if they enter it at all and if there is not business for all the houses contained therein it is a simple and not especially expensive matter to close enough to boost the business of those left running to a satisfactory level. If overseating becomes a fact in this group, it will be when rival national circuits begin invading each others territory, in which case the "battle of the giants" will be on.

CRITICAL REVIEW OF THE YEAR

By Laurence Reid

WHEN the year, 1925, comes to a close, no filmgoer can say that he has not been royally entertained. It has been a year marked by a sincere effort to record the realities and humanities of life—with producers and directors vieing with one another to present the "greatest picture ever made." Those who have made screen history in the past have been compelled to pay the penalty of producing something extraordinary to cope with the earlier achievement. We have come to expect great things from Griffith, Ingram, Fairbanks, Chaplin, Frank Lloyd, Harold Lloyd, Ernst Lubitsch, Cruze, Olcott and a few others.

It is when the less famous startle and surprise us with a flash of genius that we give consideration to the fact that the screen is not retrograding, but is advancing through inspiration and application to work. That the best pictures are made by a handful of directors cannot be denied. Given carte blanche by generous producers to go ahead and achieve something of real consequence they seldom fail. But with all the purse-strings in the world they cannot make good pictures if they are lacking in dramatic technique—if they are out of tune with the elemental processes that make up life and character. They must possess imagination and feeling—and have a sound knowledge of pictorial values.

Picking the Winners

WITH the end of the year upon us it has become a popular pastime with all analysts of amusements and sports to pick the outstanding achievements. Walter Camp, the late football mentor, started something back in 1889 when he selected his first All-American football team. Everyone who sits in judgment on plays and pictures and sports is privileged to tell the palpitating public his line-up for the year. Of course in the majority of his selections he cannot go wrong. It is only in balancing his ledger that he invites criticism in having picked a winner that could easily be eliminated for something equally good.

In selecting the best ten pictures of 1925—and a succeeding list of ten which crowd them for high honors—we are paying homage to directors who have endurable films. After all it is the lingering impression that a picture creates that gives it enduring qualities. If the spectator can remember a film, say, weeks or months after its showing—that film achieves something of greatness. Yet in mentioning the directors we are obeying the well-accepted fact that they make or break the pictures. It sometimes happens that the title writer or editor may spoil the work of the director—but if he knows his work there will be flashes of his genius manifested which will give breadth and substance, vividness and vitality to his creation no matter if lesser departments have faltered.

A New Deal

NO one can dispute the fact that 1925 has brought forth a new deal among directors and players. There have been some startling upsets. A few of the established favorites have held their own, and, in several instances have soared to greater heights than they knew before. There are others however, who have gone into a state of temporary eclipse—whose work has become negligible with the sudden climb into prominence of new stars and directors.

Of course many reasons must be taken into consideration for their decline. Some of them have been badly advised, some have felt themselves so secure at the top that they became careless. They little appreciated the fickle nature of the public—the public that always demands from its favorites an unceasing effort to excel.

In the new deal among the directors we find the names of Murnau, the German, Seastrom and Svend Gade, the Scandinavians, Julian, Browning, Vidor, Robertson, Hoyt, Lubitsch and Henry King. Griffith still continues to scale the heights, though his place isn't as secure as it was a few years ago. Stroheim has finally found himself and can march boldly with the little army of creators. Chaplin's star has not lost any of its lustre. He is always experimenting, and if he falters temporarily the public is always confident that his intelligence will carry him back to high estate. Cruze jogs along steadily, though his material has hindered him the past year.

In the ranks of the players we find a handful who have made tremendous strides toward the top. The biggest success of the year has been furnished by John Gilbert in "The Merry Widow" and "The Big Parade." But long before these pictures brought out his gift of expression he had demonstrated his talent in "The Snob" and "His Hour." Belle Bennett is another who shows a real genius for pantomime in "Stella Dallas." The screen has never shown anything more poignant and real than her remarkable study of the mother in this touching picture.

Decidedly there has been a new deal, but before we continue on this tack let us consider the year's most impressive offerings.

The Line-Up

ASIDE from one or two our selections do not cater to the spectacular. The majority are romances which score for their simplicity and conviction. They all scale the emotional ladder. So we present:

"The Big Parade."
"Stella Dallas."
"The Last Laugh."
"The Merry Widow."
"The Unholy Three."
"The Gold Rush."
"He Who Gets Slapped."
"The Lost World."
"The Freshman."
"Kiss Me Again."

Surely no one can take exception to this line-up. Every form of dramatic art is represented here. Tragedy, pathos, comedy, fantasy, humor, romance, heart appeal, sentiment, satire, suspense, action are here—and all the other ingredients necessary to quicken the pulse and stimulate the imagination.

Our second list includes "Don Q," "Siegé," "The Pony Express," "The Lady," "The Phantom of the Opera," "Her Sister from Paris," "Shore Leave," "The Dark Angel," "Siegfried," and "Beggar on Horseback."

Others which come in for high recommendation are "The Goose Woman," "Sally of the Sawdust," "Isn't Life Wonderful?" "Are Parents People?" "As No Man Has Loved," "Cyrano de Bergerac," "Proud Flesh," "Old Home Week," "I'll Show You the Town," "Oh, Doctor," "Forbidden Paradise," "The King on Main Street," "My Son," "The Goose Hangs High," "Declasse," "Introduce Me," "The Home Maker," "Clothes Make the Pirate," "Sally." "Seven Chances," "Riders of the Purple Sage" and "Smooth as Satin."

Among the Old Favorites

AS for the long-established stars the majority of them have done well enough the past year. Certainly there is no room for argument concerning Douglas Fairbanks. His "Don Q" proved that he is a business man as well as a versatile artist. Film audiences haven't forgotten one of his earlier successes, "The Mark of Zorro." So he projected its sequel in Zorro's son. A shrewd piece of showmanship, that. Doug has hit the high mark so splendidly in the past that he must pay the penalty of achieving something out of the ordinary.

As for Mary Pickford she has cast spectacular roles from her and returns to the type of picture which established her as America's Sweetheart. "Little Annie Rooney" travels old, familiar ground, yet it has dash and color and personality.

The Talmadge sisters have accomplished results, too. While Norma didn't have anything to boast of in "Graustark, she did manage to score very high with "The Lady." Constance comes back as one of the few real comediennes of the screen with her work in "Her Sister From Paris," a gay and bright little number.

There is one star who has not done so well in 1925. We mention Valentino. Among his releases, "The Sainted Devil," "The Eagle" and "Cobra," the erstwhile most popular favorite has not contributed anything to earn encomiums. These pieces are cut too much from one pattern. He needs real stories—and needs them badly. Tom Meighan is another star who needs suitable material. With the exception of "Old Home Week" he has been burdened with mediocre stories which have lacked any originality of theme or treatment. The same can be said for Gloria Swanson.

In looking toward Jackie Coogan, it cannot be denied that the boy is growing older. They are still placing him in the type of picture which started him on the high road to popularity. As a result his art has lost something of its charm. The ideas have been too repetitious. Still he has those big brown eyes and a winning smile—and these qualities of his personality have kept him in the spotlight of public favor.

Richard Barthelmess has had a good season—what with "Classmates" and "Shore Leave." The latter picture is a choice bit of entertainment in which the star flashes a talent for comedy hitherto uncovered.

Richard Dix's popularity is growing, too. His stories have a certain pace—a swing and dash about them that are in perfect harmony with the vigorous acting of the star.

The Directors

THE old timers among the directors haven't fared very well the past year. James Cruze approached "The Covered Wagon" with "The Pony Express," and he turned out an artistic treat in "Beggar on Horseback," a picture interesting to the eye, but lacking box-office value.

D. W. Griffith has experimented quite a bit. He went over to Germany and made "Isn't Life Wonderful," and followed it up with "Sally of the Sawdust." These entries are not D. W. at his best, but they have their moments of appeal. Griffith never makes a dull picture. He is too much the dramatist, the artist for that.

The biggest advance among the directors is made by Eric von Stroheim, King Vidor and Henry King. The latter gave evidence of losing his grip when he brought out "Romola," but he has returned to his own with "Stella Dallas."

Stroheim gave us "Greed," a grisly study in stark realism—and from many quarters they began to cry "thumbs down." Then he made an about face and prestented us with the gay and charming "Merry Widow." Stroheim is deadly in earnest—which accounts for his honesty. He always tries to saturate his stories with realities. And he succeeds every time.

There is nothing the matter with Lubitsch. He continues to forge ahead easily and surely. Other directors are beginning to look up to him. They are beginning to adopt his methods as football coaches adopt the methods of Knute Rockne of Notre Dame.

King Vidor has finally earned his place in the sun. He gave evidence several years ago that he possessed a flair for getting to the rock-bottom of human emotions. "The Jack-Knife Man" never made any money, but there was real imagination and sympathy behind it. Now he comes into his own with "The Big Parade." And what a triumph he has scored!

Victor Seastrom showed a real flash of genius with "He Who Gets Slapped." There was imagination behind his picture, too. He kept it down to the level of anyone's intelligence. He tried to adopt the same methods with "The Tower of Lies," but he brought forth too many symbols and not enough shadings. It just missed being a great picture.

Tod Browning came out of his eclipse to give us "The Unholy Three," as thrilling a melodrama as we've ever seen. It is a masterpiece of fantastic terror—fresh and convincing, and brilliantly conceived and executed.

There are other directors accomplishing results, too. John Robertson, Malcolm St. Clair, Clarence Brown, Al Santell and Alfred Green—to name a few—have created some worthwhile efforts the past year.

So 1925 draws to a close. It has been a year in which there has been great progress. There is not so much experimenting. Producers and directors have their feet firmly on the ground—and are approaching productions with an eye to life and its realities. We will continue to have our staple pictures—such as the westerns. And the society dramas will be with us.

1926 will see an advance made into the fields of satire and humor. And there will be some big pictures to pass judgment on a year hence. We are already hearing the rumblings of "Ben Hur." And our foreign spies tell us that Rex Ingram has something of consequence in "Mare Nostrum."

Judging the Best

WE probably haven't surprised you with certain selections for the best pictures. We are ever in search of imaginative direction, human feelings and contact with life—whether it is lived in the archaic past or pulsates in this modern age. The public has been crying in the wilderness for the HUMAN picture. It is given them time and again in 1925.

These two groups of ten are roundly balanced—ranging from sentiment to surging melodrama—from gay romance and adventure of Yesterday to gay romance and adventure of Today. Some of them present favorite players—others "discover" players who are climbing rapidly to the high places. And one, "The Lost World," discovers an ancient animal kingdom.

The greatest triumph of the year is King Vidor's picture, "The Big Parade." It is done on a tremendous scale—showing comedy marching with tragedy. It is the romance of the Great War—and shows more drama enacted in celluloid than all the documents written about it combined.

The social life of the soldiers is balanced with terrific warfare. Truly, it has been created as if seen through the eyes of the doughboy. It is human and honest. War isn't glorified, nor is patriotism. The best description would be to call it a terribly frank exposition of the doughboy in France—executed with real imagination and sympathy.

The soldiers are baptized in fire—the motor lorries, hundreds of them, make up the big parade, the big push to the front. It is awe-inspiring and eloquent in every scene.. No greater climax has ever capped a picture than that which closes the first part. It is sweeping, thrilling and poignant. The lovers have become separated. The girl rushes frantically up and down the road searching for the boy. He is on one of the lorries that tear by in endless procession. Then when all seems lost for them, they are reunited for a precious good-bye. Their pent-up emotion gives way to a wonderful expression of love.

John Gilbert and Renee Adoree contribute manificent acting—which is governed by real emotional feeling—especially on the part of the latter. The film marches on relentlessly to war. The second part gives us this war in all of its tragic aspect. Such is "The Big Parade," which brings King Vidor to the top. He has achieved a masterpiece—the outstanding picture of the year.

There is another achievement in celluloid too. This is "Stella Dallas," which brings Henry King back to the directorial form which he flashed in "Tol'able David." It is a story demanding the utmost sympathy. King has seen to that. It comes to us on a tidal wave of maternal passion, bringing tenderness, poignancy and beauty. No one can deny the heartbeat in this picture and the appeal of its great sacrifice. The director and Belle Bennett move you with their touches of feeling and sympathy. The actress turns on the emotional faucets and lives her role to the life. It is an achievement of mute suffering.

Praises must also be sung in favor of Emil Jannings' remarkable study in "The Last Laugh." This picture has never broken any box-office records, but as an artistic achievement it is perhaps the screen's outstanding work. It is the tragedy of

EUROPE
ON THE EVE OF 1926

By L. C. Moen

THE year now drawing to a close will go down in film history as the year in which the foreign market ceased to be a Sinecure and became a Problem. If any American distributor now regards the European market as so much velvet, he is in a class with the man who shaves with a straight razor, wears suspenders and uses a mustache cup.

For 1925 has been a year of upsets, surprises and occasional embarrassment to American film interests in their European affairs. American pictures have been violently attacked in certain quarters, some disgruntled and some sincere. A few companies have suffered losses through this; others have materially strengthened their position through alliances and expansion.

What, then, will 1926 bring forth? Forecasting is as dangerous as it is fascinating, but the movements of the past year have been so significant and unparalleled that from them we can at least discern a few major trends.

OUTSTANDING developments of 1925 might be summed up about as follows: (1) Attacks on American films and American domination of the world market. (2) Alliances and mergers between American and European companies, putting certain firms in an almost impregnable position. (3) Expansion of the European exchange systems of certain American companies. (4) Proposals on the part of several countries for the application of Contingent and Quota systems to restrict American importation into those countries.

Obviously, points 1 and 4 are sharply at variance with 2 and 3—and in that numerical formula is expressed the whole basis of contention and the most serious menace to peaceful relations in the future. However optimistic we may be as to the outcome, it is obvious that the lines are forming for a sharp conflict. It may or may not materialize, but when the smoke of the preliminary skirmishes dies away it will not be surprising to find the film map radically altered in many spots.

Attacks on American film domination are not new—we have had them, here and there, for years—but it is only during the past year that the problem has become acute and specific. In England, France and Austria, especially, the comments have been bitter and frequently vituperative. The principal claims advanced have been these:

That the moral and cultural tone of the American films is low, and consequently harmful to English (or French, or Austrian) ideals; and

That money is being taken from those countries by the American companies; and

That studio workmen and film employes in those countries are being forced out of employment; and, lastly

That those nations are being forced off the screens of the world through American competition, with attendant loss to their prestige and, more particularly, their commerce and political position.

IF this were merely a commercial war, financial only in its nature, there would be little doubt as to the outcome. But the ramifications of the matter run much deeper than that. It is precisely as serious as though American companies were gaining control of most of the newspapers in foreign countries, or the broadcasting stations. The reels of perforated celluloid are not merely items of barter and trade—they are moulders of public opinion and national character—and it is not surprising if the European powers feel trepidant over the spectacle of American films playing on the screens throughout their countries and (not the least important) their colonies.

And so the war has gone merrily on, with denunciations by educators, by the clergy, by Government officials, by foreign producers and by the press.

But, in the face of this, another important development has gone merrily on—the consolidation of interests by certain important European and American firms. This was started off for the year by Metro-Goldwyn, which allied itself with the firm of Gaumont in France under terms not made public, resulting in the formation of Gaumont-Metro-Goldwyn. Then United Artists bought into Ifa in Germany; Fox allied itself with Defa; Universal acquired a heavy interest in Bruckman, an old and important German distributing firm; following which came the biggest deal of all—the Universal-Ufa alliance, which is apparently about to be consummated as this is being written.

These moves, predicted by the writer in an earlier series of articles, are the most vital (and the most encouraging) in the entire situation. Any deals which tend to produce a community of interests between America and the leading European nations will help to ease the situation and lead to an ultimate solution along peaceful and co-operative lines.

Another important move of the past year, less peaceful in its implications, has been the expansion of American exchange systems in Europe. This has gone on heavily during the year, and will no doubt result in a considerable financial gain for the companies involved through eliminating middlemen's profits. The cost of distribution in Europe, however, has always been relatively low.

THE fourth development of the year, that of proposed Contingent and Quota systems, as well as increased tariffs, has been rather vague in tone, but serious enough in its potentialities.

Anything which tends to hamper the free interchange of films is likely to work more harm than good, and delay by just that much the eventual internationalization of the screen and the working out of a stable basis for the industry.

England has been the most vociferous of any nation in this respect, and it appears at the moment that, the film industry having failed to agree upon a suitable plan, the Government may impose one. This is just as seriously doubted in other quarters, however.

Austria has been the centre of a great deal of similar agitation. Austrian production, once fairly thriving, has practically languished and there has been some little disturbance, with talk of a Contingent, 200 films to be admitted, plus 10 for each Austrian film produced.

Italy has been reported about to put a Quota system into effect several times, to force Italian exhibitors to show Italian films, but this seems in a rather nebulous stage.

Hungary has outlined a thirty-to-one Contingent basis, with a tax to subsidize one Hungarian production from the proceeds of each thirty importations, but there has been no indication that this has gone into effect.

France has had a great deal of talk about a Contingent and about restricting the operations of American companies, but it has not yet taken very definite form. An increased tariff would be rather more likely than a restrictive Contingent basis.

Germany, of course, already has a Kontingent, and observers incline to the belief that this will remain for the present.

The vital point of all this is that international relations are in a transitional stage—that while little has been done in the way of definite action, much may be done if matters are badly handled. Everything depends, in other words, upon the actions of American film interests during 1926.

FOR that reason, 1926 is likely to be the most important year since American companies first began exporting films to Europe. If American companies conduct their European affairs with understanding and with a desire for mutual co-operation and good will, an enduring basis for peace and friendship may be built up. If not, it is likely to settle down to a bloody struggle, with American money on the one side and European political and governmental pressure on the other. The most encouraging sign in the whole situation is the fact that American companies are at last awake to the fact that there is an international problem. Lack of understanding and selfish blindness on both sides have started the trouble—and friendship and co-operation can end it even more speedily.

Reciprocity, as we have said before, is the peaceful solution of the whole affair, and it is encouraging to note that during a year unprecedented in its recriminations and abuse important steps have been taken, through alliances and affiliations, toward that end.

Leaving aside all temporary considerations of tariff walls and quota barriers, the factors which will ultimately decide the situation are these: 1. Theatres; 2. Stars; 3. Money; 4. Pictures.

The biggest factor of all, in Europe as in America, is and will be theatre seats. European theatres are chaining up, as here, and eventually it will be a matter of trading play-dates in Europe for play-dates in America. That is no idle speculation; it is an inevitability. American firms are building in key cities in Europe, in a few spots, but that is too slow a method to meet present needs. The acquisition of circuits, or an interest in them, is the next step, and wise European companies will trade the play-dates of such circuits for play-dates here, just as Ufa is doing.

The next most important, it seems to us, is the matter of stars. The European public is a keener judge of story values than the American, but there is every indication that they do like certain stars, and here, of course, American companies have an indisputable leadership.

If for no other reason than that we produce some eight hundred features each year, we have more real stars than all the European nations combined. For that matter, producing conditions in Europe are not friendly to the development of stars. And so long as the public goes to see stars, theatre managers must have pictures with those personalities.

With enough money, of course, European producers could attract certain of these stars, and that is why we list the item of money next. It is more likely, however, that these companies will obtain the services of these stars through affiliations and alliances with American companies.

LAST of all, we mention pictures. Our volume of product, and its average quality, is a tremendous asset. At the same time, however, it is a handicap in a sense. Austria, for instance, needs 420 films a year, according to our Commercial Attache in Vienna. We produce about eight hundred. That means that the Austrian buyer will have twice as much product offered to him as he needs—the old evil of over-production and price cutting.

In the long run, however, the winning factor will be the picture produced on a scale which the public likes and having stars which the public will pay to see. That picture is the one which the exhibitor will show—and the larger the theatre the more it will need such pictures.

It is a hopeful sign, too, that American pictures have not been without their defenders in Europe. The calamity howlers have been more noisey than the friendly factions but the latter have been there, none the less, and are strong enough to provide the nucleus of a friendly agreement and basis.

The American film industry stands on the threshold of its most momentous year, at home and abroad. With tolerance and understanding, with friendliness and co-operation, it should be possible at this time next year to write the epitaph of international dissention and discord—a consummation, at least, devoutly to be wished.

old age—of a man who resigns himself to the toll of the years —who is compelled to give way to youth. Here is real life, real characterization. It is so poignant, so filled with heart beats you forget your environment. You actually live the old man. It is seldom that such an impression stamps itself upon you. When it does you pause and pay tribute to the art of acting in its highest development. The picture also introduces the new German director, F. W. Murnau. His work is as finished as Jannings'.

Comedians Set the Pace

WE could continue passing on the merits of these pictures but we must consider what the year has done by its comedians. We all know of Harold Lloyd's triumph with "The Freshman," a film breaking box-office records everywhere. He still has a very secure place at the top because of his unceasing effort to give us comedy at its best. On the other hand Buster Keaton hasn't maintained his high average. True enough he delivered with " Seven Chances," but his " Go West," while a well-conceived satire on western melodramas, fails to release the laughs anticipated.

Chaplin was expected to scale the heights again with " The Gold Rush." In the main it lacks imagination, though it is destined to be popular. The trouble here is we expected greater things from the man who gave us "A Woman of Paris." The other funmakers, Raymond Griffith, Harry Langdon and Douglas MacLean have advanced into the charmed circle. Their pictures have served to amuse us—and their work has taken on a polish that comes with success.

It's a trifle too early to pass judgment on Leon Errol, but in " Sally " and " Clothes Make the Pirate " he flashes the same keen sense of burlesque which has made him a favorite on the stage. There is W. C. Fields, too. He is destined to become popular if his rich comedy sketch in "Sally of the Sawdust" is any criterion.

The Best Performance

IN summarizing the ten best performances we give the honors to Emil Jannings in " The Last Laugh," Belle Bennett in "Stella Dallas," John Gilbert in "The Merry Widow," Lon Chaney in " The Unholy Three," Renee Adoree in " The Big Parade," Lon Chaney in " He Who Gets Slapped," John Gilbert in " The Big Parade," Louise Dresser in " The Goose Woman," Norma Talmadge in " The Lady," and Mary Alden in " Siege."

There have been other performances by the newcomers among the stars which must be reckoned with. Ronald Colman is gaining steadily in histrionic stature. He and Vilma Banky, the Hungarian actress, certainly bring feeling to "The Dark Angel." We must keep our eyes upon Reginald Denny. This popular player seems destined to fill the shoes of the lamented Wallace Reid. For one thing he is getting a good brand of stories.

Adolphe Menjou has continued to demonstrate his talent for playing sophisticated men of the world. The master of the lifted eyebrow was the first to temper the character of the villain. He humanized him and made him something else than a vicious rake. In "Forbidden Paradise" and "The King on Main

YEAR'S BEST
AS SEEN BY NEWSPAPER CRITICS

The Verdict

FIFTY-FIVE of the leading photoplay critics and editors on important newspapers throughout the country have, at the request of Motion Picture News, balloted on the points enumerated below. The winners are as follows:

Best Picture of 1925
"The Merry Widow"
Best Individual Performance by an Actor
Lon Chaney
Best Individual Performance by an Actress
Louise Dresser
Outstanding Director of the Year
Erich von Stroheim

IN presenting the verdict of a representative group of photoplay critics on the four distinctive achievements of the year, MOTION PICTURE NEWS is once more establishing an innovation in trade paper journalism. Lists of the Ten Best Pictures are widely used, and it was felt that the time had come for a departure from the usual practice.

In asking the newspaper experts to single out one picture, one actress, one actor and one director, no rules were laid down, nor was there any attempt to impose an arbitrary definition of the word "best."

The ballots are given in detail below. It will be noted that in some cases, the total number of votes cast is less than the total number of critics. This is because some of the critics failed to indicate a definite choice. In other cases, the number of votes is greater than the number of critics. This is due to the fact that, in the opinion of some critics, there was really no choice between certain individual performances, directors or pictures. In every instance, where a critic placed two or more on an equality, equal credit was given to all.

Ballot on the Best Picture

FOLLOWING is the vote on the Best Picture of the Year, the total number of pictures named being sixteen as follows:

The Merry Widow	11
The Big Parade	9
The Last Laugh	7
Beggar on Horseback	3
The Dark Angel	3
Peter Pan	2
The Gold Rush	2
The Freshman	1
Isn't Life Wonderful?	1
Phantom of the Opera	1
The Iron Horse	1
Stella Dallas	1
The Lost World	1
Greed	1
The Pony Express	1
The Vanishing American	1

The above sixteen pictures may then be considered as the Composite Best of the newspapers critics who participated in the poll.

Best Performance by Actor

IN this classification, the balloting resulted as follows, seventeen actors receiving votes:

Lon Chaney	15
Emil Jannings	13
John Gilbert	5
Douglas Fairbanks	4
Roy D'Arcy	4
Charles Chaplin	3
Ronald Colman	3
Richard Barthelmess	3
Adolphe Menjou	2
Percy Marmont	2
Harold Lloyd	1
Gibson Gowland	1
W. C. Fields	1
Richard Dix	1
Thomas Meighan	1
Wallace Beery	1
Harold Lloyd	1

Lon Chaney the winner in this group, was chosen for his work in "The Phantom of the Opera," "He Who Gets Slapped," "The Unholy Three" and "The Tower of Lies." Emil Jannings, a close second, received wide praise from the critics for his work in "The Last Laugh."

Best Performance by Actress

THE winner in this group is Louise Dresser, for her work in "The Goose Woman." The voting resulted as follows:

Louise Dresser	11
Belle Bennett	8
Colleen Moore	5
Norma Talmadge	4
Norma Shearer	4
Gloria Swanson	3
Vilma Banky	3
Betty Bronson	3
Mae Murray	2
Zasu Pitts	2
Carol Dempster	2
Lillian Gish	1
Corinne Griffith	1
Renee Adoree	1
Bessie Love	1
Pola Negri	1
Constance Talmadge	1
Claire McDowell	1
Pauline Frederick	1
Lucille La Verne	1

In this group the second place winner, Belle Bennett, received much favorable attention from the critics for her performance in "Stella Dallas."

Outstanding Director

ERICH VON STROHEIM, for his direction of "Greed" and "The Merry Widow," was an easy winner in the newspaper poll. The results follow:

Erich von Stroheim	19
King Vidor	6
Ernst Lubitsch	5
James Cruze	3
John Ford	3
Cecil De Mille	2
Henry King	2
Malcolm St. Clair	2
D. W. Griffith	1
Herbert Brenon	1
Monta Bell	1
Rupert Julian	1
F. W. Murnau	1
Tod Browning	1
George B. Seitz	1

Street" Menjou plays with a surety and polish which is a delight to witness.

The Younger Actresses

THE new feminine stars of the celluloid world are also making rapid strides toward the top rung of the histrionic ladder. It's our opinion that Norma Shearer has outdistanced her rivals in flashing a screen personality and talent. No one can rob her of the high mark she earned in "He Who Gets Slapped," and "A Slave of Fashion." The latter picture was of an inferior stamp, yet this gifted actress made it completely interesting.

Eleanor Boardman has revealed a fine sense of comedy values in "Proud Flesh," and her sponsors, once they appreciate her gift for extracting humor, will place her in roles which should bring her along rapidly.

Pola Negri hasn't accomplished much the past year. The trouble of finding suitable roles for her has dimmed the art which shone so radiantly in "Passion." She very nearly approached her former work with her portrayal of the queen in "Forbidden Paradise." Then there's Betty Bronson. She had a terrific burden to overcome in living down the publicity accompanying "Peter Pan," but she has come through with flying colors. Her acting in "Aren't Parents People?" showed real feeling and a depth of understanding.

Fox May Build Palace in St. Louis

$5,000,000 Project is Said to be Contemplated; Many Changes Reported in Circuits Throughout Country

WILLIAM FOX may build a $5,000,000 motion picture palace, hotel and office building structure at Grand and Washington boulevards, St. Louis, Mo. It is certain that Fox will build in St. Louis, but the exact site for his new first run house has not been officially announced.

Speculation on the possibilities of the Grand and Washington site has followed the purchase of Hulmboldt building, Midway theatre and Applied Arts building at that point by A. M. Frumberg, an attorney, for unrevealed clients. Frumberg, aside from confirming the purchase, has declined to reveal at this time the parties he represents.

The property included takes in the Grand avenue frontage from the alley just north of Olive street to Washington boulevard, or a total of 244 feet by 260 feet on Washington boulevard.

The location is ideal for a motion picture or other theatre. Several years ago it was considered by Lewis Selznick as a site for a combination theatre, office and apartment building. Plans then included a 3,600 seat motion picture house and office building on Grand boulevard and a 2,400 seat vaudeville theatre and apartment structure on Washington boulevard.

Frumberg is said to have conferred with Fox recently. The deal is said to have involved almost $1,000,000.

It is reported that Universal has closed for a site for a new motion picture theatre in Main street, Buffalo. The house will be the Buffalo link in the chain of 1,000 contemplated by the company throughout the world.

Jacob Lourie and associates have taken over the Norfolk Theatre in the Norfolk Downs section of Quincy, Mass. This house was formerly owned by E. H. Forkey. Mr. Forkey has gone to Fitchburg, Mass., where he has acquired the Strand Theatre.

The New England Operating Co., which is one of the Lourie interests, has also bought the new theatre at Norfolk Downs, the Regent Theatre, which has just been completed and opened on Monday.

The Strand Theatre, Somerville, Mass., formerly operated by Jack McGahan, has been taken over by the Paramount interests, making two houses in Somerville which they have recently acquired. The house which they formerly conducted, the Union Square Theatre, which is one of the older buildings, has been closed and the shows combined at the Strand.

A letter has been sent out to the minority stockholders of the Century Theatre Company, operating the Century and Parkway Theatres, Baltimore, Md., in which it is stated that it is believed a plan for the sale of the assets of the Century Theatre Company can be planned and accomplished along lines which will be to the best interests of the stockholders.

This letter, Dr. J. H. Whitehurst, president of the Combined Whitehurst Theatrical Interests, operating the Century and Parkway as well as the Garden and New Theatres, was made public recently.

The control of the common stock is now in the hands of the Whitehurst interests. All four theatres will be included in the deal, if it takes place, it is reported.

Announcements have been printed in various trade journals that William Fox Film Corporation has purchased the four Baltimore playhouses. Dr. Whitehurst declined to make any statement as to whether this was so.

Announcement was made on December 11th in Pittsburgh that the site of the Hotel Anderson, Sixth street and Penn avenue, will be used for the erection of a new Loew motion picture and vaudeville theatre. The announcement came through J. N. Anderson, Jr., manager of the Anderson estate. He explained that the property had not been sold but that negotiations were about to be consummated which would be on the basis of a long term lease to the Loew interests.

Mr. Anderson explained that the theatre will have its main entrance on Sixth street, on which side it will have a frontage of 66 feet. The structure will extend along Penn avenue to Barker Way. It is proposed to erect a theatre that will seat between 3,000 and 3,500 persons.

Spring Reports Bright Prospects

SAM SPRING, chairman of the Sales Cabinet of First National Pictures is back in New York with Ned Depinet who accompanied him on a visit to sixteen exchanges of the company. Spring is most optimistic over conditions. Regarding the trip he said:

"After having visited sixteen of our exchanges in as many days, I have come back to New York with a distinct impression of the general business prosperity throughout the heart of America and consequent good times in the show business.

"One of the hopeful things I found was the greater inclination on the part of all the companies to cooperate in order to establish stable conditions in the distribution of film. The distribution of motion pictures has come to be genuinely an industry today and no longer a game."

Robert Lieber Returns From Europe

AFTER three months spent on the Continent and in England, Robert Lieber returned to New York during the week, improved in health and ready to resume his full duties as president of First National and chief executive of the Circle Theatre in Indianapolis.

Lieber was met at quarantine by a party of First National executives including Richard A. Rowland, general manager; Sam Spring, secretary-treasurer; A. H. Blank of Omaha, Al and Ray Rockett and Earl Hudson. Regarding his trip, Mr. Lieber said:

"Although I went abroad primarily to rest, I had an opportunity to observe picture conditions in Germany, France, Italy, England and a few of the less important European countries. Everywhere I went I found an increasing demand for the product of American studios. It seemed to me that the favorable attitude toward the better class of American pictures has spread considerably since my last visit to Europe."

Three New Picture Houses for Capetown

The African Theatres, Limited, have announced their intention of building three large cinema theatres in Capetown, each capable of seating 2,500 people and embodying all the latest and best features of up-to-date English and American theatres, states a recent report to the Department of Commerce from P. J. Stevenson, American Trade Commissioner in Johannesburg, South Africa.

The management of the African Theatres, Ltd., stated that although the present "movie" going public of Capetown is not sufficiently large to justify this program of construction, they are looking to the future in which they have every confidence.

New Half Million Dollar Shanghai Theatre

The "Odeon," a new half million dollar theatre, located on the North Szechuen Road Extension, Shanghai, states B. Lucile Graham, clerk to the American Trade Commissioner in Shanghai, in a recent report to the Department of Commerce, has recently been opened to the public. It has taken approximately fourteen months to build this theatre and now that it is finished makes an imposing addition to Shanghai's amusement places. It will be used primarily for motion pictures, but is so constructed and fitted up that it may be utilized for stage performances also.

Warner's National Campaign in Full Swing

IN denying the report that Myer Lesser is no longer connected with the Warner organization, Watt Parker of that company declared that:

"There is no change, nor is any contemplated, in the status of Mr. Lesser. His job today is identically what is was months ago.

"The Warner national campaign of advertising still is in full force. The campaign is being conducted by the Blaine-Thompson Agency of Cincinnati, under the personal supervision of Mr. Lesser.

"Mr. Lesser has never given his full time to Warner Bros.' business. His present absence from New York is but another of his visits to Cincinnati in the interest of his agency business. His New York address is still in care of Warner Bros."

Federal Censorship Bill Introduced Would Censor All Motion Pictures

CREATION of a Federal Motion Picture Commission, to have five members receiving $9,000 a year, with the salary of the chairman fixed at $10,000, for the purpose of censoring every motion picture entering into interstate and foreign commerce, has been introduced in the House of Representatives by Congressman Swope of Pennsylvania.

Only strictly scientific pictures, intended for use only by the learned profession and not for exhibition in a private or public place of amusement, would be exempt from censorship.

A fee of $2 per 1,000 feet or fraction thereof of the censored film, and 50 cents for each copy licensed, would be charged, and the commission would be given authority after a period of six months to revise and fix the fees at such sums as will produce no larger income than is necessary to support the work of the commission, including salaries and all other expenses.

Violation of any of the provisions requiring the submission of films for censorship and prohibiting their display in the District of Columbia or any Territory unless licensed would be punishable by a fine of not more than $1,000, or imprisonment for not more than one year, or both, and confiscation of the offending films.

The principal office of the commission would be in Washington, but it could maintain branches wherever it deemed necessary. All films must be submitted for inspection before at least one commissioner or deputy commissioner; upon the refusal of such commissioner or deputy commissioner to issue a license, the applicant may have the right to review by a full commission, and if license is then refused, an appeal may be taken to the District of Columbia Court of Appeals.

One hundred thousand dollars is provided for carrying the act into effect.

F. B. O. Moves to New Quarters

Larger Space Taken in Embassy Building Because of It's Increased Business

BECAUSE of the increased business and the consequent increased personnel, F. B. O. has found it necessary to move the company's Home Office headquarters in New York City into larger quarters. The old offices at 723 Seventh Avenue will be deserted over this week-end and much more spacious quarters will be taken up on the entire sixteenth floor of the New Embassy Building at 1560 Broadway.

Instead of housing the departments on various floors as has been done in their present quarters, necessitating delays and time lost moving from one floor to another, the entire personnel will, in their new home, be housed on one floor, an area which approximates twenty thousand square feet. The brilliant light on three sides of the building gives each department sufficient illumination so that all departments will be able to work by natural light.

The lighting, ventilation, fixtures and general arrangements are the last word in architectural effects, and were designed for the efficiency to operation and functioning of the various departments.

All executive offices will be tastefully furnished and illuminated. A beautifully appointed waiting room for visitors has been furnished with antique pieces and rugs. The projection room, seating forty persons, wil be perfectly ventilated, due to the installation of special force draughts which will change the air currents constantly.

The executives and sales division will occupy the Broadway side of the building. The advertising and art departments wil occupy the north side of the building, which will give artists a battery of north window lights. A rest and recreation room has been provided.

F. B. O. will retain shipping space at 723 Seventh Avenue, and its New York exchange will remain at that address.

Colvin W. Brown, Vice-President in charge of Distribution for F. B. O.

German Trade Journal To Issue De-luxe Number

The Lichtbildbuekne, German film journal, will issue a de-luxe number about the middle of December. Wolff M. Henius, New York correspondent, has invited leading figures in the industry in this country to submit articles on the subject, Germany-America.

Maryville, Mo. House Is Total Fire Loss

The Empire Theatre, the largest house in Maryville, Mo., was totally destroyed by fire this week, according to word reaching Kansas City. The house, which is said to be valued at $30,000, was owned by Kuch Brothers.

Navy Largest Distributor Of Pictures

The Navy's motion picture service during the past year has developed into what is said to be the largest organization in the world distributing motion pictures, the Secretary of the Navy is advised in the annual report just submitted by the chief of the Bureau of Navigation.

Naval activities, at sea and ashore, in all parts of the world, depend largely upon Navy film service for the recreation, entertainment and amusement of their enlisted personnel, it is declared, and every ship in the Navy equipped with a motion picture machine uses Navy pictures.

The bureau purchases through its 27 contracts with the leading producers of the best reviewed feature pictures released each month. Films are received from the producers in duplicate in a pre release status and are exhibited on board ships at the same time as shown at the leading motion picture theatres throughout the country.

The bureau has recently put into effect a policy whereby all feature motion pictures purchased are screened and censored by a commissioned officer representing the Training Division and all undesirable features are eliminated before a picture is released to the naval service.

The Navy is resorting to visual education and has produced two educational films during the past year and has a third in production.

Bandits Get $5,000 in N. Y. Hold-Up

Bandits staged a daring and successful holdup at the Cosmo Theatre, 116th Street and Broadway, New York City, on Sunday night, December 13th, and made their getaway with an amount of cash reported to be over $5,000. The "stick-up" occurred just a few minutes before eleven o'clock and practically every seat in the house was filled. Seven of the bandits entered the theatre, five going upstairs to the office and two remaining on the main floor. Entering the theatre office, one of the robbers pressed a gun against the stomach of Al Harsten, one of the executives, and forced him to open the safe. Receipts of several other theatres belonging to the Harlem Theatre Circuit were in the safe at the time.

On the same night, at the Congress Theatre, 149th Street and Southern Boulevard, New York City, yeggmen blew the safe and made a haul of $500.

Jack Pickford Signs With Schenck

JACK PICKFORD has been signed to a long term contract by Joseph M. Schenck and will be seen in a number for forthcoming productions. The first of these starring vehicles has not yet been announced, though it is understood it has already been selected.

Pickford recorded past successes in such pictures as "Tom Sawyer," "Huckelberry Finn," "Great Expectations," "In Wrong," "Garrison's Finish" and "The Hill Billy." The coming productions, it is said, will be much along the same general type.

Latta Uses "Truth in Advertising"

Shenandoah, Iowa, Exhibitor Leaps Into National Prominence When He Advises Patrons to Stay Away from Weak Picture

TWO weeks ago, C. J. Latta of the Empress Theatre, Shenandoah, Iowa, was just one of the many hard working, intelligent exhibitors throughout the country, buying the best pictures he could and making of his theatre a solid, substantial factor in the community.

Then, on December 7th, he ran a newspaper ad notifying his patrons that a certain picture, which had opened the evening before, was not up to his expectations, and advising them to remain at home unless they would be satisfied with good short subjects—little thinking that there was anything other than good policy in the action.

And, by December 10th, C. J. Latta was a national, front page celebrity, his name on every tongue as the exhibitor who had dared put "Truth in Advertising" into effect in the motion picture business.

Perhaps he is not the first to do so—it is to be hoped that he is not—but his action has leaped into nation-wide prominence and may do a great deal of good. In a letter to MOTION PICTURE NEWS Mr. Latta sets forth his reasons in full, with the suggestion that a story might be prepared, but we prefer to give it in his own words, just as he wrote it. He says:

"I am enclosing newspaper clippings and complete story of advertising campaign which has caused so much comment and publicity throughout the entire country.

"This article along with clippings should give you sufficient material for a story, and I am pleased to pass it along to you to be used in whatever form you may select. The thought to be gained from this story is not one critizizing a certain production, but, on the other hand, that honest advertising pays at all times.

"You will note in clipping number one, which is a reproduction of the ad inserted in local paper, that I have blotted out all evidence of production referred to. Under ordinary circumstances I would not hesitate to pan a picture through the trade journals, but because of all this national pubicity I do not wish to cause a producing company any unnecessary grief. I think the picture very weak, but, on the other hand, some may feel that it is O. K.

"Good clean honest advertising, backed with the goods, prompted me to denounce the film.

"Not having seen the production, but basing my judgment of same on the facts that it had a splendid cast, a good director backed by a capable producing company and a story which was listed as one of the best sellers of 1925, I felt I had a splendid offering and launched my advertising campaign. After the first day's showing I was convinced the picture was very weak and that I had over-advertised.

"This should have been a splendid production, but turned out to be a story which did not lend itself well to picturization.

"Without any malice at heart toward the producing company, but with a firm determination to follow my plans of honest advertising, I issued through local paper and a bulletin in front of my theatre an apology to those who had seen the picture and a fair warning to those who were contemplating seeing same.

"Through no thought of obtaining this publicity did I take the action I did, but, on the other hand, with an honest, sincere feeling at heart to be fair and square with my patrons. No man can hope to succeed or last very long in the business world practicing unfair methods of obtaining business. You can fool some of the people some of the time but you can't fool all the people all of the time. I want the good will of all the people all of the time.

"I have been working hard to convince my patrons that I am a square shooter and that when I say a thing they can bank on it. Rather than destroy confidence I would far rather lose a few dollars on a picture for in the end it will all come back, and more too.

"Patronage was cut considerably after issuing warning but the few dollars lost has been more than offset by the confidence gained. Many have complimented me on my fairness and say I am a good sport. With a change of program the following day business was above average in the face of considerable opposition.

"As stated before I had no thought of launching a campaign against the producers of the picture which I was showing. I did not advertise in this manner to arouse curiosity, with but one thought in mind, to instill in the minds of my patrons confidence."

The advertisement which created such remarkable interest was as follows, all identifying references to the production being eliminated here as suggested by Mr. Latta. Under the heading, "An Apology and A Fair Warning," the ad read:

"How many of you ever tried entertaining your friends seven days out of each week? Possibly not many have tried this but I am sure you can appreciate what a task the theatre man has in endeavoring to entertain and please—365 days out of each year.

"We endeavor to please at all times and are perfectly willing to admit our mistakes. It is impossible to see in advance every program we present so we must base our judgment of a production on the story, the author of the story, the producer, the director and the cast. All of these were taken into consideration when we booked "————" for our showing yesterday and today but much to our disappointment we feel it is one of the weakest pictures we have ever shown in Shenandoah. The balance of our program was up to standard but we are not happy unless we have a 100% program.

"————" was taken from ———— stirring novel—one of the best sellers of the year. It is an ———— production produced by ———— with ———— and ———— in the cast.

"We thought this should make a splendid picture and from the splendid patronage we had yesterday it is evidenced that you felt the same way. But it is just one of those cases that happens once in a while where a good story fails to make good screen material.

"Therefore, if we disappointed you who came yesterday we hope you will not criticize us too severely for we assure you we meant well.

"We can only hope to succeed through good clean, honest advertising backed with the GOODS. This is once we failed. We apologize and beg your pardon.

"We have no other program to substitute tonight, therefore, rather than have a dark house we must finish the engagement, but to those who have not seen '————' we warn you that in our opinion it is a very weak attraction. The Fox News, Aesops Fables, and Comedy are unusually good so govern yourselves accordingly. Most sincerely yours, C. J. Latta."

Seastrom To Direct Miss Gish In "Scarlet Letter"

VICTOR SEASTROM will direct Lillian Gish in "The Scarlet Letter," adapted from the story by Nathaniel Hawthorne, it was announced by Irving G. Thalberg, associate studio executive of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, producers of the picture.

Seastrom has made several outstanding successes since his association with this company, among them "He Who Gets Slapped." Miss Gish is now completing work on "La Boheme" at the Culver City studios.

National M. P. League Ball December 29th

The Novelty Movie Ball under the auspices of the National Motion Picture League, will be held at the Hotel Plaza, New York, on the evening of December 29th. The committee in charge of the event have arranged an elaborate program of entertainment and a growing list of features, of particular interest to people in the industry and screen fans, at present includes, a demonstration of the Phonofilms, slow motion pictures of Jim Barnes followed by a putting contest by the British Open Gold Champion in person, and the appearance of noted motion picture and stage stars, among whom will be Jackie Coogan, Mary Boland and others.

Frank Hitchcock, former Postmaster General, is chairman of the committee in charge of the Novelty Movie Ball. Weekly bulletins containing information regarding the entertainment numbers are being issued.

H. Charles Fourton Passes Away in South

H. Charles Fourton, for the past twenty-five years connected in a managerial capacity with Jake Wells in Atlanta, passed away last week following an illness which covered a period of many weeks. He saw service in nearly every important theatrical city in the south.

Deceased is survived by two sons, Frank Fourton of New York City, Dr. Carl Fourton of Kerrville, Texas, and a sister, Mrs. Thomas Stark of Thibodeaux, La.

Ten Companies to Tour in "Big Parade" for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER have organized ten separate touring units to present "The Big Parade," now in its second month at the Astor Theatre in New York City. These units will tour the Metropolitan cities throughout the United States and Canada.

"The Big Parade" is scheduled to open first in Philadelphia at the Aldine on Thursday, Dec. 24. The second company will start the Chicago engagement at the Garrick, Sunday, Dec. 27. The Southern company opens at the Playhouse, Wilmington, Del., Thursday, Dec. 31. The Detroit engagement will start Sunday Jan. 3, at the Shubert-Detroit. Another company will be sent through the Middle West starting about the middle of January.

The opening in Washington, D. C., is scheduled for Monday, Jan. 18, at Poli's. Another touring unit will be sent to San Francisco to open at the Curran, Monday, Jan. 25. The sixth company will be sent to Boston for an engagement at the Majestic starting Monday, Feb. 1. Another company opens at the Auditorium, Baltimore, Monday, Feb. 15. The 10th company will be sent to Pittsburgh for the engagement at the Alvin starting March 22.

"The Big Parade" will play indefinite engagements in the above big cities. They will carry their own orchestras and the presentations will be made exactly as at the Astor, New York.

New Policy for First National

Hudson and Rockett Head Units Under System Established at Eastern Plant

A NEW production policy has been inaugurated by Richard A. Rowland, general manager of First National for the eastern studios of the company. Further advantage will be taken of the unit system, which has proved so effective. Under the new arrangement Earl Hudson will manage four production units and Al Rockett will manage four others. Ray Rockett will be business manager at the studio, a post held for some time past by Al Rockett.

A checkup has proven conclusively, according to Mr. Rowland, that the best results have been obtained through the unit system of production rather than the old method. It is his opinion that units should be relatively small so that the producer can concentrate and specialize on his pictures.

In discussing the new policy Rowland said:

"Every picture needs individual attention, and in order to give the best that is in him, a producer must have the opportunity to concentrate on the production immediately in hand. Our best pictures have been made in this way in the past, and it will be more than ever the case in the future now that every picture released must, in reality, be of 'special' calibre.

"The day of the machine-made photoplay is past."

Post Office Asks Aid of Exhibitors

The United States Post Office Department at Washington, D. C., has requested through National Headquarters of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America that theatre owners in the country co-operate with the post office during the rush of mail in the holiday period.

The postal authorities have always been among the first to co-operate with National Headquarters whenever the mails have been concerned. Therefore, a letter urging the theatre owners to utilize the mails during the rush season in a manner which will not cause any unnecessary congestion has been incorporated in the latest issue of the Official Bulletin.

Cotter Signs Truce; Will Remain Closed Sundays

After being arrested six times, the Sunday closing fight between J. W. Cotter, manager of the Fourth Street Theatre, Moberly, Mo., and city and county officials, has come to a close, an agreement being reached under which Mr. Cotter will cease operating on Sundays. Details of the agreement were not announced at the time Mr. Cotter consented to remain closed on Sundays. In all of his Sunday shows Mr. Cotter had turned over the receipts of the day to various charities.

Jones Takes Up Duties At Lyric, Manistee, Mich.

Harry Jones, formerly manager of Saxe's Merrill theatre at Milwaukee, has assumed new duties as manager of the Lyric theatre at Manistee, Mich. Jones is one of the pioneer "big time" exhibitors of the country and is widely known in all branches of the business.

Universal Signs Many Directors

UNIVERSAL has signed up a staff of more than a dozen leading Hollywood directors in preparation for the production of the "White List" of 54 pictures for the 1926 program. The directors now under contract include: William Seiter, Svend Gade, Edward Sloman, King Baggot, Harry Pollard, Edward Sedgwick, Edward Laemmle, Herbert Blache, Lynn Reynolds, Clifford Smith, Albert Rogell, Arthur Rosson and James O. Spearing. All of these directors have either started production on pictures or are preparing to get under way with them within the next three weeks.

Controversy Over Upstate Affiliation

A. C. Hayman Defends Application To Hays Organization— Albany Exhibitors Reported Lukewarm

THE situation brought about by the application of the M.P.T.O. of New York State, Buffalo and Albany zones, through William A. Dillon, Ithaca, for affiliation with the Hays organization continued to be a live topic in exhibitor circles this week.

No announcement has been made as to action taken by the directors of the Hays organization on the application. Protests were registered last week by Joseph M. Seider, General Manager of the M.P.T.O.A., and the Board of Directors of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce of New York City, through President Charles L. O'Reilly.

A statement was issued by A. C. Hayman, of Niagara Falls, one of the prominent upstate exhibitors. Defending the application for affiliation, Mr. Hayman said in part:

"I was one of the members that voted in favor of the affiliation with the Hays organization and I object to some of the statements made by men who do not want the truth and who have not the exhibitors' interest at heart.

"The majority of the exhibitors of the Buffalo and Albany zones, are busy managing their own theatres and have no time for cheap politics. In affiliating with the Hays organization, we become an affiliating member. We retain our own identity as an exhibitor organization at all times.

"Our affiliation gives to each exhibitor, the right to bring before Mr. Hays and his organization any grievance that they might have which is not in his film contract, and which can not be heard before the present arbitration boards, but which is vital to his theatre interests and his further business. He can sit at a table, state his complaint at a joint meeting of exhibitor members and members of the Hays organization.

"In other words, we are bringing arbitration to the exhibitors beyond their present film contract. I think this affiliation is a step in the right direction. It will help to bring all interests in a closer and more harmonious relationship. It is a move that will bring about a real exhibitor organization, something which we never have had.

"I believe that Mr. Hays is sincere in his efforts to unify this industry and put it on a sound business basis and I will continue to believe in Mr. Hays' sincerity until he shows, by his actions, otherwise."

No word has yet come from Louis Buettner, of Cohoes, chairman of the Albany Zone, as to the proposed affiliation of the Albany and Buffalo Zones with the Hays organization. The proposal on the part of the two zones was made by William A. Dillon, of Ithaca, president of the New York State M.P.T.O. It is said that some of the exhibitors in the Albany Zone are not overenthusiastic in regard to joining the Hays organization, and that the whole matter may be threshed out at a meeting in the near future.

Following is Article IV of the Constitution and By-Laws of the Hays Association headed "Affiliated Organizations":

"Section 1. Any Association, Board of Trade, Chamber of Commerce or other organization directly interested in any branch of the motion picture industry may, upon application and under conditions approved by the Board of Directors of this Association, obtain a 'Certificate of Affiliation' with this Association but only upon the following conditions, namely:

"(a) Upon agreeing to contribute annually to the funds of this Association a definite sum to be fixed by the Board of Directors of this Association; or

"(b) Upon such other terms and conditions as the Board of Directors of this Association may determine.

"Such 'Certificate of Affiliation' shall confer upon the affiliated organization only the following rights and such others, if any, as may thereafter be authorized by the Board of Directors of this Association, namely:

"First: To call upon the Secretary of this Association to arrange meetings of organizations interested in any branch of the motion picture industry or interested in civic or legislative questions pertaining to any branch of the motion picture industry or to assist in the conduct of such meetings.

"Second: To receive on request, but subject to the approval of the Board of Directors of this Association, information concerning current civic or legislative matters affecting the interests of the affiliated organization.

"Third: To call upon this Association to appoint arbitrators or referees in trade or business disputes in which the affiliated organization may be interested or concerned.

"Section 2. No affiliated organization shall be entitled to notice of any meeting or other action or proceeding of the Association, unless ordered by the Board of Directors. Any 'Certificate of Affiliation' issued by the Association may be cancelled at any time by the Board of Directors for any cause which said Board may deem sufficient, and thereupon all the rights of the affiliated organization shall cease."

Jean Hersholt Elevated to Stardom

JEAN HERSHOLT has been promoted to stardom by Universal and a series of special productions will go into immediate preparation for him. The first story will be an original by Edward Sedgwick, who will also direct the picture. It is titled "The Squarehead," and is a sea story in which the actor will play the role of a Swedish sailor. Production is scheduled to start next week, when the company will leave for San Pedro for its maritime atmosphere.

M.P.T.O.A. Will Bar Grange Picture

Woodhull Announces Seider Has Been Authorized To Acquaint Members With the Facts

R. F. WOODHULL, President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, upon the report of Joseph M. Seider, General Manager of the organization, this week issued a statement from National Headquarters concerning "Red" Grange and his motion picture contract. The statement follows:

"We have made a thorough investigation of the alleged payment to 'Red' Grange of a $300,000 check. We have made a demand upon the company responsible for these statements concerning Grange and his alleged movie contract, for proof as to the genuineness of such publicity. The only response we have received is a report in a motion picture trade journal boasting that the publicity story had received a million lines of free space on the wires of news syndicates, and that the $300,000 story had made the producer who was responsible for its emanation, a famous man overnight.

"Producers have been guilty of bunk publicity in the past. The time has come when we theatre owners can assure the public that as the show window of the Motion Picture Industry, we will not project on our screens any production, regardless of the calibre of the producer, if it has been promoted by dollars and cents statements.

"Mr. Seider, the General Manager, has been authorized by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, composed of theatre owners throughout the United States and Canada, to acquaint our members with the facts we have uncovered in this particular instance. There is no question as to the action they will take when salesmen call upon them and sell this particular picture.

"This closes the matter so far as we are concerned."

Lee Kugel was quoted in The New York Times as having made the following reply, on behalf of Arrow Pictures Corporation:

"Ask them how many members they have among the 19,000 theatre owners in this country. The contract with Grange is genuine and we aren't going to pay any attention to such statements as this one put out today. They are trying to get publicity for themselves."

An Associated Press Dispatch from Danville, Ill., on December 15th said: "Grange refused to discuss his $300,000 movie contract or the threat of New York theatre owners to boycott his picture unless he reveals the facts surrounding it."

GRIFFITH PLANS NEW WORK

To Film Corelli's "The Sorrows of Satan"

D. W. GRIFFITH will soon start work on the production which he plans to make as the most ambitious screen effort of his career—an elaborate photoplay version of Marie Corelli's "The Sorrows of Satan." An announcement from Paramount, for whom the picture will be made, states that the production will be made on a scale greater than "The Birth of a Nation" and "Intolerance."

As tentatively worked out, the story will be filmed with a number of pretentious spactacles in England. Scenes also will be made at the Paramount studios in Long Island and at Hollywood. It will require from four to six months to complete the work, Paramount officials estimate.

Forrest Halsey, who wrote the screen versions of "Monsieur Beaucaire," "Madame Sans-Gen," and many others, is preparing the script in collaboration with Mr. Griffith. Representatives of Paramount are now in England seeking a magnificent country estate in the Shakespeare country similar to the one described by Miss Corelli.

Discuss French Quota Law

Al Blofson Sees Harmful Reaction To Exhibitors There Through Restrictions

THE French "Kontingent," or quota law, restricting the importations of American films in France will prove harmful rather than benefical to the exhibitors and the industry in general in that country, according to Al. Blofson, former director general of Latin Europe for Universal and recently appointed branch manager for Associated Exhibitors in Philadelphia.

Under the proposed law, Mr. Blofson points out, the importation of American pictures will be greatly reduced, because of the clause providing limitation of importations of pictures. There will be a reciprocity clause providing for additional importations at a ratio of one to one for every French-made film taken into the United States.

Practically all of the domestic output which France has to supply the 1,600 theatres there, Mr. Blofson declares, is the product from one solidly organized producing company and the twenty-five or so independent directors who, after writing their own scenarios are sometimes able to obtain financial backing sufficient to produce these stories. Those produced in this way which have merit are distributed through a French exchange.

A careful analysis of the situation, Mr. Blofson points out, will show how utterly impossible it will be for France to get along without the present supply of American pictures. The larger American producing companies are now distributing approximately fifty pictures a year in France. If their importations are curtailed by one-half they will still, it is said, get the same amount of money for the twenty-five pictures as they did for the fifty, the overhead not being lessened by the curtailment of prints handled.

The reciprocity clause can be easily overcome, Mr. Blofson declares, by the purchase by American producers of antiquated and obsolete French negatives at ridiculously low prices. Some of these can be secured for as low as $100 and $200, he says.

Lasky Anniversary Celebrated

Twelfth Birthday of Founding of Studio Observed at Los Angeles Metropolitan

JESSE L. Lasky Night was celebrated last Monday night at the Metropolitan Theatre in Los Angeles, thus commemorating the twelfth anniversary of the founding of the Lasky Studio in Hollywood. Company officials, directors and screen stars joined with the public in celebrating the occasion.

It was twelve years ago that a tiny studio started business in Hollywood as Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company. Today it is internationally known as the Paramount Hollywood studio.

The occasion was one of sentiment and reverence, as well as brilliance, the emotion of the spectators coming to a climax when the orchestra struck up "Memories," and the curtains parted revealing Theodore Roberts, grand old man of pictures and one of the earliest Lasky stars, seated on the stage smoking his familiar cigar. It was Roberts, who, his voice filled with emotion at the applause greeting his first public appearance since he was brought close to death's door by illness, paid the tribute of the evening to Mr. Lasky and presented to him on behalf of the employees of the Lasky studio, a bronze tablet, to be erected at the corner of the old barn which still stands on the site of the immense Lasky studio in Hollywood.

Mr. Lasky, in responding to the introduction, was moved with deep emotion.

After recounting a few of the early difficulties, he extended his thanks to the loyal members of the studio organization, and said:

"I can only say that I can pledge you, not on behalf of Paramount alone, but on behalf of the motion picture industry — this great new art which is bringing happiness and entertainment to millions of people throughout the world every day — that I will bend every effort to develop and better this art, to aid in every way the making of finer and greater achievements on the screen."

N. Y. Governor Silent On New Appointment

No word has yet come from Governor Alfred E. Smith as to what he intends to do after January first in regard to naming a successor to George H. Cobb as chairman of the New York State Motion Picture Commission, whose term of office expires that day. It is said that Governor Smith will probably let matters shape themselves in so far as the Commission is concerned, until after he hears the report of the committee on reorganization. If the Governor has his way, the Commission will be abolished, but if it is allowed to continue, it will probably be given a berth in the State Education department.

Both Chairman Cobb and Arthur Levy, secretary of the Commission, were in Albany during the past week, appearing before the budget committee and outlining their needs in the way of an appropriation to meet the running expenses of the commission for another year.

New Brunswick Board of Censors Reorganized

The Board of Moving Picture Censors for the Province of New Brunswick, with headquarters at St. John, has been reorganized, the personnel of the Board being reduced from five to four members. Fred J. McInerney, a business man of St. John, has been appointed chairman of the new board, and the other new members are Stephen Palmer, a St. John lawyer; Mrs. John Carvell, a local educationalist, and Miss Alice Fairweather.

Miss Fairweather was with the St. John Standard for five years, being the editor of the motion picture department of the paper. More recently she has been with the Art Films, Limited, producing advertising and other local films.

The new board for New Brunswick has met with the approval of exchange officials of St. John and with exhibitors generally insofar as its personal make-up is concerned.

Golden, Missouri, Winner of Sunday Movies

The City Council of Golden, Missouri, has finally decided a long-discussed question in favor of Sunday motion pictures. These pictures had been banned under an ordinance that became effective way back in 1879. The committee of the council finally recommended to the entire body that the offensive ordinance be interpreted not to include Sunday movies. As a result of the decision the ordinance will not be repealed as contemplated.

Asher to Make One for First National

BY the terms of a deal just concluded between E. M. Asher of Faultless Pictures, and R. A. Rowland, the former will produce the Drury Lane melodrama, "Good Luck," for First National release. Conway Tearle is to be seen in the starring role. The production is scheduled to start in Los Angeles about the first of the year. Asher is the producer of Corinne Griffith pictures.

To Build Studio For Presentation

Publix Theatres Will Form And Rehearse Acts For Circuit In Model Theatre In Long Island City

PUBLIX THEATRES CORPORATION, the new organization controlling the amalgamated Famous Players-Balaban & Katz theatres, announced this week that a studio for the construction and rehearsal of elaborate stage presentations to be circuited through several houses in the chain, would be erected in Long Island City, on a site near the Famous Players-Lasky studios. Plans for the structure, to occupy a five-story building, are now being prepared in the office of R. E. Hall & Co. of New York, architects and engineers.

The studio will be equipped with a full-sized stage with complete electrical equipment, a large paint shop and scene dock, a carpenter shop, a special audition hall, six rehearsal rooms, a music library, an orchestra rehearsal room, costume and drapery departments, property room, a picture projection theatre, ballet rehearsal rooms and the offices of the production manager, Herschel Stuart; the director of productions, John Murray Anderson; the musical director, Nathaniel W. Finston; the ballet master, Boris Petroff, and other members of the staff.

One of the special features of the studio will be a theatrical lighting equipment of the most modern type, under the supervision of a master electrician or engineer who thus will be afforded every opportunity for developing new effects in theatrical lighting. Facilities will also be provided for experimentation in the field of interior design and decoration of theatres.

In the screening of films in the studio's projection room special attention will be given to the short subjects, the novelty shorter films that are an important part of the program of motion picture theatres. These films, as well as feature pictures, will be musically cued by the director of music. Attention will also be given to the development of scenic, musical and dancing novelties to be associated as a unit with certain particular feature pictures and short subjects.

In the master music room will be filed a most complete music library, the combined resources of some of the finest theatres in the United States. The administration of this library, together with the technical work of arrangements and orchestrations, will be under the supervision of the director of music, Nathaniel W. Finston. Mr. Finston, since the days when he served as conductor at the Rivoli Theatre in New York City, has become a nationally known figure.

The dancing rehearsal rooms will offer facilities for a ballet school where dancers will be developed under the direction of Boris Petroff, ballet master. Mr. Petroff also comes from the Balaban & Katz organization in Chicago, with which he served as master of the ballet.

John Murray Anderson, who will originate and direct the productions under a long-term contract with Publix Theatres, first came into fame as the producer of the "Greenwich Village Follies."

At the Metropolitan Theatre in Boston, Mr. Anderson has presented a half-dozen or more productions, designing them along the lines which, in general, he means to follow in building his presentations for the Publix Theatres circuit of houses. Included among the Metropolitan's presentations are "The Melting Pot," "The Dime Museum," "Skylarks," "The Garden of Kama" and "The Angelus."

Herschel Stuart, who will be the production manager of the new studio, until recently has been associated with Famous Players-Lasky as theatre manager. At the invitation of Sam Katz, president of Publix Theatres, he recently came to New York from the Missouri Theatre in St. Louis, of which he was manager, to accept the new position.

Directly associated with Mr. Anderson, as designer of stage settings and costumes, will be Hermann Rosse, who occupies a position in the theatrical world hardly second to that of Mr. Anderson himself.

Carmine Vitola will be the foreman of the mechanical department, supervising the building and painting of scenery. Mr. Vitola is widely known as a scenic artist, having been identified in such capacity with the Chicago Opera, Music Box Revue and other organizations.

Will Argue Reopening of Famous Case

THE Federal Trade Commission has announced that a two-hour hearing will be held on January 6, for the purpose of receiving arguments on a motion filed by counsel for the commission seeking the reopening of the Famous Players-Lasky case.

The petition for reopening states that it is desired to introduce evidence showing location and seating capacity of all theatres in which Famous Players or its affiliated companies have acquired any interests between September 1, 1924 and December 1, 1925, and also to introduce such evidence theretofore excluded by the trial examiner in the proceeding as in the opening of the commission should have been admitted.

Independents Hold Annual Meeting

Officers are Elected and Plans Discussed for Organizing National Association of Exchanges

THE Independent Motion Picture Association of America held its second annual meeting and election of officers at the Hotel Astor, New York, on December 11th, when a number of matters of importance were under discussion. Among the most important of these was the advisability of forming a national association of independent state right exchanges and the urging of independent exhibitors throughout the world to remain independent.

Serious consideration was given to the nationalizing of the independent and state right exchanges into a compact organization and the president was empowered to appoint a committee of three exchange men which is to draft a prospective plan to be presented at the next meeting.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

President, I. E. Chadwick, Chadwick Pictures Corp.; first vice-president, Ben Amsterdam, Masterpiece Films, Philadelphia; second vice-president, M. H. Hoffman, Tiffany Productions; third vice-president, Abe Ray Johnston, Rayart Pictures, Inc.; record-Ray Johnston, Ryart Pictures, Inc.; recording secretary, Jack Bellman, Renown Exchange, New York.

The reports presented by President I. E. Chadwick, General Manager Frederick H. Elliott, and Treasurer Nathan Hirsh indicated that the association had made substantial progress during its second year, with much promise for future development and accomplishment.

General Manager Elliott reported a total membership of 95, including 22 producers and distributors and 73 exchanges, a very substantial increase over the membership of a year ago. Mr. Elliott's report covered many subjects and included various recommendations, all of which were approved.

The new executive committee for 1926 appointed by President Chadwick, comprising the following producers and distributors, held its first meeting on December 12 at the association's headquarters, 1650 Broadway: W. E. Shallenberger, chairman, Arrow pictures Corp.; President I. E. Chadwick, Chadwick Pictures Corp.; Joe Brandt, Columbia Pictures Corp.; Nathan Hirsh, Aywon Film Corp.; M. H. Hoffman, Tiffany Productions, Inc.; W. Ray Johnston, Rayart Pictures Corp.; Sam Sax, Lumas Film Corp.; Wm. Steiner, Wm. Steiner Productions.

The executive committee is composed of sixteen members, eight producer-distributors, and eight exchange men. The latter will be appointed following the filing of their nominations by the exchange membership. The producer-distributor representation on the executive committee is the same, with the exception of Sam Sax of Gotham Productions, who succeeds Oscar A. Price.

The executive committee voted unanimously to retain Frederick H. Elliott as general manager of the association, the committee having exercised an option in Mr. Elliott's contract whereby he will continue to have general direction of the organization's activities and management.

The advisability of arranging for more suitable headquarters was referred to a committee consisting of Sam Sax of Gotham and the general manager.

It was voted to substantially increase the amount of dues paid by producer and distributor members.

Claud Saunders, Paramount Exploitation Manager, Tenders Resignation

CLAUD SAUNDERS, for the last seven years exploitation manager for Famous Players-Lasky has tendered his resignation to that organization to accept a position with a nationally known merchandising concern.

Saunders organized the first nation-wide exploitation department in the picture industry when he first joined Famous. In tendering his resignation he had the following to say:

"It is with the deepest regret that I am resigning from Paramount, because not only have the associations been most cordial and pleasant, but also because it was Paramount that had the courage and resources to let me put my ideas on exploitation into force seven years ago, when exploitation, as it is known now, was practically unknown in the picture business. However, I have long had under consideration an extremely attractive offer from a merchandising concern whose name I am not at liberty to divulge at this time but which will let me put into execution in another field the ideas and methods that have been successful in the show business. I have arranged with Mr. Kent and Mr. Weeks to retire from Paramount and take up my new work just as soon as my successor has been appointed."

Strand-Robbins Complete Deal

$3,000,000 Involved in Transaction For Taking Over of Up-State Houses

THE $3,000,000 deal between the Mark Strand Theatres Corporation and the Robbins Chain has finally been consummated. By its terms the Strand company takes over five theatres in Utica, four in Watertown and one in Syracuse.

With the consummation of the transaction it was also announced that after the first of the year the entire offices of the Mark Strand chain now in Buffalo and Albany, will make their home in New York City. Nathan Robbins, head of the Robbins chain, becomes a first vice-president of the Mark Strand Theatres Corporation and will make his headquarters in New York, as will Walter Hayes, who looks after the Buffalo interests of the Mark Strand company.

Walter Hayes announces that his company is considering two downtown sites in Syracuse for a $1,500,000 picture and vaudeville house. Plans for this new theatre now are in preparation. The new company will begin operating the Robbins-Eckel in Syracuse on January 2 and extensive alterations to cost about $100,000 are planned for this theatre.

No stock in the new corporation will be offered to the public, according to Mr. Hayes. No change in personnel of the theatres is contemplated, especially where employes have been efficient, Mr. Hayes said. The same men will run the Robbins-Eckel as before. Mr. Hayes is president of the company operating the Syracuse Strand.

Plan For Naked Truth Dinner

A. M. P. A. Sets February 6 As Tentative Date—Board Members Hold First Meeting

PLANS for the annual Naked Truth Dinner under the auspices of the A. M. P. A. have been set in motion and a tentative date, February 6, has been set for the holding of the affair, which members of the board in charge of the affair announce will be the biggest and finest Naked Truth Dinner ever staged.

The board members, Glendon Allvine, Walter Eberhart, Charlie Einfeld, Tom Wiley, Bill Yearsley, Nat Rothstein, King Fisher and other members, met at the home of Mr. Allvine, Saturday, December 5, to discuss plans.

The provocative title of the "Eye and Hoof" party has been chosen for the affair. One of the ideas advanced is to have 100 tables and 100 stars, and plans are now being worked out to have present at the dinner every screen star in New York at the time and to bring from Hollywood by special train, if necessary, a galaxy of stars such as seldom is collected under one roof.

Nat Rothstein was chosen as the Official Announcer for the evening. Two famous jazz orchestras will be engaged to play, so that dance music will be constant and continuous throughout the entire evening.

Although it is nearly two months before the event takes place, the A. M. P. A. has already received more than one hundred requests for reservations, with cash accompanying these requests in exactly fifty-four cases, an indicator of the widespread popularity of the A. M. P. A. Naked Truth Dinners, and particularly this coming party.

Lafayette Square Theatre Pays Extra Dividend

The directors of the Lafayette Square theatre of Buffalo have declared an extra dividend of $1 a share on the $100 par capital stock in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of $2.50 a share on the issue. This makes a distribution of $11 a share on the stock for the year 1925.

Famous Declares Regular Quarterly Dividend

At a meeting during the week the Board of Directors of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation declared the regular quarterly dividend of $2 per share on the preferred stock, payable Febuary 1st, 1926, to stockholders of record at the close of business on January 15th. The books will not close.

Announces New Line Up Of Managers for Shea Houses

The managerial lineup for the Shea houses in Buffalo when the new Shea Buffalo opens in January has been decided upon by Michael Shea, head of the Shea Amusement Company. Vincent R. McFaul, who has been managing director of Shea's Hippodrome since Harold B. Franklin resigned that post to become head of the Paramount theatre department, will become managing director of the new Buffalo, a $2,000,000 house now nearing completion on Main street.

Johnny Carr, a brother of the late Henry Carr, and manager of Shea's North Park for the past several years, will become manager of Shea's Hippodrome.

Robert T. Murphy has been named manager of the North Park. Mr. Murphy now is a member of the Buffalo Universal office sales staff, but has resigned effective soon after January 1.

Fire Damages Allen Theatre At Medina, N. Y.

Fire starting when a film jammed in a projection machine resulted in an estimated loss of $3,000 at the Allen Theatre, Medina, N. Y., the other day. The fire was confined entirely to the operating booth and the house was emptied without any confusion. A break in the film threw portions of it back into the machine igniting this highly inflammable material of which it is made. The fire soon spread to other rolls of film in the booth and in an instant was beyond the control of Harry Bale, operator. Quick work on the part of the fire department prevented a much more serious loss. Sidney C. Allen, owner of the house, announces that he has completed plans for a new theatre to be built in Medina, work on which will start in the spring. The Allen opened a few days after the fire, with new equipment in the booth.

Theatre Yeggmen Ply Trade in Chicago

Theatre yeggmen are running rampant in Chicago. Louis Laemmle's treasurer was held up in front of the Franklin Trust and Savings Bank on Monday morning and robbed of $1,200, which he was about to deposit.

Sergeant Roy Hesser and a squad from the detective bureau halted a truck in which three men were hauling away a safe that they had taken from the Knickerbocker Theatre, 6225 Broadway, a Lubliner & Trinz house. In the safe, which had not been opened, was $2,200. Two of the men escaped, but the driver was captured by the police.

Jersey Indicts Two For Sunday Showings

Two New Jersey exhibitors were indicted during the week by the Middlesex County Grand Jury for alleged violation of the old vice and immorality act, known as the Sunday Blue Law. They are Walter Reade, proprietor of more than twenty theatres in New Jersey, and Herman Seewak, owner of the Crescent and Majestinc theatres in Carteret.

Reade is charged with having operated the Grand, Crescent and Ditmas theatres in Perth Amboy on Sunday, May 10th. A similar charge was placed against Seewak.

Pro-Dis-Corp. Announces Releases

Twenty-three Feature Attractions Scheduled to go to Exhibitors Between January 1st and June 30th

PRODUCERS DISTRIBUTING CORPORATION has announced its lineup of releases for the first half of 1926. From January 1st to June 30th there will be twenty-three high class attractions released. These will include eight productions from the Cecil B. De Mille studio, twelve from the Metropolitan studios, two from Marshall Neilan and one comedy feature from Al Christie.

Cecil De Mille will contribute two Rupert Julian productions in "Three Faces East" and "Silence;" two Paul Sloane productions in "Made for Love" and "Eve's Leaves;" one Alan Hale production, "Braveheart;" one William K. Howard production, "Red Dice," and his own personally directed offering, "The Volga Boatman." One other production, "Bachelor's Brides," will star Rod La Rocque.

Rod La Rocque will be starred in "Braveheart," an adaptation of the William De Mille stage play, "Strongheart," and "Red Dice," from the Octavus Roy Cohen story, "The Iron Chalice." In "Braveheart" the star will be supported by Lillian Rich, Robert Edeson, Tyrone Power and Jean Acker. In "Red Dice," Marguerite De La Motte will be his leading lady, supported by an all star cast. Leatrice Joy will be starred in "Made for Love," supported by Edmund Burns, and in "Eve's Leaves" with Clive Brook and Rockcliffe Fellowes.

"Three Faces East," adapted from the war time secret service play by Anthony Paul Kelly, will have Jetta Goudal, Robert Ames, Henry B. Walthall and Clive Brook in the featured roles, while "Silence," an adaptation of Max Marcin's stage play, will have H. B. Warner in the role he made famous behind the footlights.

Cecil B. De Mille's personally directed production, "The Volga Boatman," is from the story by Konrad Bercovici. William Boyd will be featured in the title role, supported by Elinor Fair, Robert Edeson, Theodore Kosloff, Julia Faye, Victor Varconi, Rosa Rudami and Arthur Rankin.

The Metropolitan offerings, to be presented by John C. Flinn, include "Steel Preferred," directed by James V. Hogan; "Rocking Moon," a George Melford production; "The Million Dollar Handicap," directed by Scott Sidney; "Paris at Midnight," a Frances Marion production directed by E. Mason Hopper; "The Danger Girl," "Forbidden Waters," and "The Dice Woman," to be directed by Edward Dillon; "Whispering Smith" and "Shipwrecked," directors of which have not yet been decided upon.

"Steel Preferred," the first of the Metropolitans, is adapted from Herschel Hall's "Wally Gay" stories published in the Saturday Evening Post. William Boyd and Vera Reynolds are featured in the production with a cast headed by Hobart Bosworth, Charles Murray, Nigel Barrie, Helene Sullivan, William V. Mong and Walter Long.

"Rocking Moon," from the story by Barrett Willoughby, will have Lilyan Tashman and John Bowers in the featured roles with Rockcliffe Fellowes, Laska Winter, Luke Cosgrave and Eugene Pallette prominent in the supporting cast.

"Paris at Midnight," Frances Marion's second offering as a producer, is adapted from Balzac's great story, "Pere Goriot."

"The Million Dollar Handicap" is a story of the American turf adapted from W. A. Frazer's novel, "Thoroughbreds." Vera Reynolds will be featured at the head of a cast that includes Edmund Burns, Ralph Lewis, Ward Crane, Tom Wilson, Clarence Burton, Danny Hoy, Rosa Gore, Walter Emerson and a bevy of beauties borrowed from the Christie studio.

"The Danger Girl," adapted from "The Bride" by George Middleton and Stuart Olivier, will star Priscilla Dean with John Bowers in the featured role. Cissy Fitzgerald, Arthur Hoyt, William Humphrey, Clarence Burton, Edwin Connolly and Gustav Von Seyffertitz will be seen in prominent parts.

Priscilla Dean will also be starred in "Forbidden Waters" by Percy Heath, and "The Dice Woman" by Welford Beaton.

"Shipwrecked" will be a melodrama adapted from the stage play "The Storm" by Langdon McCormick. "Whispering Smith" will be a railroad drama adapted from the novel by Frank Spearman. The star, director and cast for these two productions have not yet been selected.

"Fifth Avenue," a dramatization of the human side of New York's famous thoroughfare, suggested by Arthur Stringer's story in The Saturday Evening Post, will have Marguerite De La Motte and Allan Forrest in the featured roles, with such screen favorites as Louise Dresser, William V. Mong, Lucille Lee Stewart, Flora Finch, Lillian Langdon, Anna May Wong, Craufurd Kent, Josephine Norman and Sally Long in the supporting cast.

A. H. Sebastian will present "The Prince of Pilsen," adapted from the musical comedy success of the same title by Frank Pixley and Gustav Luders. Anita Stewart has already been signed for a leading role.

"Wild Oats Lane," the Marshall Neilan production, will be an elaborate picturization of Gerald Beaumont's story, published as a serial in the Red Book magazine. Viola Dana and Robert Agnew will be seen in the featured roles under Neilan's personal direction.

"The Unknown Soldier," written by Dorothy Farnum, will be presented by Renaud Hoffman, with a cast selected especially for the difficult characterizations called for in the story.

Al. Christie will contribute another big feature comedy in "The Champion Lover."

Fair General Manager of "U" Theatres

Twenty-five Theatre Deals in Process of Negotiation Under Newly Organized Universal Chain Theatres Corp.

UNIVERSAL'S announced plan for acquiring motion picture theatres throughout the United States and in all parts of the world, together with the launching of Universal Chain Theatres Corporation, has kept executives and a large staff on the jump during the past week at the home offices of the company in Fifth Avenue, New York City.

One of the most important announcements of the week was the appointment of A. E. Fair as general manager of Universal Chain Theatres Corporation. Fair is one of the best known motion picture theatrical managers in the industry in this country and has a large number of achievements to his credit. He has the reputation of having been the first to prove the value of operating chain theatres in the south. It will be under his direction that the chain of 1,000 cinema houses will be acquired and operated.

Fair for a long time was identified with the building up and operation of the Lynch Theatrical Enterprises, which proved the profitable theory of conducting a motion picture business on a scale similar to that of the leading chain store organizations.

Fair went from the Lynch Theatrical Enterprises to Famous Players-Lasky Corporation as assistant to the theatre manager, Harold B. Franklin, of the latter organization. Subsequently, Mr. Fair investigated practically every big theatre deal Universal Pictures Corporation has consummated, and which Universal now is turning over to the Universal Chain Theatres Corporation. The selection of Fair is asserted to be in line with the recent announcement by Mr. Laemmle that "the best brains and abilities in the amusement business" would be obtained to conduct the big chain of theatres to be consolidated under the name Universal.

It was also stated that since the sale of $4,000,000 Universal Chain Theatres Corporation 8 per cent. preferred stock a week ago, nearly 300 theatres in various parts of the country have offered to sell out to the Universal Corporation. It was pointed out, however, that in each case of this kind careful investigation is being made to ascertain both the earning power and future prospects of the individual theatre, with a view to acquiring only those which will constitute strong links in the chain system planned. It was announced that 25 deals for theatres are now in active negotiation. They are being investigated by John Hostettler and Jas. C. Hostettler.

Myer Schine, President and general manager of the Schine Amusement Co. of Northern New York State, is cooperating with Carl Laemmle in the theatre extension work.

Hays Presents Riesenfeld Medal To E. W. Hammons

THE award of the Riesenfeld Short Subject Medal for 1925 which went to "The Voice of the Night'gale" produced by Al Starewitch, a Pole but a resident of Paris and released in America by Educational Film Corp., was made Wednesday at a luncheon given by Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld at the Hotel Astor, New York to members of the Jury of Award, newspaper and trade press and a number of invited guests.

Joseph W. Dannenberg, Editor of The Film Daily and Secretary for the Jury, acted as toastmaster and Will H. Hays made the presentation speech.

Mr. Hays paid tribute to Mr. Starevitch for his artistry and genius in creating this extraordinary picture and to Earl W. Hammons, president of Educational, for his foresight in securing the production for distribution in America.

Mr. Hays was followed by Mr. Hammons who accepted the gold placque in behalf of Mr. Starevitch, in a speech that expressed regrets that artistic and entertaining short subjects of the type of "The Voice of the Nightingale" sometimes were not accorded greater recognition.

Dr. Riesenfeld related how he came to originate the Short Subject Medal idea and his reasons therefor and announced that the medal will be continued.

About fifty people were present including Harold B. Franklin one member of the Committee selecting "The Voice of the Nightingale." The other members Joseph L. Plunkett of the Mark Strand Theatre, New York, Frank L. Newman of Los Angeles, Fred Meyer of Hamilton, O., were not able to attend the dinner.

Laugh Month Gaining Impetus

Exhibitor Pledges of Support for Movement Continue to Pour Into Offices of Committee

ASSURANCES of whole-hearted support for Laugh Month on the part of exhibitors all over the country continue to pour into the offices of the committee of the Short Features Advertising Association in charge of the campaign, the members of the organization report.

According to a statement from the committee, no section of the country is missing from the line-up of letters received during the past week. North, East, South and West, and the Dominion of Canada are represented. In the Middle West such circuits as the Hostettler chain in Nebraska, the Spears circuit of Missouri and Kansas, and the Butterfield houses have declared themselves in on the celebration. In the South the Sparks chain in Florida has lined up with the other powerful groups. In the East, the Stanley Company of America declared itself in favor of Laugh Month.

The other officers elected were Willis Spearman, vice-president, Edmond; John Brown, secretary, Tulsa; Robert D. Hutchinson, treasurer, Oklahoma City. The directors elected, including the officers, were Fred Jackson, Pawhuska; L. W. Brophy, Muskogee, and Forest McSwain, Ada.

Two New Branch Managers Appointed By Pathe

Pathe has announced the appointment of new managers at the company's branches in Memphis and Butte. Charles F. Boyd has been named to succeed former Branch Manager Cary at Memphis. Mr. Boyd was formerly connected with Associated Exhibitors and recently was employed as a block salesman for Pathe at Albany. William M. Hughart succeeds former Branch Manager Calkings, recently resigned, at the Butte, Montana, office.

$2,000,000 Life Insurance Written on Roxy

S. L. Rothafel, head of the new Roxy Theatre in New York, has had life insurance written on himself to the extent of $2,000,000 with the Roxy Theatre Corporation as beneficiary. The policy is one of the largest ever issued to a theatre man and was underwritten by eight companies.

Exhibitors Lining Up In Laugh Month Contest

A number of inquiries have been made by exhibitors to the headquarters of the National Laugh Month Committee for details as to the exploitation contest in which $850 in cash prizes will be distributed for the best exhibitor exploitation tying up with the Laugh Month campaign, showing an exceptional interest in this contest.

Rules of the contest have been printed in all national trade publications but the companies co-operating in the Laugh Month campaign are supplying their exchanges with copies of the rules so that these exchanges will be ready to meet any requests for printed rules.

The first exhibitors to signify their intention of bidding for the prizes to be distributed to exhibitors or exhibitor employees were A. M. DeHaven, Directing Manager of the Opera House at Bangor, Maine, and Roy Tillson, Managing Director of the Fuller Theatre at Kalamazoo, Michigan. Both have been consistent boosters for Short Features and their efforts to cash in on the tures and their efforts to cash in on the Laugh Month drive through their own local exploitation will be watched with great interest.

All exhibitors or exhibitor employees responsible for exploitation work are eligible to enter the contest and they can make an entry for each week in January so that the smallest exhibitor in the country has a chance to win four first prizes of $100 or a total of $400 in prizes for his exploitation efforts during Laught Month.

M-G-M Schedule Under Full Swing

Studio Forces Engaged On Heaviest Program Attempted In History Of Company; 10 Units At Work—7 Preparing

THE huge production facilities of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios in Culver City are being taxed to capacity during the present era of great picture making activity in force there. The studio staffs are engaged on the biggest schedule that has been outlined for this company since its inception. It is a program of huge proportions both in the number of photoplays that are to be made and the elaborate scale of production that will be attempted.

Only recently Fred Niblo completed his ambitious production of "Ben Hur," a gigantic work considered from every angle of picture making. Drawing near completion is the King Vidor production of "La Boheme," in which Lillian Gish is to make her debut as a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star.

Monta Bell is directing the Cosmopolitan production of the Blasco Ibanez novel, "The Torrent," with Ricardo Cortez and Greta Garbo, a spectacular story of Spain and the life of an opera star.

Tod Browning is directing Lon Chaney, with Renee Adoree and a big cast, in "The Mocking Bird," a Limehouse mystery, featuring Chaney in a dual role. The story is an original by Browning, who produced Chaney's famous vehicle, "The Unholy Three."

Sydney Franklin is directing the Cosmopolitan production, "Beverly of Graustark," starring Marion Davies, with Antonio Moreno, Roy D'Arcy, George K. Arthur and a large cast. It is a spectacular adaptation of the famous George Barr McCutcheon novel.

Edmund Goulding is preparing for his next production.

Gag Contest Planned On Hines Feature

A NOVEL contest has been arranged between C. C. Burr, producer of Johnny Hines pictures, Picture-Play Magazine. t will be a gag contest beginning in the February issue of the magazine and extending through May, in connection with "The Brown Derby," Hines' next starring vehicle for release through First National.

Prizes totalling $500 are being offered for the eleven most original gags that can be included in the story of "The Brown Derby," the plot outline of which will be published in all the issues of Picture-Play from February to May. The prizes are as follows: first, $250; Second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25; fifth, $15 and six prizes of $10 each.

Hobart Henley has just started directing "The Auction Block" from the novel by Rex Beach, with Charles Ray and Eleanor Boardman.

Robert Z. Leonard is putting finishing touches on "Dance Madness," a colorful modern story with Claire Windsor and Conrad Nagel.

Victor Seastrom is preparing to direct Lillian Gish in "The Scarlet Letter."

Christy Cabanne, who recently directed Mae Murray in "The Masked Bride," is preparing for the production of "Monte Carlo," and a European story by Carey Wilson, for which a lavish production is planned.

Benjamin Christianson is directing "The Light Eternal," his first picture in America, with Norma Shearer, Charles Emmett Mack and Carmel Myers in the principal roles.

Jack Conway is preparing for the production of the adaptation of the stage play, "Brown of Harvard," which made Henry Woodruff famous. This picture will be made largely at Harvard whither director and cast will go for the picture, and the selection of the players is now under way.

Mauritz Stiller, the director recently contracted by the M-G-M studios, is at work on his forthcoming European story, also scheduled as one of the big feature releases of the year.

Archie Mayo is preparing to direct "Money Talks," a modern story by Rupert Hughes, in which Conrad Nagel and Claire Windsor will be featured in the principal roles.

Marcel De Sano, newly contracted by the studios, is preparing for his first Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, the title of which has not been announced yet.

George Hill, who directed Marion Davies in "Zander the Great," is now directing "The Barrier," film adaptation of Rex Beach's famous novel, with an all-star cast of such celebrities as Norman Kerry, Lionel Barrymore, Henry B. Walthall, Marceline Day, Mario Carillo and others.

John M. Stahl is preparing to produce "Toto," the famous French play by Achmed Abdullah which was made famous on the stage by Leo Dietrieschstein. Lew Cody has been selected to play the title role in this production which it is said should afford him the greatest opportunuity of his career.

Thirty on U's "Golden Rule List"

Name Chosen For Pictures To Be Released During 1926-1927 Season Suggested by Hays' Speech

UNIVERSAL'S 1926-1927 product will be known as "The Golden Rule List," it was announced this week at the Universal Home Office. This list, which will follow the Second White List, and will be scheduled for release beginning in August, 1926, will include thirty Jewel productions. Some of these already are in production.

The Golden Rule List takes its keynote from the Will H. Hays' message to the Ohio M.P.T.O., in convention at Columbus last week.

The past two season's Universal pictures have been known as "The White List," and the Second White List. The scriptural Golden Rule: "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you," will be printed on each Golden Rule List contract, and its spirit will be carried out by Universal representatives, Universal asserts.

R. H. Cochrane, vice-president of Universal, gives due credit to the Hays' speech for Universal's new product slogan.

"For a week or so before Mr. Laemmle's departure for Europe, he gave much thought to a title for our 1926-1927 product" said Cochrane. "It was desired to get a name which would carry the full significance of Universal's white pictures and white treatment policy, and go further to emphasize Mr. Laemmle's friendly-hand attitude towards exhibitors.

"When I read Mr. Hays' Columbus speech I immediately sent a radiogram to Mr. Laemmle, suggesting that the Golden Rule idea expounded by Mr. Hays exactly expressed our attitude. Mr. Laemmle immediately radioed back—'Great! Splendid! Call new product The Golden Rule List. Print Golden Rule on the contracts.'"

The Golden Rule List will include Universal-Jewel pictures made with such stars as Reginald Denny, Laura La Plante, Virginia Valli, House Peters, Pat O'Malley, Louise Dresser, Hoot Gibson, Mary Philbin, Norman Kerry, Jean Hersholt and others. They will be directed by such well known directors as Harry Pollard, Svend Gade, Edward Laemmle, King Baggot, Edward Sedgwick, William Seiter, Lynn Reynolds and others.

The entire list, although tentatively chosen, is not definitely set and no complete announcement will be made at this time, but the following pictures are sure to be included: "The Love Thrill" by Byron Morgan, as a Denny Jewel; "Poker Faces," as a Harry Pollard Production, with Edward Everett Horton; "The Trail of the Tiger," by Courtney Ryley Cooper, all star pictures directed by Sedgwick; "Blister Jones," by John Tainter Foote, all-star, directed by King Baggot, probably with Pat O'Malley featured; "The Big Gun," by Richard Barry, directed by Edward Sedgwick; "This Way Out," by Frederick Isham; "Cap Fallon," by John Moroso; "The Whole Town's Talking," by Anita Loos and John Emerson; "Too Many Cooks," a play by Frank Craven, for Reginald Denny; "The Yukon Trail," by William McLeod Raine, with House Peters; "The Quest of Joan," by James Oliver Curwood, with House Peters, directed by Lynn Reynolds; Laura La Plante in "Brides Will Be Brides," by Lucille Van Slyke; the same star in "A Savage in Silks," by Winifred Eatron Reeve; Hoot Gibson in "Cow Jerry," by Arthur Stringer, directed by Lynn Reynolds; Mary Philbin in "The Rosary," by Florence Barclay, directed by Svend Gade; and Jean Hersholt in "The Old Soak" by Don Marquis.

Chicago Exhibitors Fear Enforcement of Archaic Fire Prevention Ordinance

CHICAGO exhibitors, large and small, are greatly exercised over the possibilities that the archaic Fire Prevention Ordinance of the city of Chicago may be enforced to the letter, which would mean in part that lobbies must be kept clear at all times and all draperies in theatres must come down. Enforcement to the letter of this ordinance would be a great hardship to motion picture houses, as it would mean that even the most recent fireproof theatres could not accommodate a hold-out in ther lobbies and that waiting patrons would be forced to stand on the sidewalk in snow or sleet.

In an effort to arrive at some compromise in the matter Jack Miller and other officials of the exhibitors' association of Chicago have been holding a series of conferences with Mayor Dever and city officials. It is pointed out by leading exhibitors that the fire ordinances were passed in 1902 and 1903 before the motion picture theatre era, and were slightly modified in 1910 to permit the building of the first thousand-seat houses. Picture theatres of today, it is stated, have a greater margin of safety than required by this old ordinance, but violates some of its provisions if strictly interpreted.

It is understood that fire prevention officials and probably Mayor Dever believe that the ordinance should be amended in such a way that while providing adsolute safety it will not work a hardship on theatres, as does the present code and there is a probability that the entire prevention ordinance applying to theatres will be rewritten.

Discuss Non-Member Question

Rule On Status In Cases Before Joint Board To Be Debated At Kansas City

THE question of whether or not exhibitors who are members of the Kansas City joint board of arbitration should sit on cases of theatre owners who are not members of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri, bids fair to cause a real stir this month.

For many months the question has been predominant in the minds of prominent exhibitors and a genuine upheaval may occur this month when the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri board of directors meet in Kansas City.

The present trend of sentiment points to the fact that cases heard by the board may be divided into two dockets with the exhibitor members refusing to sit in on the docket of non-members, leaving the fate of the theatre owners entirely up to the exchanges.

"I hardly think such a move could be called drastic," said C. E. Cook, business manager of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri. "An exhibitor's time is worth money, the same as any business man. Whenever the name of an exhibitor, whose name has not previously come before the board, appears on the docket, we immediately send him a letter. If he is a non-member of our association we inform him that if he desires this body to take an active part in his controversy it will first be necessary for him to obtain a membership. If he declines we worry no further about additional letters. If he happens to be a member, we request full details concerning his case and render him a real service in representing him.

"Too many exhibitors today are under impression that organization is all right 'socially,' but of little benefit in actual business. Well, here's the opinion many prominent theatre owners who are members have adopted: Non-members frequently are 'good fellows' and all right in their way, but they are no good to the organization as a business asset and we have no time to waste on them. It seems to me there is 'business' enough in that viewpoint. It is no secret that the present sentiment is to throw off the dead weight from our shoulders and let the non-members fight their own battles."

To Build Big Theatre In Hartford

A new million and a half dollar theater which will be constructed at once on land near Main and Morgan streets, Hartford, Conn., bought late this week from the Nicholas Palloti estate by Theodore, Martin D., and Samuel E. Harris of Paterson and Passaic, N. J., according to announcement made here today. The theatre, which will occupy an entire acre of ground and have a seating capacity of 5,500 will be ready for formal opening Labor Day, 1926, according to present plans. It will be operated for motion pictures and motion pictures.

Veteran Exhibitor Dies In St. Paul

C. W. Campbell, veteran Cincinnati theatre man, who for six years or more has handled Finkelstein & Ruben theatres and others in the Twin Cities, died last week in St. Paul. He was stricken with influenza, which led to pneumonia and took him off within a few weeks after he had participated in the national Y. M. C. A. volley ball championship games.

Mr. Campbell had been manager of the Tower Theatre in St. Paul and the Blue Mouse Theatre in Minneapolis, and had just taken hold of the Lagoon Theatre in Minneapolis about a year before his death.

New District Manager For First National

L. O. Lukan has been appointed district manager for the West Coast sales territory for First National and will have his headquarters at San Francisco. He will cover the branches located at San Francisco, Los Angeles, Seattle, Portland, Denver and Salt Lake City. Lukan heretofore has managed the First National Exchange at Minneapolis.

Tom Mix to Appear As Mounted Policeman

Tom Mix will appear as a mounted policeman in his next starring vehicle for Fox, "My Own Pal." He will be seen as Tom O'Hara, late of the range, but a member of the force while seeking adventure in the big city.

Mix will be supported by a strong cast which includes Tom Santschi, Olive Borden, Virginia Marshall, Paul Panzer, Tom McGuire, Helen Lynch, Ben Bard and Jacques Rollins. J. G. Blystone directed the production, which was adapted from "The Gallant Guardsman," an original story by Gerald Beaumont.

Changes In Management of Five Saenger Theatres

The Saenger interests have announced changes in the management of five of their Gulf Coast theatres. Lloyd E. Cottrell, in charge of the Strand at Gulfport, has been transferred to New Orleans. His successor has not been announced. J. J. Spielberger has been named manager of the Anderson Theatre, Gulfport, and Ralph Sewell has been placed in charge of the three Biloxi theatres. Pat Kleinpeter will continue as superintendent of all Saenger theatres on the Gulf Coast.

John T. Harris, Exhibitor, Killed In Motor Crash

John T. Harris, well known exhibitor, was killed instantly near Gainesville, Florida, last Tuesday while traveling through the country in his car, en route to Atlanta for the holidays.

Mr. Harris' home for the past eight years has been in Fort Myers, Florida, where he owned and operated two theatres, the Arcade and the Airdome.

Ascher Bros. Seeking Acts For Theatre Circuit

Harry Beaumont, booking manager for Ascher Brothers, is looking for acts for the stages of the Ascher circuit. With fifteen houses now using vaudeville and with seven new theatres being built, in each of which it is planned to offer presentations, or stage shows, Mr. Beaumont is planning to book fifty or more acts each week.

J. O. Spearing Becomes Universal Director

JAMES O. SPEARING, critic, newspaperman and scenarist, will add director to his list of titles, according to an announcement from Carl Laemmle, president of Universal.

Spearing has been permanently elevated to a directorship by Universal, and will direct an untitled all-star feature production starting within the new few weeks.

He has been at Universal City for the last two and a half years, as scenarist and in a consulting and advisory capacity in directing and cutting pictures.

He was on the editorial staff of the New York Times for ten years, the last five of which were spent as motion picture and dramatic critic.

To Install Radio Station At Warner's Theatre

WARNER BROS. will install their own broadcasting station at the Warner's Theatre on Broadway, New York City. Call letters for the new station are awaiting approval from Washington and will be announced soon. The station will operate on a wave length of 263 metres and it is intended to broadcast programs every night from 6 to 11 p. m.

The station will be the second to be installed and operated by Warner Bros., who now broadcast from their studio station KFWB in Hollywood. Frank Mallen will be in charge of the new plant, which it is planned to open with a gala program in the near future.

Valentino Summoned Home for New Picture

Rudolph Valentino has been summoned home from Europe by Joseph M. Schneck to start work in a picture whose type will be determined by movie fans in all parts of the world. Through the medium of questionnaires to be distributed to theatres by United Artists exchanges it is hoped to discover the type of role in which Valentino is most desired.

Four of the star's best known characterizations will be given as examples in the questionnaires. Picture fans will be asked to express an opinion as to whether they would rather see him as he appeared in "The Four Horsemen," "The Sheik," "Blood and Sand" or "The Eagle."

Walter Futter Joins Ranks of Independents

Walter Futter has joined the ranks of the independent producers with Futter Productions, Incorporated, and will produce a series of single reel comedy-novelties to be known as Curiosities. The pictures are partly compiled from world-wide sources and partly made in the studio in New York. Negotiations for the distribution of the product are now under way with one of the largest of the national distributors.

Hughes To Write Titles For Warners' "The Cave Man"

Rupert Hughes, whose engagement by Warner Bros. to write the titles for "The Sea Beast" was announced a few weeks ago, has now been signed to perform the same service for "The Cave Man," starring Matt Moore and Marie Prevost, according to information from the Warner West Coast studios.

"I'll See You Tonight" Next for Menjou

"I'll See You Tonight," an original story by Monte M. Katterjohn will be Adolphe Menjou's next starring vehicle for Paramount, with Malcolm St Clair directing. It is scheduled to go into production December 21st, with the exteriors to be made in Vermont. In the supporting cast will be Greta Nissen, Louise Brooks, Freeman Wood and Chester Conklin.

Columbia Plans Bigger Season

Franchise Holders Will Convene to Discuss Product for Next Year

COLUMBIA Pictures Corporation is making elaborate preparations for the coming year, according to a joint announcement by Joe Brandt, Harry and Jack Cohn. They promise a unique arrangement pleasing to distributors and exhibitors and more extensive product that in the past year. A conference has been called for Columbia franchise holders to discuss coming activities.

In part the statement says:

"When purchasing stories for production and engaging talent, directorial and acting for picturization of these stories, it behooves the producer to show as much consideration for the opinion of the distributors of his pictures as his own. Distributors have their fingers on the pulse of the demand the world over and no producer can go far wrong if he listens to the advice and opinions of his franchise holders.

"In this belief we have arranged a conference to be attended by as many of Columbia franchise holders as is possible, at which, our plans for the coming year will be discussed, and advice and opinions listened to and accepted or given consideration in an effort to, in so far as possible, arrange our 1926-1927 schedule to fill the demand for the type of pictures which will please the distributor, exhibitor and public alike."

As an example of the type of productions to be made for the forthcoming year, the officials of the Company have purchased the De Maupassant play "Poor Girls." This is the first of the famous author's works to be purchased. Messrs. Brandt and Cohn have read the works of many famous authors, and have bought options on a number of plays and novels, which, after the franchise holders' conference, will be purchased or rejected as so decided, and later announcements will be made of the number of options taken up and the names of the famous authors whose works have been bought.

"Johnstown Flood" Completed

Thrill Picture Based on Historic Disaster in Which 12,000 Lost Lives

THE Fox Film Corporation has completed the production of "The Johnstown Flood," described by that organization as a thrill picture to meet the need of first run houses. It is a screen story based on the historic disaster of 1889 in which 12,000 lives were lost and 20 000 people were injured.

A staff of research experts was engaged to assemble the details of the appalling disaster that startled the whole world on May 31st, 1889, when the North Fork Reservoir near Johnstown, Pennsylvania, broke, carrying death and destruction through the Conemaugh Valley. The thrills disclosed by these authentic records are said to have been faithfully reproduced for the film story.

To accomplish this the Fox producing forces constructed an exact replica of Johnstown and its neighbor cities, Conemaugh and Cambria. An abandoned dam was rebuilt and great volumes of water released for the mammoth climax. An estimate of this tremendous scene can be had from the historic records of the event, which reveal the following facts:

More than 640,000,000 cubic feet of water was unleashed when the Reservoir dam burst. The weight of the water was estimated at 20,000,000 tons. The water fell 450 feet in a distance of twelve miles.

The uncontrolled currents rushed tree-top high through a valley 300 feet wide.

Fifteen minutes after the dam gave way the flood had subsided, having taken a toll of 12,000 lives with 20,000 people injured, three towns destroyed and $10,000,000 worth of property wiped out.

George O'Brien leads the cast, supported by Florence Gilbert, Janet Gaynor, Anders Randolf and Paul Nicholson. The director of "The Johnstown Flood" is Irving Cummings.

Five F. B. O. Features Now In Production

Production activities at the F. B. O. studios in Hollywood have increased within the past few weeks as new features were put into work. The pictures now being filmed for the F. B. O. schedule include "The King of the Turf," with Kenneth Harlan, Patsy Ruth Miller and Mary Carr in the featured roles; "Queen O' Diamonds," Evelyn Brent's next vehicle; a Lefty Flynn feature written by Gerald Beaumont and as yet untitled; "The Tough Guy," a Fred Thomson feature, and "The Night Patrol," starring Dick Talmadge.

Exhibitors Respond to Contest

First National Month Announcement Brings Many Queries to Company

EXHIBITORS have shown a ready response to First National's recently announced contest for advertising, exploitation and publicity campaigns arranged by theatres in connection with First National Month. Those showing the best exhibits for the month are to share in the cash prizes totaling $2,000. In addition there will be an honor roll on which the names of exhibitors submitting particularly interesting exhibits will be inscribed.

Many letters have been received during the past week from exhibitors who intend to go after the prizes. Eight page press books offering advertising, publicity and exploitation aids have been mailed to theatres and a complete line of First National Month accessories is now available.

For the purposes of the competition theatres will be divided into three classes as follows: Those over 1,500 seating capacity; those from 1,000 to 1,499 seating capacity, and those under 1,000 seating capacity.

The prizes will be awarded as follows: For the best complete campaign in each classification, $250; for the second best, $150; for the third best, $100; for the best newspaper advertisement, $50; for the best lobby display, $50; for the most original stunt, $50; for the best newspaper stunt, $50. In the event of two or more contributions being deemed of equal merit by the judges, the prize tied for will be awarded to each entrant.

The judges of the contest are William A. Johnston, publisher MOTION PICTURE NEWS; Joseph Dannenberg, editor Film Daily; Martin J. Quigley, editor Exhibitors Herald; Willard C. Howe, editor Exhibitors Trade Review; William J. Reilly, editor Moving Picture World, and George E. Bradley, editor Morning Telegraph.

All exhibits must be received by the Contest Editor, First National Pictures, Inc., 383 Madison Avenue, New York City, not later than midnight, February 21st, 1926.

Paramount Plan Completed

Coast Studio Reorganized With Units In Charge of Schulberg and Turnbull

FINAL steps in the recent reorganization at Paramount's Hollywood studio were taken during the week with the announcement by Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in charge of production, of the assignment of producing units to work under Hector Turnbull and B. P. Schulberg, associate producers.

Under the new alignment Turnbull will have direct charge of all production of the following directors: Clarence Badger, Malcolm St. Clair, Edward Sutherland and George B. Seitz. The starring pictures of Raymond Griffith and Bebe Daniels will also come under Turnbull's jurisdiction. In addition he will produce "The Rough Riders," Paramount's super-epic of Theodore Roosevelt and the picturization of Zane Grey's best sellers. Also, Turnbull is handling all production details of Raoul Walsh, who is completing "The Golden Journey."

Schulberg will act as producer for Paramount of all the pictures of James Cruze, Allan Dwan, Dimitri Buchowetzki, Victor Fleming and William Wellman. The production of the starring pictures of Pola Negri, Adolphe Menjou and Betty Bronson made on the West Coast will also be under his guidance. In addition, Schulberg will attend to the production of all stories written for Paramount by Ernest Vajda, the Hungarian playwright who is now in Hollywood preparing an original screen story for Pola Negri which Buchowetzki will direct.

Assisting Turnbull and Schulberg in the West Coast production work are Lucien Hubbard, Walter Woods, Garnett Weston and Kenneth Hawks, production supervisors. Turnbull and Schulberg also each have a personal assistant who works directly with the associate producer, not being designed to any particular unit. William Griffith occupies this position with Turnbull, while Sam Jafee is Schulberg's assistant.

12 Completed by Chadwick

Only Three Feature Productions Remain On Schedule For 1925-26 Season

CHADWICK Pictures Corporation has made splendid progress on its production program for the 1925-26 season. Eleven of its fifteen features have been completed and the twelfth, "The Test of Donald Norton," fifth of the George Walsh specials, is now in work. Two of the remaining three productions, "Winning the Futurity," and the sixth George Walsh feature will be started with the arrival of President I. E. Chadwick on the coast next week.

Six of the twelve pictures have already been released and two others, "Sweet Adeline," with Charles Ray, and "The Prince of Broadway," a George Walsh feature, will go to the exhibitors in January.

The first release of the year was "The Wizard of Oz," with Larry Semon. It was followed by "Paint and Powder," a Hunt Stromberg production with Elaine Hammerstein in the leading role. Two George Walsh features have also been released. They are "American Pluck" and "Blue Blood."

Charles Ray's first production for Chadwick, "Some Pun'kins," was released on November 1st. His second, "Sweet Adeline," is scheduled for January 15th.

Another of the outstanding Chadwick releases to date is "The Unchastened Woman," Theda Bara's first production since her retirement at the height of her career. This stage play by Louis K. Anspacher, was adapted for the screen by Douglas Doty and was directed by James Young. Wyndham Standing played the leading male role opposite Miss Bara, while others in the cast were Dale Fuller, John Miljan, Eileen Percy, Mayme Kelso, Eric Mayne and Frederick Kovvert.

Fields Vehicle To Be Based On "The Comic Supplement'

W. C. Fields, featured in "Sally of the Sawdust" and "That Royle Girl," will be starred in a Paramount production to be based on "The Comic Supplement," written as a stage vehicle for the star when he was under the Ziegfeld management. The play is by J. P. McEvoy, comic strip artist, and the author of "The Potters," a stage success.

Max Fabian, Camera Expert, Renews M-G-M Contract

Max Fabian, camera expert, has renewed his contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Fabian's most recent work for the company, with which he has been associated for some time, was in connection with photographic work on some important scenes in "The Barrier."

Peter B. Kyne Will Start New Fox Story

Peter B. Kyne is among the late arrivals in Hollywood, where he will shortly start work on another of his original stories for Fox. It is titled "Rustling for Cupid," and will be directed by John Ford. The picture will go into production within the next two weeks with a cast still to be decided upon.

The first of the four Kyne originals for Fox has been completed. It is "The Golden Strain," and was directed by Victor Schertzinger, with Kenneth Harlan and Madge Bellamy in the featured roles.

Victor Fleming to Direct "Blind Goddess"

Victor Fleming's next production for Paramount will be "The Blind Goddess." It was originally planned to have James Cruze direct this one, but Cruze decided to take a vacation with his wife, Betty Compson, and will sail shortly for Europe.

Mary Carr Featured in Race Track Melodrama

Mary Carr will be one of the featured players in "The King of the Turf," a romance of the race track now in production at the F. B. O. studios. Others who will have featured parts in the picture are Kenneth Harlan, Patsy Ruth Miller and David Torrence. James Hogan is directing.

Marie Prevost, Kenneth Harlan and Louise Fazenda in scene from "Bobbed Hair," a Warner release.

Ginsberg Back at Desk; Plans Expansion

HENRY GINSBERG, head of the Henry Ginsberg Distributing Corporation, releasing Banner and Royal pictures on the independent market, returned last Monday from a four weeks' visit on the Coast and with western franchise holders. He reports confidence in the future of the independent producers and states that this view is shared by independent exchangemen with whom he conferred.

"I found that in spite of the talk of the unstability of the independent market, exchangemen are working with zest and confidence that the market is gradually righting itself." Rumors that many exchangemen were being forced out of business he found to be untrue.

"Judging from the sale of Banner and Royal pictures and the independent market as a whole, I should say that the outlook for next year is a most hopeful one."

Will Broadcast "A Kiss for Cinderella"

Grace Lynn, actress and writer, will direct a novel broadcasting stunt from station WOR, New York, at 3:15 p. m., December 22nd. She has written a playlet with music called "A Kiss for Cinderella from Her Traffic Cop." It is an adaptation from the Barrie play and the Famous Players-Lasky production, "A Kiss for Cinderella."

Broadway actors of prominence will play the parts in the radio performance. Among them are Lumsden Hare, Shirley Booth, Alan Bunce, Harry Neville and Bernard Agistini. Music will be furnished by the Erdman Band, under the direction of Ernest F. Erdman.

Janet Gaynor, Wampas Star, Signs With Fox

Fox will spring a new screen star in Janet Gaynor, one of the thirteen Wampas Baby Stars, who has been signed to a long term contract. She will be seen in the forthcoming spectacular Fox production of "The Johnstown Flood." Miss Gaynor has been in the films only a short time, but a test made by Director Irving Cummings convinced him that she was just the player needed for the role in "The Johnstown Flood" and she was signed to a contract.

Fox Adds Another Golden Play to List

Another of the John Golden stage successes has been added to the Fox program for next season. It is "The Holy Terror," by Winchell Smith and George Abbott and produced this season. The three other Golden plays on the list are "Pigs," "Going Crooked" and "Seventh Heaven."

Adela Rogers St. Johns is Writing for Mix

Adela Rogers St. Johns is preparing a story for Tom Mix which will be released on next season's program. The author and star have come to a final decision on the plot, though the story is still untitled.

14 F. B. O. Releases in January

"When Love Grows Cold" Heads List Of Seven Features—Seven Comedy Subjects On Program

FOURTEEN releases have been announced for the month of January by F. B. O. The schedule will offer seven features and seven comedies, and among the productions will include "When Love Grows Cold," the starring vehicle for Natacha Rambova (Mrs. Rudolph Valentino).

The program is headed by "Flaming Waters," an oil melodrama produced for F. B. O. by Associated Arts Corporation. Mary Carr, Pauline Garon and Malcolm McGregor are featured. "Flaming Waters" is slated for January 3rd release. "Flaming Waters" is listed as a Gold Bond production.

On January 10th, "Man Rustlin'," an Independent Pictures Corporation production starring Bob Custer, will be shown. The picture is being directed by Del Andrews.

On January 17th, the next "Lefty" Flynn production, as yet untitled, based on the story by Gerald Beaumont, will be released. Jimmy Gruen and John Gray adapted the story, which was directed by Harry Garson.

The next western starring Tom Tyler, F. B. O.'s "surprise" western star, will be shown on January 24th. The picture is as yet untitled.

January 31st is set for the distribution of "When Love Grows Cold," a modernized version of Laura Jean Libbey's famous novel, adapted by John C. Brownell, home office scenario chief, with continuity by Harry O. Hoyt, director of the film. Clive Brook appears as Miss Rambova's leading man.

On January 31st the next Richard Talmadge production, "The Blue Streak," will also be shown. The story comes from the pen of James Bell Smith, and is being directed by Noel Smith.

Seven short subjects are listed for release during January, National Laugh Month.

The list is headed by "High But Not Handsome." No. 9 of "The Adventures of Mazie" starring Alberta Vaughn. "High But Not Handsome" will be released on January 3rd.

On January 10th, "Mummy Love," a Blue Ribbon comedy starring Alice Ardell, will be shown. "The Giraffe's Long Neck," a one reel novelty from the Bray Studios, will also be released on January 10th. No. 10 of "The Adventures of Mazie," titled "Little Andy Looney," will be shown on January 17th, while "In the Air," a two reel Standard Fat Men comedy, will be distributed on January 24th. The same day will see the release of "Dinky Doodle at the Studio," a one reel novelty. "A Snitch in Time," No. 11 of "The Adventures of Mazie," will be shown on January 31st.

Sam Rork on Coast, Will Start Production

Producer Sam E. Rork is back in Hollywood from New York with another success credited to his already long list. First National has received reports from Indianapolis, Atlanta and other points where "Clothes Make the Pirate" has been shown, in addition to New York, assuring a prosperous career for this production which stars Leon Errol, supported by Dorothy Gish.

Immediately upon his arrival on the coast Rork started assisting Marion Fairfax in getting under way her first production, "The Desert Healer." This is in accordance with the recent arrangement whereby Sam E. Rork Productions and Marion Fairfax Productions, while functioning as independent companies, will use the same producing organization, alternating in production.

Brenon Completes "Dancing Mothers" Cast

Herbert Brenon has completed the cast for Paramount's "Dancing Mothers," in which Conway Tearle and Alice Joyce have the leading roles. Chief in the supporting cast are Clara Bow, Norman Trevor, Elsie Lawson, Dorothy Cumming and Donald Keith.

Baxter Leading Man With Bebe Daniels

Warner Baxter has departed for the west coast where he will star work as leading man for Bebe Daniels in her newest screen comedy for Paramount, "Miss Brewster's Millions," which Clarence Badger will direct. Baxter has just completed a role with Gilda Gray in "Aloma of the South Seas."

Bebe Daniels to Head Own Unit

To Star In Series Of Feature Comedies For Paramount Under New Agreement

BEBE DANIELS is to head her own producing unit to make big feature comedies for Paramount, under the terms of a new agreement announced last week by Jesse L. Lasky. The arrangement is designed to provide Miss Daniels with facilities for the full expression of her gift for comedy.

The organization which she will head as star is now being assembled at the Paramount studios in Long Island. The unit will have special scenarists as well as comedy constructors or gag men. Her first work under the new regime will be "Miss Brewster's Millions."

In announcing the formation of the Bebe Daniels unit Mr. Lasky said: "Miss Daniels is the foremost comedienne of the screen and Paramount is going to take full advantage of her unequalled ability. We are completing plans that will place her comedy productions on a plane with those of the outstanding male stars who have forged to the front ranks in this particular field. She has proved her worth as a dramatic actress as well, but she so easily excels as a comedienne and the demand for comedies with a feminine star is so great that it would be inexcusably poor business not to make this move. Hector Turnbull, associate Paramount producer, will be in charge of the unit."

Ford Sterling Featured With Bebe Daniels

Ford Sterling will have the featured role in "Miss Brewster's Millions," the Bebe Daniels starring vehicle which will go into production at the Paramount West Coast studio within the next few days. It will be Sterling's first picture under his new long term contract.

Executives of F. B. O. Discuss Program

PRODUCTION plans for F. B. O's 1926-27 program were laid out and the Spring sales campaign discussed at a meeting of the company executives and division managers held last week at the Hotel Congress in Chicago.

Those who attended the meeting were J. I. Schnitzer, vice-president in charge of production; Colvin W. Brown, vice-president in charge of distribution; Lee Marcus, sales manager; Cleve Adams, Chicago division manager; M. J. Weisfeldt, Minneapolis division manager; C. E. Penrod, Indianapolis division manager and J. J. Sampson, branch manager at Chicago.

At the conclusion of the session Vice-President Schnitzer left for a four months' trip to the coast studios of the company where, with B. P. Fineman, production manager, he will start lining up the new program immediately.

Sign Circus Stars To Play In "The Light Eternal"

Lois de Lisle and Irene Grizzell, stars of the Al G. Barnes Circus, have been engaged by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to play important parts in a circus sequence which will be a feature of "The Light Eternal," Benjamin Christianson's first American picture.

Ray Hallor Joins "Red Dice" Cast

Ray Hallor is the latest addition to the cast of "Red Dice," the DeMille production for Producers Distributing Corporation starring Rod La Rocque. William Howard will direct.

Action moments from the "Arizona Sweepstakes," a Universal feature, starring Hoot Gibson.

West Starts Camera Work On "The Bat"

ROLAND WEST, independent producer, has started camera work on the photoplay version of "The Bat," which he will produce from the sensational stage success of that title for release by United Artists.

The cast assembled to interpret the characters in the mystery play written by Mary Roberts Rinehart and Avery Hopwood, includes Jewel Carmen, Jack Pickford, Louise Fazenda, Emily Fitzroy, Andre Beranger, Warner Oland and Sojin.

The screen adaptation was written by Julien Josephson. Mr. West announces that most of the camera work will be done at night, to insure adherence to his plans to have no vistors, not even high officials of other producing companies as witnesses to any part of the actual filming of the play.

Two Important Stories Are Bought by Universal

Following the announcement of Universal's deal with the UFA of Germany, comes the news that Carl Laemmle has bought his first German story, "Das Opern Glass" (The Opera Glass), by Gabrielle Reuter. The story has been adapted by Don Cobb of the Universal scenario department and will be a vehicle for Reginald Denny under the title of "Three Women and a Man."

Universal also has purchased Frank H. Spearman's collection of ten short stories, called "The Nerve of Foley," a group of railroad fiction, including the well known story, "Whispering Smith." Five of the Foley stories have been grouped and adapted by Cobb into a railroad melodrama for Universal. The story is now being put into continuity form and will be directed by Eddie Laemmle, as soon as he completes "The Still Alarm."

Print of Fitzgerald Feature Received by Lee-Bradford

"The Wives of the Prophet," the initial release of J. A. Fitzgerald Productions, has been received at the Lee-Bradford offices and will be distributed by the latter company The picture was directed by J. A. Fitzgerald and many of the scenes were made in the Massanutton and Luray caves in the Valley of the Shenandoah, Virginia. Alice Lake, Mary Thurman, Violet Mersereau, Ruth Stonehouse, Orville Caldwell, Warner Richmond and Maurice Costello appear in the principal roles.

J. A. Fitzgerald, with a number of prominent players, will leave New York in about ten days for Fredericksburg, Virginia, where the second production of his company will be produced.

"Let's Get Married" To Be Next Dix Feature

"Let's Get Married" is the title of the feature which Richard Dix will make after "Womanhandled," it was announced by Paramount this week. "Let's Get Married" will be based on a story by H. A. Du Souchet. The adaptation is to be made by Luther Reed, and Gregory La Cava will direct. Lois Wilson is to play the lead opposite the star.

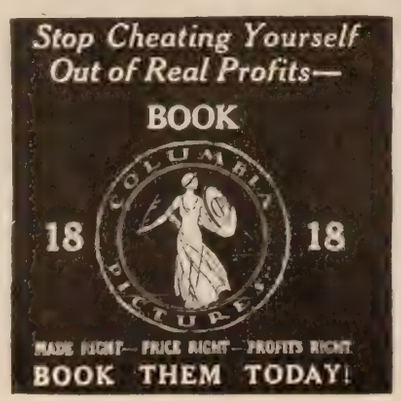
Will Continue Production

Bachmann Will Deliver Remaining Pictures; Thirteen on Schedule of Preferred

J. G. BACHMANN will continue as an independent producer and will carry on with the uninterrupted delivery of the remaining thirteen pictures on the Preferred schedule. His product will be of the same type he supplied during his four years of partnership with B. P. Schulberg. The pictures will be based on well-known stories and stage plays.

Harry O. Hoyt, former First National director, who made "The Lost World," will be in charge of production for Bachmann. He will have his headquarters in Hollywood, where the pictures will be made. Hoyt will leave for the coast in a few days to sign contracts with directors and scenarists, who will start preliminary work on the first group of productions at once.



All of the stories formerly held by B. P. Schulberg Productions have been acquired by Bachmann. The first of his new schedule will be a screen version of Wallace Irwin's "Lew Tyler's Wives," which appeared serially first in Pictorial Review and later won popularity in book form. It will be ready for release early in March.

Included among the remaining stories are "Shenandoah," Howard Bronson's stage play; "Horses and Women," by L. B. Yates; "Dancing Days," by J. J. Bell; "The Aristocrat," by Larry Evans; "The Romance of a Million Dollars," by Elizabeth Dejeans; "Shameful Behavior," by Mrs. Belloc Lowndes; "His New York Wife," by John Goodrich; "The Worst Woman," by Larry Evans; "Studies in Wives," by Mrs. Belloc Lowndes; "Eden's Fruit," by John Goodrich, and "Exclusive Rights," by Evelyn Campbell.

Vital Exchanges Calls a Convention

Vital Exchanges, Inc., has called a convention of all managers for the Hotel Astor, New York, December 19th, 20th and 21st. The sessions will be presided over by David R. Hochreich, president of the company.

The purpose of the convention is to perfect plans for the season's product and to adopt ways and means to market the Vital super-special "The Red Kimono," with Mrs. Wallace Reid in the starring role.

European Director Is Signed by "U"

CARL LAEMMLE, President of Universal Pictures Corporation has signed E. A. Dupont, noted European director to direct for Universal. Dupont who has been directing for UFA, now affiliated with Universal, has signed a contract to come to Universal City for a period of three years.

In addition to directing for UFA, Dupont has written many screen stories and scenarios and is credited with being the first important author of photoplays in Europe. Laemmle is now in Europe to close his deal with the UFA Company and it is likely Dupont will accompany him on his trip back.

Actress 77 Joins Cast of Paramount Juniors

The cast for the Paramount Junior Stars' picture, "Glorious Youth," has been augment by the addition of Julia Hurley, 77 years of age, and said to be the oldest living actress. Sam Wood is directing the production at the Paramount, Long Island, studio from an original story by Byron Morgan.

Motion Picture News Box-Office Honor Roll for 1925

Exhibitors, Through "The Check-Up," Pick the Fifty-Two Best

(EDITOR'S NOTE.—Selection of the Fifty-Two Best was made wholly by exhibitors from the box-office angle. Their selections are reports to Motion Picture News from the court of last resort—the Public.)

This Honor Roll is a guide to box-office merit already proved. And, for that reason, it is of great service to the exhibitor. "The Fifty-Two Best" is an annual feature of the Christmas issue of Motion Picture News, and is recognized as the industry's standard authority on performance at the box-office.

THE FRESHMAN—The comedy and pathos of "Freshie" in his struggle to adjust himself to college life—the secret ambition of every boy to be "the most popular man in the class"—his first sweetheart—his ambition to make the team and win his letter—all of these find full play in "The Freshman," culminating in a football game that is a masterpiece of thrills and laughter. Great entertainment from Harold Lloyd and his co-directors Sam Taylor and Fred Neumeyer. (Pathe).

CHARLEY'S AUNT—Masterly screen version of most celebrated farce. The old standard stage play takes on a new lease of life here. Never a dull moment while college youth masquerades as aunt, flirts with aged sheik, and merry absurdities intrigue the spectators. Outdoes famous original in sustained laughing appeal and bewilderingly fast action. (Producers Distributing Corp.).

THE PHANTOM OF THE OPERA—Unique among pictures of its size and class, in that it is a mystery melodrama filmed on a vast scale, "The Phantom of the Opera" has easily earned its place among the leading pictures of the year. In it a master of make-up and character acting rises to his greatest heights, moving against a background in which are blended lavish, colorful settings, the glitter of the Paris Opera, young love, adventure, mystery and thrills. (Universal).

THE MERRY WIDOW—All that is usually summed up in the word "Continental," all the glamor of one of the greatest light opera successes in history, plus a colorful pageantry that only the screen can mirror, coupled with romance and fiery love—that is "The Merry Widow." Beauty, drama, heart throbs and sentiment, lightened by deft touches of daring humor, guided by the hand of a master director—these earn it a place near the top of the list. (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer).

DON Q, SON OF ZORRO—Filmed as a sequel, in a sense, to "The Mark of Zorro," this picture is a worthy successor to that well-remembered romance. In it the star returns to an earlier and unfailingly popular type of photoplay, filled chock-a-block with speedy action, ingenuity of incident, beauty and color of background, which, coupled with the stock-whip which figures so importantly, composes a vivid mosaic of high adventure. (United Artists).

SALLY—Unflagging heart interest and artistic charm. Humor evenly divided between slapstick and polite comedy. Colorful settings and a cast of superlative talent. Detail and atmosphere convincing, admirably directed. Cinderella heroine who scrubs dishes, but is swayed by lofty ambition, wins wealthy lover and also captures hearts of her audience. (First National).

THE PONY EXPRESS—A great spectacle! Another American historical epic of bewitching scenic beauty and tremendous dramatic power. Exploits of pony riders and events preceding Civil War fused into a compelling story of love and patriotism. Aglow with color, vibrating with action. Melodrama and romance craftily interwoven with sequences of educational value. (Paramount).

EAST LYNNE—There is never any doubt about the popularity of a melodrama of this type that has gained a reputation for itself over several generations. The story has an appeal to all classes and in its picturization it has lost none of the effectiveness it had on the speaking stage. The production is all that could be desired in the way of romance, thrills, direction, and it builds to a climax that is breath-taking in its forcefulness. (Fox).

RIDERS OF THE PURPLE SAGE—A popular star and a good western are almost bound to be a winning combination. This one is filled with strong western situations and incidents, done in a clean-cut style that wins a sympathetic audience. The angle of intrigue is well balanced by the romantic element, and the horsemanship of the star, coupled with some really intelligent acting contributed by the horse, account for the wide appeal of this production. (Fox).

MADAME BEHAVE—Sparkling farce comedy, the wheel of fun spinning dizzily, crowding one hilarious situation upon another. Remarkable for fine acting of cast. A highly entertaining story dealing with the efforts of two rivals in a lawsuit to locate a missing woman witness whom each is anxious to wed, because a wife cannot testify against her husband. Wild complications follow, with the hero, disguised as the unknown lady, being frantically courted by the elderly suitors. A literal scream of mirth from first to final reel, it was acclaimed by newspaper critics and photoplay reviewers from coast to coast. (Producers Distributing Corp.).

THE IRON HORSE—No word has been more often abused in characterizing pictures than "epic," but here is a photodrama that truly deserves it. Based upon one of the most all important events in American history—the spanning of the continent by the first trans-continental railroad—the indomitable spirit of the pioneer empire builders has been captured in celluloid and lives again in a stirring drama painted on a mighty canvas. (Fox).

THE LOST WORLD—In the re-creation on the screen of the ponderous dinosaurus and the mighty allosaurus, the makers of this picture have brought to the screen one of the outstanding novelties of recent years. Nothing like it has been seen. Yet not alone novelty has been responsible for its success. A brilliant cast, firm, well-knit continuity and a strong story make it a cinematic triumph and entertainment plus. (First National).

NORTH OF 36—A sweeping panorama of the cattle country visualizing with stunning realism and picturesqueness the great drive of an enormous herd across Texas. The story of a most popular author has been transferred to the screen with notable understanding of its most appealing qualities. Lois Wilson gives a vivid performance as the courageous cattle owner. (Paramount).

THE AWFUL TRUTH—When a jealous husband lacks a sense of humor and at the same time mistrusts his wife you have a theme about which may be woven some lively picturization. Combine this with situations that are popular in their appeal and you have a vehicle that is pre-destined for approval. Winter scenes with an enthralling beauty enhance the value of this production. (Producers Distributing Corp.).

THE GOLD RUSH—Satirizing, in a measure, the many melodramas of the Klondike, this ambitious comedy achieves a drama and a pathos of its own, such as the screen has seldom seen. Against the vast expanse of snow and ice, the struggling line of prospectors, the tawdry gaiety of the dance hall and the hard struggle with the elements, the comedian moves, a pathetic and lonely figure swaying the spectator to laughter and now and then to tears in an epic of comedy. (United Artists).

LITTLE ANNIE ROONEY—America's Sweetheart in one of her old-time roles—the kind that made her famous—as leader of an East Side kid gang; winsome, mischievous, bewitching, lovable as of yore! Melodrama, pathos and side-splitting comedy of the sort the masses like and respond to. A Pickford triumph picture! (United Artists).

CALIFORNIA STRAIGHT AHEAD—The tremendous appeal of spirited adventure tinctured with youthful romance and comedy, brought this feature to instant success and widespread popularity. A dashing treatment of a spirited story—a picture endowed with all the elements of "sure fire" appeal. (Universal).

THE DEADWOOD COACH—A photoplay that truly visualizes the virile West of the stage-coach days, it is remarkably rich in detail, incident and atmosphere. Vigorous movement and stirring incident add to the charm and power of the work. (Fox).

A THIEF IN PARADISE—A picture that boasts a surprise in every scene—a cast that registers some of the finest acting of the season—and a mounting that does credit to George Fitzmaurice—famed for his rich photographic effects. (First National).

CLOTHES MAKE THE PIRATE—A production that answers the never-ending cry for novelty in screen fare with a performance by a legitimate stage star that is screamingly funny. A tailor with a piratical complex involuntarily becomes the leader of a pirate crew—what comedy possibilities!—(First National).

LAZYBONES—A remarkable human interest picture replete with touching sentiment and alluring small-town atmosphere, which radiates sympathy and pathos. The star, heretofore best known by his work in rough Western roles, establishes himself as a real artist at character-sketching. (Fox).

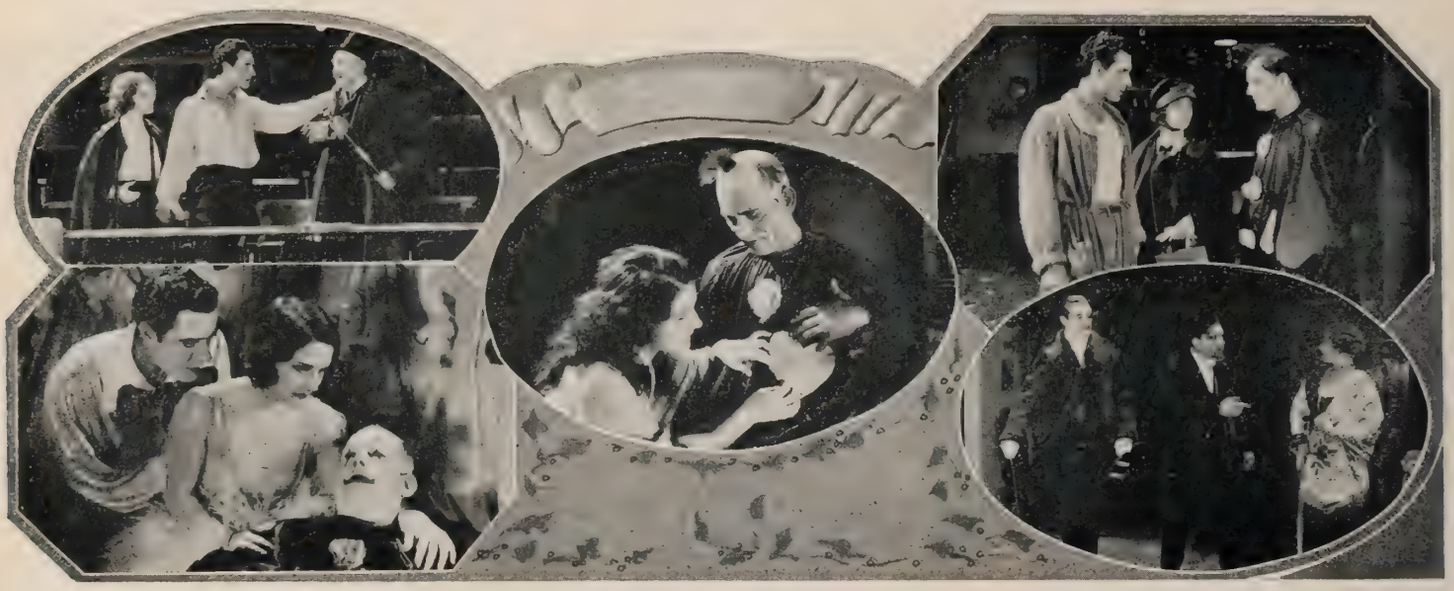
EXCUSE ME—A delightful farce written around that extraordinary institution—the Pullman compartment car. An adaptation of a very successful stage play converted to the photoplay with marked ingenuity and cleverness in the treatment of screen comics, and enacted by artists skilled in the technique of the studios. (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer).

THE THUNDERING HERD—Few writers' stories have fitted the needs of the screen so consistently and thoroughly as have those of this author. "The Thundering Herd" is one of the best of these. (Paramount).

THE EAGLE—The powerful drama of Russian court and peasant life, the intrepid daring of the Cossacks, the vengeance of a son—these are some of the ingredients that have given "The Eagle" its place among the 52. (United Artists).

OLD CLOTHES—An exceptionally talented juvenile with a vehicle that defies resistance to spontaneous and hearty applause and laughter, makes this one an outstanding success. The story, too, evokes sympathy. (Metro-Goldwyn).

INTRODUCE ME—Clever balance of thrills and romantic action account for the certain appeal which this exceptional comedy has registered with audiences everywhere, and won it a place as one of the star's finest efforts in photoplay comedy. (Associated Exhibitors).



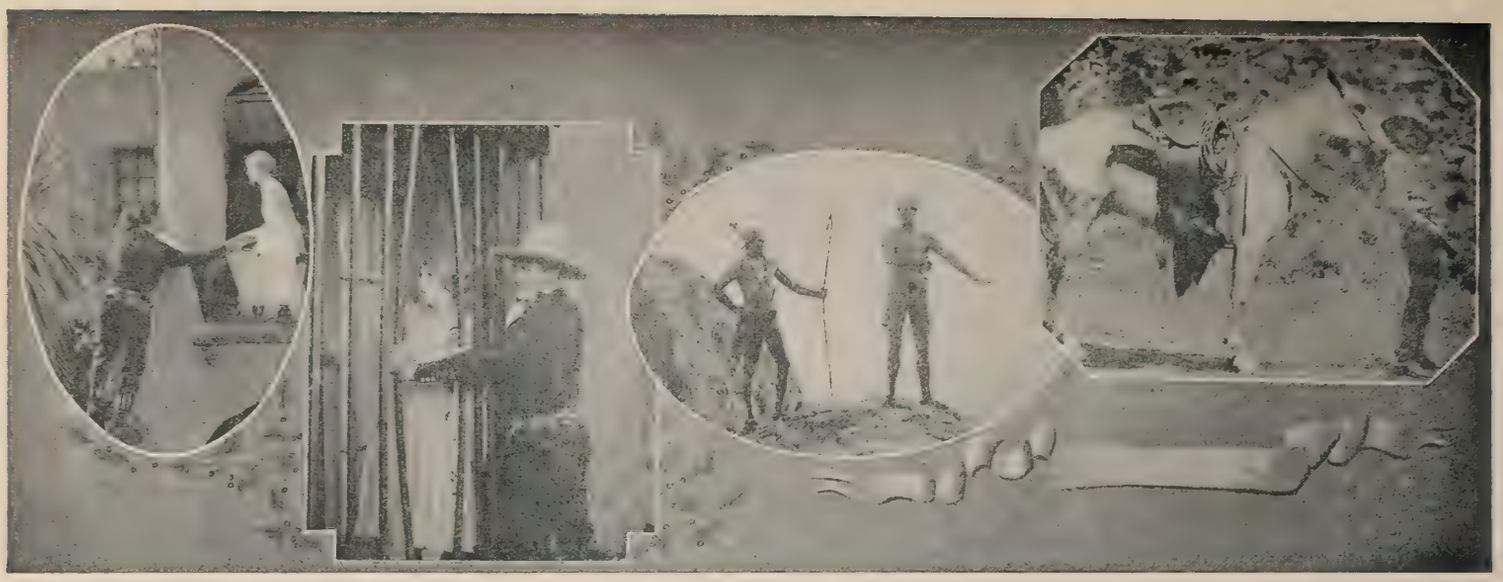
THE BANDIT'S BABY—A western filled with the "unusual" and packed with sufficient action to carry along several features. With noble assistance contributed by a baby actress and the star's horse it can be readily understood why this production ranked so high. (F. B. O.).

BATTLING BUNYAN—A combination of real American Youth, a rattling good story without a foot of unnecessary padding and some genuine fun and humor place this one among the front rank pictures of the year. Boxing has gained markedly among sport followers and Battling Bunyan's bouts make for merriment. (Associated Exhibitors).

THE UNHOLY THREE—Melodrama as it has never been done before—melodrama tempered by shrewd character drawing, rich in novel incident, beautifully acted, progressive, even daring in technique, and with a story sure in its appeal to the emotions, "The Unholy Three" is a rare contribution to the screen. (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer).

HE WHO GETS SLAPPED—Intensely realistic, intelligently produced. Stresses appealing theme, sounding the depths of human suffering. Lon Chaney is an infinitely pathetic figure as the tragic clown whose happiness is destroyed by ridicule. Characters stand out vividly, circus background and atmosphere admirably delineated. (Metro-Goldwyn).

SEVEN CHANCES—The highly individualistic comedian found rich scope for his abilities in this adaptation of a stage success. His portrayal of a bashful youth forced to become a benedict or lose his inheritance was one to be greeted hilariously and remembered long as a joyful contribution to the screen. (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer).



THUNDERING HOOFS—A picture literally packed with excitement and suspense, is the way the critics described this one that has been meeting with approval wherever it has been shown. It is a stunt picture with some hair-raising thrills and an excellent display of real horsemanship. (F. B. O.).

BROKEN LAWS—Telling a story that appealed to every mother in the land with special emphasis laid on the results of too much wild life among the younger set and building up to one of the most thrilling climaxes ever staged, this production was bound to please the picture fans throughout the world. (F. B. O.).

HUSBANDS AND LOVERS—Another one of those inimitable tales of real life, which has been transplanted to the screen in admirable manner and enacted with sterling worth. Perfectly directed and mounted. (First National).

THE WILD BULL'S LAIR—Battles with redskins, flying bullets, deadly hand-to-hand grapples, thrills galore, with romance emerging and the feats of a wonderfully intelligent horse to marvel over! A Western of super-spectacular lure, for kiddies and adults alike to rejoice in. (F. B. O.).

LIGHTS OF OLD BROADWAY—Offers romantic, colorful background of New York in 1870, delightful love theme and interesting story. Historically accurate mingling bright, amusing comedy with strong dramatic appeal. Marion Davies excellent in dual role of Shantytown girl and a daughter of the "400." (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer).

THE RAG MAN—A comedy riot, Jackie Coogan appearing in his familiar ragged clothes and cap set askew. Has sure-fire humor, timely pathos. A picture which recalls the Jackie of old, with laughter freely aroused by contrasts of Irish and Hebrew drollery. (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer).

THE MIDSHIPMAN—Scenic effects charming, showing ancient Annapolis buildings framed by silver radiance of the glistening river Severn. A capital portrayal of life in the U. S. Naval Academy. Forceful melodramatic phases; naval sequences ingeniously worked into story enhance entertainment values. (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer).

THE CRACKERJACK—A great comedy feature filled with some of the most ingenious bits of funny business ever introduced in a production of this type along with John Krafft's titles. Coupled with tireless energy on the part of Johnny Hines and supporting cast, is it any wonder that it has proved so popular with all classes? (C. C. Burr).

GO WEST—A delightfully contrived humorous treatment of the adventures of a tenderfoot in the virile West with an ingratiating performance by the star, whose appeals to the risibles address themselves to all. (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer).

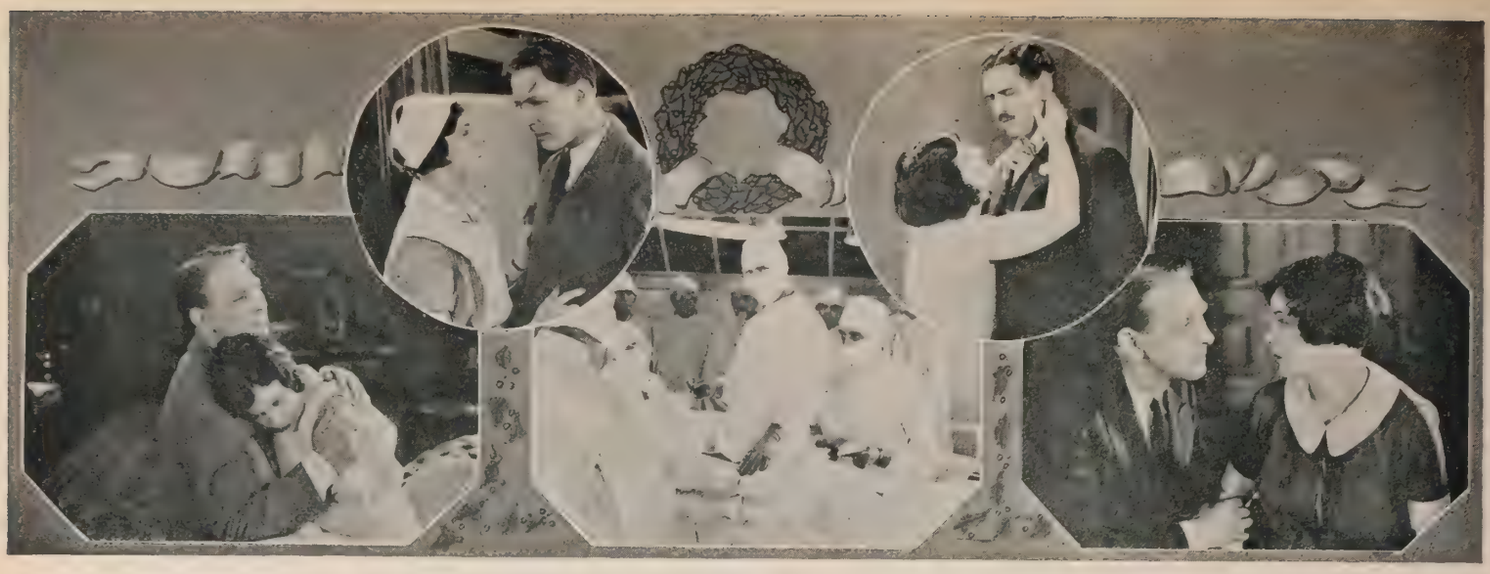
THE DARK ANGEL—A moving and impressive drama dealing with post-war romance of universal appeal. The perfect illusion of self-sacrificing love has been achieved in this absorbing story concerning characters of truly heroic stature. (First National).

THE LADY—The inherent dramatic values of a poignant and convincing story are enhanced by treatment that achieves a high standard of naturalness and a performance by the star which takes its place with a select few of the most outstanding of the year. The production shows clever direction. (First National).

QUO VADIS—One of the great novels of all time has been faithfully and lavishly screened in this picture, filmed in Italy against authentic backgrounds. The "splendor that was Rome," the mad revels of the Romans, the tribulations of the first Christians under Roman oppression, make a spectacle of strong contrasts. (First National).

SO BIG—The word "big" in the title of this is not at all misplaced, for in it the star amazed her most sincere admirers with the depth and understanding expressed in her performance of a difficult role. Based upon a powerful story, it might so easily have been "just a picture," instead of which it became a vital, human document. (First National).

STAGE STRUCK—Rich comedy elements, with the human note clearly sounded, enticing romance and clever acting. The little waitress heroine who longs for a footlight career is as appealing as she is irresistibly amusing. Skillfully directed and beautifully filmed. A palpable hit! (Paramount).



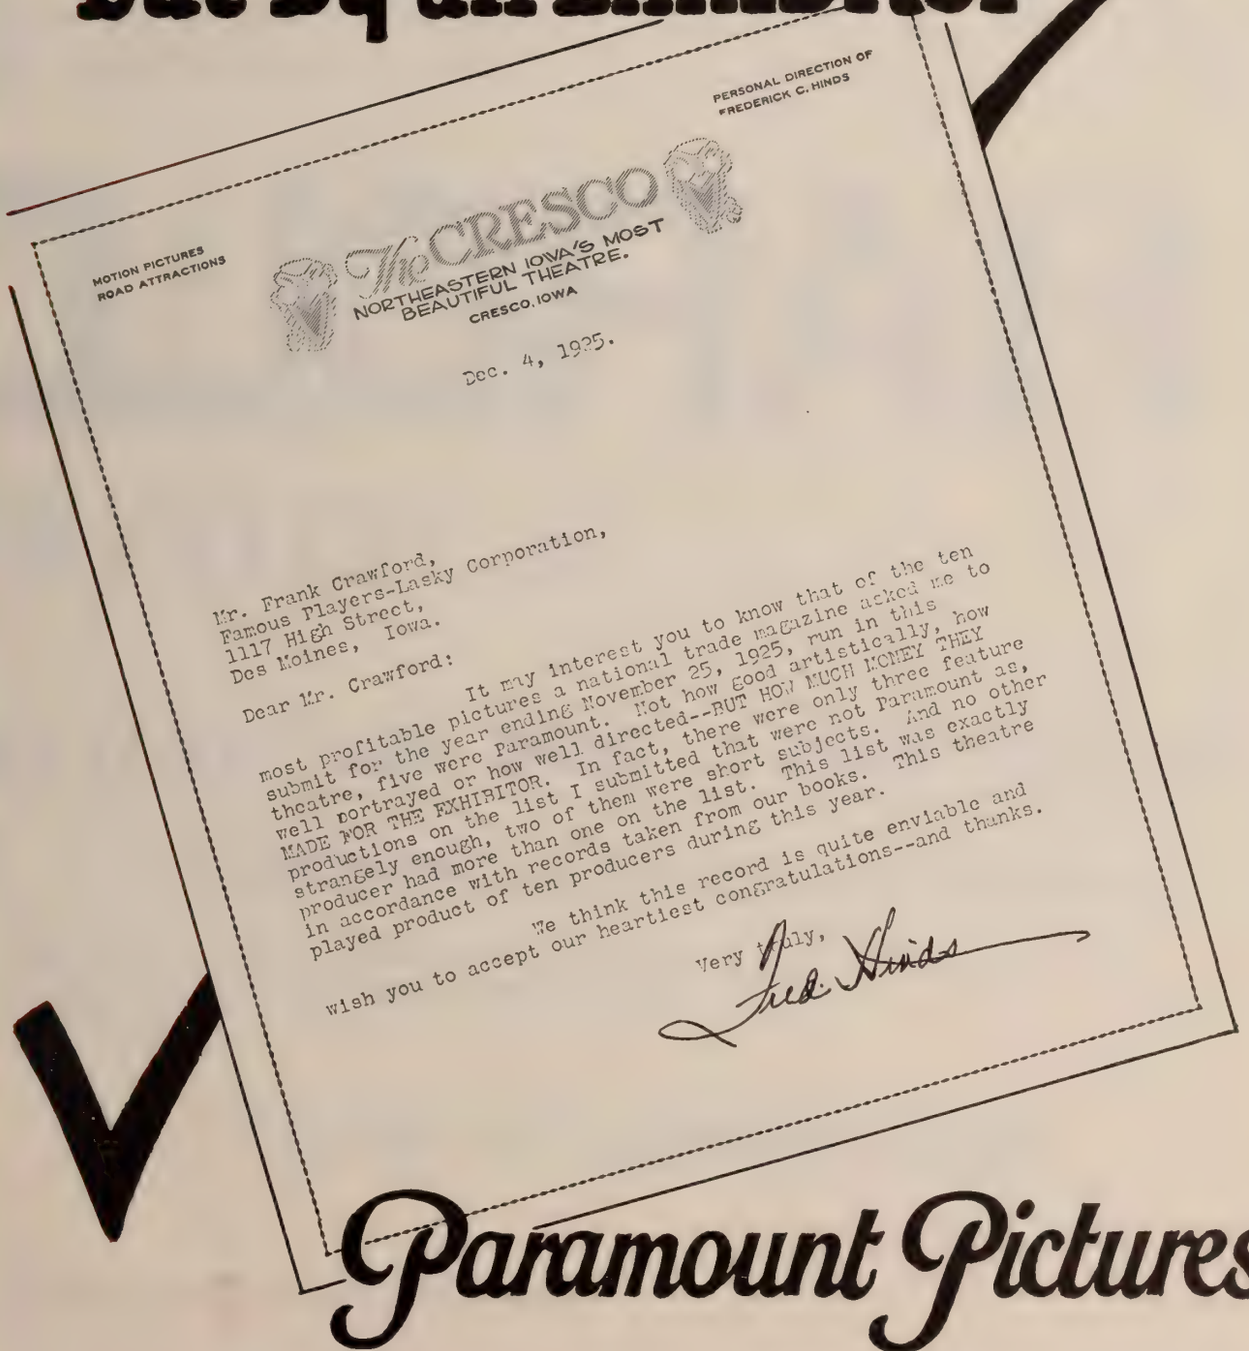
AMERICAN PLUCK—An up and going action picture is what this has been termed. It is a high speed adventure story that abounds in appealing incident and there is never a let-down. The plot is one that calls for an athletic actor and that actor must be physically fit to accomplish what he does, which is fully met in this instance. (Chadwick).

A REGULAR FELLOW—As breezily refreshing as a salt gust of wind from the ocean. Farce comedy, with a droll Prince disporting his royal person through the round of princely duties. A whirl of gaiety and unrestrained mirth! One of the season's snappiest productions! (Paramount).

THE LUCKY DEVIL—A sparkling comedy of high-speed action and telling incident with one of the screen's most dashing interpreters of heroic roles—Richard Dix. That the motor racing story holds its grip upon the affections of photoplay audiences is proved by the success of this exciting play. (Paramount).

K–THE UNKNOWN—One of the most interesting love stories of the year told in a manner that stresses the human side rather than pointing the dramatic angle. An unusually compelling story of character studies with sterling acting by every member of a brilliant cast. (Universal.)

THE LIVE WIRE—A combination of thrilling scenes under the 'big top' and humorous situations with high-speed action all the way—and John W. Krafft's titles. Designed primarily as a fun feature it exceeded the fondest hopes of its sponsors, Johnny Hines and C. C. Burr, auguring well as their first production for a national distributing organization. (First National).



GRAUSTARK—A romance that has won a conspicuous place in fiction as a model of its type is here brought to the screen with its highly colored appeal set off to fine advantage. A love story produced with magnificent pictorial effectiveness and clever direction by Dimitri Buchowetzki. (First National).

PETER PAN—In no other medium could "Peter Pan" have been told quite as it was on the screen. The rich potentialities of the screen in the domain of fantasy found new expression in this picture, which was the very spirit and essence of youth. It might well have been the dream of a child, and what greater tribute could be paid it? (Paramount).

BEAUTIFUL THEATRE.
CRESCO, IOWA

Dec. 4, 1925.

Mr. Frank Crawford,
Famous Players-Lasky Corporation,
1117 High Street,
Des Moines, Iowa.

Dear Mr. Crawford:

It may interest you to know that of the ten most profitable pictures a national trade magazine asked me to submit for the year ending November 25, 1925, run in this theatre, five were Paramount. Not how good artistically, how well portrayed or how well directed--BUT HOW MUCH MONEY THEY MADE FOR THE EXHIBITOR. In fact, there were only three feature productions on the list I submitted that were not Paramount as, strangely enough, two of them were short subjects. And no other producer had more than one on the list. This list was exactly in accordance with records taken from our books. This theatre played product of ten producers during this year.

We think this record is quite enviable and wish you to accept our heartiest congratulations--and thanks.

Very truly,
Fred Hinds

HINES first for FIRST NATIONAL SCORES!

FROM the start "The Live Wire" took its place among the leaders with Johnny Hines holding his own as a "big time" attraction in the same way he led the Independent field—and his first for First National stayed right up in front.

One of the best 52 of the year—you can't top that much—the Motion Picture News Check-up proves this.

—but wait until you see "Rainbow Riley," the second made by the Hines-Burr combination for First National —here is a comedy—You all remember "The Cub"—Thompson Buchanan's play done by Douglas Fairbanks on the stage—Oh boy what a story—what situations—such a predicament for a hero but what a chance for a comedian, and Johnny Hines takes full advantage of the opportunity.

Then comes "The Brown Derby"—Why the very title makes you laugh with anticipation. C. C. Burr says it's the best story they have had and Johnny Hines thinks it was just made for him. It is sure to be a fitting climax for his first First National year. Here's three reasons why—

Kane Starts Casting For "Dancer of Paris"

Casting is under way for "The Dancer of Paris," Robert T. Kane's fourth picture of the current season for First National. The story, by Michael Arlen, will go into production next week under the direction of Alfred E. Santell.

Conway Tearle will have the leading male role in "The Dancer of Paris," while the title role has not yet been filled. Lowell Sherman will also appear in the Arlen picture, as will Paul Ellis.

Three New Comedy Directors on Fox Staff

Three new comedy directors have been added to the Fox West Coast staff. They are Lex Neal, Max Gold and Andrew Bennison. Neal has just completed his first picture, "A Flaming Affair," while Gold and Bennison co-directed "Officer of the Day."

Neal went to the Fox studios after having directed several pictures for Buster Keaton. Gold was promoted from assistant director to director and Bennison was for several years a Fox comedy writer.

"A Bankrupt Honeymoon" Near Completion

"A Bankrupt Honeymoon," latest of the Fox Imperial comedies, is nearng completion under the direction of Lou Seiler, with Harold Goodwin and Shorley Palmer in the leading roles, and Frank Beal and Harry Dunkinson in the supporting cast.

Raoul Walsh to Direct "What Price Glory"

RAOUL WALSH, at present with Famous Players-Lasky, will report at the Fox lot on the first of January to direct "What Price Glory," an adaptation of the stage drama by Laurence Stallings and Maxwell Anderson. The screen production will be made for release next season.

Walsh has directed some notable productions in the past, among them Douglas Fairbanks in "The Thief of Bagdad" and Pola Negri in "East of Suez." His latest big success with Famous was "The Wanderer." Several years ago he directed "The Honor System" for Fox.

Roach Busy Casting For New Comedies

Hal Roach is busy casting players for a number of comedies for Pathe release. Among those selected for prominent roles in different vehicle are Lincoln Steadman, son of Myrtle Steadman; Grace Gordon and Josephine Crowell.

Steadman will appear in Glenn Tryon's current comedy being directed by Fred Guiol. The balance of the cast includes Katherine Grant, Sue O'Neill, Charlotte Mineau, Charles Sellan, Nancy McKee, Husky Hanes and the dog actor, Pal.

Grace Gordon has been signed for a part in the Clyde Cook comedy, directed by James W. Horne. Josephine Crowell is again appearing with Charley Chase in a new vehicle directed by Leo McCarey, titled "Mama Behave."

Sennett Studios Busy On "Laugh Month" Comedies

The Mack Sennett studios are busy on pictures which Pathe will release during the National Laugh Month drive in January. Eddie Cline, who recently completed a two-reeler with this star, has started another Alice Day starring vehicle. Miss Day will be supported by Danny O'Shea, Ruth Taylor, Joe Young and Eddie Quillan.

Lloyd Bacon is making a Ralph Graves comedy in which Thelma Parr, Marvin Lobach and Sunshine Hart will support the star. Director Del Lloyd, who is in charge of the unit making a series of star comedies, is filming a two-reeler in which Billy Bevan and Andy Clyde have featured parts.

Among the comedies which Sennett will contribute to Pathe's Laugh Month program is "Saturday Afternoon," starring Harry Langdon.

James Gruen Joins Mack Sennett Staff

The Mack Sennett lot continues to hum with activity, with additions being made regularly to casts and scenario staff. The latest writer to join the Sennett forces is James Gruen, who is now busily engaged with Jefferson Moffitt in the preparation of a story for Ralph Graves.

Alice Day has started work on her new comedy, "A Love Sundae," and Billy Bevan is being directed by Del Lord in a new fun concoction, which has in the cast Madeline Hurlock, Andy Clyde and Kewpie Morgan.

Floyd Bacon is making a new Ralph Graves two-reeler, in which Thelma Parr again plays opposite the comedian. The cast also includes Marvin Lobach.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Educational Tie-Up in Demand

Company Reports Many Requests For Displays Arranged For "Wild Beasts Of Borneo" Film

SUBSTANTIAL proof that exploitation tips and national tie-ups are desired by exhibitors on Short Subjects, is offered by the tremendous response to the window tie-ups arranged for by Educational with the National Biscuit Company on its Barnum Animal Crackers and the two-reel Educational Pictures Special "Wild Beasts of Borneo."

The tie-up was first brought to the attention of exhibitors through Educational's press sheet on the animal film.

Under the arrangement, as soon as an Educational Exchange receives word from an exhibitor that he desires this tie-up, the National Biscuit Company is notified to start its local salesman out, securing store window space in the neighborhood of the theatre. When a number of windows are secured, the salesman calls on the manager of the theatre, whose duty it is to furnish enough stills, play-date cards and posters to trim the windows properly. The manager usually sends his representative along with the salesman to assist in the arrangement of the window displays.

Within a period of only five days, November 21 to 25, the New York Educational Exchange has had requests for tie-ups from fifteen theatres. These theatres are the Costello, Mt. Morris and Clinton Theatres of New York City, The New Colonial, Kismit, State, Sumner, Republic, Roebling, Gem and Meserole Theatres of Brooklyn, the Victoria of Elmhurst, L. I., Hyperion and Palace of Corona, L. I., and the Forest Hills Theatre of Forest Hills, L. I.

In a few of the above instances the theatres will purchase at a special price (ten per cent less than wholesale) from the National Biscuit Company, a quantity of full size packages of Barnum Animal Crackers, for free distribution to children who attend a special matinee with a grown person.

Another plan under consideration calls for purchasing the animal crackers in bulk and inserting several in an envelope on the outside of which is printed the following:

"These animals are thoroughly tame and harmless—If you want to see ferocious wilds animals being captured alive—see "Wild Beasts of Borneo" at the ——— Theatre.

National Tie-Up Exploits "The Pony Express"

Tying-in with the Pony Express Rider's stunt of the Old Trail Drivers' Association, Manager Roberts of the Majestic, Austin, Tex., gained valuable publicity for "The Pony Express."

A week before picture's opening, an official welcome was accorded the Pony Express rider enroute from Dallas to San Antonio with messages from prominent people to the reunion of the Old Trail Drivers' Association. Rider was met at city limits and escorted to the capitol grounds, where he was greeted by a party consisting of Governor Ferguson, city officials, Manager Roberts of the Majestic, and other well-known Austin citizens. Pictures were taken of the rider placing a wreath on the cowboy statue in capitol grounds, surrounded by governor and official escort.

Holds Club Night During "He's A Prince" Run

As a means of building good-will primarily but for the publicity value of the stunt as well, Manager C. T. Perrin of the Sterling Theatre in Greely, played host to the Kiwanis Club and their guests at an evening performance of "He's a Prince."

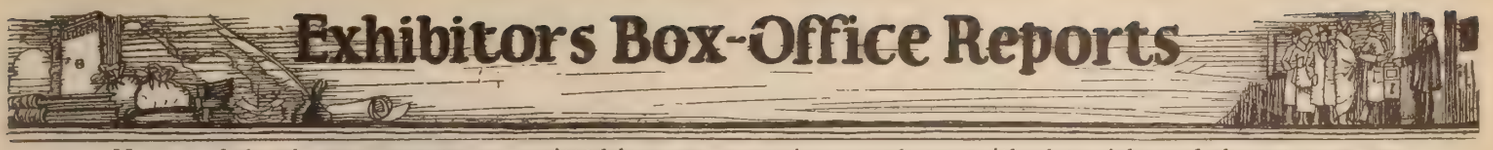
The club members went to the theatre in a body following their regular meeting. After the show the stage was cleared for dancing. The theatre's musicians furnished the dance music at a nominal figure, thereby reducing the expense to a comparatively small amount.

Waltz Music Advances For "Merry Widow", Chicago

"House exploitation" based mainly on solo renditions by the organ of the "Merry Widow" waltz, thoroughly sold the picture version of the famous musical comedy to the patrons of the Roosevelt Theatre in Chicago. The campaign which supported the showing of "The Merry Widow" there, however, included strong billing through tie-ups with music, book stores and other organizations.

The famous waltz was cleverly used to advance the picture at the Roosevelt, where it was played at each performance for five weeks in advance of the showing of the picture.

Outside attractors included the display of large cutouts over the lobby of the Roosevelt. National tie-ups arranged in advance of the showing resulted in dozens of window displays throughout the city. Novelizations of the story were featured by the Boston Store, the Davis Company, Brentano's, Janckey's, The Fair and Marshall Field's. Records, rolls and sheet music were displayed in windows contributed by Lyon & Healey and by eighty Victor Company stores, while the Leo Feist Music Company exploited "Merry Widow" music throughout their trade.



Selections from the operetta were played as an overture at the Chicago Theatre to over 100,000 people, and at the Uptown Theatre to as many more. Paul Ash and his orchestra played it in a jazz arrangement at McVicker's Theatre to 65,000 people. The piece was played in six Balaban and Katz theatres, in nineteen Lubliner and Trinz theatres, and was broadcast over the five leading radio stations. Copies of the score were supplied each of the orchestra conductors in town, and all dance palaces and cabarets used it.

Phone Announcements Of "Tower Of Lies" Show

The telephone announcement was used for the presentation of "The Tower of Lies," at the Jackson theatre in York, Pa. As the stunt was new to the town it caused widespread comment. Girls engaged by the theatre rang the numbers of a selected list of phone subscribers and courteously stated that an especially interesting picture was being shown at the Jackson.

Short Subjects and Serials

Kinograms Claims Novel Chinese Feature

KINOGRAMS, Educational's newsreel claims another novel news special as the result of the recent signing of a contract for exclusive subjects from Asia. The latest subject is General Ma Fu-Haiang, absolute ruler of the Mohammedan Chinese who are distinctly apart from the mass population where Buddhism prevails. He bears the distinction of being perhaps the wealthiest man in China and one of the wealthiest in the world. His income from opium growing alone is said to be more than $2,000,000 a year and he receives enormous revenue from vast land holdings.

The principal city of the General Fu-Haiang domain is Suiyuan, where the pictures were taken. The city is walled and gated like those of the old world centuries ago. This special occupies about one-third of the entire newsreel.

Earle Rodney Completes His Second Christie Comedy

Earle Rodney, recently promoted to direct comedies for the Christies, has completed his second work, a Bobby Vernon picture to be released by Educational under the title, "Yes, Yes, Babette." Rodney's first directorial work was "Hot Doggie," starring Walter Hiers.

Tryon Heads New Pathe List

Program For December 27 Includes "Sportlight" And Serial Episode In Addition To Novelties

THE Pathe list of releases for the week of December 27th will be headed by a two-reel comedy produced by Hal Roach with Glenn Tryon in the starred role, and a Grantland Rice "Sportlight" reel called "Fins and Feathers."

Other screen attractions listed for this date are "On the Storm King Road"; the fourth chapter of the Patheserial, "The Green Archer"; "Noah and His Troubles"; one of the "Aesop's Film Fables"; "Topics of the Day"; Pathe Review No. 52, screen magazine, and two issues of Pathe News.

"Flaming Flappers" is a very modern fun concoction based upon happenings of the times. Glenn Tryon is the star of this Hal Roach two-reeler which Fred L. Guiol directed. Tryon is supported by Jimmie Finlayson, Tyler Brooke, Charlotte Mineau, Yvonne Howell, Sue "Bugs" O'Neill and Sally Long.

"Fins and Feathers" reveals thrilling scenes of fishing and hunting. The scenes were taken in various sections of the United States.

The Patheserial, "The Green Archer", reaches the fourth chapter entitled "On the Storm King Road". In this chapter the scene shifts from the picturesque Bellamy Castle to the squalor of Coldharbor Smith's waterfront saloon, where the beautiful Valerie Howett (Allene Ray) walks into a trap set for her by Bellamy (Burr McIntosh). Miss Ray and Walter Miller play the leading roles of this Patheserial.

Pathe Review No. 52 features Annette Kellerman in demonstration of her prowess as a dancer. The multiple-action made by the "process-camera" provides both merriment and wonder. "Yale" of the new series "American Colleges in Pathecolor" is another subject of this issue, which also includes "The Triangle", one of the "Makin's of an Artist" series by Hy Mayer.

"Noah and His Troubles" is a mirthful animated cartoon of the "Aesop's Film Fables" series. "Topics of the Day" and two issues of Pathe News complete the December 27th program announced by Pathe.

Pathe Issues Ad Series For Special Newsreel Features

As an adjunct to the regular exhibitor aid which Pathe issues in connection with Pathe News, a special sheet of advertising illustrations with mats has been prepared as an accessory for the special and general news features of the topical reel.

The series consists of ten ads varying from one column wide and an inch deep to a two-column display of six inches in depth. The ads call attention to the regular Pathe News features and to "Flashes of the Past," the record of big news events of the past 15 years.

Two Universal Comedy Units Under Way

Universal has started two comedy units to work under the supervision of Scott Darling. Richard Smith is directing Neely Edwards in the first of a new series of one reelers and Edgar Kennedy is directing Arthur Lake and the "Sweet Sixteen" company in another of this series.

Fox Starts Production on "Pawnshop Politics"

Fox has started production on "Pawnshop Politics," third of the "East Side, West Side" series. Benjamin Stoloff is directing. Georgie Harris and Barbara Luddy have the leading roles, while the balance of the cast includes Sidney Franklin, Barney Gilmore and Vincent Howard.

Christie Product Progressing

Half of Twenty-eight Comedies for Season Delivered to Educational

THE Christie organization has turned over to Educational for release just one-half of the twenty-eight comedies of the 1925-26 series. New vehicles for Bobby Vernon, Walter Hiers and Jimmie Adams and other Christies have just been delivered to Educational. Four new two-reelers will be released for National Laugh Month in January.

The newest Bobby Vernon comedy completed is "Yes, Yes Babette," with Frances Lee playing the leading feminine role. Also in the picture are Yola D'Avril and Bill Irving. The comedy was written by Hal Conklin and directed by Earl Rodney.

The new Walter Hiers release is "Weak But Willing." Jack Duffy and Duane Thompson are prominent in the cast. The comedy was written by Sig Herzig and will be released in January.

"A Salty Sap" is the title of the next Christie comedy which features Billy Dooley, supported by Amber Norman, Jack Duffy, Kalla Pasha and others and which was directed by William Watson. It is likely that Dooley will be featured in five of the current series of ten Christie comedies.

Following this will be a Jimmie Adams star series comedy, the title of which has not been selected. Molly Malone, Anita Garvin, Bill Blaisdell, Eddie Baker aud a large chorus of girls under the direction of Ramona Oliver are in support of Adams in the new comedy.

Syndicates To Feature Laugh Month

THE Short Features Advertisers Association is receiving splendid cooperation for Laugh Month in January from various newspaper syndicates. Arrangements have been completed whereby columnists, editorial writers, cartoonists and other special feature writers serving thousands of American newspapers, will devote special attention to the Laugh Month idea.

It is reported that from fifteen to twenty columnists of the King Features Syndicate are to make Laugh Month a feature in one or more of their articles. Two special Laugh Month poems have been written and will soon appear in newspapers all over the country.

Six of the leading King Features cartoonists and the following well known independent newspaper artists; Terry Webster, Bill Johnston and Locher, were filmed in special Laugh Month scenes for Pathe News early this week.

Billy Dooley, Comedy Star, Undergoes Operation

Billy Dooley, new Christie Comedy star, had just completed work in "A Salty Sap," the third of the series in which he is featured, when he was stricken with a stomach disorder and was forced to undergo an operation which will confine him to the hospital for about two weeks.

Dooley was between pictures and was performing the act which he used in vaudeville at a local West Coast theatre when stricken. He was removed to his home and later to the hospital by a friend who was in the audience and had noticed Dooley during his act apparently in pain. Dooley's Christie Comedy appearances will not be thrown out of schedule, as it is expected that the comedian will be able to resume work in a new comedy in time for the regular release on the Educational Pictures program.

Lupino Lane On Temporary Leave From Studios

Lupino Lane is returning to London to play the lead in a stage production at the Oxford Theatre. The comedian will return to the Educational studios in the spring and resume his work in screen comedies. His temporary absence from pictures was made necessary by contractural obligations which he assumed before signing up as an Educational star.

Red Seal Pictures Shows Big Increase

Red Seal Pictures Corporation claims a record to be proud of for the past year. The release schedule shows an increase of almost six hundred per cent, with an even greater increase claimed in the percentages of bookings.

In 1924 Red Seal released but twenty-six featurettes, whereas the present year's schedule calls for one hundred and forty-one one-reel releases. Last year saw only one hundred and fifty theatres booking the product, while it is claimed three thousand houses are booking the product this year.

Among the series being displayed are the Marcus, "Animated Hair Cartoons," "Ko-Ko Song Car-Tunes," "Gems of the Screen," "Out of the Inkwell," "Marvels of Motion," "Searchlights," "Film Facts" and "Reel-views." The success of the concern is largely attributable to the able guidance of President Edwin Miles Fadman.

Johnny Fox Joins Pathe Serial Cast

Pathe has added Johnny Fox, freckled-faced youth of "The Covered Wagon," to the cast of the forthcoming serial, "The Bar-G Mystery," which C. W. Patton is producing with Dorothy Phillips and Wallace MacDonald in the featured roles. Others who will appear in prominent roles are, Philo McCullough, Ethel Clayton, Violet Schram, Fred De Silva, Jim Corey, Victor Potel, Albert Hart, Billy Bletcher, Tom London, Robert Irwin, Fred Kohler and Whitehorse. Robert F. Hill is directing.

Laugh Month Rally in Philadelphia

P. A. Parsons Says 1926 Will Be Greatest Year For Comedies In Speech Before Meeting Of Exhibitors and Exchangemen

A LAUGH Month rally held in Philadelphia at the Aldine Theatre, December 11, brought together a large number of exhibitors and exchangemen, and resulted in much constructive work of planning for a vigorous campaign supporting the movement sponsored by the Short Features Advertising Association and to be held during January.

The meeting was attended by 125 managers of the Stanley Theatres and a fair representation of the other exhibitors of the territory. Also present were managers of the Educational, F. B. O., Fox, Pathe and Universal local branches, and Charles Henschel, District Manager of Pathe.

At the invitation of Frank Buehler, general manager of the Stanley Co., P. A. Parsons, president of the Short Features Advertising Association, and Stanley B. Waite, manager of the Two-Reel Comedy department of Pathe, addressed the assemblage. Mr. Buehler presided at the meeting and presented to Lou Williams, manager of the Family Theatre, the cup for the best exploitation campaign on a short subject.

Mr. Buehler told his hearers that Laugh Month was a sales proposition and that additional attendance could be obtained by featuring the comedy entertainment during the drive especially, and pointed out that the campaign afforded theatre men an opportunity to sell the public a form of entertainment that would build better business, and declared that he personally was for the movement and the Stanley Company was solidly behind the idea.

Mr. Parsons then spoke of Laugh Month, its origin and purpose. He said in part:

"The day of the short subject is here.

"One of the trade papers said the other day that the short subject has come back. As a matter of fact it has never been away, in the affections of the public, particularly among the juveniles, who undoubtedly prefer the short comedy to any other branch of product.

"I predict with confidence that 1926 will be the greatest year for comedies this business has yet seen, and that the backbone of the comedy entertainment during the year will be the big little two-reel comedy.

"We have no argument against features. They are necessary. But so is the short subject necessary. Our argument is against the unfairness of a practice that overemphasizes the feature to the point of exclusion of mention of the short subject.

"It was to correct this situation that the advertising, publicity and exploitation men connected with those companies concerned with the distribution of short subjects, together with several men connected with the Short Subject departments of those companies met informally this last spring and discussed ways and means by which the short-subject could get a fair break.

"These conferences were continued throughout the summer. As the result of them the Short Features Advertising Association was founded a few weeks ago.

"The first official act of the association was to inaugurate January, 1926, as Laugh Month.

"The reception of the idea has been really amazing. Approval has been general. The comic strip men have taken to it wholeheartedly. Columnists are mentioning it. So far as the committee can, in the time at its disposal, it is getting to the newspaper and magazine men who can help us in getting over the idea, and they have been most generous in their approval and their support.

"The benefits of Laugh Month can only come to those who go after them. The exhibitor who sits back expecting that Laugh Month is going to do it all for him is going to be disappointed.

"Advertising by exhibitors on two-reel comedies is increasing as the experience of Pathe proves. Pathe gives to an exhibitor playing a Pathe comedy a free advertising mat on that comedy, of a size that can be slipped into the corner of his regular newspaper ad. For the first month the average distribution of those free mats was only 50 per comedy. Today, six months later, the number has jumped to 1,500 and it is still going up. Other comedy distributors are having the same experience."

Fourth of a Series of Cartoons to be printed in Motion Picture News during National Laugh Month Campaign.

Mr. Parsons then spoke of the Prize Contest, and gave the rules and conditions. He also showed samples of the Laugh Month posters, banners and pennants.

Stanley B. Waite was then introduced and spoke in brief as follows:

"If, by properly presenting attractive programs in which comedy subjects appear and properly exploiting such programs, the exhibitors secure one additional admission per week from every ten of their regular patrons, it will mean that Laugh Month nationally will bring in excess box-office receipts of one million dollars per week.

"The average weekly attendance at moving picture theatres is 50,000,000 persons at a conservative estimate, and if one-tenth of these can be induced, through the exploitation of Laugh Month, to go to one more show each week, it will mean five million additional admissions to the theatres of the country. Figured on an average of 20 cents per admission, this will mean $1,000,000. You can figure for yourselves just what this increased business would amount to for your houses.

"Laugh Month will mean to the exhibitors just exactly what they make it mean."

On the conclusion of Mr. Waite's talk, Mr. Buehler called upon "Emo" Orawitz for a few remarks. Mr. Orawitz spoke of Laugh Month as a great idea, urged every exhibitor in the Philadelphia territory to get behind it, and pledged his assistance in getting the idea to the public through his broadcasting talk every Tuesday at 10.05 p. m.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"Cupid a la Carte"
(Fox—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

AS a straight out and out O. Henry story which seems to have been faithfully carried out—this one will register—but it is a question as to whether it will please the fans who want slapstick and thrills, although there is a little of both introduced here and there. Most of this centers aroung the abnormal appetite of one of the characters. The real surprise of the story has been carefully concealed until the very last. Florence Gilbert and William Colvin easily run away with honors. Robert Kerr was the director and the picture was supervised by George Marshall.

The Cast

Mame.....Florence Gilbert
Tom Hardin.....Carroll Nye
Jeffrey Peters.....Maine Geary
Michael Peters.....Wiliam Colvin

The Story.—"Mame" is the charming little proprietress of a boarding house at a rail-road junction point and has managed to corner most of the trade on the division by virture of her pleasing ways and good eats. She has many suitors and one of the most ardent is young Jeffrey Peters, son of the road's general manager. Jeffrey is serving an apprenticeship as a brakeman and in order to impress Mame, discloses who his Father is. Mame does not seem to be over-impressed. Out on his private car, a few stations away, the general manager is having troubles with the kitchen help. The cook has walked out and as eating is the chief interest of Michael Peters' life, the situation is terrible. However his secretary cheers him with the thought that he can stop at the junction point to satisfy his abnormal appetite. They find Jeffrey at the boarding house and the father proceeds to consume sixty or so minute steaks. In the meantime the secretary is making eyes at Mame who seems to like her new admirer. Michael is so impressed with Mame's cooking that he invites her to accept a position abroad the private car. Before leaving her restaurant, a man drives up and inquires for the last time if she will come back to his home. Mame refuses.

In her new position, Mame does so well that Michael is also considering her as a mate and in the meantime Jeff is in such distress that he seeks the aid of the secretary. He plans to win his father over in the matter of taking a cook for his wife and is overjoyed when he becomes aware of his father's wedding plans. Jeff thinks that they are for him. Mame and the secretary go for a walk while the train is at a stop off and with a lot of fast work, the secretary induces her to marry him. Consternation reigns in the private car when they return and announce the marriage. At this point, the stranger who besought Mame to return to his home, enters the car. He turns out to be the president of the railroad—and Mame—his daughter.

Summary.—This one will please O. Henry fans. However, the action is not swift enough for an audience that likes lots of slapstick and thrills. Story is faithfully carried out and well presented. Suitable for the better class of houses.

"His Own Lawyer"
(Fox—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

ANOTHER two reel comedy, based on "The Married Life of Helen and Warren" that will surely register as first class entertainment. The chief appeal of these pictures to an audience is that they hold the interest thru the portrayal of domestic diffitulties—and while the circumstances in this one are somewhat overdrawn—a corking good story has been worked out. Kathryn Perry and Hallam Cooley are the leads, Albert Ray did the directing and supervision was by George Marshall.

The Cast

Helen.....Kathryn Perry
Warren.....Hallam Cooley
Fred.....David Butler
Carrie.....Grace Goodall
Flora.....Grace Darmond
Bobbie.....Mickie McBan
Judge.....Charles Sellon
Hawkins.....Tiny Sanford

The Story.—After a brief absence from their apartment, Helen and Warren return to find their home invaded by a brother-in-law's family who announce that they can stay for a month. The brother-in-law is keen for these visits on account of the liberty that they afford him from his home ties, and immediately suggests to Warren that they visit a night club. Warren is tired after a hard day in court where he lost his case and reluctantly consents to go although Helen urges him to do so. The judge of Warren's court is out on a tour of inspection that evening and chooses to visit the same night club. Soon after they arrive the place is raided by prohibition agents, Warren and the judge escape but brother-in-law is caught and gives Warren's name next morning, Warren is presented with a summons to appear in court and is thrust in jail with the same man whose case he lost the day before. Helen, unaware that Warren has been arrested and thinking that he is defending a case, picks out the day of his trial to witness his efforts. Discovering Helen in the court room and with his jail companion near him. Warren adroitly switches to his defense to the consternation of all. About this time, the judge's trousers which he lost on the wild night before are returned to him and all cases are dismissed.

Summary.—Good entertainment, cleverly work out and should not fail to please. Is suitable for the average audience.

"Hotsy Totsy"
(Pathe—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

This two reeler of Mack Sennett's while providing a fair brand of comedy does not seem to give charming Alice Day a real chance to show at her best. Miss Day plays the part of an attractive little department store girl who has received an invitation to a banquet given by her boss. The compliment has been bestowed on account of her ability to recite a presentation speech and hand over a loving cup to the new partner. Al Goulding did the directing.

The Cast

Alice Day, Eugenia Gilbert, Danny O'Shea, Barney Helleum and Kalla Pasha.

The Story—The boss is giving a banquet in honor of his new partner and little Alice has been chosen by the employees of the store to attend the event. She is to make a speech before presenting a loving cup as a token of their esteem. Her strange surroundings seem to embarrass her and she falls down terribly while doing her act. However, the situation is saved from being a total flop by the good graces of the new partner with whom Alice makes a big hit.

Summary—Fair Comedy entertainment but not Alice Day at her best. The supporting cast is excellent.

"The English Channel Swim"

Paul Terry has another one here that contains the usual amount of laughs. This time his animals endeavor to swim the English channel and after a number of very close calls, the cat—always one of the star performers of these single reelers—ties up with a whale and beats them all across.

"The Flying Fool"
(Fox—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

There's enough crazy airplane circus stuff and thrills in this one to satisfy any comedy fan and Sid Smith's antics in the freak 'plane are due to get a lot of laughs for the reason of their extreme absurdity. In the latter part there is another good sized kick furnished when Marion Harlan makes a parachute descent. Story and Scenario are by Bryan Foy and Murray Roth and Lew Seiler did the directing.

The Cast

The Boy.....Sid Smith
The Girl.....Marion Harlan
Aviator.....Harry Woods
Girl's Father.....William Cartright

The Story—Sid's prospective father-in-law is the inventor of a new kind of airplane which several aviators inspect and pronounce unsafe. Eager to impress the girl of his choice, Sid engages one of the flyers to put him thru an aviation test with the idea of trying out the new machine which no one else will attempt to do. He is put thru a series of tests on ingenious mechanisms. The day of the flight arrives, Sid hops into the freak machine, the propellers whirl and off he goes—backwards. He is supposed to receive instructions via radio but inadvertently tunes in on another station where a girl's calisthenic class is in action. He follows the dizzy antics of the class, and his instructors, thinking that the machine is beyond control, send up another aviator who carries along Sid's sweetheart as a passenger. A furious battle in the air follows in which our hero's machine tumbles earthwards. Not liking the villain's love making, Sid's sweetheart gets out to walk home by means of a parachute and after a thrilling descent, lands in about the same spot as her true lover who effects the rescue.

Summary—An amusing comedy, full of ridiculous stunts and some real good thrills. Suitable for the average audience.

"The Iron Trail Around the World"
(Fox—789 Feet)

THESE subjects are, as a rule very good and this one is not an exception. It is not only a fine scenic—some beautiful shots having been procured—but is highly interesting and instructive in the matter of showing the contrasting methods of transportation and the giant strides taken along this line during recent years. It shows how man, ever striving to move more quickly, developed the old "DeWitt-Clinton" to the fast, powerful locomotive of today. Scenes jump from the jungle to the desert and from the crowded railroad yard to the mountains, showing how steel has brought together the corners of the world.—E. G. JOHNSTON.

The Perfect Clown

(Chadwick Picture Corp.—5600 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

FOLLOWING its title suggestion, this picture consists of a skeleton plot constructed to show off the clowning tactics of Larry Semon and the result is a series of knockabout farce comedy situations, loosely strung together, but good for the laughs wherever the star is popular, or patrons aren't disposed to be ultra-critical regarding narrative form and development. For there really isn't any story worth mentioning, Larry's troubles in trying to guard a satchel of money entrusted to him by his employers furnishing all the fun, with a suggestion of romance in the background evidently thrown in just to provide the customary clinch finish. Semon skips around in his usual fantastically comic style, aided by G. Howe Black in a negro role, the latter sharing comedy honors with the leading man. The picture winds up with an army of cops chasing the pair, a familiar but mighty fast action finish that should tickle the average fan. Not a high-grade comedy, but provides fair entertainment.

THEME. Farce comedy. Broker's clerk, given satchel of money to deposit in bank, is kept out all night, has awful time in company with negro porter guarding treasure, but finally lands back at office with it.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Star's knockabout comedy and G. Howe Black's work in colored role. Fast action and slapstick situations.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as lively farce. Feature Semon's slapstick performances with his negro pal. Play up big cop chase at close.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for daily change and smaller houses.

SUMMARY. Goes the limit on slapstick stuff, moves swiftly, has slender plot but rough-house humor will amuse in certain communities.

THE CAST

Bert Larry	Larry Semon
Mrs. Mulligan	Kate Price
The Porter	G. Howe Black
John Mulligan	Oliver Hardy
The Girl	Dorothy Dwan
Her Chum	Joan Meredith
The Boss	Otis Harlan

Author Not Credited. Director, Fred Newmeyer.

SYNOPSIS. Bert Larry, broker's clerk, is in love with the office manager's pretty secretary. He is given a satchel containing $10,000 to deposit, finds the bank closed, is picked up by Snowball, the negro porter, driving a Ford. They lose their way, are compelled to change clothes with two escaped convicts, have a variety of adventures and are chased by cops in the morning. Finally Larry reaches the office, the money is duly returned and he gets the girl.

Larry Semon, star of "The Perfect Clown," a Chadwick production.

The Perfect Clown (Chadwick Pictures)

PRESS NOTICE

WHEN Larry Semon starts his slapstick comedy work, you know you are in for an hour's lively entertainment. Watch for his appearance in the "Perfect Clown" which comes to the ———— Theatre on ————. Larry is seen as Bert, a broker's clerk, who is given a satchel containing $10,000 to deposit. He finds the bank closed, meets Snowball, negro porter, driving a Ford, and the two are hounded from pillar to post all night. They are forced to trade clothes with two escaping convicts, and the cop chase that ensues is one of the merriest, wildest things ever filmed.

Dorothy Dwan, Kate Price and Otis Harlan appear in important roles.

CATCH LINES

There's no mirth control in "The Perfect Clown." Larry Semon's laughs linger! A scream of fun from start to finish.

Skinner's Dress Suit

(Universal-Jewel—6887 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A DELIGHTFUL comedy that should swell box office receipts wherever it is shown. No exhibitor can go wrong booking this one! It's a guffaw of mirth from beginning to end, and William A. Seiter has done the best job of his career in directing it. Reginald Denny has never been seen to better advantage than in the role of young husband who lies to his artless spouse about a salary increase, and finds himself tangled in a net of near-financial disaster as a consequence of her social ambitions and joyous expenditures. Much of the picture's lure is due to craftily maintained suspense, as well as the excellent acting of every member of the company. It is very human. The wife, with her tremendous faith in the really commonplace chap whom she styles her "big, handsome, successful husband," is the sort of person most everyone has met at some time or another.

THEME. Farce comedy. Skinner tells wife he has received salary raise. It isn't true, but wife proceeds to spend money as though it were. Husband has to lie and worm way out of financial complications, but attains success in end.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. All-around good direction, acting and splendidly maintained suspense. Home part and ball scenes. The surprising climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Safe to bill this as one of the year's best comedies. Feature Reginald Denny, play up money tangles and human interest touches.

DRAWING POWER. Should pull 'em in any house, big or little. A great card.

SUMMARY. Sure box office winner. Has direct audience appeal, is the limit in successful fun-making. Denny at his best, and a fine supporting cast.

THE CAST

Skinner	Reginald Denny
Honey	Laura La Plante
Perkins	Ben Hendricks, Jr.
McLaughlin	E. J. Ratcliffe
Tommy	Arthur Lake
Mrs. Colby	Hedda Hopper
Jackson	Lionel Braham

Author, Henry Irving Dodge. Director, William A. Seiter. Photographed by Arthur Todd.

SYNOPSIS. Skinner's wife, Honey, insists that he ask his employers for salary raise. He does, is refused, but tells her he got it. Honey makes him buy a dress suit, spends their savings joyously and they attend various social affairs. Skinner is fired, but keeps his secret. By chance he is enabled to do a favor to a wealthy contractor and latter's spouse fixes up a half million deal so that Skinner is made partner in the firm.

Reginald Denny, star of the Universal production "Skinner's Dress Suit."

Skinner's Dress Suit (Universal)

PRESS NOTICE

ONE of the greatest comedy hits of the year, and thus acclaimed by all the critics, is "Skinner's Dress Suit," starring Reginald Denny, listed for its first local showing at the ———— Theatre on ————. Skinner's wife insists that he ask for a salary raise. He tells her he got it, which is a lie, but wifie proceeds to spend money like water and Skinner is caught in a net of awful finance complications. He wins out in the end, but not until disasters menace him everywhere. A screamingly funny film!

The support includes such well-known players as Laura La Plante, Ben Hendricks.

CATCH LINES

Skinner's troubles started through lying to his wife about a supposed salary increase. So she spent money accordingly.

Time, the Comedian

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—Five Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

JUST a mildly entertaining offering with nothing startlingly new in its makeup except the small figure of Time, portrayed by Theodore Kosloff, as a clown and not as the proverbial old man with beard and scythe. Into the action, ever and anon, leaps this small figure to assure the audience that everything is working out according to schedule. The plot relates the adventures of a woman living in a small town in 1904 who, bored to death with her part in life, listens to the words of the tempter and goes to New York. Later the husband dies and the lover deserts her and then time flies for some fourteen years to Paris, where we find the same characters — although none but the daughter show much effect from the elapse of a decade. In Paris the old lover seeks to wed the daughter but we see his plans foiled by the woman he wronged early in life. There are some elaborate sets in the Parisian episodes and here also the Misses Busch and Olmstead appear in some gorgeous gowns. None of the characters are called upon for much acting.

THEME. Society drama that spans a quarter century relating the love adventures of mother and daughter. Former saves latter from man who deserted her.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The scene in which Nora joins Brundage in New York. The death of Nora's husband and her desertion by Larry. The reception in Paris at which they meet again after many years. The climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Window display of clocks in jewelry stores, suitable photos and cards from Picture. Arrange fashion display of 1904 and 1926 costumes. Play up Mae Busch and Lew Cody.

DRAWING POWER. Well exploited, should do business in small theatres and community houses.

SUMMARY. A rather artistic production but weak in plot and lacking in suspense. Fairly well acted and possessing some elaborate sets. Will please most audiences.

THE CAST

Nora Dakon ..... Mae Busch
Larry Brundage ..... Lew Cody
Ruth Dakon ..... Gertrude Olmstead
Ruth Dakon (as child) ..... Rae Ethelyn
Michael Lawler ..... Roy Stewart
Mrs. St. Germaine ..... Paulette Duval
Tom Cautley ..... Creighton Hale

Author, Kate Jordan. Directed by Robert Z. Leonard. Photographed by Oliver Marsh.

SYNOPSIS. Nora Dakon's husband dies. She goes to Gotham, is deserted by Larry Brundage, whose attorney seeks to appease her with a check for her daughter's sake. The scene shifts to Paris where fourteen years later, Nora has become famous as a singer. At a reception Brundage again meets Nora and becomes infatuated with her daughter, Ruth. Nora prevents the marriage of the two. Ruth eventually weds her real lover, Tom Cautley.

Lew Cody, featured in "Time, the Comedian," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production.

Time, the Comedian (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

PRESS NOTICE

MAE BUSCH and Lew Cody are co-starred in the Robert Z. Leonard production, "Time, the Comedian," which comes to the ———— Theatre, commencing ————. The story from the pen of Kate Jordan, while chronicling the changes in customs, mannerisms, styles and modes of life in the first quarter of the 20th century, also tells a fascinating romance that takes the audience from a small town in New Jersey in 1904, to New York at the same time and then to Paris in the armistice days.

Mae Busch is at her best in the feminine lead while Lew Cody, of course, is an ideal type for the crusher of women's hearts. Gertrude Olmstead is attractve as the daughter.

CATCH LINES

The story of a woman who fought against time—and lost. A dramatization of the dread of womanhood-age.

The Splendid Crime

(Paramount—6000 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

AN entertaining crook play with melodramatic and comedy values nicely balanced and thrills that "get you," even if it is patently plain that such things never did and never will happen in actual life. But what does that matter? The feature was made to entertain and does so by virtue of snappily sustained action and good work by the entire cast. And when dainty Bebe Daniels, as the enterprising crook lady, suddenly resolves, as per subtitle, that "housebreakin' ain't no work for a lady," and determines to go straight, you can't help wishing her the best of luck and watching her subsequent career with increasing interest. The subtitles, by the way, are uncommonly well written, terse and to the point, and although the story twists and winds through some surprising sidealley issues, its continuity never breaks, nor does the action drag. So, on the whole, "The Splendid Crime" can be listed as a good box office asset for most any house, with acting, direction and photography far above average.

THEME. Crook melo. Jenny, feminine burglar, is persuaded by a chap she meets in the course of business operations to quit the game. She does, and years later is the means of regenerating her adviser, when he in turn goes wrong.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Speedy action, good direction, Miss Daniel's clever acting, work of supporting cast. Bright comedy, thrills, pleasing romantic lure.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Bebe Daniels as appearing in one of her best films. Stress the crook atmosphere, the humor touches, suspense and thrill punches.

DRAWING POWER. Should please patrons of any house.

SUMMARY. A bright, brisk comedy-melodrama with crook atmosphere, well acted, directed and photographed. Bebe Daniels at her best. A box office winner.

THE CAST

Jenny ..... Bebe Daniels
Bob Van Dyke ..... Neil Hamilton
Beth Van Dyke ..... Anne Cornwall
John Norton ..... Anthony Jowitt
Dugan ..... Fred Walton
Kelly ..... Lloyd Corrigan
Mary ..... Josephine Crowell

Author and Director, William de Mille. Photographed by L. Guy Wilky.

SYNOPSIS. Jenny, discovered by young millionaire Van Dyke, while robbing his house, is persuaded by him to go straight. Later Van goes broke and determines to avail himself of $20,000 belonging to his old housekeeper. He encounters Jenny. In order to save Van from himself, Jenny has old confederates rifle the safe. When the money is missed she assumes the blame, Van realizes the truth and it goes back to owner. Van Dyke eventually makes good for himself and Jenny.

PRESS NOTICE

BEAUTIFUL, vivacious Bebe Daniels as the erstwhile crook heroine of "The Splendid Crime," will be seen on the screen of the ———— Theatre on ————. The dainty Bebe impersonates a dashing young girl burglar, who is induced to reform by young Van Dyke, when he finds her robbing his house. Years later Van Dyke goes broke and is saved from taking the crooked path himself by the girl he reformed. A film crammed with suspense, thrills and lively comedy Handsome Neil Hamilton appears as Bebe's benefactor and lover, Anne Cornwall, Anthony Jowitt, Fred Walton, Lloyd Corrigan, Josephine Crowell, Marcelle Corday are members of the supporting cast.

CATCH LINES

He warned her to go straight, then he turned crooked. She wanted to rob his safe, instead, he stole her heart! A sparkling romance of a spendthrift millionaire and a female Raffles

The Golden Cocoon

(Warner Brothers—7200 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

MAKING all due allowances for certain illogical absurdities in its plot, such as the extremely shaky foundation upon which the villain bases his power to expose the heroine's past, "The Golden Cocoon" is nevertheless a picture with strong audience appeal, so far as the rank-and-file of movie-goers are concerned. It is ultra-theatrical to be sure, but travels at a fast clip, offers a lot of sure-fire hokum melodrama and emotional stress, scoops up bucketfuls of sympathy for the young wife-heroine, and arouses frank detestation of the blackmailing gent who digs up her past and threatens to blow her domestic happiness sky-high. The so-called intellectuals won't like this stuff but, thanks to good direction and players that put it over in vigorous style, a big majority of fans will pronounce it satisfactory entertainment. Helene Chadwick, always a sincere and clever performer, does very nicely indeed in the heroine role and is well supported by Huntly Gordon and an adequate cast.

THEME. Melodrama. Girl deserted by lover, weds happily, is later threatened with exposure by former swain, who is killed, but exonerates her before dying.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Rainstorm scene, heroine's adventure in disorderly house. Renfro's return. His death. Brisk action, romance, thrills.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Stress predicament of innocent woman blackmailed by villain. Bill as exciting melo with unabated heart interest. Feature Helene Chadwick.

DRAWING POWER. Good attraction for the average house.

SUMMARY. They lay melodramatic and emotional varnish on thick in this one, but it moves swiftly and will please those who like extra-sentimental exciting films.

THE CAST

Molly Shannon	Helene Chadwick
Gregory Cochran	Huntly Gordon
Mr. Renfro	Richard Tucker
Mr. Bancroft	Frank Campeau
Mrs. Shannon	Margaret Seddon
Mrs. Parker	Carrie Clarke Ward
Mr. Shannon	Charles McHugh

Author, Ruth Cross. Director, Millard Webb. Photographed by Byron Haskins.

SYNOPSIS. Molly Shannon, jilted by Renfro, falls exhausted before a notorious sporting house, is taken in and revived. She leaves, meets and marries Judge Cochran. They are happy until Renfro appears and threatens to expose her past. Molly goes to Renfro's hotel apartment, a struggle ensues, the gun she carries is discharged and Renfro fatally wounded. Before dying he exonerates her in presence of husband and witnesses. She and Cochran are reunited.

PRESS NOTICE

LOVERS of strong melodrama, combined with sentimental lure and unfailing heart interest, may expect a screen treat when "The Golden Cocoon," starring Helene Chadwick, is shown at the ——— Theatre on ———. The story deals with the harrowing experiences of a happily married young woman, whose past rises up to threaten her through the medium of a blackmailing villain to whom she was once engaged and deserted her.

Huntly Gordon appears in the hero role, with Richard Tucker as the heavy, supported by such stellar players as Frank Campeau, Margaret Seddon, Carrie Clarke Ward, Charles McHugh, and other favorite lights of the screen.

CATCH LINES

She was innocent, but evil hands wove a net of suspicion around her, and shadowy spectres of the past threatened to ruin her happiness

A Woman of the World

(Paramount—6353 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THIS picture presents Pola Negri in a totally different setting from any in which she has yet appeared, for it takes a jump from the gilded society of Paris and the Riviera to a country burg in the U. S. A., where most of the action takes place. Moreover, the broad comedy element is given full swing, another new departure for a Negri feature. But the net result is undeniably entertaining, Miss Negri's exotic beauty and gorgeous gowns shine out resplendent amid the drab surroundings of the town of Maple Valley, a truly startling contrast, and in the role of the visiting Countess she certainly makes the wondering natives sit up and take notice. The story is interesting throughout and the star acts with all the versatility, fire and passion which have made her famous on the silver sheet. The scene where she encounters the Puritanical District Attorney while she is smoking in the street, and that in which she horsewhips the same gentleman, although they afterward kiss and make up, are remarkably effective and artistically staged. A well directed and good box office film.

THEME. Comedy drama. Foreign Countess comes to small American town, scandalizes District Attorney, surprises prim inhabitants, but finally weds the D. A.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Miss Negri's fine acting. Broad comedy relief. Development of love affair. Horsewhipping scene. Small-town stuff. Surprise climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Pola Negri. Tell patrons this is different from all her other vehicles. Play up romance and humorous situations and star's gowns.

DRAWING POWER. Has audience appeal, good for large and small houses.

SUMMARY. An entertaining Pola Negri film, "different" because of small-town atmosphere which predominates. Strong dramatic values and lots of comedy laughs.

THE CAST

Countess Natatorini	Pola Negri
Richard Granger	Holmes Herbert
Gareth Johns	Charles Emmett Mack
Lennie Porter	Blanche Mehaffey
Sam Poore	Chester Conklin
Annie	Dorothea Wolbert
Judge Porter	Guy Oliver

Author, Carl Van Vechten. Director, Malcolm St. Clair. Photographed by Bert Glennon.

SYNOPSIS. Countess Natatorini's lover proves faithless and she comes to Maple Valley, U. S. A. There she surprises the natives and has an encounter with District Attorney Granger, who does not approve of women smoking on the street. However, Granger falls in love with the disdainful beauty. He grows jealous of his assistant and is finally horsewhipped by the indignant lady. But when she finishes her athletic feat, he hands back the whip, embraces her and all ends well.

PRESS NOTICE

POLA NEGRI'S latest picture, "A Woman of the World," will be given its local premier at the ——— Theatre on ———. This new Negri film presents the popular star for the first time in a small American town setting, where most of the action takes place. Also, it is unique as a Negri vehicle because of the fact that it revels in sidesplitting comedy as well as those tense dramatic moments in which the great Polish actress excels. The star appears as a foreign Countess who seeks seclusion in the country burg and falls in love with the District Attorney.

Holmes Herbert plays the male lead, with a splendid cast of talented players in support.

CATCH LINES

A beautiful foreign Countess in a little American town, a District Attorney who at first considered her a moral menace! But he learned to love her.

Steel Preferred

(Producers Distributing Corp.—6680 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A BULLY audience picture that was actually filmed in a huge steel mill, for the first time, it is claimed, in the history of screenland; offering wonderfully spectacular effects, a story replete with human interest, thrill wallops that slam home with staggering force and some great comedy gags. No fear that the fans in general will fail to respond to this one. It has all the earmarks of a sure box office winner, is uncommonly well directed, acted, and registers as a lasting credit to all concerned in its production. A fine cast is in evidence, with vivacious Vera Reynolds as heroine, William Boyd as the devil-may-care, energetic lover, both giving their best, Hobart Bosworth an impressive, forceful mill-owner, and those sterling comedians, Charlie Murray and wandering-eyed Ben Turpin getting all kinds of fun out of their respective roles. Never a dragging moment and a whale of a punch toward the close, when the ladle train upsets and Boyd snatches Vera Reynolds away from the surging molten flood.

THEME. Steel-mill melodrama. Hero a worker in love with owner's daughter, who defeats villain's strike scheme, saves girl's life and gains her affections.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Impressive mill interiors, scene where hero saves Waldron from being hurled into open furnace, ladle-train wreck, with molten metal flood. Wally's fight with Devil Daggy. Comedy bits, thrills, romantic development.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You have a fine cast to play up, boost it to the limit. Tell patrons mill scenes are genuine. Bill as stunning melo, strong love interest.

DRAWING POWER. A money-maker for any house, large or small.

SUMMARY. Unique melodrama, with scenes actually filmed in big steel mill. Has big audience appeal, romantic, melodramatic and humorous values. A great card.

THE CAST

Amy Creeth	Vera Reynolds
Wally Gay	William Boyd
James Creeth	Hobart Bosworth
Dicker	Charlie Murray
Redface	Walter Long
Bartender	Ben Turpin
Waldron	Nigel Barrie
Nicker	William V. Mong

Adapted from Story by Herschel S. Hall. Director, James Hogan.

SYNOPSIS. Wally Gay, steel-worker, is disliked by superintendent Waldron, who is jealous of favor shown him by Amy Creeth, mill-owner's daughter. Wally halts Waldron's scheme to promote a strike, also rescues his rival when latter is about to be thrown into a furnace. While Amy and Waldron are on an inspection tour a ladle train full of molten steel is upset. Waldron flees. Wally saves Amy from the red-hot flood of metal and wins her for his wife.

PRESS NOTICE

A ROMANTIC, human story dealing with the great steel industry, beautiful, thrilling, appealing and humorous, is set forth in "Steel Preferred," which comes to the screen of the ——— Theatre on ———. The hero, a young steel-worker, in love with the mill-owner's daughter Amy, has a dangerous rival in superintendent Waldron, whose life he saves, but who nevertheless loses no chance to discredit courageous Wally Gay. The film abounds in exciting scenes, one, in which the heroine narrowly escapes death in a flood of molten metal, is absolutely hair-raising,

Vera Reynolds and William Boyd head a notable cast.

CATCH LINES

A wonderful film showing the interior of a great steel mill at night, with its tongues of flame and myriad sparks; death in escaping flood of molten metal, real drama absolutely new to the screen.

Joanna

(First National—Eight Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

A COLORFUL and lavishly mounted drama that mirrors our jazz-mad age in all its realism and pictures for the edification of the sophisticates many of the activities of our ultra modern sheiks and shebas. The original story ran in newspaper serial form. Therefore many will be waiting to see the screen version. Edwin Carewe certainly has spread the jazz on thick. Petting, necking, drinking, dancing a la Charleston, wild parties, all are here and then some. It is most certainly not a picture for family consumption, but should be a big box office draw in houses catering to a clientele that desires this kind of material. Dorothy Mackaill is at her best in the title role and she is given good support by a well known cast, including Dolores del Rio, the new Mexican beauty, who is all that the press agents call her. The settings throughout are elaborate, beautifully lighted and decidedly artistic. The story, while improbable, holds the interest. The subtitles are snappy and aid greatly in getting over the modern idea.

THEME. A syncopated drama of a modern girl against whose chastity a million dollars was bet, but the girl proved that she wouldn't sell her soul.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Dorothy Mackaill's characterization. The night club shots. The wild parties. The elaborate interiors. The attempted attack on Joanna.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Tie up with papers that ran serial. Photos from picture will aid in radio, motor car, ladies' apparel, real estate and other tie-ups. Feature Miss Mackaill and Jack Mulhall.

DRAWING POWER. Good wherever they want sensational and "sexy" stuff.

SUMMARY. Another one of those "Flaming Youth" type of pictures. Plot quite impossible, although possessing qualities of entertainment for some. Houses catering to family trade better see this first!

THE CAST

Joanna	Dorothy Mackaill
John Wilmot	Jack Mulhall
Anthony Eggleson	George Fawcett
Frank Brandon	Paul Nicholson
Lord Teddy	John T. Murray
Georgia Leach	Yvonne Carewe
Carlotta deSilva	Dolores del Rio
Mrs. Adams	Lillian Langdon

By H. L. Gates. Directed by Edwin Carewe.

SYNOPSIS. Joanna Manners, working girl, engaged to John Wilmot, becomes the recipient of a mysterious legacy of $1,000,000. Wilmot leaves her. Frank Brandon, nephew of a banker, and a countess, aid her in getting rid of her fortune. Joanna is arrested when caught speeding with the inert body of Brandon, whom she has struck and stunned with a shoe. Brandon recovers. Joanna is freed. She learns she had been a pawn, object of a bet of $1,000,000 as to her chastity. She is reunited with John.

PRESS NOTICE

THE film version of H. L. Gates' sensational newspaper serial, "Joanna," with Dorothy Mackaill in the title role, will open at the ——— Theatre, commencing ———. "Joanna," is the intensely interesting drama of a modern girl in whom many other flappers will see their counterpart.

The production has been mounted without regard for expense, some of the interiors, especially those showing the night clubs of New York and the countess' home on Long Island, being the last word in lavish settings. There are several scenes in a Fifth avenue atelier which will please feminine fans. The strange adventures of a girl who suddenly becomes heir to a mysterious $1,000,000, are fascinating at all times.

A Kiss for Cinderella

(Paramount—Eight Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

PARAMOUNT, Herbert Brenon, Betty Bronson and the entire motion picture industry may well feel proud of this contribution to the screen, which comes to the public at a most opportune time. Truly it is an ideal Christmas present and one that exhibitors, large and small, will be glad to offer their audiences at any date. Mr. Brenon has caught in admirable manner the whimsical touches of this heart-tugging Barrie tale. He has taken the delightful story of the little Cinderella slavey and transplanted it to the shadow stage in a masterful fashion, painting it in a series of pictures beautiful beyond description. Cinderella's early days in Mr. Bodie's studio, her dream and the lavish, fantastic ball—all these sequences have been developed in true Barrie style, alternate lights and shadows, tears following smiles and vice versa. Betty Bronson eclipses her success in "Peter Pan," and she is given excellent support by Tom Moore and a great cast. Miss Bronson IS Cinderella.

THEME. Modern romance of a little slavey who is called Cinderella because of her tiny feet and belief that one day she will find a prince for herself.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Scenes in Mr. Bodie's studio, elaborate ball, awakening from the dream. Miss Bronson's characterization. Elaborate mounting. Mr. Brenon's direction.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. See special section December 5 issue of Motion Picture News. Play up Betty Bronson, Barrie, and the title. Advertise picture in schools. Get cooperation of Mothers' clubs.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for any theatre, large or small.

SUMMARY. Undoubtedly one of the most artistic productions of the year and one approaching 100 per cent in acting, direction, mounting, entertainment, heart appeal and human interest. A masterpiece if there ever was one. Book it quick!

THE CAST

The Cowboy Musketeer

(F. B. O.—4500 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

TOM TYLER comes to the front again in another lively picture that contains all that the most ardent admirers of Westerns could desire in the line of dashing deeds of gallantry and wild adventure in the open. A good feature of its kind, and satisfactory program attraction. The yarn isn't quite the cut-and-dried affair usually put forth under the Western brand, naturally there are some familiar situations, but even these are put across with such vim that they prove entertaining, in fact the fast action carries the story along at such a rattling pace that its thrill motif never ceases to grip the spectators. Also the romantic side is neatly developed, big Tom Tyler proving just as an impassioned a lover as he is an athlete and winning cartloads of sympathy for himself, a dog of doubtful breed but uncommon intelligence and a sagacious horse. Frances Dare figures as a very appealing heroine, Jim London and David Dunbar register well as the paired villians, the support is adequate and photography O. K.

THEME. Western melodrama. Cowboy hero foils plot of villains to wrest secret of gold deposit from helpless girl, and wins her love.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Brisk action, good atmosphere, fine scenic shots. Hero's rescue of heroine from drowning, his escape from pursuers and intervention to save Leila from assailant. Tyler's riding and fighting stunts.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You can safely promise patrons an hour of fascinating thrills and romantic enjoyment. Boost as fine Western. Feature star and animal pals.

DRAWING POWER. Good for any house where fast Westerners are in favor.

SUMMARY. A breezy Westerner, full of action and melodramtic punches. Tom Tyler, horse and dog pulling amusing and breath-taking stunts. Likely box office card.

THE CAST

Tom Grainger ..... Tom Tyler
Joe Dokes ..... Jim London
Leila Gordon ..... Frances Dare
Tony Vaquerrelli ..... David Dunbar
Billy ..... Frankie Darro
The Dog ..... Beans

Author, Buckleigh Fritz Oxford. Director, Robert De Lacey.

SYNOPSIS. Tom Grainger, cowboy, learns from Barton, an outlaw he befriends in the desert, that Dokes, foreman of the Gordon ranch, and his conferedate, Vaquerrelli, are plotting to obtain the secret of a gold deposit from Leila Gordon, whose father has just died. Tom rescues Leila from drowning, is made prisoner by Dokes, who thinks he is Barton, escapes and outwitts sheriff's posse. Tom returns to the ranch in time to prevent Dokes from stealing the map of the gold location from Leila. Barron is caught, Tom cleared and he wins Leila.

PRESS NOTICE

A RATTLING Western melodrama, "The Cowboy Musketeer," starring Tom Tyler, is scheduled as the main screen attraction at the ——— Theatre on ———. Innumerable thrills, wonderful riding feats, romantic lure and scenic beauty are the principal characteristics of this picture, which shows Tyler as a bashful but resourceful gallant, who poses temporarily as an escaped bandit, comes in the nick of time to the aid of a pretty girl menaced by a couple of conspiring villains, is emeshed in a net of adventure, but fights his way through triumphantly Frances Dare fills the heroine role, with Jim London, David Dunbar, Frankie Darro, and a marvelously sagacious dog and horse, appearing in support.

CATCH LINES

A secret gold pocket in the mountains a bracelet that holds the key to the hiding place of treasure, romance, love, adventure!

Heartless Husbands

(Dependable Films—4900 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

CHIEFLY remarkable for its sensational flavor, this picture gets off to a bad start by staging some disagreeable scenes in which a brutal husband mauls about a helpless wife who is on the verge of motherhood. They could have spared this stuff, which is altogether unnecessary to the plot development and leaves an unpleasant impression on the spectators. Otherwise, it is a pretty good melodrama, with a unique twist given the story by introducing a drug which is injected into the villain's veins and forces him to tell the truth, thereby clearing up the hero's horrible doubt as to whether the girl he loves is his sister. The idea is taken from recent articles in the daily press, asserting that such a serum has been employed with success in certain prisons. Gloria Grey is pleasing in the heroine role, with John T. Prince giving an excellent performance as the good-hearted crook, Thomas G. Lingham a sufficiently sinister villain and adequate support rendered by remainder of the cast.

THEME. Melodrama. Orphan son of divorced mother falls in love with girl whom he is later told is his sister. Villain under influence of drug confesses he lied and lovers are united.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Pathetic scenes in hero's boyhood. His meeting with Mary. Scene where he hears she is his sister. Administration of "truth serum."

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Should be able to work up interest in plot by referring to newspaper stories concerning the drug's powers. Bill as sensational melo.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable where patrons favor the luridly sensational films.

SUMMARY. Forceful melo. Opening scenes unpleasant. Offers unique plot, hinging on giving criminals a certain drug to make them confess truth. Fair entertainment.

THE CAST

Mary Eileen ..... Gloria Grey
James Carleton ..... John T. Prince
Jackson Cain ..... Thomas G. Lingham
Mrs. Jackson Cain ..... Vola Vale
Minnie Blake ..... Edna Hall
Detective Kelly ..... L. J. O'Connor
Sonny ..... Waldo Moretti

Author, Burl R. Tuttle. Director, Bertram Bracken. Photographed by Gordon Pollock.

SYNOPSIS. Sonny Cain, orphan, is adopted by Carleton, ex-convict, who keeps him straight. Carleton is jailed, but released when Sonny attains manhood. Sonny loves Mary Kayne. Her father reveals himself as Sonny's father. Carleton doubts the story, rifles Kayne's safe to obtain papers, is shot by detective, but states Kayne is a crook. Kayne is arrested, given a drug which compels him to speak truthfully and admits he lied. The lovers are therefore left free to wed.

PRESS NOTICE

A LOVE story of gripping interest is told in "Heartless Husbands," listed as the leading screen attraction at the ——— Theatre on ———. This picture for the first time in films introduces the great sensational scientific discovery, hailed by the daily press as one of the marvels of the century, a serum which, injected into the veins compels a person to tell the absolute truth when questioned. By this means a villain is compelled to admit that he lied, when he told the hero that the latter was in love with his own sister. A unique and interesting romantic melodrama.

Gloria Grey and John T. Prince are starred, supported by a brilliant cast of noted players.

CATCH LINES

How would you feel if you learned that the girl you loved was your sister? This was what the hero of this picture faced, until science came to his rescue and proved the statement false.

The Count of Luxembourg

(Chadwick Pictures Corp.—5600 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A PLEASING picture offering a romantic angle that will surely catch the fancy of lovers of sentiment, liberally sprinkled with melodramatic seasoning, well directed and acted. As a program attraction it should run up a very respectable box office score. Some sticklers for ethics may object to the titled hero descending from a high moral plane by wedding a woman he doesn't even know for a pecuniary consideration, but it's the mystery surrounding the bride's identity, so far as her new mate is concerned, that makes the yarn interesting, and after all, he makes amends by really falling in love with her and turning the commercial marriage into a genuine Cupid affair. The film is replete with handsome settings, as evidenced in the Carnival, ball masque scenes of brilliant backgrounds and fantastic costumes, there's a snappy duel episode and a host of intriguing complications which straighten out into a satisfactory happy finish. George Walsh scores as the dashing Count and Helene Lee Worthing is an alluring heroine.

THEME. Melodrama. Actress weds impoverished Count, for title's sake, so that she can marry a duke. But she falls in love with husband and becomes wife in reality.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Engaging romantic developments. Smooth action, colorful atmosphere. Well staged Carnival, bal masque and duel scenes. Star's acting.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Boost as sympathetic heart interest story, with powerful melodramatic action. Play up Carnival and duel scenes. Feature principals.

DRAWING POWER. Should do good business in average house.

SUMMARY. Piles up the sentimental and melodramatic interest. Is tastefully staged, well directed. Has audience appeal. Abounds in handsome settings and attractive photography. Star and leading lady effective in respective roles.

THE CAST

Renee Duval (The Count) ..... George Walsh
Angele Diddier ..... Helen Lee Worthing
Duke Rutzinoff ..... Michael Dark
Duke's Secretary ..... Charles Requa
Anatole ..... James Morrison
Juliette ..... Lola Todd
Yvonne ..... Joan Meredith

Adapted from Operetta by Franz Lehar. Director, Arthur Gregor.

SYNOPSIS. Duke Rutzinoff wishes to wed actress Angele Didier, but as he cannot marry an untitled girl, persuades her to become wife of Renee Duval, impoverished Count, whom she is to divorce afterwards. The wedding takes place. Angele goes to the Riveria, where the Count, having inherited an unexpected fortune, shortly appears. He saves her from drowning and they fall in love. Renee is victor in a duel with the enraged Duke's secretary and settles down with his bride.

PRESS NOTICE

BRILLIANT backgrounds of Paris society, intrigue, romance and the shadow of impending tragedy, narrowly averted, are set forth in "The Count of Luxembourg," a picture which will be given its initial local showing at the ——— Theatre on ———. The story treats of a young actress who weds an impoverished Count, with the intention of divorcing him and becoming the wife of an old Duke. But Fate intervenes, the husband becomes the lover, determines to keep his wife and does so.

George Walsh gives a great performance as the dashing Count hero, with beautiful Helen Lee Worthing filling the sweetheart role.

S. O. S. Perils of the Sea

(Columbia Pictures—5303 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A MARINE melodrama which furnishes plenty of thrills and spectacular scenes in the way of rescues at sea, ships sinking and a love romance, with two brothers, one a designing villain, the other a "regular fellow," rivals for the heroine's hand. A fairly entertaining feature, but one that could have been greatly improved had the director exercised better judgment in developing the main theme of his story. He had a likely plot to start with but has sacrificed continuity smoothness to the "putting over" of exciting punches. Thus the narrative seems to consist merely of a series of detached episodes, stirring enough but failing to carry conviction as a whole. As it stands, the picture will pass O. K. for program purposes where audiences aren't too particular regarding logical sequences. Elaine Hammerstein does good work in the dual roles of mother and daughter, Robert Ellis fills the hero part in capable style, the support is adequate. Photography, especially marine shots, uniformly excellent.

THEME.. Marine melodrama. Little girl picked up at sea by two young brothers, fishermen, is reared by them to womanhood, becomes heiress to fortune, weds one of her rescuers.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Attractive marine shots. Big punch scene where flaming liner sinks and hero and heroine escape death. Thrills and fast action.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as exciting sea melodrama. Stress the romance and play up burning ship episode. Feature Elaine Hammerstein and Robert Ellis.

DRAWING POWER. O. K. for program purposes, not convincing enough for high-class trade.

SUMMARY. Marine melodrama with lots of spectacular punches. Plot weakened by bad continuity, due to poor directorial judgment. Romantic effects over-strained. Offers sufficient thrills to please a certain class of patrons.

THE CAST

Madame LaCoeur	Elaine Hammerstein
Rose LaCoeur	Elaine Hammerstein

PRESS NOTICE

ONE of the most spectacular marine melodramas ever filmed, "S. O. S. Perils of the Sea," is listed for its local premier at the ——— Theatre on ———. The heroine, a little child picked up by two young fishermen from a torpedoed vessel, grows to womanhood with them, is sought in marriage by both, turns out to be an heiress and weds the man she loves. Thrills all the way, the greatest of all being the scene where a liner burns and sinks in a terrific storm. Old Ocean at its worst, a series of nerve-racking situations and a tender romance.

Elaine Hammerstein is the fascinating heroine, supported by Robert Ellis and a cast of talented players.

CATCH LINES

A lost heiress to a huge fortune. A fisherman who loved and beast in human form that trailed them! A liner sinking in flames, men and women battling for life in icy waters, thrills by the score!

The Shadow of the Mosque

(Usa Film Distributors—5750 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

ALTHOUGH this picture presents a tale of love and adventure amid Arabian surroundings it isn't one of the "sheik" variety in the sense that sheik has come to be accepted by the movie fans. There is a sheik to be sure, but far from being a fascinating lover, he figures as an unprepossessing barbarian chieftain who continually stirs up trouble for the representatives of the British Government. As a love-maker, his tactics are of a rough-house kind not likely to find favor with the flapper movie contingent. The feature ought to give satisfaction in the program field, as it moves swiftly, combines effective thrills with pleasing romance, and is very well photographed, both desert and native town shots being realistically colorful. It is a French production, sponsored by Birtish players whose work is excellent, Stewart Rome a capable hero, Edmund Loewe and Lewis Anderson contribute clean-cut characterizations, Mary Odette appealing as Yuni, the girl in the case. Director Walter Hall deserves credit for his clever handling of the mob, battling scenes and skillfully maintained continuity.

THEME. Melodrama, Arabian locale. Hero British Government representative in native town, meets with many adventures opposing rebels, is finally rescued by troops and wins love of white girl brought up by Arabs.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Convincing atmosphere, realistic touches, good native types, skirmishing episodes, scene where British soldiers come to aid hero.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as sheik picture that is different from usual run. Stress the snappy action, the fighting, love affair and sensational climax.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for neighborhood and smaller houses.

SUMMARY. Strong in Oriental color and melodramatic swing. Tells good love story, provides surprise finish with double-edged suspense. Its realism and romantic urge should please most patrons.

THE CAST

Captain Richard Galt	Stewart Rome
Agha Hahmed, the Sheik	Lewis Anderson
Major Gordon Falconer	Alexander Mursk
Musa	Edmund Loewe
Yuni	Mary Odette

Author, Morris MacDougall. Director, Walter Hall.

SYNOPSIS. Captain Galt, sent as British Government representative to Arabian town, does much to relieve strain of military rule, wins favor of Musa, blind Koran teacher, and his daughter, Yuni, but incurs enmity of sheik Hahmed. Latter seizes Yuni and attacks British native troops. Yuni escapes to the governor's house where she and Galt are besieged and rescued by British infantry. Yuni turns out to be white girl, reared by Musa, and finds happiness with Galt.

All the employees of the Universal exchange in Albany are spending a bit more money for their Christmas presents this year, having won a cash prize of several hundred dollars in connection with the recent Cochrane month. H. C. Bissell, manager of the exchange, was in New York city last week, attending a conference of officials.

Several of the exchanges have received postcards during the last week or so from Ben Apple, former owner of the American and King theatres in Troy, and who is now selling real estate in Florida.

C. R. Halligan, of the Universal exchange, has a son by the name of Russell, who was one of the star performers in a home talent minstrel play given in Green Island last week.

There is a stiff fight on in Ilion at the present time over the question of Sunday motion picture shows and one that will be decided by the taxpayers of the village the latter part of the month. The village is a manufacturing one and the exhibitors there have always looked to Sunday business to help them over the week. If the theatres are forced to close on Sunday it will be a hard blow to the exhibitors.

Milwaukee

ELABORATE plans are being completed for the opening of the new Saxe's Retlaw Theatre at Fond du Lac, Wis., on Christmas Day. Bill Cuddy, senior press agent of the Saxe organization; Ed. Corcoran, exploitation manager for Paramount, and a representative of the First National exploitation department, are leaving this week for Fond du Lac, where they will take charge of "selling" the town on the new house. Details of the opening are in charge of Ed J. Weisfeldt, production manager of the Wisconsin Theater, Milwaukee, who is taking his entire staff to Fond du Lac to stage an immense opening production. The Retlaw will be the thirtieth house in the Saxe chain, and will be the storm center of the first direct contact with the Fischer Circuit, operating a string of houses in the central part of the state.

Picture houses in Milwaukee expect to do an immense New Year's Eve business due to the fact that all night clubs and cabarets have announced their intention of letting out their traditional Sylvestor parties. Having no "wet" places to go to, the public is expected to swarm the theaters, and big plans for special programs are already being made.

Atlanta

THE New York delegation of prime officials in the newly formed Publix Theatres Corporation reached Atlanta from Dallas early Thursday morning for a two-day conference with their district manager, and theatre managers of Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee, North Carolina and South Carolina.

Practically all the southern group arrived a few hours in advance of the New York delegation and had registered at the Henry Grady Hotel where the conference was held. The one important southern theater manager absent on this occasion was Manager Charles Branham of the Howard theatre, Atlanta, who had been called to Minneapolis late last week on account of the grave illness of his mother who is not expected to live.

Heading the New York party was Harry Marx, in charge of physical operation and personnel of the Publix Theatres Corporation. Mr. Marx, who has long been identified with Balaban & Katz, is one of the foremost authorities in his line. In addition to his other qualifications for this important post he possesses a magnetic personality that completely won the large group who heard him speak.

Included in the official delegation from New York were A. M. Botsford, director of advertising and publicity; A. D. Swanson, efficiency expert on operation of theatres; J. E. Mansfield, assistant to Mr. Marx; and Sam Dembow, Jr., who is in charge of buying pictures for the circuit.

While the conference served to outline to the men in the field—the district managers and theatre managers—the policies adopted by the newly formed organization that embraces both the Balaban & Katz circuit and the theatres operated by Famous Players-Lasky through its subsidiary, Southern Enterprises it was largely an inspirational gathering, and from all accounts it was eminently successful.

The meeting came to a close at noon Friday and the New York party left at 12:45 P. M. Most of the southern group left during the afternoon or evening and the few who remained over will return today.

The four district managers present were, J. J. Franklin, of Atlanta, who has supervision of Famous Players houses in Georgia and Alabama; Arthur Amm of Jacksonville, whose district is Florida; Frank H. Dowler, Jr., Chattanooga, of the Tennessee territory and Montgomery S. Hill of Charlotte, covering North and South Carolina.

The list of theatre managers attending includes: Georgia—F. J. Miller, city manager, Augusta; W. T. Murray, Rialto theatre, Atlanta; George Rea, city manager, Columbus; Montague Salmon, city manager, Macon; and M. L. Semon, Forsyth theatre, Atlanta. Florida—G. E. Brown, Palace theatre, Lakeland; John Carroll, Victory theatre, Tampa; Jess Clark, city manager, Jacksonville; George Connally, city manager, Palatka; George L. Denton, Sunset theatre, Ft. Lauderdale; M. F. Estes, Baird theatre, Gainesville; J. L. Grose, Aladdin theatre, Cocoa.

George Hoffman, Palace theatre, Lakeland; John Judge, Victoria theatre, New Smyrna; Guy Kenimer, Arcade theatre, Jacksonville; Harry Leach, city manager, Miami; J. L. Marentette, Milane Theatre, Sanford; W. J. Melvin, city manager, St. Petersburg; C. L. Morrison, Imperial Theatre, Jacksonville; A. R. Nininger, Dixie Theatre, Ocala; Harry Somerville, city manager, Daytona Beach; J. N. Treece, Rialto Theatre, Jacksonville; W. L. Whitehead, Republic Theatre, Jacksonville; and F. E. Williamson, Williamson Theatre, Winter Haven. Alabama — Rodney Bush, Galax Theatre, Birmingham; J. L. Cartwright, Lyric Theatre, Jackson; H. C. Farley, Empire Theatre, Montgomery; D. Roscoe Faunce, Strand Theatre, Birmingham; and Hugh J. Smart, city manager, Anniston. North Carolina—Harry Hardy, booker, Charlotte; Tom Holliday, Alhambra Theatre, Charlotte; Warren Irvin, Imperial Theatre, Charlotte; H. M. King, Strand Theatre, Asheville; Harry Lucas, city manager, Raleigh.

Ernest Morrison, Imperial Theatre, Asheville; T. L. Stelling, Plaza Theatre, Asheville; and H. L. Williamson, Superba Theatre, Raleigh. South Carolina—C. H. Amos, Carolina Theatre, Greenville; A. S. Grist, Rivoli Theatre, Greenville; John Hannon, Rex Theatre, Sumter; H. L. Jordon, Strand Theatre, Anderson; J. H. Stelling, city manager, Spartanburg; C. B. Stiff, Imperial Theatre, Columbia; and Oscar White, city manager, Greenwood. Tennesee—W. F. Brock. Bijou Theatre, Knoxville; W. E. Drumbar, Rivera Theatre, Knoxville; J. H. Everett, Palace and Princess Theatres, Maryville; Bert Jordon, Majestic Theatre, Memphis.

George W. Keys, city manager, Johnson City; W. G. League, Strand Theatre, Memphis; and E. R. Rogers, Tivoli Theatre, Chattanooga. Members of Southern Enterprises, Inc., who were present from headquarters in Atlanta are: A. C. Cowles, district booker; M. J. Mullin, purchasing agent; E. B. Whitham, assistant purchasing agent; O. D. Posey, projection department; S. E. Posey, organ department; Tom Braun, organ department; A. J. Jones, of the construction department; J. W. Baker, J. H. Hamlin, and V. H. Stansel, all of the accessories department; and D. R. Crenshaw, cashier.

M. A. Lightman has secured control of the Grand and Jefferson theatres here through the formation of a $25,000 corporation with Mr. Lightman as president and treasurer, C. L. Hackworth, former owner of both the Grand and Jefferson, as vice president, and R. Earl Smith as secretary. Jack Marshall has been appointed local manager of The Grand, Inc., and Mrs. C. L. Hackworth will have charge of the Jefferson, which is to immediately undergo a thorough overhauling.

The chain of theatres in which Mr. Lightman holds controlling interest numbers in addition to the Grand and Jefferson at Huntsville, the Majestic and Princess theatres, Eldorado, Ark.; Rialto theatre, Camden, Ark.; the Princess and Strand theatres, North Little Rock, Ark.; Plaza theatre, Little Rock, Ark.; Hillsboro theatre, Nashville, Tenn.; and the Grand theatre, Madison, Ga.

Charles G. Branham, manager of the Howard theatre in Atlanta, was called to his home in Minneapolis, Minn., very suddenly last week on account of the serious illness of his mother.

Ben Y. Cammack, a few weeks ago appointed branch manager of the Universal Film Exchanges, Inc., at Atlanta, coming to this city from Dallas, Texas, where he was a valued salesman on the staff of R. C. McIlheran, Dallas manager for Universal, has become thoroughly acclimated to his new surroundings, and is filling the place vacated by Ralph B. Williams in a splendid manner.

Ernest E. Geyer of the local Paramount organization, who returned to Atlanta last week after having taken the nuptial vows in Brooklyn on November 26th, will begin his activities as a salesman for that company on Monday.

Hank Hearn, manager of Liberty's Atlanta exchange, returned from Chattanooga, Tenn., Monday and reported to waiting friends that he found Fred Martin, confined in a hospital there, in great good spirits and evidently making fine progress on the road to recovery.

Earle E. Griggs, exploiteer for Universal in this territory, following his talk before the Better Films Committee in Jacksonville recently, will again step forward as a speechmaker next Friday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock when he will address the Woman's Club of Atlanta on "The Technical Details of Picture-Making."

Montgomery S. Hill, now of Charlotte, but formerly of Atlanta, paid his respects to Film Row this week when he came in for the conference of Famous Players-Lasky theatre men.

P. C. Williams, salesman for Universal, who has just returned from a selling trip to A. W. McNeal, at Gibson, Ga., reports that he sold Mr. McNeal the idea of calling his theatre the Universal.

Dave Love returned to Atlanta this week for one of his infrequent visits since he transferred his activities to Memphis.

Ned E. Depinet, newly appointed southern member of First National's sales cabinet, spent Monday in Atlanta holding a spirited get-together meeting with members of the sales staff and field men in the local First National exchange.

Charles Morrison of Jacksonville, Fla., was among the Florida unit of theatre men under the Famous Players banner, seen at the convention held here this week.

Earle E. Griggs' director of publicity for Universal, spent last week in Charlotte, N. C., and at Columbus, S. C.

E. J. Sparks returned early this week from a hunting trip near Waco, Texas, but tarried only a few hours in Atlanta. The sudden news of the tragic death of John Harris, who was killed in an automobile accident in Florida, took Mr. Sparks home by first train.

H. C. Farley of the Montgomery Enterprises, Montgomery, Alabama, and one of the best known theatre men in the entire south, was in Atlanta this week attending the convention of the theatre department of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

W. S. Mudd is back on the job in Birmingham following a delightful vacation at the hunting preserve near Waco, Texas, as the guest of E. J. Sparks.

Harry Leach who was a visitor on Film Row during the week, reports splendid progress on the new theatre in which he is jointly interested with Famous Players-Lasky in Miami. The new house, located on Flagler Street opposite the Hippodrome, is scheduled to open in February. It will seat 2,500.

H. L. Manning, of Manning and Wink, owners of the recently completed theatre in Athens, Tenn., was in town Tuesday. Mr. Manning purchased from Southern Theatre Equipment Company two projectors and several other important items of equipment for his new house, as yet unnamed.

R. H. Conway, cashier of the Universal Film Exchange, Inc., Atlanta branch, is president of the Universal Club of Atlanta, which counts among its members every employee of the local branch.

Lanning who was transferred to Denver from the Universal theatre, Kinema, Salt Lake City.

University Inn, Boulder's newest theatre, is rapidly approaching completion. The theatre will have a capacity of nine hundred seats and will be of the latest improvements throughout. It will be located near the campus of the University of Colorado on University avenue. A. G. Diaz, one of the owners of the Isis theatre, Boulder, is reported to be financing the enterprise.

H. D. McBride who has managed the new State theatre of Denver since its opening has tendered his resignation to Hal Horne, the Managing Director of the chain of theatres which includes the State, his resignation to become effective December 28, 1925. Mr. McBride has made a great number of close friends since living in Denver who regret the action he has taken and wish him the best of success in any work he undertakes. His successor has not yet been named.

James S. Hommell, Manager of Producers Distributing Corporation branch of Denver, made a hurried sales trip to Canon City this week. Charles R. Gilmour, Warner Bros. manager, also made a hurried trip to Fort Collins, but had some difficulty in returning owing to the vigilance of the speed cops around Loveland, Colorado. Ned Marin, General sales Manager for First National is a visitor in Denver this week. While here, he will hold a meeting of all salesmen of the local First National office.

Lou Marcus, District Manager for Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, was also a visitor at the local branch of his organization in Denver this week. He returned to Salt Lake City, Friday.

Exhibitors visiting Denver arranging bookings with exchanges for the past few days were J. E. Tompkins, owner and manager of the American theatre, Colorado Springs; Marie Goodhand of the American theatre, Kimball, Nebraska; Mrs. Gertrude McKay, owner and manager of the Big Horn theatre, Greybull, Wyoming; Mrs. W. R. Logan of the Rex theatre, Basin, Wyoming.

James Lynch and son, Jack, who manage all the theatres in Laramie, Wyoming, came to Denver on a business trip a few days ago incidentally taking in a big wrestling match while here. A. J. Hamilton of the Ivy theatre, Denver, has taken over the control and management of the new Mena theatre at Alameda and South Pearl streets.

Omaha

F. W. GEBHARDT, manager of the Pathe exchange, is the new president of the Omaha Film Board of Trade, succeeding F. M. De Lorenzo, manager of the Producers Distributing Corporation, who has been transferred to be manager of Producers in Milwaukee. Mr. Gebhardt was first vice-president. Mayer Monsky, one of the owners of Liberty Films, was advanced from second vice-president to first vice-president, and E. A. Bell, manager of Warner Brothers, was chosen second vice-president.

Albert Danke is the new manager of the Producers Distributing Corporation in Omaha, taking the place of Mr. De Lorenzo. Mr. Danke resigned his position with Warner Brothers in St. Louis to take the managership with Producers here.

L. H. Flynn, assistant to C. C. Pettijohn of the New York office of the Film Board of Trade, is in Omaha. His destination is said to be Graham, Missouri, and his business that of claiming as his bride a girl with whom he was associated in war work in Washington, D. C., during the recent war.

The Hostettler Amusement Company taken over the Strand and Odeon theatres at Marshalltown, Iowa, from the A. H. Blank syndicate, according to reports received here.

Among recent transfers of theatres in the Omaha territory are those of the Springfield, at Springfield, Nebr., from Lee Leflar to W. E. Dyer; the Rialto, Cozad, Nebr., from J. W. Armstrong to William Bolan; the Linwood at Pawnee City, Nebr., from A. Beams to Carl Bailey, and the Loeb at Galva, Iowa, from A. J. Loeb to a new owner whose name has not been announced.

Fire conditions in Omaha motion picture theatres are good, according to a report just filed with Governor Adam McMullen by John C. Trouton, state fire marshal. Mr. Trouton made an investigation of conditions upon the request of an Omaha city commissioner.

The fire marshal reported that the matter of overcrowding was a matter for police supervision.

A drawing contest succeeded wonderfully as exploitation for Pathe's "The Freshman" in Grand Junction, Colo., where it was shown by the Majestic theatre. Photo above shows lobby and frontal decorations. Drawings submitted in the contest were displayed on a board out in front,

New York and New Jersey

FOLLOWING the successful premiere of the Fabian, Paterson's new 4,000 seat playhouse, and probably the most important link in the big Fabian circuit, a well known group of exhibitors and exchange managers gathered in the grand ballroom of the Alexander Hamilton Hotel to attend a reception. It is well to mention here that in addition to building some of the finest Motion Picture theatres in this locality to Jacob Fabian also goes the credit for the construction of this hotel.

S. H. and Abe Fabian, ably assisted by Chas. Dooley the managing director of Fabian's Paterson Theatres, served as the reception committee.

Among the prominent exhibitor guests were H. O. Schwalbe and A. Sabolsky of Philadelphia, Michael J. O'Toole, Joseph Stern, Roth Brothers of Morristown, Harry Harris, Louis Gold, Harry Hecht, Herman Wallinbrink, Louis Blumenthal, Morris Kutinsky, Henry Bodger of Hoboken and Billy Stein of the Regent Theatre, Elizabeth, N. J.

Local exchange men who were in attendance included, Fabian's First National office force headed by J. C. Vergesslich, Milton Kussell of Famous Players, Joe Lee from the Fox Exchange, I. Schmertz, also of the Fox organization, A. Blumstein of Commonwealth, Morris Cohen, from the Capitol, Jules Sargent of the Vital Exchange. Louis Kutinsky of the "Big U," Chars. Stombaugh, Newark branch manager for Pathe, Ed Carrol, New Jersey man for Associated Exhibitors, Len Linton, Harry Thomas, Al Friedlander and Louis Phillips.

One of the highlights of the evening was Charlie Stombaugh's jovial personality. Charlie was seen here and there—any everywhere. This also goes for Len Linton. That the reception was a huge success is largely attested to by Eddie Carroll. Ed states that it generally costs him twenty cents to get to his home by 'bus. On this particular night he paid out six dollars for taxi fare.

Stanley Sobelson, proprietor of the Empire at Bayonne, N. J., is without his big Paige sedan at the present time unless he already has another delivered in the meantime. Last Friday night when the car was parked in front of his theatre, a five ton truck loaded with carbonic gas tanks, crashed into it and when Stanley looked things over, there was not much left that looked like an automobile. A new car will make a most acceptable Xmas present for Mr. Sobelson.

Louis Rosenblatt has started construction on his new 1,200 seat theatre at Hightstown, N. J. It will probably be completed during the summer of 1926. Other houses under the control of Mr. Rosenblatt are the Lyceum and Plaza at Bayonne and the Star and New Plaza, Staten Island.

J. C. Vergesslich, of the Fabian First National Office, is in receipt of a Xmas post-card from Bill Fait, who is the General Manager of the First National branch exchanges in Mexico. Mr. Fait will be remembered as the former manager of the Eastman Theatre at Rochester, N. Y.

Announcement in these columns a week or two ago to the effect that the National M. P. T. O. had moved into thenr new suite of offices at 745-7th Avenue, was very much premature. However, they are all fitted out and are only awaiting the installation of telephone service.

The Ritz Theatre, Eastern Parkway and Fulton Street, Brooklyn, formerly operated by Harry Lightstone, has been taken over by Antonio De Lucia. Mr. De Lucia will reopen the Ritz the latte part of this week.

Goldfarb and Leiman, who have been operating the Gates Theatre at Coney Island, have definitely closed that house. Mr. Leiman will continue to keep open the Eagle Theatre at 43d Street and 16th Avenue, Brooklyn.

The Central Theatre, 431 Central Avenue, Brooklyn, has been sold by Secretary Phillips of the Brooklyn M. P. T. O. to a former Cleveland exhibitor.

President Joseph M. Seider, Isidore Seider and Mrs. Isidore Seider paid a visit last Sunday to Joe's two youngsters who are attending school at Harrison, N. Y. Both of the boys are making remarkable progress in their studies.

Joe Hornstein, of the Howell's Cine Equipment Company, has recently taken a lease of 18,000 square feet of space in the Embassy Theatre building. The new headquarters of this ever-expanding equipment company will be five times the size of the old place at the corner of Seventh Avenue and 49th St.

Louis Rosenthal, President of the Louis Rosenthal Enterprises of New Jersey, has been on a two weeks visit to Florida. It is rereported that Mr. Rosenthal has been looking over Florida real estate.

Henry Suchman, General Manager of the Suchman Brothers Enterprises, is another prominent local exhibitor who is reported as making very substantial clean up in Florida land deals. Mr. Suchman has been down there for the past two months.

As Howell's Cine Equipment Company keeps on expanding, likewise does Dave Solomon, the fast stepping salesman of that organization. Dave has recently blossomed out with a brand new Nash Victoria Sedan.

Matthew Chrystmos started the breaking of ground for two new theatres last week. One at Frog Neck, Yonkers, and the other at 174th St., Bronx. Mr. Chrystmos expects to have both of them ready at the same time.

The Portchester Theatre, Portchester, N. Y., is almost complete and is expected to be ready for the opening about January 15th.

Bratter and Pollack's New Roosevelt Theatre at Newark will also hold its opening about the middle of January. The Roosevelt is a 2,000 seat house.

Weingarten and Schoener have sold the Roosevelt Theatre, now under the couse of construction at Northern Boulevard and 160th Street, Flushing, to Hy Gainsboro. The property is 100 x 260 and was held at $500,000. It is expected that the theatre will be completed about February 15th.

Detroit

RAY P. HARPER, new salesman for First National in Northern Michigan territory, started out this week, full of pep.

Tom Eland, who operates the Regent theatre in Grand Rapids, has made his house a combination of pictures and vaudeville. Tom just returned from New York where he has been booking talent.

Wallie Baker, Charlie Holden, and Geo. Ranshaw are three new men on the sales staff of Fox.

Ned Marin, general sales manager for First National, is expected to arrive in Detroit this week to conduct a sales meeting at the local exchange.

J. E. Ryder, connected with the Detroit Paramount exchange for the past nine years, has been promoted to sales director at the Chicago office.

O. W. Bolle, Paramount branch manager, all his salesmen, the booker, and ad sales manager, have gone to Chicago to attend a sales conference.

The new manager of the beautiful Grand Riveria theatre is K. O. Renaud. Mr. Renaud was connected in Detroit with Paramount as exploiteer. No successor has been appointed by Paramount as yet.

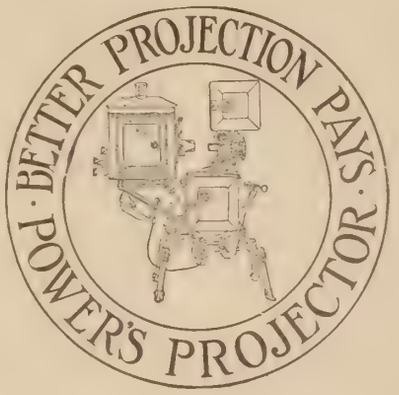
Frank Stuart, manager of Producers Distributing Corp., is honeycombing the territory for contracts. He was out all last week making personal appearances among theatre owners. Frank is working very hard, for the wants to be one of three managers chosen by the Home Office for a trip to Hollywood.

H. C. Trowbridge, who has been handling exploitation in Michigan for Fox, returned to New York last week.

According to a letter, Frank Stuart, manager of P. D. C., received from Henry Zapp, his former salesman and assistant, everything is going along very nicely at the P. D. C. office in Indianapolis, where Henry is now manager.

Sherman and Peterson, operating the Atlantic theatre in Atlantic, Mich., have sold out to J. W. Mosher.

Bane Dean has purchased the Family theatre in Onaway, Mich.



Seattle

PRACTICALLY every exchange executive from the combined offices of Seattle and Portland last week attended the annual joint meeting of the Flm Boards of Trade of those cities, held at Longview, Washington, a central point between the two cities. Many constructive measures were brought out at the meeting and are being developed by suitable committees for the benefit of both cities.

In the past, it has been the policy of the Boards of Trade to let the joint meeting be attended by salesmen and bookers, but the plan was changed this season and accordingly each city will stage a separate function for its sales and booking staff during the coming holiday season.

Announcement was made in Seattle, Wash., las week by L. O. Lukan, manager of the Universal Film exchange, of his resignation with that company and his acceptance of the office of Western assistant sales director with the First National Company, with headquarters in San Francisco. Mr. Lukan was formerly associated with First National as branch manager in Minneapolis, having gone to Seattle for Universal only a few months ago.

Jim Reilly, former special salesman for Universal in San Francisco and Los Angeles territories, succeeds Mr. Lukan as branch manager in Seattle. He arrived there recently with Jack L. Schlaifer, Western division manager, who installed him in office and is at present working there with him in an advisory capacity.

Fabian Launches Finest Theatre in Circuit in Paterson, N. J.

Palatial Cinema Is Twentieth In Flourishing Chain

JACOB FABIAN, owner and operator of an important chain of theatres in Northern New Jersey, prominently affiliated with First National and widely recognized in the industry as one of the outstanding figures of the theatre branch, launched his most ambitious theatrical enterprise with the public opening of the Fabian Theatre in Paterson on Tuesday, December 15th.

A formal house warming was held the preceding evening, when representatives of all branches of the industry and invited guests of the public assembled in this new palace of motion pictures to pay tribute to its moving spirit and celebrate with him an auspicious occasion.

The Fabian—to offer a few of the facts indicative of its architectural and structural qualities—was built at a cost of about $2,000,000. The structure houses offices as well as the theatre, which has a seating capacity of 4,000. The seats are distributed between the main floor and the single balcony—of the cantalever type, the entire auditorium being unobstructed by supporting columns or pillars.

This magnificent and finely equipped theatre is the twentieth in the chain which Mr. Fabian has built up in a span of nine years. His first enterprise in the theatre field was the Regent, also in Paterson, and built in 1914. The opening of the Fabian closely follows the public inauguration of the beautiful Mosque Theatre, which Mr. Fabian operates in Newark.

Associated with him in these operations are his two sons—A. M. Fabian and S. H. Fabian.

The architecture of the Fabian is of the Spanish and Italian Renaissance designs: Its interior decoration and design presents an appearance marked by its observance of taste in the treatment of form and color and achieving a note of comfort and warmth. The theatre proper is decorated mainly with ornamental plaster-done in gilt, tans and relieving vivid hues. The draperies are mainly a soft blue tone.

There is a stage large enough for elaborate presentations—it has a depth of about fifty feet and a height of 65 to the gridiron above the stage. A mezzanine is one of the features which contribute to the spaciousness and convenience of the theatre. There is a foyer, 112 feet long with an average width of 15 feet—an outer lobby fifteen by twenty-five, and an inner lobby of large size done in golden-vein marble, with a richly coffered ceiling. Bronze doors lead into the inner lobby.

In equipment, the Fabian offers the newest developments. The lighting system is an elaborate one. It is a three-color system, employing the indirect plan—except for a handsome center chandelier suspended from the elliptical dome in the theatre proper. The front section of the theatre forms a huge arched grill, 100 feet in length and 30 feet wide. The center portion has three archways separated by pilasters, while the rear section is of a more simple design.

The heating and ventilating system employs mushroom ventilators, placed under the seats, in the orchestra, and registers installed in the steps of the balcony. The system is designed to transmit 30 cubic feet of purified, warmed or cooled air into the theatre every minute.

The projection booth is equipped with three Power's projectors. The booth proper is 30 feet long, and there is a rewinding room fifteen feet in length. It is located on the second mezzanine level.

The organ is a Wurlitzer four-manual console instrument, equipped with an elevating device and located in the orchestra pit. The pit will accommodate forty musicians. An orchestra of more than twenty pieces will be maintained.

The policy of the theatre will be feature photoplays supplemented by elaborate stage numbers and musical presentations. Charles L. Dooley is the managing director of the new house. Frank Rehsen is director of the orchestra and Warren Yates chief organist, with Dorothy Hart as associate organist.

The formal opening was a notable occasion. The Fabian was inaugurated with impressive ceremonies at which the Mayor of Paterson expressed appreciation of the efforts Mr. Fabian has made to introduce a new forward movement in the community life of the city. Mr. A. M. Fabian acted as master of ceremonies. He introduced his father, who made a short address; Harry Haines, publisher of the Paterson Evening News; Joseph Wilson, President of the Paterson Chamber of Commerce and others.

PROFITS NEXT SUMMER

TO-DAY we visited one of the world's most interesting cathedals of amusement, the new Madison Square Garden, with its twenty thousand seats tier upon tier completely surrounding an arena whose circumference is one-tenth of a mile.

This enormous structure with its record breaking seating capacity and its hundred and one other modern improvements was impressive. But the feature that centered our attention most was eight complete air conditioning equipments installed near the roof. Tex Rickard is apparently out to best the slump on indoor amusement due with next summer's torrid weather, and it looks like he would win.

These elaborate preparations to permit the use of the Garden only occasionally during the hot season brought to us forcibly, by way of contrast, the unusual merits similar preparations would mean to theatres where all means are exhausted each summer to keep up a good attendance day in and day out.

Last summer the exceedingly gratifying results obtained by several theatres where an installation of atmospheric conditioning apparatus was in operation prove the value of this feature for keeping ledger figures out of the red. With the rapid growing recognition of the value of controlling weather in places of indoor recreation, it follows that every exhibitor will find it well worth his while to investigate the probable worth of atmospheric conditioning equipment for his particular theatre.

Perhaps bringing up this subject now seems untimely. But it takes time and study to determine the best type of installation for each individual house. Also the installing of the equipment itself and getting it functioning properly is not a matter of a week or two. Exhibitors will do well by taking action now.

We are under the impression that the subject of theatre cooling and air conditioning is not thoroughly familiar to the majority of our readers. This department therefore, gladly extends its cooperation in securing any information on this subject or supplying a list of reliable manufacturers of this equipment.

Designing and Publishing the Theatre House Organ

By Louis P. Kramer

Director of Publicity and Advertising, Lubliner & Trinz Theatres, Inc.

A GOOD house organ is a direct and economical method of acquainting the public with a theatre's product and policies and influencing them to support motion pictures. It helps to create more interest in the entire industry. It does the missionary work of a good salesman, as it creates confidence for both films and the theatre in the mind of the public.

To produce a house organ of real value, it is first necessary to make it of interest to readers. It must also be made up in an attractive manner and not merely "thrown" together. The theatre magazine or paper should be well illustrated. Pictures are the best medium possible to sell pictures. Pictures tell the story quickly. They have come to be accepted as a most important part of present day life as is indicated by the rapid growth of the New York Daily News, the roto sections of Sunday papers and the picture sections of many dailies. There is also another excellent reason why a theatre house organ should be well illustrated—the constant repetition of illustrations of the various stars, interests the readers in the personalities of these stars, and makes them desire to see the films they work in, thus aiding the box office.

The theatre house organ should contain about half advertising matter. No effort should be made to conceal its mission. But, the illustrations, stories, humor and cartoons, together with the make-up, should make the magazine so readable that few would throw it away. The interest of the reader should always be kept in mind, for if the paper contains too much "shop talk"—too much theatre propaganda, it will not be read, and therefore defeats its own purpose. It is for this reason that the magazine should contain some humor. Humor will bring readers to a publication who otherwise would not bother reading it.

In the accompanying article, Mr. Kramer points out the main items of consideration in designing and publishing a theatre house organ—which is primarily a publication and therefore must adhere to the rules of all publications that the main object is to capture reader interest.

The illustrated tabloid newspaper which the Lubliner & Trinz organization in Chicago issues in connection with its theatre activities has achieved almost instant success. Offering a tremendous circulation, the organ has obtained valuable advertising accounts of regular merchants and dealers. One contract recently signed was for a total of $36,000 worth of space in the L. & T Illustrated News, made by a large department store in Chicago. The paper has a production cost of $1,700 a week, an item which makes it imperative that big advertisers become buyers of space in it.

One great mistake is often made in modeling a house organ after the publication of a big company. A house organ serving the public, should not be confused with a publication serving the employees of some large concern. The house organ going to the public should carry little or no personal publicity regarding the employees. Where the magazine or paper is intended especially for the patron, the matter published must be of a somewhat different character from that publication intended for salesmen and other employees of a big company. The reason for this is that the public will not have the same interest in the affairs of a company that an employee should have, and the house organ must be of such a character that it will command attention and create interest.

There is no reason why a theatre house organ should not be self-supporting. It is an ideal medium for advertisers, and if the right sales argument is used, the paper will not only pay its own way, but yield a big profit.

To concerns desiring to reach "the buying public," a motion picture theatre publication is a most effective and attractive medium. There is an association between the graphic pictures in a theatre house organ, and the moving pictures on the screen, which creates an interest in the publication, that cannot be built up by any other medium. The constant repetition of leading film stars on the screen increases the reader's interest in the theatre house organ. The theatre patrons get to know the stars and read about them with more interest than otherwise. The theatre publication, associated as it is with the screen and personages of human interest, gets genuine reader attention—all of which is shared by the accompanying advertising.

The theatre house organ should be printed within the week of its delivery, so as to be able to keep in close touch with film events, thereby being able to give timely information as well as entertainment.

How An Exhibitor Made His Theatre a Community Institution

A Good-Will and Contact Department Pays Dividends

By Anna Aiken Patterson

DOWN in Savannah, where the original Georgia colony was founded by General James Edward Oglethorpe in 1773, there thrives today the finest example of community theatre that the South can claim—a theatre that through its consisently fine and intelligent participation in civic and community affairs during the four brief years of its history has come to be recognized as an institution.

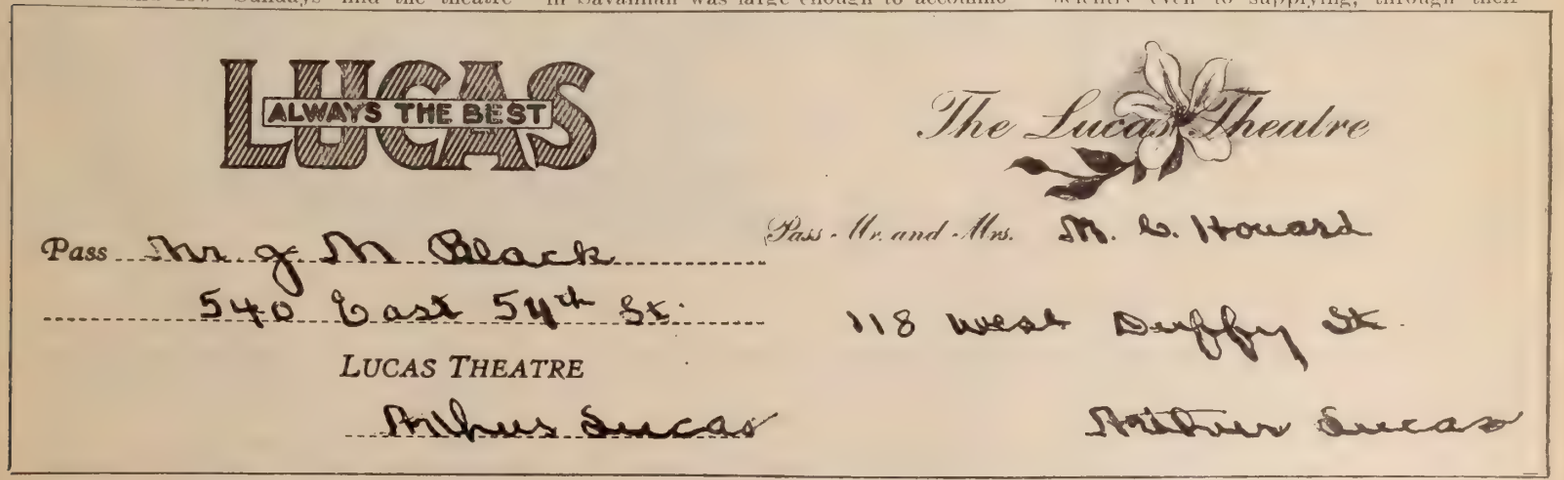
This institution which plays an important part in the recreational, cultural, educational, civic and religious life of the community is the Lucas theatre, as any man, woman or child in Savannah could tell you. It was promoted by Arthur Lucas who has been its guiding genius from the beginning.

The essence of his entire plan was to make the Lucas theatre in purpose and meaning a community institution. And he began the task with a good-will campaign that is the very keystone of any genuine community enterprise. Begun as a campaign the work has gone on without let or hindrance until it has resolved itself into a system that is as nearly perfect as such an instrument can be.

The good-will work, which is public relations under another name, includes many activities: It greets every child born in the city with a letter of congratulation and welcome; it provides each new-comer to the city with a personal greeting from the management of the Lucas and a guest card admitting the new-comer to the Lucas for one week; it signalizes the visits of all distinguished guests and provides a guest card as an invitation to "the most inviting motion picture theatre in the South;" it sends birthday cards to thousands of Savannah citizens each card constituting admission for two to one performance; it tenders the Lucas theatre for concerts, lectures, religious services, community celebrations—all without charge.

Sunday being a closed day for theatres in Savannah, as in most southern cities, the Lucas is available for any worth while community group that seeks its accommodation. And few Sundays find the theatre without some special event.

Arthur Lucas



A notable example of the working of the good-will policy finds expression in an incident surrounding the coming of Gypsy Smith to conduct a religious revival in Savannah. Although such revivals bringing a community to a high tension of religious fervor, usually take heavy toll from theatre patronage, Mr. Lucas took a generous view of the situation, and greeted Gypsy Smith on his arrival in Savannah with a letter tendering the use of the Lucas theatre for the Sunday services which the evangelist had designed to embrace all denominations.

The reaction of Gypsy Smith and his associates to that suggestion was surprising and gratifying. It happens that no church in Savannah was large enough to accommodate the Sunday congregations that Gypsy Smith's revival assembled, and no other auditorium was either as commodious or as desirable as the Lucas. So the offer was cheerfully and promptly accepted. But the surprise came when near the conclusion of his meetings the evangelist commended the amusement enterprises of Savannah, saying the manner and spirit in which they conducted their theatres made them worthy of the support of the church people of Savannah.

Another example of the application of the good-will work is furnished in the instance of the reception that greeted officials and employees of the Standard Oil Company when the company installed a district office in Savannah the first of this year. Several days prior to the date fixed for the arrival en masse of the new staff the management of the Lucas obtained a complete list of officials and employees who would comprise the party to Savannah. And when their train pulled into Savannah on the morning of New Year's day two uniformed attendants from the Lucas theatre met the train and handed to each member of the party a personal letter signed by Arthur Lucas, and welcoming the new-comers to Savannah. Without comment there was enclosed with each letter a guest card inviting the holder to enjoy the courtesies of the Lucas theatre for one week.

In a similar way the Lucas theatre greeted the arrival of several hundred officials and employees of the Seaboard Air Line Railway when that company moved its general offices from Norfolk and Portsmouth to Savannah. However the management went further in this case and inserted in the Savannah dailies an advertisement welcoming the Seaboard people to Savannah and putting the management at their service in finding homes, apartments, rooms, board and servants.

What is more to the point, the new-comers to whom the advertisement was directed accepted the offer of service, and the special department handling this good-will work fulfilled the theatre management's promises efficiently even to supplying, through their health department with a record of a child's birth, and its name, within five days following birth. Each morning the theatre's card index is brought up-to-date with the addition of all births reported, and immediately a letter of congratulation and welcome is addressed to the new arrival. The management asks that the letter be held until the child is old enough to attend his first theatre, when it is to be presented for admission.

A similar record of marriages is kept in a card index file, and letters of felicitation are sent to all newly-married couples, with a guest card which constitutes admission for two to the Lucas for one week. Since the Lucas theatre issues no annual passes these special invitations have a real meaning to the recipient.

One of the most effective contacts is that formed through sending birthday greeting cards to several thousands of Savannah residents. This is perhaps the largest individual card index the Contact and Goodwill department has built.

It was accomplished with the aid of insurance companies, industrial insurance agencies, through school children, and through teachers. The teachers furnish the information concerning the birthdays of the pupils, with full names and addresses; the children furnish the same information for their parents; and the insurance companies provide the data for all their policy-holders.

These birthday cards besides carrying an appropriate greeting, signed by Arthur Lucas, include a line inviting the holder to come and bring a guest to the Lucas theatre in honor of his birthday.

The effect of all these letters and greetings is to make each person receiving them feel that Mr. Lucas is personally aware of his birthday, his arrival in Savanah, or his visit to the city. And it is that personal touch, linked indelibly with the theatre, that gives the system its greatest value.

In this instance its value is intensified by the fact that Mr. Lucas, though now making his residence in Atlanta as he has done for many years, is a native of Savannah, and hundreds of business men who receive his birthday greetings marvel that he should remember their birthdays after all these years.

ANOTHER thing that adds to its value is that the department reaches a class of people not accustomed to such attention. Instead of confining his mailing list to what would be termed the "discriminating patronage" Mr. Lucas sees to it that it reaches the masses.

A few days ago when Mr. Lucas was making one of his frequent week-end trips to Savanah the Pullman conductor, whose name, by the way, Mr. Lucas could not for the moment recall, came by the smoker to thank Mr. Lucas for his birthday card and the invitation to the Lucas theatre. But what puzzled the conductor was how Mr. Lucas knew it was his birthday.

"We manage to keep in touch with our friends," Mr. Lucas replied, "and you are one of our best friends." Just to what extent these greetings are accepted as personal messages was indicated by a little lad whom Mr. Lucas encountered in a drug store adjoining the theatre. The youngster kept edging up close to Mr. Lucas who asked presently,

"What is your name, son?"

And the lad answered, "George Baughn," adding proudly, "You know my sister Ethel."

At this Mr. Lucas was nonplussed for a moment, but before he could reply the boy explained,

"You always send her a birthday card and invite her to your theatre."

It was the power of the card index and the personally signed greeting.

Today the Lucas theatre holds a proud place among the institutions of Savannah, of Georgia and the South. The house has sold itself to Savannah—and it has helped to sell Savannah to all Georgia, for every piece of advertising written in the name of the Lucas theatre carries an institutional touch that makes Savannah proud of its heritage, and Georgia proud of Savannah.

It took months of patient, organized effort to build this asset of good-will. Mr. Lucas admits that the department did not make a dent for the first two months, and that it was a year before he felt it getting definite reaction.

"NOR could desultory effort have accomplished this end," Mr. Lucas adds. "If we had given up for one month all our previous work would have been lost. But we had confidence in the plan, we had the patience to organize the system, and the courage to spend the money to operate it. And it costs money to maintain our Contact and Good-Will department. Two efficient employees devote their time exclusively to this work. Their various card index systems run into tens of thousands. But goodwill is the greatest asset a theatre can enjoy —and the system is maintaining good-will."

More than 11,000 letters of appreciation, acknowledgment, and commendation have come back to the Lucas theatre since the good-will activity was set in motion. And every letter is catalogued and filed.

Dear Mrs. Sheen :

When you have occasion to entertain again may we not suggest that you give a thought to the Lucas Theatre?

As you know we show the pick of the pictures. We would be glad to arrange for the proper seating of your guests.

If you desired you could have them meet on our mezzanine floor where they would be comfortable.

If you will phone 716, Manager Evins will take pleasure in assisting you in arranging for a theatre party at the Lucas. Won't you keep this in mind?

Cordially,

A sample personal letter used by the Lucas theatre in Savannah. It is addressed to a woman whose name appeared in the society columns of the local paper as a hostess.

Outlines Plan for Arranging Prologue and Supporting Program

AS director of music and productions for the Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Jack Arthur, of Toronto, has done some real creative work in motion picture entertainment in Toronto; he is still doing it, and the present season is rich in productive effort along the lines of presentations and musical programs.

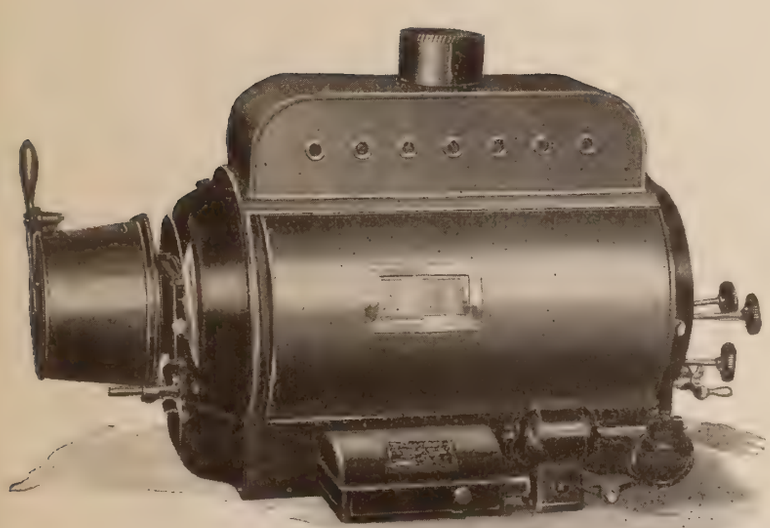
In speaking of prologues for big pictures, Jack Arthur says: "The idea of a prologue or prelude to a motion picture is to create atmosphere, to put the public in the right frame of mind to enjoy and appreciate the feature. There are several types of prologues, two of which stand out as more important, because they are most familiar and are most often used.

"The simplest prolongue is the one that is national in character, that is an act which typifies Spanish, Italian, Russian or any one sort of people with their racial characteristics and their national music.

"To catch the basic idea of a photoplay is quite another matter; usually I resort to allegory to put over my idea and a specific instance of this is an original prologue which I arranged at the Toronto Regent theatre a few years ago.

"The picture was 'Forbidden Fruit,' a modern story, one of the first of the big Cecil De Mille spectacles; it occurred to me to reproduce on the stage the Garden of Eden by means of an ingenious cut-out, showing the Garden, with the Tree of Knowledge and a single apple hanging from it in the centre of the stage.

"When the curtain was raised, the stage was in complete darkness; a reader's voice was heard reciting the first three stanzas of the Book of Genesis, the rest of the story I took from Milton's 'Paradise Lost'; as the lights came gradually up showing the cut-out behind the gauze, you saw Eve (portrayed by a dancer) being tempted, her consequent fall and the unhappy results."



"Sometimes it takes five or six hours just to arrange the lighting for such prologues as 'Four Indian Love Lyrics,' 'Moonlight Kisses,' prologue to 'The Covered Wagon,' but I get my kick out of seeing audiences appreciate these little acts which mean so much to me.

"Before being satisfied with my program," says Mr. Arthur, "I always go through two News Reels, cutting out the dull parts, leaving in only the most interesting, those with the most entertainment value, then we see that the music synchronises. In arranging the music for pictures we look at the feature, then figure out the tempo, counting in bars instead of minutes.

"I always try to catch the lighter vein and cut out the morbid or heavy moments in a picture; I try to catch the punch or the climax of the action, then work back so many bars or measures until I get the vital punch in the music to exactly coincide with that of the picture. The principal theme in the picture usually runs through the musical score; the orchestration is worked out on Tuesday of each week, perfected on the following days, building up the continuity until the score is perfect, the musical arrangement complete. Themes are heavy for screen tragedy or light and airy for comedies; the love theme in the romantic photoplay is, of course, the most popular with musicians and audience alike."

Make A Great Product Greater

Forecast for 1926 Theatre Construction

Indications are for Another Record Year; $175,000,000 for 1645 Houses

EACH year, for the past five years, the Architectural Forum has conducted an extensive survey thru architects and builders. to determine the amount of building construction contemplated for the ensuing year. This survey includes theatres inasmuch as this type of building is listed as one of the leading classes in this country. Furthermore. to lend authenticity to the figures compiled by the Forum. it is of interest to know that during the five year period that that organization has made the survey, the actual figures shown at the end of the year were very nearly the same as those predicted, and in all cases conservative.

Architectural Forum's building survey and forecast for 1926 follows in part:

Review of 1925 Building Construction

In view of the fact that The Forum Forecast for 1926 indicates another six billion dollar building year, probably equal to the record-breaking activity of 1925. it will be interesting to review briefly the building activity of the year 1925 in order that later comparisons may be clear. As this article goes to press the figures for the year 1925 indicate that approximately six and one-half billion dollars were spent this year for new building construction in the United States.

At the beginning of the year 1925 all conditions indicated that this year would probably equal 1924. which established a record up to that time. but no one anticipated completely the amazing volume to which the buildings totals have climbed. Records were broken everywhere during 1925 as will be seen by an examination of the accompanying chart, which shows the total value and volume of new building in 1925 as compared with each year since 1920, and also indicates the trend of building costs, commodity costs and real estate transfers in the United States.

Everyone connected with or interested in the building construction industry knows of the phenomenal activity which was apparent during the year 1925. Owing to the limitations of space it is not possible to present here the full details of last year's activity. but the great interest of the building fraternity today is expressed in the question. "What will occur in 1926"?

Probable Building Total for 1926

The accompanying table indicates the anticipated expenditures for new buildiings during the year 1926. divided into six geographical divisions of the United States. This tabulation shows the amazing total of $5,584,782.500. which will pass over the boards of architects and into actual construction during the year 1926. In addition to this vast sum to be spent for building materials and labor there must be considered the fact there is considerable building not developed from architects' plans. probably totaling another half-billion dollars.

Thus it is predicted that 1926 will be another six billion dollar building year with certain changes in the relative proportions of activity in building types and districts as explained in the following paragraphs and tables.

Each year the grand total of The Forum forecast is broken up into percentage showing the anticipated activity in new building construction for each of the 19 building types in the six established geographical divisions of the United States. By comparing these percentages for 1925 and 1926 it is possible to ascertain the changing public demand for new buildings and to establish for each district the relative activity which may be expected.

Changes in Public Demand for New Buildings

The first interesting comparison is to learn what, if any, shifting of public demand has occurred in building requirements for the following six geographical divisions of the United States:

1. Northeastern States, including Maine, New Hampshire. Vermont. Massachusetts. Rhode Island, Connecticut.
2. North Atlantic States, including New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia.
3. Southeastern States, including Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida.
4. Southwestern States, including Kentucky, West Virginia, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas.
5. Middle States, including Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas.
6. Western States, including Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Nevada, Idaho, Washington, Oregon, California.

The following table shows a comparison of public demand for new buildings in 1925 with that of 1926 for each of the six districts indicated above. In other words, a comparison of the relative demand for new buildings in each district for 1926 as compared with 1925. The changes in these percentages forecast the changes of construction activity from a geographical viewpoint.

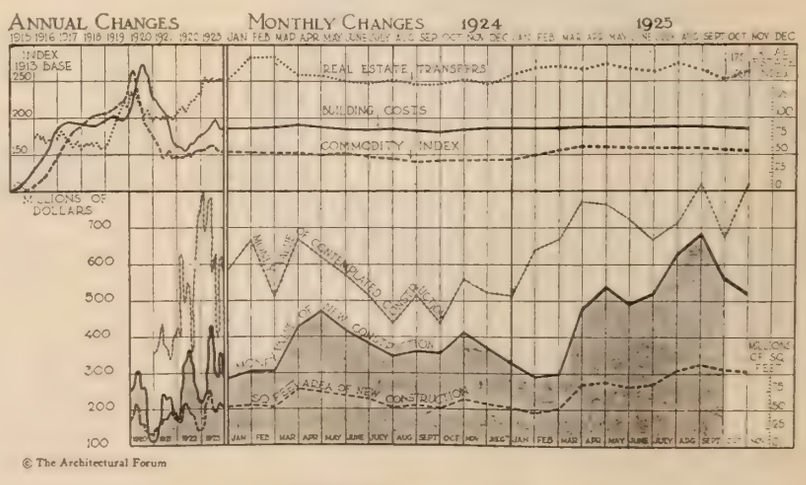
Changes of Construction Activities

	1925	1926
1. Northeastern States	8.4%	8.1%
2. North Atlantic States....	36.3%	36.6%
3. Southeastern States	3.6%	5.9%
4. Southwestern States	6.3%	6.4%
5. Middle States	32.4%	31.4%
6. Western States	12.9%	11.6%

The following table gives a comparison of the activity in theatre building in each of the six divisions and the entire United States:

	Theatres	P.C. of Total Dist. Demand 1925
Northeastern States		5.8
North Atlantic States		2.
Southeastern States		2.8
Southwestern States		2.7
Middle States		2.6
Western States		3.4

There will be constructed in the field of new buildings about:



Theatres	1,645
Schools, large	1,742
Schools, small	2,156
Community and Memorial Buildings.	1,104
Churches	3,160
Welfare, Y. M. C. A., K. of C., etc.	670
Club and Fraternal Buildings.....	2,170
Public Buildings	972

(Other classifications than theatres are included from the report for manufactures of equipment.—Ed. note.)

The total expenditure on theatre construction for 1926 in the United States is $174,457,500. (This figure is exclusive of sites, equipment, etc.) Divided according to geographical division the sections are apportioned as follows:

Northeastern States	$ 7,000,000
North Atlantic States.....	26,462,500
Southeastern States	6,517,500
Southwestern States	10,490,000
Middle States	99,632,500
Western States	23,755.000

(Note the states grouped under these divisional headings as given in preceding part of this article.—Ed.)

The Building Situation at a Glance

The chart shown here has been developed for the purpose of showing at a glance the situation in the building field at present and during the past few years by indicating the following components:

1. Index line showing relative number of realty transfers.
2. The index line showing the variation in building costs since 1915.
3. The index line showing the variation in general commodity costs since 1915.
4. A graphic record of the monthly totaled values of plans filed in the United States since 1919.
5. A graphic record of the monthly totals of contracts let in new construction in the United States since 1919.
6. A graphic record of the monthly totals of the volume of new building in the United States since 1919 as measured in square feet.

This information is developed from the following sources of data:

The FORUM record of building costs; reports of the United States Department of Commerce; reports of the F. W. Dodge Corporation; reports of Engineering News-Record, and from the Natl. Assn. of Real Estate Boards.

Standardized Screen Brightness Part V

STRANGE as it may seem, while present activity centers in establishing a standard brightness for motion picture theatres in the country, that after all, is far from being the true problem in this matter of preventing over-illumination.

In many respects, use of the term "Standard Screen Brightness" is unfortunate, since the thing that is desired after all, is a limitation placed upon the total amount of radiated energy passing through the aperture. Use of a standard screen intensity for projection purposes in all theatres of the country would impose such a limitation on the radiated energy passing through the film if certain conditions were the same in all the theatres. Otherwise, it would fall short of bringing about the desired results.

Difficult Factors

Now the three principal factors which, so far, have rendered the term "Standard Screen Brightness" meaningless are those of film density, type of screen and projection distance. As long as the present wide variations in these factors continue throughout the exhibiting field, the work of placing screen intensities on a common basis must, perforce, come to a virtual standstill.

It is true that were all the theatres, or at least a majority of them, to agree to the use of a certain standard intensity, much good would be done, since over-illumination of the screen at least would be eliminated. This factor of over-illumination of the screen was held by many persons to be the problem to be solved in attaining a safe constant illumination of the film in all theatres, but the problem is hardly that. The item of projection distance really forms the stumbling block.

Screen Brightness in Terms of Energy

For the benefit of those readers who fail to see the relation between brightness and energy the following brief description is given.

The light incident on a motion picture screen (or any other object, for that matter) when illuminated is evidenced by rendering the surface of the screen bright. We see all objects either through a difference in color, or through a difference in brightness, or both.

The intensity of this light on the screen is measured in foot-candles and one square foot of screen area illuminated evenly to an intensity of one foot-candle represents one lumen of light.. The lumen, therefore, is a measure of light quantity so that the total screen area illuminated (in square feet) multiplied by the average foot-candle intensity will give the total quantity of light on the screen measured in lumens.

Generated Light Required

The light on the screen represents useful light and forms only a small portion of the total amount generated by the light source. Under the best of conditions, only five per cent of the light initially generated at the source appears on the screen in the form of useful light, the remainder is wasted.

Thus, in order to project, say 1,000 lumens (equivalent to about a 45 ampere D. C. arc with condensers) on the screen, it would be necessary to generate 20,000 lumens at the light source. Now of all the electrical energy actually used by a projection light source, only about 10 per cent in the case of an ordinary arc, and about 8 per cent in the case of Mazda, is visible in the form of light (light, by the way, is not visible), the remainder of the energy is changed to heat, mostly, a small percentage being in the form of ultra-violet rays. This does not take into account that electrical energy lost in control devices such as rheostats, transformers, feed wires, etc., but only that used in the source itself.

In other words, the most efficient source has a mechanical efficiency, as it is called, of but 10 per cent.

In terms of screen light, therefore, this means that under the best conditions only one-half of one per cent of the electrical energy is placed on the screen in the form of useful light. The other 99½ per cent is wasted. It should be apparent from this that Volstead is really behind the times, since his idea is by no means either new or original.

Power Required for Screen Illumination

The light efficiency of a light source is measured in lumens per watt of electrical energy. Thus, in the case of the 900 Mazda lamp (which makes a simple problem), the light efficiency is about 26 lumens per watt (designated LPW).

To generate the 20,000 lumens mentioned above in order to obtain 1,000 useful lumens means, therefore, that or 769 watts of electrical energy would have to supply the lamp. In other words, a 769 watt lamp would be necessary. This, of course, means under the most favorable conditions permitting a 5 per cent efficiency of the optic system.

$$\frac{20{,}000}{26}$$

The Mazda lamp, by the way, is seldom used in this manner (by using control regulator), since it is always operated to give its maximum output under all conditions.

Arc lamps, however, are designed and operated in this manner so that this line of reasoning applies with more force to this type of source than to others.

Use With Caution

The above method of figuring, while useful enough for illustration purposes, should never be used for accurate results, since local conditions introduce many other factors, neglect of which will result in errors. With the above method it is possible, of course, to obtain a pretty fair idea of the power required for projection under any given conditions. There is, however, a far better and more accurate method of determining this. Lack of space prevents giving it here.

Radiated Energy

The electrical energy which the light source receives is radiated in space in the form of visible light (so-called), heat and ultra-violet rays. Of the various amounts of these forms of energy collected by the condenser, practically all of the ultra-violet rays are absorbed in the lenses, but the heat and light rays are for the large part, transmitted to the aperture location where another heavy loss occurs. The poportion of heat to light, however, remains practically the same.

Both of these radiations have an effect upon the film. An excess of heat rays causes deterioration of the film itself, whereas an excess of light rays involves inability to perceive fine detail and tone values in pictures on screen. In the case of colored film, the fine color tones are lost and in some cases even the color itself remains no longer constant. This, however, is due to the color quality of the so-called "visible light."

What Causes the Damage

It is impossible, for practical purposes, to separate the heat from the light and these two combine to form the total quantity of radiated energy passing through the aperture per unit of time.

The energy passing through the aperture can always be figured as a direct percentage of that generated by the source under any particular conditions. The rate of energy flow (unit energy per unit of time), depends upon the intensity of the radiation and the angle (measured at the aperture), over which it is radiated.

Other things constant, the higher the screen ilumination, the greater will be this angle of radiation through the aperture. Either that or a more intense radiation must be supplied.

With ordinary screen intensities and moderate "throws" the aperture angle will be large and the radiation intensely small, or else the angle will be moderate and the radiation intensity will be greater.

On long throws, or in extremely wide houses, however, both the angle and intensity will be great so that the total radiation is very large, in fact, excessively large. For this reason a medium projection distance of about 125 feet is imperative if the standardization of screen brightness is to mean anything.

New Synchronous Convertor Designed for Projection Use.

IT being an accepted fact that direct current arcs rather than A. C. arcs are the type that give luminosity necessary for proper arc projection of motion pictures, the theatre owner and projectionist will be interested in the new Liberty Syncrovertor now being introduced in this field. The Liberty Syncrovertor is a synchronous commutating rectifier designed for rectifying A. C. current for projection use.

A description of this apparatus has been received and is, in part, as follows:

In describing this unit it should be borne in mind that ordinary socalled synchronous motors are all comparatively high-speed motors, and it is absolutely essential for proper commutation and life of brushes and commutator to have a motor that is truly synchronous and non-hunting at a low speed. The speed of the Syncrovertor at sixty cycles is nine hundred revolutions per minute, which permits the use of a commutator six inches in diameter against a diameter of from three to four inches used in previous attempts to solve the problem.

The present model of the Syncrovertor is of a horizontal type and consists of an eight segment commutator rotated about a horizontal axis by means of the Syncrovertor motor.

The motor when brought to synchronous speed as an induction motor, is no longer an induction motor, but a single phase synchronous motor non-hunting and with no phase displacement under any voltage or frequency variation within limits greatly in excess of the usual line voltage and frequency changes. The commutator, which is six inches in diameter and of varying widths, depending upon the rating of the Syncrovertor, is made of alternate segments which are mechanically and electrically united.

In adapting the Syncrovertor to the moving picture field, that is for rectifying the alternate current for moving picture arcs, a practically self-contained unit has been developed. The type 25 Syncrovertor was developed especially for the reflecting type arc lamp now so universally used.

In the type 25 Syncrovertor, the entire unit has been put in a structural steel framework entirely enclosed in steel mesh, and with a panel board mounted on the top at an angle. The transformer of proper size for the particular current specifications where the installation is to go, is mounted in the lower compartment of this case. The Syncrovertor proper, that is, the motor and commutator is mounted in a compartment directly above the transformer.

he switch board of the type 25 Syncrovertor carries a double scale o-center voltmeter, directly below is a double pole double throw switch, horizontally mounted and entirely covered. The purpose of this switch is to insure the proper polarity at the arc. The projectionist upon starting the machine throws this switch to right or left as indicated by the needle of the voltmeter.

he switch board also carries the main line or power switch which is of snap switch type and a small starting push button which is pueshed down and held, possibly for five seconds to properly start the motor. Ammeter and amperage control for each arc are also mounted on the board.

When it is desirable to install the Syncrovertor in a room outside of the projection room and yet to have variable control elements at the hand of the projectionist, a separate control panel is provided which carries an ammeter and an individual current for each arc. This panel board is small and compact and may be installed anywhere in the projection room convenient to the projectionist.

From the foregoing description of the Syncrovertor it will be seen that the rectification is done entirely in or through the commutator and all of the power that is required by the motor is to overcome brush friction, and the normal friction of the motor itself, which is very slight due to the fact that it is mounted on large ball bearings. Therefore, the power consumed at no-load on a comparative basis is practically negligible.

The Syncrovertor is a single phase unit thus operating either on the power or light line; has unity power factor, which by the way is a very important factor today when determining power rates. While the Syncrovertor operates on single phase it will also operae from a three-phase supply by simply using two legs of the circuit.

The general design of the Syncrovertor means long life, both on the motor and commutator as well as brushes and it is important to note that the commutator is non-sparking at any load.

The Syncrovertor is so built that it automatically supplies additional current required when the second arc is struck so that the first arc is not robbed. This is due to the fact that the arcs are run in multiple, the Syncrovertor being strictly a multiple machine.

The Liberty Synchovertor, designed for projection use, is manufactured by the Liberty Electric Co., and distributed by Simplex division of the International Projector Company.

For emergency purposes the transformer will furnish alternating current to the lamps and the Syncrovertor will operate as a straight compensarc with the motor idle, this feature dispensing with the necessity of duplicate apparatus.

Being a multiple machine, no short circuit switches are required at the arc lamps and being entirely self-contained no intricate wiring or outside ballast are necessary at installation.

The syncrovertor is at present supplied in two models, each model in two styles.

Colonial, At Harrisburg, Pa., Re-opens Xmas Day

Improvements costing $50,000 to the interior of the Colonial, one of the leading downtown theatres in Harrisburg, Pa., operated by the Wilmer & Vincent Company, will be completed between December 12 and Christmas day, during which period, it is announced, the theatre will be closed. To add to the patron's comfort in the lounging space fifty seats will be removed on the last two rows of the main floor, cutting the seating capacity of the theatre to slightly under 1,200. This is to permit improvements including the installation of an ornate standing rail which will be equipped with lights.

The stairway to the balcony from the rear of the main auditorium on the left side will be removed and a new stairway leading to the lobby will be built, corresponding with an existing stairway on the right side. The entire interior of the house will be redressed and repainted and new draperies provided for the organ chamber. New opera chairs will be placed in the loges, increasing the rows of seats in them from two to four. New carpets will be laid throughout the theatre and rugs will replace the tile floor of the lobby. Silk settings will be placed back stage and a new and ornate drinking fountain will be placed in the lounging space at the rear of the lower floor.

A three-circuit lighting system will be placed in the building, showing amber, red and blue for use in producing intermission effects on the stage and throughout the theatre. The steam heat radiators and fire fighting equipment will be built into the walls and enclosed in glass. Arches will take the places of the doors of the inner lobby, and mirrors will replace stucco decorations on the walls of the lobby. Eighty-six aisle lights will be installed on the main floor, the upper floors having for some time been equipped with them.

Manager Samuel A. Kuebler announced that the work, which was begun before the suspension of performances for the two-week period, is being done by more than a score of different contractors, and that the theatre will positively be ready for reopening on Christmas Day.

Two Marr & Colton Organs For Detroit, Mich.

John L. Brown, the well known exhibitor of Detroit, Michigan, has recently purchased a two-manual Marr & Colton Organ which will be installed in his new Fenkell Theatre at Fenkell and Dexter Avenues.

Schimmel & Pinchet have also purchased a two-manual Marr & Colton Organ for their new Flamingo Theatre at Detroit, Mich.

Atlanta's Newest Neighborhood Theatre Holds Successful Premiere

MONDAY night November 23 saw the opening in one of Atlanta's thriftiest and most progressive suburban centers of a brand new theatre which in beauty and construction will rank with the finest community theatres in the country,—the West End Theatre at Gordon and Lee Streets, the heart of the suburban center of West End.

The West End Theatre has been built and will be operated by the Southern Theatre Development Company, of which Arthur K. Lucas, head of Educational Films, Inc., and William K. Jenkins, president of Enterprise Distributing Corporation, are the principal factors. It is the second community house in Atlanta for which the Southern Theatre Development Company is responsible, the first being the Palace Theatre in Inman Park, built by them over a year ago.

The entire plans for its construction and the designing of its antique Spanish interior are the work of Mr. Jenkins. Its exterior is small but attractive. There is a well-lighted marquese over the front, and the lobby is finished in rough stucco of pastel shades. Upon entering the foyer the whole surroundings are changed to a deep note of richness and dignity in the reddish brown stucco walls flecked with brilliant hues of blue. The foyer is laid in varitoned tiles, and the stone memorial emblems at the entrance furnish an indication of the beauty and strength of style of the auditorium, into which it opens. To the right, however, before entrance to the auditorium is gained, is seen the manager's office, of exceedingly spacious dimensions, and finished in the same artistic effect carried out through the entire house.

The auditorium itself is the crowning triumph of the designer's art. It swells on each side, effecting a very slightly oval shape that adds greatly to the beauty and atmosphere of spaciousness prevailing throughout the interior. A feature in the interior decoration which won the admiration of visitors and patrons Monday was the beautiful little Spanish caravels of Columbus's time, set in the center of the side walls, and illuminated from the rear by dim red and green lights.

The woodwork carries out the antique Spanish motif. It has been artificially aged to blend with the soft golden color of the walls and ceiling, and is painted in an odd design with primary colors. The stage draperies are of a heavy red velvet.

The West End Theatre was built at an approximate cost of $75,000. The Theatre Supply and Equipment Company of Atlanta furnished the equipment for the new house, which incorporates some of the latest features for superior service in the two Simplex projectors, the Peerless Reflector arc which is equipped with Cinephor Projecting Lens, a Westinghouse Motor Generator set, Brenkert Spot Lamp, a beautiful screen for use with the high amperage lamp, lobby display frames, a Simplex Ticket Selling machine, and a Newman special finish ticket chopper which was done over to harmonize with the Spanish surroundings of the foyer. A Typhoon cooling system will shortly be installed in the house.

Alpha Fowler, who has managed the Palace Theatre, the community house in the Inman Park section of Atlanta since soon after its opening, will also have under his management the new West End Theatre, dividing his time between the two houses. His assistant manager in the West End house is Mr. Hugh Terrell.

The policy of the house will be four feature pictures a week, although for this first opening week the program will be changed daily.

New Coast Theatre To Open During Holidays

The West Portal Theatre will open during the Christmas Holidays. It is within a few steps of the West Portal Twin Peaks tunnel.

Samuel H. Levin adds the West Portal to his family of suburban houses and the theatre will be operated under his personal supervision.

The West Portal is substantially built of reinforced concrete and has ample exits on all sides. The interior of the auditorium is treated artistically and decorated to achieve the most intimate effect.

Every seat in the theatre is unusually large and comfortable with an unobstructed view of the stage.

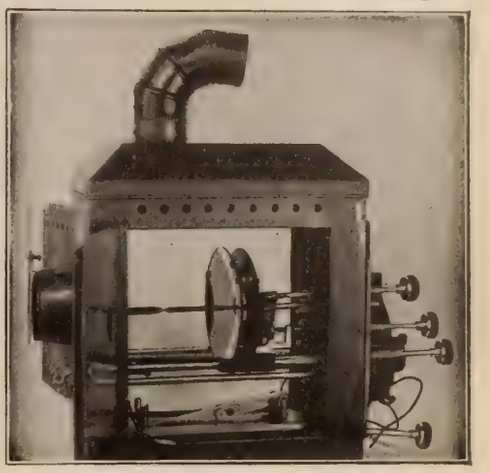
Syndicate To Build New Theatre at Oaklyn, N. J.



Bob Lynch, manager of the Philadelphia Metro Exchange, Morris Brown of the Capitol Exchange, and Charles H. Goodwin and David Barrist, former owners of the Ritz Theatre, Marshall and Hunting Park Avenue, have formed a syndicate to erect a 2,500-seat motion picture theatre in Oaklyn, N. J. The company will be known as the Lynch Realty Company and is the most important of the New Jersey syndicates formed among motion picture men to boom the New Jersey towns which will benefit through the completion of the interstate bridge, which will be opened next summer.

Three More New Wurlitzer Organs Installed

Three more recent installations have been reported by the Rudolph Wurlitzer Organ Company. The Cleveland branch is credited with a sale to Feiber and Shea's Colonial at Akron, O., San Francisco sold the Liberty Theatre, operated by the Hoquiam Amusement Co. and Detroit installed a new unit at the Hazel Park Theatre Co., John R. Avenue and 9 Mile Road.

National Board of Fire Underwriters Issue New Code Booklet

A NEW booklet recently issued by the National Board of Fire Underwriters, covering the regulations of the National Code, should prove of considerable interest to exhibitors and other members of the Motion Picture Industry, particularly so at a time when so many of the various exchanges throughout the country have fire drills.

A few excerpts from the booklet are as follows:

"3903—Auditorium—(a) Approved conduit, metal raceway, or armored cable shall be employed as the wiring method. (b) Receptacles shall be enclosed in boxes. (c) Not more than one set of fuses shall be interposed between service fuses and exit lights. (d) Emergency lights shall not be connected to or controlled by the stage lighting control, but from the lobby or other convenient place in the front of the theatre. (e) All fuses shall be enclosed in approved cabinets."

"3904—Stage—(a) Approved conduit or armored cable shall be employed as the wiring method. (b) The switchboard shall be of the dead-front type and shall carry a metal hood running the full length of the board and protecting the latter from falling objects. (c) Dimmers shall be so connected that they will be dead when their respective circuit switches are open. (e) Footlights, border lights, and proscenium side lights shall be so wired that the number of outlets and the lamps connected to them shall in no case be such as to place more than 15 amperes on a branch circuit fuse. (g) Border cables shall be of approved type and suitably supported. They shall be employed only where flexibility is required. (h) Approved slow-burning wire shall be used for wiring the border. (i) Borders shall be suitably suspended. If wire rope is used, each length shall be insulated by at least one strain insulator, placed close to the border. (l) Curtain motors shall be of the enclosed type. Where stage flue dampers are released by an electrical device, the circuit operating the latter shall be normally closed, and shall be controlled by at least two approved single pole switches enclosed in approved iron boxes having self-closing doors without locks or latches, one switch being placed at the electrician's station and the other where designated by the inspection department. The device shall be designated for the full voltage of the circuit to which it is connected, no resistance being inserted. It shall be located in the loft above the scenery and shall be enclosed in a suitable iron box having a tight, self closing door."

There are several pages in the book devoted to motion picture projectors and equipment, organs, signs and outline lighting, motion picture theatres, the stage and its equipment.

Improvements Completed At Circle, Indianapolis

Extensive improvements in the decorations and equipment of the Circle Theatre at Indianapolis, designed for the comfort of the patrons and the more effective presentation of the theatre's programs, have recently been completed, Ace Berry, general manager announces.

The alterations were made over a period of several months during the hours when the theatre was not open to the public, thereby not interfering with the regular schedule of performances.

The most important change was the reseating of the entire main floor of the theatre with leather-covered spring cushion seats. Crystal chandeliers placed in the theatre foyer and lounge were obtained in Europe especially for use in the theatre.

The entire system of lighting controls for the auditorium and the stage has been replaced with an equipment which will permit a larger range of dimming and blending of colored lights in the auditorium and off stage effects.

Fitzer Announces Opening Of Kenmore Theatre

Mitchel Fitzer of Syracuse announces that the new Kenmore theatre which he has leased in Kenmore, N. Y., will be ready for opening about January 15. Workmen now are installing the Wurlitzer unit orchestral organ and the seats are being placed. The house when completed will represent an investment of $500,000.

Brunswick - Kroeschell Issue Cooling Booklet

The Brunswick-Kroeschell Company, makers of theatre cooling apparatus have recently issued a very attractive booklet entitled "Theatre Air Cooling" which is profusely illustrated and also presents some of the advantages of theatre cooling. The Brunswick-Kroeschell Company is giving this booklet free distribution.

Suburban Theatre Opens At Des Moines, Ia.

Roy Jones who built a very pretty new suburban theatre in Des Moines at Twenty-seventh and Beaver sts. opened his theatre on December 9th. The lobby of the new house is decorated in a plan which resembles that of DesMoines' latest downtown theatre, the Capitol, while the interior of the theatre is carried out in a similar way which is decidedly good looking. The theatre seats 400 and represents the most pretentious effort yet made to make popular the suburban theatre, which has not been a paying proposition in DesMoines, theretofore. The entire equipment from front door to back was bought from the Exhibitors Supply Company. One of the things which Mr. Jones has used very effectively in the interior of the theatre is plaster of Paris vases which have been decorated in the house color scheme.

Loew's New Orleans Theatre Progressing Rapidly

Marcus Loew's new two-million-dollar 4,000-seat theatre in New Orleans is progressing rapidly and the opening is set tentatively for next April. It will be one of the finest houses in the large Loew chain, and easily the most beautiful in the South.

Miss Anna H. Dornin, interior decorator associated with Thos. W. Lamb of New York, is in charge of the decoration and furnishing, and reports from New Orleans indicate that she is sparing nothing to make Loew's Theatre the pride of the Crescent City.

So. Theatre Equip't. Co. To Hold Convention

Of great interest this week is the announcement coming from Oscar Oldknow, vice-president and general manager of Southern Theatre Equipment Company, one of the largest and most popular theatre equipment houses in the South, that that company will hold a convention in Atlanta next week for the purpose of discussing "Better Ways and Means of Serving the Exhibitor" in their plans for the coming year.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Clothes Make the Pirate"—First National, Strand, New York

Evening World: "The screen version of Holman Day's story establishes Mr. Errol as a screen comedian with something more than the ability to be knocked downstairs and slapsticked. The other members of the cast play their parts well, but Errol is the show."

New York Journal: "Leon Errol, the comedian of the collapsible legs, is the hero of 'Clothes Make the Pirate.' In the language of the time of the film, the picture is ye wow. Director Maurice Tourneur is an artist. The sea scenes are the most beautiful ever done on the screen, and the photography is exquisite. Added to that, the picture is filled with comedy of the most riotous kind. It's a great piece of work and hilarious entertainment. Don't miss it."

Evening Telegram: "A hilarious satire on the bold, bad pirate pictures is the choice morsel at the Mark Strand this week. Mr. Errol certainly has the right idea as to what constitutes good film fun. 'Clothes Make the Pirate' is one of the most entertaining pictures we have seen this season."

Morning World: "Leon Errol's game leg does its act on the screen at the Strand this week to the usual accompaniment of heartless chuckles and unashamed guffaws from out over the audience. I certainly recommend the performance of Mr. Errol."

Herald-Tribune: "'Clothes Make the Pirate' is good entertainment. The settings are excellent as are the battle scenes."

Times: "Mr. Errol, as a swashbuckling buccaneer, is enough to awaken laughter in the most morose bosom. The scenic effects are cleverly portrayed. It is an affable picture in which the absurdity of the theme is cleverly maintained."

American: "The audience seemed to enjoy every minute of 'Clothes Make the Pirate.' Errol is the most engaging buccaneer we have yet met. This adaptation of Holman Day's novel is a delightful tale. The entire cast is good as is Maurice Tourneur's direction."

Daily Mirror: "We sat and shrieked with a packed Strand house whose merriment shook the very rafters of the theatre. Director Maurice Tourneur and supervising editor Marion Fairfax have turned out a snappy job. Leon Errol is divinely comical—you'll adore him. 'Clothes Make the Pirate' will drive away the worst attack of blues."

Morning Telegraph: "Mr. Errol's fine sense of comedy, and the ingenious twists and turns of his elastic limbs are the cause of genuine merriment. He is a great addition to the screen. Maurice Tourneur has made a distinctly novel picture from Marion Fairfax's adaptation."

"Road to Yesterday"—Prod. Dis. Corp. Fenway, Boston

American: "In many ways is far superior as a feature than the now famous 'The Ten Commandments.' Is lavish with the things that this great director is noted for—gorgeous scenic effects, fine detail, star casts and a good story."

Herald: "There is no one who can point a moral and adorn a tale with the ardor and consistency of Cecil B. DeMille. And 'The Road to Yesterday' follows the good old De Mille tradition."

Traveler "It has all that is expected of the lordly Cecil. . . . There is a train wreck that is a 'wiz' ".

"The Gold Rush"—United Artists, Marivaux, Paris, France

Le Journal: "'The Gold Rush' is a complete entertainment. There is drama, comedy, the most delightful satire—all is there and harmoniously blended without a single false note."

Soir: "Chaplin' film is to the screen what the plays of Moliere represents to the stage."

Le Petit Journal: "'The Gold Rush' should be seen not only by Chaplin's myriads of admirers, but by every one who will not fail to pay homage and to recognize in Chaplin the one great artist who best appreciates the art of the motion pictures."

"The Masked Bride"—M-G-M., Capitol, N. Y.

Times: "Unconventional and pleasing touches in direction, clever titles and Mae Murray's iridescent charm serve to make 'The Masked Bride' quite an agreeable entertainment. This is a glittering production with scenic art, efficient acting."

American: "Gay and graceful as a dancing breeze, Mae Murray appears at the Capitol theatre this week in 'The Masked Bride.' This is a tale of Paris, the Paris of the underworld, of glittering cabarets, of petted dancers and crafty jewel thieves. She's an appealing Gaby as Mae Murray portrays her. We have seldom seen Miss Murray look so lovely as in her Spanish lace gown, with a graceful mantilla draped over her fair hair. The entire production has been set with a lavish hand. Her costumes are gorgeous."

Telegraph: "It is lavishly produced and Mae plays a dancer, giving her a great deal of opportunity to display her chief talent. Christy Cabanne has done a very good job of directing. The photography is beautiful and Miss Murray herself looks exquisite at all times. She is sprightly and animated and will certainly please her large and enthusiastic following."

Sun: "There are a number of scenes which permit her to trail around a dance floor in the complicated maze called the Charleston. These scenes have all been handled with skillful eyes for cinema movement, as have quite a few scenes devoted to Miss Murray's antics, and the result is typically Murrayesque and decidedly pleasant."

Brooklyn Eagle: "Mae Murray brings the same charm, the magnetic personality, the laughing ankles which she lends matinees and evenings to a portrayal of 'The Merry Widow,' diagonally cross the street."

Journal: "Mae Murray in the sort of role her fans enjoy seeing her. It's a colorful story, gorgeously produced and costumed, and lavishly staged. Mae takes the part of a dancer—and she can dance. She looks lovely and appears in stunning costumes."

Evening World: "To 'The Masked Bride' Mae Murray brings much of the atmosphere of 'The Merry Widow,' of Paris after dark, of dancing, of costuming and of the mood of high comedy in which the play moves to a pleasing conclusion. The story is smoothly told. Although Mae Murray got her stage start as a dancer she has developed as an actress until her dancing is one of the lesser of her attraction."

"Little Annie Rooney"—United Artists, Imperial, S. F.

Herald: "'Little Annie Rooney' is a mighty good picture. It has a little bit of everything that a picture needs, including humor, pathos and love. Mingle those and add the name of Mary Pickford and you have a picture certain to be a boxoffice success."

Chronicle: "Judging by the laughter and the sniffles at the Imperial Mary Pickford and 'Little Annie Roney' are in for an indefinite stay."

Call: "'Little Annie Rooney' is Mary Pickford's greatest. It would be impossible to begin to tell you how delightful, how funny, how touching, how effective, 'Little Annie Rooney' is. It is so good that it should be staged at the Exposition Auditorium or out at Golden Gate park and stay indefinitely. Don't permit yourself to miss it."

Bulletin: "The new Mary Pickford picture is the best in many years. If you loved Mary Pickford before—and who didn't—you'll adore her in 'Little Annie Rooney.' "

Daily News: "One thing is certain—'Little Annie Rooney' is great entertainment, and if Mary Pickford did make it with only the box-office in mind, she certainly has hit the bull's eye."

Examiner: "Those who liked Mary Pickford will worship her in 'Little Annie Rooney' for she has stepped back into the role that earned her the undying affection of millions."

"Seven Sinners"—Warner Bros., Warner's Theatre, New York

Evening Journal: "A sparkling comedy, ably directed, well played and with an excellent cast. There is no straining for effort, the scenes are deftly handled, and the acting is delightful. You'll enjoy it."

Morning Telegraph: "An amusing bill. The audience was gleeful throughout. A rollicking sort of picture. Lewis Milestone, who directed, shows a flair for light comedy and a definite talent for clever details. He is helped considerably by a very able cast. Marie Prevost is a delight at all times and Clive Brook proves himself a clever comedian. Every quirk of Claude Gillingwater's eyebrows is a telling gesture and John Patrick is delightfully amusing."

Times: "An amusing picture, quite diverting. It is the best feature exhibited at Warner's for several weeks."

Herald Tribune: "We enjoyed every foot of the picture. The cast is perfect. Clive Brook is more attractive than we have ever seen him, Claude Gillingwater is inimitable, Charles Conklin is terribly funny in his fatness, and John Patrick is always interesting."

Evening Post: "It offers an hour or so of good light entertainment of the mystery farce variety. The cast enters into the picture with the best spirit in the world, but most of the credit is due to Lewis Milestone, the director."

Daily Mirror: "Clive Brook gives a delicious performance. He plays with a whizzical charm that spices his scenes most entertainingly. Marie Prevost is herself, Charlie Conklin does a fine bit and Charles Gillingwater is his usual excellent self."

Evening Telegram: "There are some well contrived scenes and the film bounds along gaily. Marie Prevost gives a lively interpretation of the soft-fingered lady burglar, and Clive Brook is convincing in the leading male role."

"Sally, Irene and Mary"—M-G-M., Capitol, N. Y.

World: "Edmund Goulding has wrought a picture amusing, light, well done. Constance Bennett, Joan Crawford and Sally O'Neil in the title roles played with a polish to their performance that usually takes more years of experience to acquire than any of the three possess."

Telegraph: "'Sally, Irene and Mary' stands out in its directing, and its acting, these two features make it worth seeing and enjoyable."
